Vice Chairman, Rudy Lombard, presided at this meeting, which opened with a report from ~~Director~~ National Director, Jim Farmer, on wires received from Don Wendell and Marvin Robinson accepting field secretary positions with National CORE. Wendell has been added to the staff and is presently working in Louisville, Kentucky while Marvin Robinson will begin on April 1st.

Financial: Treasurer, A. D. Moore, prefaced his report with concern over the organization's precarious financial position and heavy obligations. Total income for ~~the fiscal year~~ since June 1, 1961 was $462,703.29 representing special fund/raising, holiday cards, and contributions from churches, unions, fraternal organizations, chapters. Disbursements totaled $316,858.41. The balance of $145,844.88 is tied up in bail money in Jackson, Mississippi.

A short reevaluation was done on the advantages and disadvantages of the recent re-organization of the National Office. Majority opinion is that ~~the reorganization has been advantageous to the operation of the staff.~~ the reorganization is a definite improvement in the operation of the National Office Staff.

Community Relations: ~~Mailing of~~ 38,220 appeals to the CORE list have brought responses ~~have been received~~ from 4,347 with an average contribution of $9.03. It is still too early to predict responses from the Brotherhood Appeal. Several other ~~fund/raising appeals~~ fund/raising affairs are expected to bring in some additional cash.
The Freedom Ride film is not doing too well financially. Film showings through churches and schools look hopeful. It was suggested that groups who sponsor the film might look into the possibility of combining the showing with another attraction, such as a dinner. This has been done on a few occasions and has proved very successful.

Financial: Treasurer, A. D. Moore, prefaced his report with a statement of concern over the organization's precarious financial position and heavy obligations. Total income for the fiscal year beginning June 1, 1962 was $462,703.29, representing direct mail special fund/raising, holiday cards, contributions from churches, unions, fraternal organizations, CORE Chapters. Disbursements totaled over ~~$316,858.41~~. The bulk of the balance, ~~$145,844.88~~ is tied up in bail, court fines, and court costs in Jackson, Mississippi.

However, the ~~liability expected~~ bulks of the balance (approximately $62,000.00) ~~expenses~~ is still up in Jackson, Mississippi in bail bonds. However, some of the money will be returned, this will be more than off-set by conviction court costs, and expenses directly related to these cases. In addition, $85,500.00 ~~in salary, loan funds~~ ~~to loan funds~~ has been loaned for jail bail. Losses on these accounts must be made-up above in that entirely by CORE.

While not looking upon the film as a money-making venture, the organization definitely expects ~~to~~ it to pay for itself. Total costs of production and promotion amount to approximately $19,000.00.

Marvin Rich presented the new CORE literature list to the NAC. He reported that a booklet on the Baton Rouge story is planned as well as a photo essay on Voter Registration. Jim Peck's book is going well to the CORE mailing list.

Committee Of Inquiry ~~Into~~ the Administration of Justice in the Freedom Struggle: CORE ~~it~~ is initiating a Committee of Inquiry ~~in~~ to the administration of justice in the freedom struggle. Eleanor Roosevelt has agreed to be honorary chairman of this committee and to invite others to participate. Among those who have agreed are: Judge Justine Polier, Roger Baldwin, James Wechsler, Norman Thomas and Gardner Taylor. This committee will hear testimony on police and judicial harrassment of civil rights leaders throughout the South, and will involve other civil rights organizations as well as CORE.

National Projects: Program Director, Gordon Carey, brought to the Committee a written report on the proposed Freedom Highways project, as requested at the February 23rd meeting. This report was accepted by the NAC and Mr. Carey was asked to proceed on the details of the project.

1962 Conventions: Assistant to the National Director, Richard Haley, submitted a list of possible Convention sites with pertinent information on each city. These are Kansas City, Mo.; Nashville Tenn., Miami, Fla., and Atlanta, Ga. A straw vote of Committee members present placed Kansas City in first place followed by Nashville and Miami. It was suggested that all members of the Action Committee should be polled for their preferences and Mr. Haley was asked to follow through with a letter to [illegible]. Suggested dates for the Convention are June 21-24 or June 28 -July 1. Mr. Haley letter to [illegible] absent members would also ask their date preference.

CORE's 1962 Institutes - Action, Housing and Employment, were briefly discussed. The Program Department is working out details, including dates and sites.

Committee to Aid Monroe Defendants: Mr. Farmer read a letter from this Committee requesting CORE support for the [illegible] Monroe defendants. [illegible] Specifically, the request was for financial aid and a letter of support for use in fund-raising. The NAC authorized Mr. Farmer to reply to this letter stating that because of the organization's financial difficulties it would be unable to comply with the requests, but also stating CORE's concern with this situation and pointing out that the organization intends to do all that it possibly can to see that the defendants are not left without their constitutional rights of equal & justice under the law, nor does it intend to see John Lowry or any of the other defendants serve sentences without exhausting appeals machinery and every other [illegible] avenue of relief. CORE will try to contact other appropriate organizations for discussions on the Monroe situation in the event appeals become necessary.

~~XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX~~

American Committee On Africa Request: ACOA's Africa Freedom Day Rally will be held April 15th. Jim Farmer ~~xxxxx~~ reported a request from the Executive Director of this organization that CORE help in publicizing the rally among its chapters in the metropolitan area, and that ACOA be allowed to ~~xxxx Affiliation of Syracuse CORE: Rudy Lombard asked Alan Gartner to chair this part of the meeting while he spoke for affiliation of the Syracuse group. He reported on activities of the group in housing, particularly in re-location resulting from the urban renewal program, and its work against discrimination in housing for students. Jim Farmer reported that he had recently visited Syracuse and was favorably impressed with the group. The NAC looked favorably upon the application for affiliation from this group and will act upon it at a future meeting when the Director of R Organization is present.

Voter Registration: The Taconic Foundation is making certain funds available for work in voter registration. Participating organizations are CORE, the NAACP, SCLC, SNCC and the Urban League. CORE's original request was for $64,000.00 to be used for its work in this area. However, since that initial proposals were submitted, the grant has been set at $125,000.00 per year for two years, total funds to be spent by all participating organizations. In view of this, CORE will present a modified request before the deadline of March 30th.

Marvin Rich brought to the attention of the NAC the fact that postal rates will in all probability be raised very shortly and that this raise will cost CORE from $12,000.00 to $15,000.00 per year over present mailing cost unless the organization is able to obtain a nonprofit status.

Visitors to this meeting of the NAC were Baton Rouge CORE Vice Chairman, Weldon Rougeau, recently released from jail in that city, and CORE Field Secretary, Jerome Smith.

Dear Mr. Hodge:

Two dates have been suggested for this year's national convention: June 21-24 and June 28-July 1. There was some feeling among staff that the latter date imping as too closely on the NAACP national convention, already set at July 2-8. However, we'd like to get more thinking on this, and a definitive vote (It is my understand- that the NAC vote on convention site was a "straw vote.")

Concerning the site, one other location has been suggested: Jackson, Mississippi. While this may sound far-fetched at first, it has points in its favor.

1. For those who prefer a southern location, it's unquestionably southern.
2. Interracial accommodations are in order at Tougaloo College, provided the space is available.
3. There is possibly greater publicity value in placing the convention here than at any other place in America ex except Birmingham or Montgomery.

The comments on Jackson are included because the other cities were discussed at the last NAC meeting. Whatever the city chosen, planners will move with as much care and thoroughness as possible. We are planning for a smooth, well-ordered meeting with the aim of maximum accomplishment through discussion and conference. We are not planning for melodrama, violence or arrests. Please cast your vote with this in mind.

Kindly return the vote-sheets immediately. To avoid delay in plans, we have set April 6 as the deadline for receiving the votes.

Sincerely,

Richard Haley

MEMO TO: CORE National Officers and National Action Committee

FROM: Carey, Dennis, Gaither, Haley, Hamilton, Hill, Hughes, McCain, Robinson, Smith, Teer, Thomas, Tournour

RE: POLICY STRUCTURE OF NATIONAL CORE

The above named staff members at the staff meeting following the 1962 National Council meeting in Cincinnati came up with several suggestions which we decided to transmit to the officers and the NAC. These suggestions result primarily from the current discussions about possible structural changes and from our concern that CORE be the most viable, efficient and democratic organization possible.

Specifically, we had reservations about some of the suggestions which were presented to the Council from the "Committee on CORE Structure." We feel that the structure of CORE is extremely important and our suggestions are offered in a constructive manner with the hope that they will be given serious consideration. In most cases we were unanimous and where we were not it will be indicated.

First, we felt that the Committee's report to the Council did not clearly differentiate between policy structure and program structure. For example, the Convention is clearly primarily a policy making body while a conference/workshop serves primarily a program function. We suggest that the policy making structure should be constitutional and considered independently from program structure which should be more flexible and not spelled out in the constitution. Consequently, the part of the Officers' Committee Report which stated, "The Council will continue to be a national meeting ... and serve in a conference/workshop function on a national basis" would not properly fit in a discussion of CORE policy structure, but should be handled separately.

The staff suggests that CORE should have three (3) major policy bodies:

A. The National Convention
B. An Executive Council
C. The National Action Committee

The Convention remains the major policy body and the NAC the lowest.

The staff recommends that the structure of the above bodies be constituted in the following fashion:

A. Convention
   No change from the present structure is suggested.

B. Executive Council
   1. The Council should meet 2 or 3 times a year
   2. Membership should consist of:
      a) National Officers (Chairman, Vice-Chairman [two] Secretary, Treasurer, CORElator Editor)
      b) Two regional members elected from each of five (5) regions at the Convention.

C. National Action Committee
1. Meet monthly or at least 10 times a year in New York
2. Membership should consist of:
   a) National Officers (those who can attend)
   b) The two regional Council members from Eastern region.
   c) Three active CORE members elected from CORE groups, not represented on the regional Council within the Eastern Region, by the Council.
   d) CORE National Director
   e) Three other persons elected by the Council
   f) Department heads and Assistant to the National Director would attend but not vote.

Some explanation is necessary in order to make clear the reason for the above suggestions.

In effect the Executive Council as suggested here is the same as the "body of nationally elected officers...and 5 regionally representative vice-chairmen..." mentioned in the Committee's report to the Council. However, we strongly disagreed with the suggestion of having regional vice-chairmen. To have regional vice-chairmen would simply aggravate the problem we have now with Regional Officers -- there has rather consistently been a conflict of authority between staff and Regional Officers. Furthermore, having two regionally elected Council members from each region would give better representation and still keep the Council down to a workable size (16 people). The staff agreed that the Regional Council members be elected by delegates from the Region and not by the Convention as a whole. It is implied that the expenses to the Executive Council would be borne by national CORE and that it would meet in various parts of the nation.

The staff felt the NAC should be retained, but that staff votes should be removed and that it should be made more representative of the CORE chapters. For obvious reasons of economy and efficiency it would continue to meet in New York and would draw its members from areas which could conveniently attend frequent meetings. It was further felt that the functions of the NAC should be more clearly defined, but that such a body was definitely needed.

By structuring the NAC as we have suggested, it would have a working size of about 12 persons assuming that generally only half of the six national officers would attend. By requiring the 5 members from local active CORE groups (two Executive Council members and 3 elected by the Executive Council) to be from different chapters we would assure participation from five separate chapters from within the Eastern Region. The three "others" on the NAC would permit it to draw upon talent and guidance from persons not necessarily active in local chapters.

There was some dissent about inclusion of the National Director as a voting member of the NAC. The majority (10 persons) felt it important to have a close tie between staff and the NAC and that one staff vote would help keep the NAC from an overbalance on behalf of the groups represented from the Eastern Region. They felt that it should be kept in mind that staff votes on no other policy body and that the NAC is the lowest policy group.

The minority (3 persons) felt that staff should not vote at any level of policy structure and that a staff vote presented a possible problem of conflict of interest between policy formulation and implementation.

In addition to the above recommendations the staff present at the meeting felt that regionalization was inevitable, and that it should be incorporated into the constitution. One suggestion is that the number of regions and their functions be constitutional, but that actually drawing the lines be left to the Executive Council or be done by the Convention as a by-law.

The staff does not disagree with the idea that CORE continue to have a meeting similar to the present national council but on a conference/ workshop basis. However, we did feel that such items of program should be set up in by-laws or by some means other than the constitution. Major program items such as Institutes and conferences and workshops must be left flexible.

July 26, 1962

Dear Chapter Member:

The Action Institute in Houston represents a most important phase of CORE's work. Our workshops have given us some of our most valuable workers and significant actions. If we hope to continue on an increasingly effective level, CORE chapters themselves should be strongly represented in CORE's training program.

I think of this representation in two ways; physically, by a personal representative from your chapter and financially, by as substantial a contribution to the Institute as you are able to make. As you know, the cost of the Houston Institute to each participant is $150. Your contribution would be a double one if you would underwrite a scholarship for an active participant from your group.

Because CORE's financial position is still touch-and-go your financial assistance is not simply welcome, but necessary. What an irony if all of our available money goes to pay rent, telephone bills and taxes and we lose the Institute---our reason for being---because of insufficient funds.

This letter does not begin to express the passion and depth of conviction I feel about the importance of this workshop; about all of CORE's workshops.

The time is short. Please let us hear from you immediately.

Dear NAC Members:

At the last meeting of the Steering Committee, on October 26, it was decided to hold the NAC meeting on December 22-23 in New Orleans, La., instead of in San Francisco, as had been originally scheduled for October. The decision to meet in New Orleans was made after a cost comparison was made on transportation to various cities. The total transportation costs for the entire NAC to New Orleans will be less than almost any other city outside of the East Coast. The National Office, of course, will pay expenses of NAC members to this meeting.

Tourist flight reservations have been made for all members of the NAC from their home cities to New Orleans round trip. By now you should have received a memo giving details of the flight reservations which we have made for you. We will arrange for your ticket to be left in your name at the airport pre-paid. You will be informed of housing arrangements in New Orleans as soon as they are made.

We sincerely hope that all council members will be able to attend this very important meeting. The dates selected, December 22-23, seemed to be the most convenient time because of the Christmas Holidays. It is imperative that each member let us know whether he will be attending. For anyone who cannot attend, we must cancel the reservations prior to flight date in order to avoid being billed for a part of the fare.

If you must have changes in the flight plans which we have made for you, please notify us at once, since reservations will be hard to get as we approach the Christmas season. We hope that you will accept the arrangements made, if at all possible.

May I ask that you check the appropriate blank at the bottom of this letter and return the letter to us immediately.

1. I will ☐ I will not ☐ be able to attend the NAC meeting in New Orleans December 22-23.

2. The flight arrangements you have made for me are ☐ are not ☐ acceptable.

We sincerely hope that all council members will be able to attend this very important meeting. The dates selected, December 22-23, seemed to be the most convenient time because of the Christmas Holidays. It is imperative that each member let us know whether he will be attending. For anyone who cannot attend, we must cancel the reservations prior to flight date in order to avoid being billed for a part of the fare.

If you must have changes in the flight plans which we have made for you, please notify us at once, since reservations will be hard to get as we approach the Christmas season. We hope that you will accept the arrangements made, if at all possible.

May I ask that you check the appropriate blank at the bottom of this letter and return the letter to us immediately.

Dear NAC Members:

At the last meeting of the Steering Committee, on October 26, it was decided to hold the NAC meeting on December 22-23 in New Orleans, La., instead of in San Francisco, as had been originally scheduled for October. The decision to meet in New Orleans was made after a cost comparison was made on transportation to various cities. The total transportation costs for the entire NAC to New Orleans will be less than almost any other city outside of the East Coast. The National Office, of course, will pay expenses of NAC members to this meeting.

Tourist flight reservations have been made for all members of the NAC from their home cities to New Orleans round trip. By now you should have received a memo giving details of the flight reservations which we have made for you. We will arrange for your ticket to be left in your name at the airport pre-paid. You will be informed of housing arrangements in New Orleans as soon as they are made.

While you were in negotiations we received two requests for changes in travel arrangements. Ed Singler would like to receive a check for the cheapest air tourist fare round trip from Seattle to New Orleans. He will then make his own travel arrangements. He would like to receive a check quickly since there is a deadline for picking up the ticket from Seattle.

MEMORANDUM

December 7, 1962

To: Clora Coleman

From: James Farmer

Bill Davis of Ambassador Travel called regarding the note he received from you regarding: Ralph Rosenfeld's reservation and Anna Holden's reservation. He is cancelling the return reservation for Rosenfeld as you requested and leaving it open. He informs me that Anna Holden has, on her own, cancelled the return reservation which we had made for her and in its place made a return reservation as follows:

December 24th, New Orleans to Jacksonville, Florida
National Airlines, flight number 878 tourist.

January 2nd, Jacksonville to Detroit
Eastern Airlines Flight 702 tourist.

He wants to know whether he should ticket her for that and include it in our bill or whether she has made other arrangements. Unless you have heard from Anna on this, you probably will want to contact her to find out what is what.

I told Mr. Davis you would call him on Monday, December 10th.

Attention: Miss Janice McCain

Gentlemen:

As per your conversation with Mr. Lolis E. Elie, we have reserved for your group 10 rooms for December 21 - 23, 1962. It is our understanding that two persons will occupy each room @ $10.00 per room per day. It is further understood that some of the group will probably like to stay over until December 24, if so, we will be happy to accomodate them also.

For your convenience we are enclosing a stamped envelope, our rate schedule, and some information about Mason's Motel.

Please let us know at your earliest convenience at what hour you expect to arrive and depart so that we may complete our records.

We are looking forward to welcoming you to Mason's Motel and our city and assure you that every courtesy will be extended to make your stay a most enjoyable experience.

Very cordially yours,

MEMORANDUM

TO: National Action Council February 21, 1964

FROM: Gordon R. Carey, Assistant to the National Director

Re: By-Laws

At a recent meeting of the Steering Committee I was authorized to search through all records of official CORE policy meetings and extract the by-laws which have been passed but never catalogued. Most of the by-laws which are to follow were not passed in the form of by-laws, but were passed as policy of the organization. They have been extracted from Convention, Council, Executive Committee and/or National Action Committee or Steering Committees dating back to 1945. Some minutes have unfortunately been lost, but our records are fairly complete.

I have done some editing but in no case have changed the meaning or intent. Editing has simply been to correct the grammar or for example to insert "Steering Committee" in place of "National Action Committee."

The by-laws as extracted are:

I Regional Organization. Regional Organization may be established within the organizational framework of the National CORE organization. Chapters in any region desiring to form a regional organization will inform the National Office of their plans with details of the planned organization. If a regional group of chapters applies to the National Office for such regional organization, and the National Action Council does not give its approval, then further action by the regional group will be postponed until the next Convention. (Convention 1950)

II Local Chapter Policy.

1. All chapters must submit to national CORE for approval the names by which they will be identified. (Action Committee 1961)

2. An individual who lives in one area and works in another may affiliate with either CORE chapter he desires, rather than being confined to the chapter of his residential area. (Action Committee, October 12, 1961)

3. Every affiliated chapter must report annually at least three months prior to Convention, a list of all chapter members, officers, committees and must include an outline of chapter policy and practice for granting active membership. Such a report will include the most recent revision of the chapter constitution and by-laws. (National Action Council Feb 1964)

4. No local chapter is to engage in joint activity with other organizations unless that joint activity has been discussed and approved at a duly constituted meeting of the local CORE chapter. (Convention 1957)

5. Literature of other organizations cannot be distributed at CORE meetings, except with the consent of the chapter. (Convention 1957)

6. Local chapters are to issue active membership only after prospective members have been screened, the screening procedure to be established in the local constitution. (Convention 1957)

7. All CORE chapters endorsing issues of lending organizational support must do so in their own name and not in the name of the Congress of Racial Equality. (National Action Council 1963)

8. Before any local chapter may become incorporated, it must be in touch with the General Counsel; those chapters already incorporated must send a copy of their corporation charter to the General Counsel. (National Action Council 1963).

9. If local chapters hire staff persons, National CORE may not subsidize such persons. (National Action Council, November 1963)

10. Local chapters are requested to investigate the need to register as a membership organization under local state law, and when this has been determined, they are to communicate this information to the General Counsel. (National Action Council, November 1963)

11. In the event of complaints received within 30 days of alleged irregularities in the conduct of an election wherein chapter or unit officers are involved, the National Director, or his agent, may after investigation, cause to be held, under his supervision, new elections if one or more of the following circumstances hold:

1 - requested by the candidates
2 - requested by 30% of the active members in good standing
3 - requested by the Director of Organization
4 - indicated in trusteeship situations

(National Action Council, November 1963)

12. All CORE activities on a nation-wide basis, whether initiated by National CORE or a local chapter must be originally coordinated through the national office. (National Action Council, December 1962)

13. Forms shall be sent to the chapters for a formal report to the Convention that shall include budgets, projects, officers, and other pertinent information. Reports to the National Action Council will remain informal. (National Council, Feb. '61)

III Multiple chapters. The National Action Council may direct the chapters in a city to establish a coordinating body which will not affect the status or autonomy of any chapter but which may prohibit a chapter from taking unilateral action in city-wide affairs without approval of the majority of the chapters within that city. Such a coordinating council may also be directed to meet regularly to exchange information, to seek cooperation and to negotiate differences which may arise among the various chapters.

IV International Fraternal Affiliations. The National Office and the National Action Committee are authorized to investigate and establish fraternal relationships with race relations groups outside the continental limits of the United States. (Convention 1960)

V National Projects.

1. Projects may be developed on a national level and presented to the local chapters for their action, as needed. Decision for participation is to rest with the local chapter. (Convention 1957)

2. CORE recognizes and affirms the rights of all local CORE chapters to initiate and carry out projects in their own area within the framework of CORE Rules for Action. Whenever a local chapter participates in a national project, that chapter accepts the national organization's program of action. (Steering Committee, October 26, 1962)

VI National Officers. The National Action Council is authorized to handle any situation which may arise involving any difficulty with any of the national officers without waiting until the next Convention. Any charges against any officer will be sent to the officer involved and to all local chapters, and every effort will be made to get the officer present at the meeting where the affair will be discussed. (Convention 1950)

VII High School Students. High school students may generally be used in local projects, depending on local circumstances. It is CORE policy that persons under 18 years of age be used only on projects within their state. It is general CORE policy not to affiliate high school groups to the national body. However, there are three circumstances in which high school groups might be associated with CORE:

1. Organizations that are primarily, but not exclusively made up of high school students may apply for affiliation on the same basis as any other chapter.

2. High school branches may be organized by already existing chapters. In this case, the high school group would become a part of the older CORE chapter and would not affiliate with the national organization. Certain specifications or suggestions would have to be worked out for the relationship between the high school chapter and the community CORE group.

3. Other high school groups which want to work with CORE must receive permission from CORE in order to call themselves a students committee in support of CORE or by some similar name and then may cooperate with national and local CORE without affiliation. (National Council, February 1962)

VIII National Convention.

1. That the nominating committee nominate at least two persons for each office and that they be listed in alphabetical order. (Convention 1963)

2. There should be a form of certification of delegates to the Convention; and there shall be a credentials committee chaired by the secretary. (National Action Council, December 1962)

IX Steering Committee.

1. The Steering Committee shall continue to meet on the last Friday of the month. (National Action Council, November 1963)

2. Six National Action Council members must be in attendance in order to hold an official Steering Committee meeting. (National Council, July 1962)

3. Minutes of the Steering Committee shall be mailed to affiliated local chapters. (National Action Committee, January 1958).

X National Constitution. The Constitution must be re-issued every time it is amended. (Convention 1958)

XI Political Restrictions.

1. Persons owing allegiance to Communist, facist, and/or totalitarian philosophy shall be excluded from active membership. (Convention 1957)

2. No chapter shall be accepted as an affiliate of the Congress of Racial Equality, if it is known to be Communist controlled. If a member chapter becomes Communist controlled during its period of affiliation, such a group will be dropped from membership in the federation of CORE. (Convantion 1948)

3. CORE chapters may not involve their organizations in political campaigns; all political work must be carried on as individuals. CORE members have the right to engage in political activities as individuals, but CORE as an organization is non-political. (Convention 1959)

XII Task Force. The Task Force shall be a permanent part of CORE and it shall be expanded at the discretion of the National Director. (Steering Committee April 26, 1963)

XIII Finances.

1. CORE chall not make substantial contribution to other organizations, except under unusual circumstances. (Convention 1957)

2. The treasurer shall prepare forms to be sent to all chapters as the basis for a uniform accounting system. (Convention 1954)

3. Chapters are free to contribute to their regional organizations after obligations to the National Organization are met. (Convention 1950)

4. Only those persons authorized by the national office may collect funds in the name of CORE, and all chapters are given blanket authorization to collect funds. The national office shall make an effort to inform local chapters of persons authorized to raise money in their local area. (National Council February 1962)

5. When the national office of CORE provides local chapters with a major outside speaker or performer for a benefit, then the national office shall receive 2/3 of the net proceeds from the benefit. The national office shall provide transportation from its share and the local chapter shall provide hospitality. The remittance to the national office can be charged against the 10% tax. (Steering Committee, August 4, 1963)

XIV Press Relations All press releases on national projects must be cleared with the national office. (National Action Committee, January 26, 1962).

The following policy decisions were made at various national meetings as indicated. They do not appear to be in the nature of bylaws, but should, in my opinion, be considered to reflect the policy of the organization.

Staff.

1. Rates and salaries paid to the staff are left to the discretion of the Steering Committee. (Convention 1957)

2. No person in the employ of CORE may receive personal gifts, either money, goods, or services for speaking, preaching or as personal contributions in any way connected with the employee's role in CORE; and any such gifts are considered as a matter of policy not to have been received by the employee individually, but by the organization as a contribution. The restriction is to include income received by employees from writing while they are employed by CORE. (National Action Council, November 1963 and Steering Committee, August 30, 1963)

3. All staff members should be sent into the field periodically. (Action Committee, July 25, 1963)

4. At least two annual staff meetings are to be scheduled. (Action Committee, July 25, 1960)

5. There shall be at least one annual visit by a field secretary to each CORE chapter. Where new groups are formed during the stay of one field secretary, it is desirable to have another field secretary make a subsequent visit. (Action Committee, October 1958)

CORE List. Normally the CORE list will not be exchanged with groups with similar purposes unless such action is authorized by the Steering Committee. (National Council, February 1959)

Chapter Policy.

1. No CORE group should support or give the appearance of supporting "separate but equal" facilities. (Convention 1959)

2. Each local chapter shall be requested to donate 20% of its gross income to the national office. (Convention 1949)

3. The national office may request that each local chapter submit its own mailing list to the national office so that a communication may be sent along with the first fall issue of the CORElator inquiring whether they wish to be placed on the national list. National CORE shall have the right to solicit funds from those persons replying no more than twice a year; such appeals would be coordinated with the local financial efforts, so that there would not be two appeals going out at the same time. (Convention 1949)

4. CORE will encourage college students to work first toward the development of community-wide chapters of CORE. Recognizing unique situations, we will consider the affiliation of autonomous campus chapters. Even when a community chapter exists, we will still consider autonomous campus affiliation if the students desire. In any case, students working in CORE should make the strongest efforts at close working cooperation with the adult community. It is generally agreed that the staff should work toward increased activities on college campuses both North and South. We should investigate the possibility of having a staff representative concentrating on increased student participation in CORE. It is also suggested that the CORE staff develop an informal, consulting committee of student leaders from non-CORE organizations to share student concerns. It is also deemed desirable to hold student conferences on a regional or even on a nation-wide basis. (National Council, February 1962)

5. Any affiliated local chapter can ask the national office to transmit a request for supplementary assistance from other affiliates. (Convention 1958)

Miscellaneous Policy.

1. It is strongly urged that at least one month before a National Convention, the National Director submit to at least three officers of all local chapters a proposed Convention agenda and any proposed constitution or policy changes proposed by the national office or by a chapter. Local CORE groups shall forward their recommendations to the national office at least six weeks prior to each Convention. (Convention 1960)

2. The Steering Committee is authorized to set up branch offices as the need arises, with the advice of representatives chosen by the region under consideration. First consideration in setting up a branch office should be given to the West Coast. (Convention 1960)

3. On pamphlets other than the basic literature, the names of writers are to be given; this permits some personal expression of opinion. (Convention 1958)

4. The national office is authorized to ask national associate members to write letters, etc., either on national race relations matters or in aid of a particular project. (Convention 1958)

5. The Steering Committee shall procede with promotion of holiday cards. (Convention 1957)

6. National CORE is empowered to make an award, the nature of which to be determined by the National Action Council of the Steering Committee, to any CORE chapter at anytime upon completion of a project that it is felt is deserving. (Convention '51)

7. The CORElator shall be printed, if possible, but it shall have last priority on national funds. (Convention 1949)

8. The Statement "In Regard to Communism" was approved at the 1948 Convention. It will not be reprinted here.

9. Policy that CORE may not endorse political candidates on either local or national level reaffirmed. (National Action Council, November 1963).

10. CORE shall make an annual contribution of $1,000 to the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing. (National Action Council, November 1963)

11. The national office and the national treasurer shall have no authority to authorize loans to individuals. (National Council, February 1959)

Re; CORE's position vis a vis discriminatory unions

After having been involved with the Trailways situation for over a month, I had come to a point where I was looking for new levers to try to remedy some of the problems which had arisen. The history of Negro workers with their union, The Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America, Local 1112, had been a fruitless one. During the period of over a year during which CORE had negotiated with Safeway Trails, the union had played a passive role, and during the first series of negotiations, November and December 1963, had upheld the company's claim that equal opportunity existed in the Trailways operation. Grievances such as the harassment of Negro porters who were fired for insubordination were processed, but not actively pursued. The attitude of the Negro workers towards their union was one of alienation, and information I received from Mr. Louis Zimmerman of the City Commission on Human Rights, and John Somers and Roland Watts of the Workers' Defense League had validated the opinions of the workers. I also found out that the union was not very popular among the white workers, and during 1963 a petition had been signed by a vast majority of the workers in the local to disaffiliate with the union. (I am not sure of the technicalities of such an action, but apparently the workers are still governed by the union contract, but do not pay union dues and are able to bring in a new bargaining agent at the end of the union contract's duration.)

In view of this past history of lack of cooperation, and the overall vulnerability of the union, I wrote a letter to Mr. Andrew Peretta, President of the local which has jurisdiction in the New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington terminals. (The union's jurisdiction does not include the drivers and the people who work in the shop; mechanics, helpers and floormen). In light of the poor results we had had with the company in terms of the implementation of agreements, I felt that a more forceful approach would be in order with the union. I wrote to Mr. Peretta, apprising him of the fact that there was widespread discontent among the workers, Negro and white, in the New York terminal, and that the union had been remiss in processing the grievances of its Negro workers, and in general had been unresponsive to their problems. I then told Mr. Peretta that we hoped to be able to work out an amicable solution to these problems, but if such a solution was not forthcoming CORE would attempt to 1. bring in another union which was more responsive to the needs and desires of the Negro workers in the terminal or 2. establish a "freedom union" which would represent the workers, white and Negro, in an attempt to establish true equality in the Trailways operation. I received no reply to this letter.

This past week, while I was in Washington working on the Trailways boycott, I met with Mr. Walter Davis of the Civil Rights Department of the AFL-CIO to discuss the possibilities of putting pressure on the union to negotiate with us. To my surprise he produced a copy of the letter I had sent to Mr. Peretta, and expressed his dissatisfaction with the statements pertaining to the establishment or recruitment of a rival union. The meeting was quite amiable, but Mr. Davis made it clear that trade union support for the civil rights struggle was dependent on our behaving ourselves when it came to dealing with the unions. I asked him if he could suggest ar effective counter-measure which could force a recalcitrant union to change its policies, and he averted the subject. At that point he told me of the long history of cooperation between the labor movement and the civil rights movement, emphasizing the financial support which we received. He told me that my letter was very controversial, and in view of the fact that it was not official national policy he asked if I would let him "bury" the letter. I agreed for the sake of expediency, preferring to discuss the matter with Marvin Rich and James Farmer before committing the national office to a policy which was not officially determined. Mr. Davis is awaiting a letter from me which was sent today, in which I have stated our demands of the union. As soon as he receives it he will set up a meeting between myself and Walter J. Bierwagen, and International Vice-President of the union.

Observations

I have written this report in an attempt to discuss certain conflicts and contradictions in our relationship with the trade union movement. Despite the fact that there are certain groups within this movement who are very favorable to our goals, it is quite apparent that as Mr. Davis described himself, they are labor union people first, and civil rights supporters second. Thus, Mr. Davis became upset about my statement, not because he was convinced that the situation was such that it didn't warrant such a move, but rather that as a union official he saw such policies as inimical to his primary interests. Secondly, there are many individuals and groups within the labor movement who are openly hostile to our goals. In both these cases I feel that we should use the same yardstick that union leaders employ, that is: using other groups to advance our position, not to tie our hands.

In the specific situation with the Amalgamated Transit Union, Mr. Davis, I believe, was not fully accurate in his presentation of the problem. He told me that it was illegal for one union to interfere with the jurisdiction of another at all times. My information to the contrary came from Cleveland Robinson, an official of District 65, who gave me specific information on how such a situation was possible. Realistically, I doubt whether CORE at this time is in a financial and administrative position to undertake an extensive program of establishing freedom unions, but the union's contract does not come up for over a year, so that some future developments could alter this situation. But the latter possibility, that of encouraging another union which is already established and more willing to advance the principles in which we believe, seems quite practical, especially since we will have over a year to carefully plan such a program. I definitely feel that I was remiss in stating such a position so candidly, but I was in a position where very few, if any, effective levers existed in working with a recalcitrant union. I think it is important to formulate a position paper on our official policy towards the discriminatory unions within the labor movement, to discuss various forms of pressure which we can exert on them,. and to weigh the advantages and shortcomings of incurring the wrath of some labor people if we did adopt a policy of challenging an established union by bringing in or establishing a rival one.

FIELD REPORT

To: Jim McCain for transmittal to George Wiley and N.A.C.
From: Mike Lesser
Subject: Activities for the period of November and December, 1964; summary of expenses and projected needs; projected activities through February, 1965; Evaluation and Comments
Date: January 24, 1965

1. Activity: November-December, 1964.

Since arriving in Ohio in September I have been attempting to visit, and spend time with each of the chapters in the state. None of them had seen a field secretary, on other than a "passing through" visit, for over a year. This task was completed during November and December including all affiliated and un-affiliated groups with the exception of Dayton, where the CORE group was disaffiliated, and Springfield, where the chapter is now defunct. Following is a list of chapters and group visited, and the amount of time spent with each group during November and December;

Columbus CORE.....10 days
Trumbull Cty. CORE(Warren)..4 days
Toledo CORE.....10 days
Cincinnati CORE.....5 days
Akron CORE.....5 days
Kent State Univ. group.....2 days

Other activities included a state metting of Ohio chapters in Columbus, a weekend conference of S.D.S. community action projects in Cleveland and a Regional Action Council meeting in Chicago.

Summary of chapter visits:

Columbus. After a faction fight which was very disruptive, this group has been trying to get back on its feet with a new chairman, and move into the ghetto area of Columbus. With them I have run workshops on canvassing, organizing; and advised on reorganization of chapter administration and revision of their constitution.

Warren. On visits to Trumbull Cty CORE observed operation of the chapter, and dicsussed finances, projects and membership with the membership in preparation for a recommendation on affiliation, which was submitted prior to Dec. 19 NAC meeting at which the group was affiliated.

Toledo. Toledo CORE is a recently re-organized chapter with new leadership and relatively inexperienced personnel. Have been meeting with each officer and committee chairman to discuss functions, and have been helping direct a project aimed at organizing neighborhoods to fight school problems they are having. Also planning an office operation in the downtown ghetto and program workshops.

Cincinnati. This chapter has been enduring faction problems, personality problems, reorganization and lack of programming. I have spent time there orienting a new chairman and attempting to help the group deal with those problems.

Akron. This is a young but stable chapter beginning to work in the ghetto community. Most of the work here is to develop program competence and content through workshops and discussions with officers and membership.

Kent State University. This is a university group which has been in existence for over a year, but is not affiliated. They have had trouble organizing on campus and are not ready for affiliation. In discussion with the leaders of the group we have worked out possible projects for building membership and support. There is some hope for them to build a useful program in their area.

II. Projected Activity.

Chapter visits:

In this area it will be necessary to do two things in the next couple of months, as well as past that time: 1. Spend more time with those chapters which have already been serviced in Ohio. As noted, most have internal problems and/or program needs, and these needs cannot be coped with effectively in one or two visits, but need periodic attention to help development. Long visits of up to a month's duration would be advantageous, but are impractical under present conditions. 2. Visit groups which have not yet been serviced. I hope, by the end of February, to have serviced the groups in Lawrence, and Kansas City, Kansas, Elkhart, Indiana, Charleston, West Virginia and Louisville, Kentucky. Also, there is reported resurgence of activity in Dayton, Ohio, and I want to get there soon.

Work-Study project:

I have had recent contact with the director of the new work-study program at Wilberforce University, and the head of the Sociology department there, with the idea of developing an internship program for Negro social science students to spend their work periods as full time employees of CORE chapters and as Summer "task force" workers with chapters in Northern urban communities in order to: 1. develop, over a period of time, professionally competent workers, and 2. fill the needs that chapters have for full time personnel. Contacts are also being made with Central State College and an Antioch College in the same area. I hope to develop a firm program by March.

Other:

By the end of February I hope to be sending out a series of mimeographed memos to area chapters on chapter operation, fund raising, programming and committee functions.

III. Expenses.

Because I am compiling this report while on a visit to a chapter, I do not have all my past expense reports, and cannot, therefore, give a complete breakdown of all expenses. I will attempt, however, to provide summary information.

Average expenses:

Working from five recent expense reports, which I do have on hand, my average expenses for one week work out as follows:

Lodging.....	$00.00
Transportation.....	12.20
Meals.....	13.86
Miscellaneous.....	2.56
Total weekly avg.....	$28.62

Although this average is not exact, I would think that the amounts are fairly representative.

Projected expenses:

My expenses for the next few months should run pretty much the same as above. The only difference would be an increase in travel costs when I start going to Kansas, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia. But, because I am now driving a car instead of taking Greyhound buses and local public transportation, costs should lower accordingly-enough to compensate for the increases in distance.

IV. Evaluation and Comments.

Because I had been away from the North for almost two years when I began to work in Ohio this Fall, there was a gap in my understanding of program needs, goals and chapter operation, and I had to, in a sense, give myself a cram course in what to do and how to do it. The National Office was very little help in that regard. There was no training or orientation program, and very little literature in the office to draw upon. This I had to search out for myself, for the most part. Fortunately, experience in the South had prepared me pretty well in organizing technique. There I think we are more knowledgeable than Northern CORE groups.

In working in Ohio I find that the chapters have problems resulting from inattention by National, which could be solved if the attempt were made.

Programming and direction:

The chapters have had little direction in determining their role in the community, and almost no help in programming. For my part, aside from personal help, I have had to direct them to literature sources other than CORE for help. While it is the role of the field secretary to assist in this area, it is necessary that general direction be provided by National as well as tools, so that the field secretary has a framework to use and the chapter to follow.

Communication and responsiveness:

Most chapters I have visited feel hostility toward National for other reasons also. They have a terrible time getting the literature, buttons and other material they request, or getting letters answered promptly. Some have given up writing to National and find they can get their needs attended to only by long distance phone.

Lack of relevant literature:

In terms of developing community awareness, for fund raising and for membership education CORE literature is out of date. It does not relate to chapter activities. More topical literature is urgently needed.

MEMORANDUM

CONGRESS OF RACIAL EQUALITY
New York, New York 10038

TO: All NAC members

FROM: James Farmer, National Director

First, let me apologize for the lack of communication from the national office these past few weeks. In our current state of financial crisis we have all been paying our fullest attention to meeting bills and raising funds.

In brief, our financial position is perilous. For a number of reasons we have not been able to provide sufficient funds to meet our programmatic desires. There appear to be four primary factors which have led to our financial impasse: 1) an assumption that we could continually plan new program and automatically expect our fund raising ability to keep step; 2) the easing of public attention to civil rights matters with the passage of the civil rights bill; 3) the negative impact of the summer riots; and 4) funds which might have come to civil rights, but were diverted into the election.

At present we have outstanding $181,000 in obligations. For the past several months we have been living on loans rather than income. We are now in the position of having to raise funds not only to continue to operate, but in order to pay back some of the old loans which are falling due.

We have taken a number of steps to meet this situation. A curb has been placed on new expenditures. Steps have been instituted in order to cut down on administrative expenses. Some retrenchment has been necessary. In all, over $120,000 on an annual basis has been trimmed. However, many of the reductions will take some weeks before we experience relief, since employees who have been released are entitled to notice, severance pay, and accrued vacation benefits. We are seeking additional sources of funds - both loans to "tide us over" and more important gifts. The period of greatest need is now. It will be February before our regular Brotherhood Appeal goes out.

At the same time that we face a financial crisis, we are involved in serious internal reorganization. Structurally, George Wiley will begin full-time as Associate Director on January 15th. However, George's part-time appearances have already had an impact on the office and I look forward to considerable organizational "tightening up" with George here full-time. Programmatically, we are working with many chapters on new and challenging developments for CORE.

I am leaving this evening for a trip to Africa sponsored by the American Negro Leadership Conference on Africa, for whom I will visit Kenya, Uganda, Tanzania, Zambia, Ethiopia, Ghana and Nigeria. I believe that the trip is an important one, both as an expression of the increased importance of African affairs in the lives of American Negroes and as part of the increased role which American Negroes have taken in influencing American foreign policy relative to Africa.

In consultation with Floyd McKissick, I have set the weekend of February 5-7 for a full National Action Council meeting, to be held here in New York City (our computations indicate that this is the cheapest location). This meeting will be held as a matter of the highest organizational urgency, and I hope that all of you will be able to attend. By that time I trust that George Wiley will have established himself in his new position.

We have been working for some months now to put ourselves in a sounder financial position. This should show some results by the meeting, and I believe that we will have detailed proposals for the NAC then. Further information on our financial situation will be sent to you shortly.

CANTON CORE, JANUARY, 1965
CANTON, MISSISSIPPI
GEORGE RAYMOND, DIRECTOR

POLITICAL PROGRAMS: THE FREEDOM VOTE

The MFDP attempted to get the names of Mrs. Annie Devine, Mrs. Victoria Gray, and Mrs. Fannie Lou Hamer and Aaron Henry placed on the official ballot of the state of Mississippi to run for congresswomen and senator on an independent ticket. The attempt failed, so the Negro had no way to express himself about whom he wanted to represent him. So the MFDP decided that they would have a mock freedom election that would take place October 30,31, Nov. 1, 2. In Madison County the representatives of MFDP accepted the freedom vote. They got together and set up polling places all over the county in the churches, homes, grocery stores, and other places of business. However, the number of votes cast was considerably less than in the previous freedom vote. The majority opinion of the Canton staff on the reasons for this was that not enough political education was involved and the people could not be impressed by the significance of what they were doing because they were given no chance to understand it. In other words, the emphasis was too much on getting as many signatures as possible in almost any way possible. Not only did this prove ineffective on the people, but also demoralizing for the staff.

POLITICAL PROGRAMS: THE CONGRESSIONAL CHALLENGE

After discussing the congressional challenge with some people from around the state and with officials of the FDP, it was decided that we would attempt to get 1000 Negroes to go to Washington the day the 89th Congress opened, when, Mrs. Devine of the 4th Congressional District, Mrs. Fannie Lou Hamer, Mrs. Victoria Gray of the 5th Congressional District would challenge the five congressmen elected in Mississippi. In deciding this it was said that we would go back into our local communities and explain the challenge to the people, and attempt to get them to raise their own money and means of transportation.

The program was explained to the people and within the three month period the people of Madison County raised enough money to rent a bus for $450 (but the bus broke down before it got out of the state). There was enough money left over for gas expenses. About fifty people went from Madison County, Mississippi.

Depositions are also a part of the congressional challenge, and while this is being written lawyers are busy talking to witnesses who will give open testimony in relationship to being denied the right to vote, police brutality, etc. These people will testify in support of the three FDP candidates. This testimony will be given Jan. 25, 1962.

POLITICAL PROGRAMS: community organization

The staff in Madison County are in the process of a continuous organizational program. The method they are using is setting up house meetings, church meetings, precinct meetings, etc, with the sole purpose of getting people to talk about local problems, their problems, and anything they would like to talk about in hopes that somehow they can see that their various problems are somewhat related and that usually the solutions can be obtained with similar methods. We are really trying to get a program developed with the community saying exactly what it will be. This will provide them with the feeling of "I planned this and I'm going to work to see whether this program succeeds or fail. You see, we feel from talking to the local people and to the staff that people are tired of people telling them what to do, because this has happened all their life. We feel that in Madison County at this point we must be advisory without a premade program.

FEDERAL PROGRAMS: THE ASCS ELECTIONS

In November Federal Programs in Canton became chiefly concerned with preparations for the ASCS elections. These preparations were initially thwarted by transportation limitations. The whole job of getting Negro candidates' names on the ballots was muffed because staff workers were unable to attend the meetings at which candidates' petitions were to have been drawn up. Finally, though, cars were rented, and as the December 3 election date drew nearer the entire Canton staff began to function with unprecedented coordination and sense of direction.

Staff workers moved into each of the 8 communities in Madison County (community boundaries were drawn by the ASCS) and began organizing for the campaign. The method of organization followed these lines: the staff worker contacted a few community leaders and spent a good deal of time making sure that they understood the voting procedure (which involved write-ins), the nature of the ASCS and the gains that a victory in the election could mean. The community leaders in turn began to organize canvassing teams among their neighbors to spread the word about the election and to get people committed to going to the polls Dec. 3. Staff workers met frequently with these canvassing teams and also attended other meetings about the election which community leaders called. The staff tried in most cases to act purely as resource persons.

The results of this approach are hard to measure. In the first hours of election day the Negro voter turnout looked more promising than the staff had expected in most communities. However by the time the polls closed - after 4 arrests, several physical threats, one injury and innumerable instances of voters being deprived of their full voting rights -- the odds had turned against the Negroes except in one community where a Negro committee chairman was elected by a slender margin.

Since then various avenues of protest have been tried: we filed a report of the physical intimidation and violence with the Justice Department and another with the Civil Rights Commission. About 15 voters complained on their own to the state ASCS committee and about 1 had hearings before that committee; the results of the hearing were unfavorable. However those who did not have hearings received word that hearings were unnecessary because their votes had been investigated and determined valid after all. We also spent considerable time and some postage communicating the USDA, inquiring about formal channels of complaint. It seems, however, that there are no precedents for challenging an ASCS election, and we were left hanging in some confusion. We supported an abortive program, originating in the Jackson COFO office, to send a delegation of farmers to Secretary of Agriculture Freeman immediately. Our delegate was ready to go, suit case literally in hand, when Jackson called to say the trip had been cancelled; other counties had not come through. About 3 weeks ago USDA investigators finally appeared. They have been supplied with a thick folder of affidavits and reports (affidavits, incidentally, are still coming in) and through them George Raymond drafted an official complaint, copies of which, with a covering letter, are circulating all over the United States, hopefully increasing Mr. Freeman's mail-intake.

FEDERAL PROGRAMS: THE FARMERS LEAGUE AND MADISON COUNTY COOPERATIVE

At present there is no one in Canton carrying on federal program war. This is unfortunate not only because of all the untapped potential in this area, but also because the promising products of past work are being neglected. The most serious neglect is of the Farmers League and the Madison County Coop. The first, which has been the most dynamic local organization Madison County Negroes have ever seen, is slowly settling into stagnation; the second is on the verge of losing its charter for want of a business manager or someone with a lot of time to spend and a lot of experience and technical knowledge to back him up.

WELFARE

Madison County periodically receives large shipments of clothing and food from northern supporters. These are supplemented, too, by small boxes which frequently come in the mail from various individuals. Occasionally, too, the county receives part of the shipments which are sent into Jackson COFO. There is no question about the need which such supplies can partially fill. But there is an overwhelming question about how they should be distributed. The Canton staff unanimously agrees that distribution from here on out must be the responsibility of the local community, not only because there are insufficient staff workers and facilities to handle it, but also because the Freedom House should not become a symbol of do-gooder-give-aways. We have begun conversations with local people and are planning a meeting in the immediate future to formulate a county-wide welfare program. We anticipate that several large problems will develop: one will concern the places of storage and distribution, none of which the staff wants in the vicinity of Freedom House; another, very touchy one will concern the merits and disadvantages of using clothing and food to "encourage" people to take part in the movement. Whatever the solutions and final decisions, this is a pressing issue which the staff is determined to see resolved soon.

VOTER REGISTRATION

No organized approach to voter registration has been tried since the end of the summer project. This is mostly because energies have been channelled into the MFDP programs, the ASC elections, and, most recently, the staff's work on grass roots community organization. In one community where a staff worker has been living for about a month, holding small "tea parties", discussions with the local people a locally-initiated, locally-planned voter registration campaign is taking shape: nothing dramatic, no freedom days (the people have explicitly vetoed them, in fact), just a few people a week going to the Court House and perhaps (this is still in the discussion stage) the setting up of preparatory workshops. Here, the Canton staff believes, is an example (and there are others) of how the local people can sense and meet their own needs in their own ways, fully understanding what they're about and why it's important -- a picture far preferable to that of staff workers telling them what is good for them and leading them through the paces without even giving them a chance to grasp the nature and significance of what is happening.

INCIDENT REPORT

Except around ASCS election time the frequency and degree of harassment have dropped off considerably. Martha Wright did spend a day in jail during the freedom vote. She was picked up for "distributing leaflets without a permit," but her case was dismissed on the grounds that it was her first offense (interesting, since the prosecuting attorney knew it to be her 2nd offense -- she has a trial in the federal courts on the same charge from this summer). Around the same time Bill Forsythwas given a traffic ticket for illegal parking when his jeep stalled on him; he pleaded to guilty, was his own defense, and won the case ! The same day George Raymond was jailed for interfering with an officer when he pulled up to see what kind of trouble Bill was having. His case has been removed to federal court.

Just before the ASCS elections a local canvasser, Mr. Cleophus Luckett, was shot at from a passing car while walking down a country road. He was unharmed. Also, Tom Ramsay, who was coordinating the elections, received 2 illegal traffic tickets in the week before the election. In one instance police tailed him out of town to charge him with speeding, even though he was driving 5 miles under the limit. Then, on election day, 4 persons were arrested on charges of "disturbing the peace in a public place," disobeying a police officer," and "trespassing." Three cases have now been removed to federal courts. The fourth, George Raymonds, was tried in absentia found guilty, fined $109. He has now appealed the case.

Also on December 3 Marv Rich had his nose broken by a small mob at one of the polling places. Martiss Crawford was threatened at gun point at another; Eric Orr was hit in the face at another; Earnest Chanes received threats at the polling place where he worked, but they didn't marerialize. Also, at leat one voter was threatened with arrest if he voted for the Negro candidate.

Since the election a bullet has been fired into the home of another of the chief canvassers, Mr. Welton Stokes, and a phone call to Freedom House reporting the beating of the successful Negro candidate was made, but it turned out to be a hoax.

THE COMMUNITY CENTER

The Community Center in Canton is closed and has been closed for about two months. The staff met and felt that it was best to close the center. At that time, Martha Wright and Jo Ann Goiman were working there daily. Some of the problems they encountered were the unruliness of the young people, who are the determining factor of whether the center succeeds or fails. Through long staff meetings and discussions with local people and staff people, it was a concensus that the only way the community center would succeed and progress in Canton would be through the people themselves not only showing a desire for it, but also doing most of the work in constructing and building it. And this has not been the case in Canton. The center was merely a place where they could come and have dances and steal what they could. However, there were a few kids who used the library effectively. A few young people and several adult community leaders are presently discussing what should be done next. The staff is hoping that their decision will call for much more community involvement.

REPORT ON RANKIN COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI

Staff: Sears Buckley Jr. - CORE
Martha Wright - CORE
Sandy Watts - CORE
Myrtis Evans - COFO work study: CORE

First I must explain that Rankin County is somewhat of a new project. The 4 people began working with and staying in the community around December 10, 1964. Prior to that I, George Raymond, had begun a series of meetings in people's homes, talking out the immediate situation that they are confronted with, to attempt to make them aware of the need for people to get together and discuss these types of problems, so that they may see the basis for organizing. This worked very well; these meetings went from the homes to the churches (from 5 people to 400 people when James Farmer spoke there during the Freedom Vote).

After the staff moved in they began working closely with the people in meetings and in canvassings. During the freedom vote no staff people were there other than for meetings. The local people themselves went out and got more than one thousand votes, which I feel is good. The FDP decided to undertake a congressional challenge, where Mrs. Devine of the Fourth District, Mrs. Gray of the Fifth, Mrs. Fannie Lou Hamer of the Second would challenge the seating of the five Mississippi Congressmen, and they wanted Mississippi Negroes in Washington to give evidence to support the challenge. This was explained to the people in Rankin County. And they said they would like to work on it. Within a three week period the people got together and bought a bus costing $500. They also had enough gas money to transport the bus to and from Washington. And they got 35 people who were willing to make the trip, understanding that they might face jail when they returned to the state. (incidentally, the bus broke down before it made it out of the state).

On January 4, 1964 the first freedom day took place in Rankin, about 20 people showed up, but they were not able to register because the sheriff and deputy said the registrar was busy helping the judge select the jury because court would open in a week. The next day two people were able to fill out applications for registration.

After these two attempts the people came together and discussed what had happened and what was their future plans. After the people returned from Washington, D.C. they got together and decided to go back to the court house in mass to attempt to register once more.

Since the first freedom day harassment from local white and police started. More than 8 people have been arrested, tickets have been given on a mass scale. Close to $900 in bond and fines have been paid. Local people raised and paid the money themselves.

The Rankin County movement is starting out as truly a movement of the local people who are eager and able to carry on pretty much on their own, using the staff only as advisors and resource people. Their plans for a community center, for example, are solely theirs and when they build their building we don't anticipate the kinds of problems developing that have closed down the Canton center.

FIELD REPORT

Project Jurisdiction: State of Louisiana
Author of Report: Ronnie M. Moore, Senior Field Secretary
Date of Report: January 19, 1965
Period covered by report: September, 1964 - January, 1965

I. Program

Objectives: The Louisiana project is primarily centered around voter registration with emphasis on politically oriented community organization. Communities are being organized through freedom schools, voter registration drives, clothing distribution, implementation of the new civil rights law, attainment of fair hiring and labor union practices and through general endeavors to meet the immediate needs of the community involved.

Permanent organization is the product of a program that is meaningful not only to our staff, but to the people. We are organizing people around their every day needs and at the same time we are attempting to direct such organization toward a long range goal of political recognition and representation.

Activities: Our activities for the above period included the following:

1. Voter registration campaigns in fourteen (14) parishes of the fifth, sixth, eighth, and second congressional districts of Louisiana. The voter registration increase was approximately 1,200 from September to November 4, 1964; little progress has been made since then.

2. Testing the compliance of public accommodations and public facilities with the 1964 Civil Rights Act in Jackson, Ouachita, East Baton Rouge, Rapides and East Feliciana Parishes.

3. Establishment of freedom schools at Jonesboro, Clinton and Plaquemine.

4. Servicing CORE chapters at St. Francisville, Clinton and Donaldsonville.

5. Protest of labor union discrimination and discriminatory practices at Olin-Mathieson Chemical Corporation at West Monroe. The President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity and the Louisiana Advisory Committee to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission held hearings and are investigating complaints from our plaintiffs.

6. Drafted (now revising) plans for a community center in West Feliciana Parish.

7. Attempts were made to organize farmers at St. Francisville for ASC, FHA and anti-poverty bill participation.

8. Began taking a community survey in Ouachita, East Baton Rouge, East Feliciana and Iberville Parishes. This survey should reveal the basic needs of these communities. Precinct meetings will be called to discuss such needs, and precincts will be organized around the needs. The organization should, when possible, be directed toward political activity.

Note: The proposed Summer Project of 1965 is broad enough both [illegible] to lay a firm foundation of community organization which can be easily directed toward effective educational, economic and political aims.

IV. Budget

Please see attached supplement

V. Evaluation

The desegregation of public accommodations at Monroe, Alexandria, Baton Rouge and Plaquemine may be listed as a major accomplishment. Other accomplishments include the desegregation of the library at Jonesboro, a school desegregation attempt at Alexandria, and getting plaintiffs to testify before the Louisiana Advisory Committee to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

One of our failures is that we have not developed approaches in our voter registration program in order to keep the people interested and active. We have not been able to properly train staff and therefore we have not been able to really organize communities as we should. Progress is being made in this area, however.

The racial ratio of staff is out of proportion. We have five (5) whites and eight (8) Negroes on the task force. More Negro staff members are needed. Staff needs training in community organization and in general in order to cultivate creative thinking and programmatic implementation.

I readily agree that the year round project approach to the problems of various communities may not produce CORE chapters designed for the purpose of extending the structure of National CORE. Community units set up by the project may not be labeled CORE, but their objectives and accomplishments are those of CORE.

If we in Louisiana are in the field to organize communities to fight on their own, then the organizational vehicle must be flexible in label, structure and immediate goals but directed toward the same long range goal.

VI. Recommendations and Remarks

Recommendations for Louisiana are as follows:

1. Regional training workshops for staff and chapters

2. More staff in Louisiana in order to insure the setting up of Congressional and party challenges in 1966 and 1968.

3. More staff for the 1965 Summer Project than is indicated in the prospectus.

4. Immediate payment of bills on demand.

This report is general, but I hope it serves a few of the purposes for which it was requested. I will be glad to write supplementary statements to answer any specific questions.

Chronology on Jonesboro

Jackson Parish

July 7, 1964 - Ronnie Moore and Mike Lesser were driving from Jonesboro to Monroe when three cars of whites tried to detain them on the highway. Moore was driving and was able to get away from the three cars by making a u-turn and slightly knocked against one of the other cars. Then there was a chase back to Jonesboro at 105 mph. Moore and Lesser got to where the CORE workers were staying at Jonesboro. The three cars passed back and forth in front of the house. The Chief of Police was called along with the Sheriff but they did not respond until the FBI was contacted through Marvin Rich in New York. Then the Sheriff's deputies arrived along with the Chief of Police. The next day in Monroe, James O. Smith filed a warrant for Moore's arrest on the charge of reckless driving and hit-and-run. Moore later filed the same against James O. Smith.

July 10, 1964 - While canvassing Talbot Street in Jonesboro, threats of intimidation from the Sheriff's deputy and construction workers who told CORE workers to abandon work on voter registration in that area.

July 11, 1964 - Cathy Patterson, Robert Weaver, Bill Yates, Calvin Williams, Fred Brooks, and a local worker Doris Davis were apprehended by three Jackson Parish Deputies, one Lincoln Parish Chief Deputy, and one Louisiana State Trooper on U. S. Highway 167 and held for approximately two hours. They were made to pose for pictures taken by one of the officers, while standing outside of their car which was impounded by Jackson Parish Sheriff, although the incidents occurred in Lincoln Parish. The group received threats from these authorities when they refused to cooperate. Workers, Yates and Miss Davis were held under arrest by Jackson Parish authorities pending investigation of their identification, but were released without charge.

July 13, 1964 - Three white youths stopped at the Freedom House and engaged in a conversation with CORE workers and policemen. Upon becoming rude they were asked to leave, but only after they had made threats on the lives of the occupants of the Freedom House and Robert Weaver in particular.

July 30, 1964 - The KKK members burned crosses throughout Jackson Parish and nearly 50 or more Klansmen marched through the Negro section of Jonesboro, Louisiana holding burning torches in their hands lead by a sheriff's patrol car. The Negro section witnessed this and organized a group called the Deacons of the Defense of Justice.

November 15, 1964 - A cross was burned about two blocks from the Freedom House Saturday morning at 2 O'clock and five shots were fired around the House. Reports were made to the FBI. An investigation was made by the FBI and the Justice Department, Thursday evening.

In Early December - Jackson Parish library system was desegregated.

January 4, 1965 - Talking plans were made to desegregate public accommodations in Jonesboro, and three ministers agreed to allow their churches to be used for voter registration purposes.

January 17, 1965 - Sunday morning at 1 a.m. two of these three churches were burned. These churches are Pleasant Grove Baptist Church in Pleasant, Louisiana and Bethany Baptist Church in Bethany, Louisiana.

NEW YORK CORE EMPLOYMENT COMMITTEE January 1965

REPORT ON THE BALLANTINE BEER BOYCOTT PROJECT

BACKGROUND

The Ballantine Boycott is part of the fight to overcome descrimination in hiring in the entire brewery industry in which less than 1% of those regularly employed in production and distribution are Negro.

This boycott is a continuation of the fight against the Shaeffer Brewing Company which was reactivated by NY CORE, after Negro workers complained that union rules were rigged by Teamster Union locals to keep them from becoming union members, even though they had worked for Shaeffers on a temporary basis for years. The Shaeffer boycott was called off after National CORE assumed control of negotiations with the company.

Ballantine was chosen by the Employment Committee of NY CORE as the taget for a boycott because it is the biggest selling beer in Harlem and because the same pattern of descrimination in hiring exists. Less than 17 out of 1800 production workers are members of the union and regularly employed. The union contracts are similar. (The lawyer for the teamster unions in Metropolitan New York, Mr. I. Philip Sipser, is also the lawyer for the unions at Ballantine)

Before starting the Ballantine Boycott, the Employment Chairman contacted the Harlem Negro American Labor Committee andwastold that the boycott would be undertaken jointly. This agreement was later withdrawn.

PROGRESS

The boycott which began on Saturday, December 5th with about 20 CORE members involved, concentrated on picketing supermarkets and bars.

26 press releases were prepared and sent to all newspapers, radio andtelevision stations. Regional CORE took responsibility for involving the otherchapters in the NewYork area in the boycott. Arrangements were made to contact other civil rights groups and the unions involved.

On December 8 the Employment Committee was informed (after the start of the boycott on December 5) that West Essex CORE was already negotiating with Ballantine. On December 9 Cyril Harvey and Hugh Frankenthalyer met with West Essex CORE representatives Dave Anderson and Del Earisman. The West Essex men said they were on the verge of an important break though. At this meeting they stated that the boycott in Harlem by NY CORE was strengthening their hand.

The Employment Committee met with representatives of Ballantine on December 22 who said that they were also concerned about descriminatory hiring, pointed to their charitable activities in Harlem, and indicated that their hopes for an end to descrimination were based on increased sales, early retirement incentives and longer vacations. They admitted that since June 1964 when 17 Negroes became regular members of the New Jersey unions (The first Negroes at Ballantine to do so), no other Negroes at Ballantine had gotten in. Ballantine representatives indicated that they expected NY CORE to be patient and understanding and to give Ballantine credit for their efforts in achieving less than 1% integration among regular production workers. They also felt that NY CORE should give credit to the teamster locals for cooperating in this achievement.

The representatives of Ballantine reacted negatively to the idea that the unions involved should sit in on the negotiations, finally agreed to contact them and recently informed the Employment Committee that the union representatives had refused to meet with NY CORE.

The representatives of Ballantine have said nothing to the NY CORE Employment Committee about negotiations with WestEssex CORE or about a new "break through" against descrimination. Instead, The Employment Committee was given to understand that Ballantine was responsible for the "breakthrough" of the 17 Negro workers, that they had started working in this direction in 1962, achieving the less than 1% integration of regular production and distribution workers in June 1964.

The representatives of Ballantine also said nothing about the front page story scheduled to appear that week in The Amsterdam News which played up the achievement of regular status of the 17 Negroes (to make it appear of recent date) and which credited West Essex CORE with negotiating this accomplishment.

NY CORE Employment Committee met with a member of Bronx CORE who had sat in at a meeting of NALC and the New York Breweries Association (December 15, 1964) as an observer for National CORE. He informed the Employment Committee that Negroes at Shaeffer accused CORE of "selling them out." He also informed the Committee that a program to train Negroes to become truck drivers had been agreed upon at the NALC - BREWERIES meeting and expressed the hope that this would provide jobs for Negroes. On this basis, he asked The Employment Committee to call off the boycott and enter into these negotiations.

The Employment Committee refused to call off the boycott and instead arranged for a meeting with Bronx and Brooklyn CORE to extend the boycott beyond Harlem and this meeting was called off without consulting the NY CORE Employment Committee. (December 22)

RECENT EVENTS

At the last membership meeting (December 23) the representatives of Regional and National CORE accused the NY CORE EmploymentCommittee of unethical conduct and violation of the rules for action, in that they did no research or undertake negotiations with Ballantine before calling a boycott and with disregarding West Essex CORE's letterof complaint. Regional (CORE) representative reported that James Farmer had recommended that NY CORE suspend the boycott ponding meetings with Ballantine and West Essex CORE.

After hearing the Employment Committee, the membership voted to continue the boycott while holding discussions with James Farmer, West Essex and other CORE chapters.

A meeting was called composed of NY CORE Chairman Clarence Funnye, representatives of the NY CORE Employment Committee and National and Regional CORE representatives, and West Essex CORE, which was supposed to attend and did not. ((December 29, 1964) A telegram from James Farmer wasread at this meeting instructing NY CORE to stop all public activities against Ballantine until after meeting with West Essex CORE and Ballantine, and also ordering the NEW YORK CORE to coordinate all future activties against Ballantine through Lou Smith, the Regional CORE representative, or suffer the possible penalty of disaffiliation and loss of their membership in CORE. The Employment Committee was to "evaluate its achievements" and not go into the community for a week ponding meetings with West Essex CORE and Ballantine.

The Employment Committee rejected this approach and voted to continue picketing and other public activities on behalf of the boycott, (as directed by the membership of NY CORE on December 23). This Employment Committee meeting was held on December 30. After the meeting some of the members of the Employment Committee was phoned by Clarence Funny and told not to go out to the community as per instructions from Mr. Farmer. Pending a clear decision by the membership on James Farmers telegram, the Employment Committee agreed not to picket nor pass out leaflets; to confine their activities to collecting statics from the supermarkets and grocery stores in Harlem as to the affect of the boycott.

DEMAND

The Employment Committee of NY CORE has demanded that 200 Negro workers (now classified ascasual, many of whom have been in this category for years) be admitted to union membership and placed on a regular employment status immediately.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Estimates of the effect of the boycott in Harlem were that the past 6 weeks Ballantine has lost one half to two-thirds of its business in grocery stores and supermarkets, and a substantial amount of business in bars. Ballantine's represnotatives admit that the boycott has hurt their sales in Harlem.

WEAKNESSES

The boycott was confined to Harlem and did not receive a word of publicity in radio press nor television despite the 26 press releases sent out by the NY CORE Employment Committee. The Amsterdam News, by carrying the story planted by Ballantine, and by ignoring the Employment Committees news releases, weakened the effect of the boycott in Harlem.

Telephone calls to National, Regional and NY CORE asking whether the boycott was still in effect were either not answered or the callers (supermarket supervisors and bar managers) were informed that the boycott was off.

Attempts to involve the other CORE chapters in the boycott were stopped.

Involvement of other civil rights organizations was not accomplished.

ISSUES BEFORE NY CORE

Should an agreement by a local CORE Chapter, with an employer, for "token" integration, be permitted to bind other chapters?

Should a company doing 25% of its total business in the Negro community be permitted to continue token employment of Negroes?

Should a conservative labor aristocracy be allowed to try to solve problems of automation and unemployment in the brewery industry at the expense of black workers?

Should white workers be pitted against Negroes for a shrinking pool of jobs or should they be encouraged to fight in cooperation with black workers for a shorter work week at no cut in pay?

Should a boycott which has shown its effectiveness despite all obstacles and weaknesses be ended on technacalities, or should it now be extended and strengthened to force a real break-through for jobs for Negroes in breweries?

FOLLOW UP

On January 9, 1965 the Employment Committee of New York CORE met with the West Essex CORE group(Mr. and Mrs. Dave Anderson, Del Earisman and Edythe Jones in the Robert Tree Hotel in Newark, New Jersey. No agreement was reached because West Essex CORE remained unswerving in their opinion that the provisions attained by P. Ballantine & Sons were adequate, and New York CORE Employment Committee remained adament in their opinion that the provisions were merely "tokenism." However, everyone agreed that the pressure on P. Ballantine & Sons should be broadened to affect the 42 states serviced by Ballantine.

Surveys have been made every Saturday (January 2,9,16, & 23) by the Employment Committee to evaluate the effect of the boycott on Ballantine sales in Harlem. (Estimated 66 2/3% sales dropoff) Also, store managers were given reassurance by providing them with information that eradicated erronerous facts presented to them from unknown various sources. On January 16 the Employment Committee resumed picketing with placards and passed out leaflets while on the surveys, as per permission granted by Louis Smith. However, previous picketing (Saturdays, December 5, 12, and 19) was evidently sufficiently successful so that it was decided that very little future picketing was necessary to get results.

At the same time Lou Smith granted permission to resume the boycott activities he urged us to contact West Essex and adhere to Bob Kervin's original suggestion to broaden the boycott to the 42 states, to plan a more comprehensive program that would include white collar workers as well as blue. During the week of January 18 Mr. Harvey tried to contact Mr. Dave Anderson of West Essex CORE to arrange for such a meeting. As of date no response.

Approximately 70 stores and bars have been under surveillance -- all have been visited by the Employment Committee, and most have received a letter reassuring them that we are still promoting the boycott.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Joyce Ware, Regional Office, CORE Date: January 11, 1965

FROM: Stanley Sterling, Social Workers for Civil Rights Action

RE: Social Workers in Their Professional Roles

This memorandum briefly summarizes the activity of our organization, Social Workers for Civil Rights Action, with special reference to the activities of "social workers in their professional roles".

BACKGROUND

During the Summer of 1964, moved by events in Mississippi and New York City, some social workers came together to raise funds for volunteers in Mississippi and circulate petitions for civil rights. Interest was solidified when three civil rights workers were murdered, and Social Workers for Civil Rights Action was created. At a rally in the Community Church on October 22, 1964, attended by 650 social workers, a three-point program was adopted:

1) To establish the Michael Schwerner Memorial Fund to continue to provide social work services on behalf of civil rights in the South,

2) To organize and develop opportunities for social workers to volunteer professional services to established civil rights organizations, and

3) To participate as citizens in community civil rights activities.

PROGRAM

To implement opportunities for social workers to volunteer professional services to civil rights organizations, contact was made with CORE and a basis for organizing social work tasks was devised. At the center of the program is the belief that chapters would improve their "staying power" by shifting some of their attention from broad city-wide policy issues to more direct work on neighborhood problems as they are experienced daily by residents. Further, a chapter's interest in broadening the base of participation of neighborhood residents requires its concentration on problems as the residents experience them.

Thus, the central foci of work would be:

1) Offer concrete help on day-to-day problems of neighborhood residents (Department of Welfare, housing, narcotics, medical care, education, etc.)

2) Development of groups of neighborhood residents having the same problems, to work toward group solutions where possible.

3) Development of a systematic approach toward influencing institutional service patterns in the ghetto communities.

4) Increase indigenous leadership potential of chapter members.

In developing a working relationship between a chapter and our group, two major conditions should be built in:

1) Tasks assigned to the social workers should be specified as precisely as possible, and

2) Time limits should be established around all assignments.

Thus, the chapter leadership could be assured that the social workers are not redefining the chapter's function and goals, and that the social work group's life in the chapter office is based on the chapter's periodic decision to extend it. We believe that this understanding can help both the chapters and the social workers develop and maintain a relationship in which neither group feels imposed upon.

The general types of social work activity anticipated at this time might look like the following:

1) Social Service Desk:

A scheduled availability of a "Social Service Desk" in each chapter office, to which residents could be directed for help with any problem.

This work will generally emphasize a service negotiation function wherein the worker will represent the resident as "a social worker from CORE". It is anticipated that problems of bureaucratic inequity and red-tape will be most prominent. Short-term counselling, referral and referral follow-up is expected to be other forms of work required.

2) Group Meetings:

Meetings will be organized on a scheduled basis around specific types of problems. For example, a meeting about the welfare "system", focused on mutual education and problem identification could be held at regular intervals, with neighborhood residents being encouraged to attend for both learning and direct help.

These activities might form the base of the over-all social service program in a chapter. Other activities might include helping groups of residents having a similar problem with a community institution (welfare centers, clinic, etc.) to work on finding group solutions to problems that appear to be less amenable to individual solutions.

In addition, an on-going system of recording will be devised that could help to locate clusters of similar neighborhood problems around which groups may be organized. This can also form the basis for collecting data on a city-wide basis regarding problems common to many neighborhoods, reflecting a need for action at a higher level of policy formulation.

Specific tasks that a social worker might find himself engaged in are:

1) Interviewing: helping a resident carve a workable problem out of the large mass of problems that brought him into the chapter office.

2) Short-term counselling: for those problems needing no more than two or three interview sessions.

3) Referral: to agencies in the community appropriate to deal with the problem brought in by the resident.

4) Follow-up of referral: to check that the service for which a resident was referred was obtained. In general, this aspect of our work will be emphasized with a view toward building the chapter as a meaningful source of accountability for the availability and quality of services offered by neighborhood institutions.

5) Recording: simple, a log-style recording of who came for what service, what was done about it, and what was the outcome will be required in order to coordinate the work and to develop services. These recording devices will need to await development and refinement by each group of social workers in their respective chapters.

Group Work: with small groups of people having a similar problem.

6) Training indigenous workers: training residents and chapter members to help individuals and groups around problems not requiring a high order of professional skill.

7) Developing manuals: helping chapter workers develop information manuals regarding housing, welfare, medical and educational services.

Although we are hopeful that this work by social workers can enhance the efforts of CORE chapters toward the aims of the civil rights movement, we are fully aware and concerned about the barriers to be overcome before these benefits can be realized. Coordinating the work of a group of volunteers in a chapter office; communications between workers in the same chapter; the necessity of one case being handled by more workers, etc., will require planning and innovation of the highest order. However, task is worthy, the motivation is high, and the skills necessary for the task are available. We now need only begin.

I. PROGRAM - There does not exist in the Western Region, any programs that can be described as Western Regional Program. Most activity in the Region is the result of chapters pursuing or implementing programs which they develop.

A. Objectives - The current objective which now receives the most attention is the organizing of the Regional Action Council. This is viewed to be important because of the belief that a working, broadly-based regional action council can solve many of the problems that are facing chapters in the Region. The most important of which is that of providing direction and training.

The Western Regional Convention, which was held recently in Los Angeles, found a strong need for servicing of chapters, etc. It is as a result of that strong expression by the chapters that the primary objective of Regional leadership is to resolve problems of chapter servicing, which our chapters do not get because of the absence of a field secretary and because of lack of money.

B. Activities - See attached resume of chapter activities.

Project Jurisdiction: Gadsden, Madison, Jefferson, Leon, Liberty, Lafayette and Suawannee Counties

1. Program: September 1, to October 3, 1964 The project was entirely devoted to voter registration and much emphasis was placed on developing local leadership.

October 3 to November 3 The project was concerned with voter registration, arranging election day details, and canvassing to get out the vote on Nov. 3.

November 4, 1964 to January 15, 1965 The vows of the project changed somewhat with the continuation of voter registration and the beginning of community organization programs, Freedom Schools, community Centers and the establishment of a Voter Group. An attempt has been made to implement the anti-poverty program in North Florida. In Liberty and Lafayette Counties, an Education class has been set up and is doing well.

5. Evaluation: Major accomplishments
1. The project in North Florida bas had the highest number of Negro voters (increase) in the entire South (about 7,000 in 7 counties).
2. Perhaps the most successful get-out-the-vote campaign in the State.
3. We witnessed and aided the fall of all-white voter registration (for the first time since reconstruction days) in Liberty and Lafayette Counties.
4. A beneficial atmosphere was created by the Task Force Workers in their respective areas whereby tenant farmers realized that FREEDOM is not just a word.

6. Failures:
1. The project has had something of a failure in its efforts to find strong leadership in a few counties.
2. There has been a lack of communication between whites.
3. It has been difficult to arrange communication between Negro groups separated by great distances.

7. Problems:
   1. Staff limitations (number of workers)
   2. Financial limitation
   3. Legal arm
   4. Lack of equipment
   5. Constant police harassment
   6. Reprisals by white employer on farms and elsewhere

8. Recommendation:
   1. Prompt payment of $700. in debts.
   2. An additional car (lease $125/month plus $150 operating expenses).
   3. One mimeograph machine.

4.	Special Fund Raising $1,500 per month (includes fees, printing, travel)			9,000
5.	Associate Membership Campaign (Feb. & Mar.)			3,000
6.	Publications, brochures, reprints, mimeo material			3,000
	TOTAL			$64,000

These bills may not come in exactly as scheduled but the new obligations, exclusive of staff, will be approximately as indicated. However, postage must be available when needed for appeals if we are not to reduce our income.

This is a bare meat and bones budget. There should be provisions for a film and for more publications.

About 60% of our income comes from direct mail appeals. We have developed the CORE list so that it brings in money directly from appeals and can be used successfully in exchanges with other organizations. The balance of our funds comes from personal solicitation and from rallies, benefits and organizational contributions.

CORE List Appeals

By February 27, 1964, we had received $107,336. from 8,138 contributors on our Fall budget card appeal. This was an average contribution of $13.22. As of January 22, 1965 (not a directly comparable period), we had received $97,609. from 8,590 contributors to our 1964-1965 budget card appeal. This was an average contribution of $11.14.

We plan to mail our Brotherhood appeal to 70,000 persons during the first week of February. Last year -- 1964 -- we had received $59,000. from this appeal by August 31. However, the great bulk of the money, $48,000., was received by the end of April. Since the appeal was mailed later last year than this, we expect that we shall begin receiving money earlier this year.

Outside Appeals

We are now working on an outside appeal to approximately 300,000 names. This should begin going into the mail by January 29. It is my estimate that we should receive about $45,000. in income from this appeal at a cost of approximately $24,000. If this appeal appears successful, we will follow up with approximately 250,000 additional names in April and May.

A number of union leaders have expressed an interest in honoring Jim Farmer at a testimonial dinner late in the Spring or in the early Summer. This project could result in a very substantial amount of income for CORE at a very critical period. However, the prolonged strike at the New York City Department of Welfare has made it difficult for me to get this project rolling, since some of the union leaders are involved in that strike.

I'd recommend a memorial meeting on June 21, on the anniversary of the death of James Chaney, Mickey Schwerner and Andrew Goodman. We would make this a simple and dignified meeting and would present a book to the families of those involved. This book would be later published and sold. W. W. Norton Co. has agreed to donate to us their share of the profits. Mrs. Levy has secured a volunteer coordinator who would secure a list of prominent authors who would contribute articles to the book. We have a file of photographs taken by Mickey Schwerner in Mississippi that would make up one section of the book.

The following fund raising areas require some development and additional attention. The federal government has a number of programs which could conceivably support our projects both in the South and in the North. Some of these are the Anti-poverty program, Manpower Development and Training and some educational programs. We must explore these more intensively. We have discussed this possibility with a volunteer who is experienced in this field.

The Associate Membership Campaign has not been a great success in the past. We carry the campaign because it does involve joint chapter/national fund raising and because it gives us an entree to the Negro community which we do not get from direct-mail. This program should be gradually beefed up by use of additional publicity materials, speaking tours, and support from NAC members. This year, James Farmer, Mrs. Chaney, Barbara Moss Chaney and John Henry Faulk have agreed to speak for us. We are working to secure other speakers.

Public Information

Our public information program is centered on statements by Jim Farmer, our press releases, and the CORElator as well as occasional pamphlets and reprints. We also secure the publication of articles in outside magazines and journals. We maintain a file of photographs which is generally available to us, for pamphlets and fund raising, to our chapters and to publishers.

Farmer continues to do a magnificent job of interpretation of CORE policy and of responding to events of the day. We do a relatively poor job of securing the necessary background information for him. I hope that this can be done better partially by organizing a group of university people who will do research on particular problem areas.

Our weekly press releases are very widely carried in the Negro press. However, they could be still more effective if we secured real cooperation from chapters and staff so that we receive material from the field. Jim Peck has great difficulty in this area. He has particular difficulty in securing photos from the field.

The CORElator is mailed to associate members of CORE and serves a public information and fundraising function. Recent changes in paper, self-mailing and postal rates have allowed us to mail a six-pager for considerably less than we formerly spent on a four-pager. The CORElator is our major printed face to our supporters. As such, it can be very effective -- but its effectiveness depends upon the quickness and thoroughness with which we receive reports of action from the field.

The idea of a southern newsletter, mimeographed or offset, on a twice-weekly basis is a good one. It might help develop a news sense and a regular system of reporting from the South. To do this and to generally improve our P.R. situation there requires the assignment of a task force worker to this function in the New Orleans office. It also requires at least a workshop session (including news criteria, servicing the media and photographic techniques) with a few workers from each project area. The southern staff workshop on January 21-23 was a start in this direction.

Our pamphlets tend to be large runs of larger pamphlets for use with our entire list. I believe that it might be wise to experiment with smaller runs of say 10,000 for use with our larger contributors, our chapters and special lists. These would be of small-size pamphlets on a particular aspect of program or project. Such a piece designed for the Brotherhood Month appeal on the Freedom Schools is enclosed. Reprints of magazine articles are an inexpensive way of publicizing program. They have the disadvantage of not necessarily representing our exact approach, but this isn't fatal.

We hope to work with the department of organization in preparing training materials. These would be looseleaf manuals on community organization, public relation, fund raising, and specific programs such as the poverty program, negotiation techniques, etc.

Staff Development and Training

Our fund raising training program is going well. Fund raising is a difficult art, requiring skill, understanding and experience. The training program will not develop a competent staff overnight, but it will permit us to function and to expand with a force of workers on salaries far below the going professional rates. We should probably train one or two other people in this trogram now.

We have made use of professional volunteers on an ad hoc basis for major projects. We should begin to organize them into functioning committees to give us advice, do special jobs and secure discounts and entree to particular situations.

Inner-Office Memorandum January 27, 1965

RE : Chicago

The project is under the jurisdiction of Winston Lockett. The program involves the operation of three "Freedom Centers" in Chicago's North, South and West Sides . The program is geared towards organizing the ghetto communities for meaningful action to provide the basic necessities of political, economic and social urban life.

Activities since September 1964 have included rent strikes, demonstrations regarding the lack of a viable education system, job referrals, classroom activities, work with the Illinois Democratic Clubs, and other varied CORE-type activities.

Presently, Winston Lockett is the only paid staff member working in Chicago. His duties are to coordinate the activities of the centers in addition to his general field work in the Mid-West region.

There are, as stated above three centers run by CORE in Chicago. They are currently financed totally by Chicago CORE, through local contacts. Formerly, the centers were financed by National CORE to some extent, but the feeling there is that the local chapters can now finance and staff all three centers.

Major accomplishments of the program thus far are in those areas where CORE has been able to establish a good working relationship with the people who live in the communities surrounding the centers. On the West Side, for example, for the first time in recent Chicago history there is real concern on the part of the community people for organized action. In each of the centers, persons from the affected community have become involved with the operation rather than relying solely on CORE members. Predictably, these Freedom Centers will be the foci for many activities which will benefit the movement in Chicago.

Previous problems which are now being worked out with some degree of satisfaction have been relations with some local chapters. Because of a bit of misunderstanding during the early phases of the program, local chapter support was not as strong as desirable. At this point, however, all units of Chicago CORE are helping--in fact, they are carrying the whole program.

Recommendations would be that National CORE maintain closer contact with the Chicago project in order that previous misunderstandings will not occur. Also, National CORE should support the community center project in Chicago vigorously in a programmatic way. Although the program is moving along well, any assistance we can give would be helpful.

Subject: Recapitulation of C.S.E.P. Operations

As the supervisor of theMembership Department I organized the clerical volunteers originally into an ad hoc committee called "CORE Books for Mississippi Committee." The purpose was twofold: 1) to involve these workers in meaningful non-actionist activity that would advance the program of CORE; and 2) to cement their relations with the National Office in a way as to guarantee continued group production of clerical services to reduce the cost of office operations.

Systematic organized mass appeals were made through mass letter writing appeals to manufacturers, dealers, trade unions, churches and publishers asking for contributions of books, equipment and funds to help us equip new CORE centers in the deep South. Although some scepticism was voiced by some staff people, the campaign proved immediately successful. We obtained enough supplies from our efforts to fully equip two centers: Canton and Meridian. Letters came from the South indicating that new centers were in the making despite funds shortages, so, expanding our activities: fund-raising and solicitation of supplies, we changed our name to CORE Southern Education Project, and set about to fulfill their needs. Simultaneously we launched campaigns to have the public ship supplies direct to the South. These campaigns were successful even beyond our expectations. After a year of operations we could report to the National Director that we had shipped over 50,000 general books and specialized books about Negro and African life and history, plus enough mimeographs, phonographs, tape recorders, typewriters, sewing machines, etc. to meet at least the basic needs of all centers functioning in the South. Total value of all books and equipment shipped as of 10/22/64 was estimated at $27,584.79 by the C.S.E.P. auditing committee.

Concurrently with our book/equipment campaign we organized small scale fund-raising programs: talent programs, recitals, a Harlem rally with Jim Farmer and two art shows. Due to the National Office's desperate financial situation we contributed an approximate total of $1200.00 to it.

Preently, along with our book/equipment efforts, we are presenting an AFRICA NIGHT program of songs, dances, music and dinner. Also we are issuing an all occasion greeting card with a poem written for us by Langston Hughes and a drawing done for us by Tom Feelings. Moreover, responding to the many requests from South and North, we are compiling bibliographies of Negro history, literature and culture, which will, we hope, be the most comprehensive collection in existence. When it is complete we plan to produce an illustrated CORE GUIDE TO NEGRO HISTORY AND LITERATURE with synopses of the most outstanding books, and with brief references to lesser and less significant books. With the approval of the organization we plan to have this booklet printed (including appropriate statements by CORE leadership and/or staff) and made available as a popular fund-raising project for CORE. We urge the endorsement of this project at a time when The Negro Personality, our history and culture have become basic factors in the freedom movement.

Moreover, we urge that more greeting cards with the Negro image, however projected, are produced for sale by CORE. Finally, there is a great demand today for books about the Negro people. Cannot we profitably include such books as John Hope Franklin's FROM SLAVERY TO FREEDOM, the anthology, NEGRO CARAVAN, Dr. Carter G. Woodson's NEGRO MAKERS OF HISTORY, the works of Langston Hughes, Countee Cullen, E. Franklin Frazier, et. al. for sale to our associate membership? Surely such contributions to Negro culture are obviously vital to our many-sided struggle for freedom, dignity and equality in America. Incidentally, publishers offer us a 40% discount, and such an undertaking could be a profitable venture for CORE.

In summary, I think that we can learn from the experiment of the C.S.E.P. that clerical volunteers can be effectively utilized in sustained interest by involving them in vital educational and fund-raising activities when this endeavor is undertaken by experienced and patient direction. I have found that there are thousands of sympathetic people willing to make a contribution to civil rights short of direct action. I suggest that this vital energy, which has saved the National Office at least 1/3 of its working man hours under my direction for the past 2½ years be tapped across the country. Similar ventures could be launched from Chicago and the West Coast.

Much credit for the success of the C.S.E.P. must go the the following volunteers, past and present, who have contributed so much to our pilot program: Mary Buckley, my wife, Robert Daniels, June Corbett, Virginia Hood, Ashley King, Iris Smith, Samuel Akesson, Marily Einhorn, Virginia Talarico, Peter Windsor (staff) Willie Mae Webb, Rose Gordon, Pamela Day, Carolyn Goslin, Peggy Howard, David Holderidge, et. al.

Since the first C.S.E.P. report was issued we have shipped over 25,000 additional new books South, acquired an estimated $4,000 worth of art works contributed by participating artists in our two exhibits, and acquired about $800.00 worth of equipment for shipment South.

From: Edwin A. Day, Business Manager

Subject: Report on Physical Reorganization and Renovation of National Office

In the interest of a much needed, major increase of national staff efficiency, productivity, and morale, I have proceeded with all due haste on the long contemplated physical reorganization and renovation of the National Office.

Major objectives of this renovation are: 1) development of more "useable" floor space within the limits of the present office, 2) better functional location of office, 3) better traffic control and a reduction of congestion, 4) improved lighting, heating and ventilation, 5) reduction of noise level, 6) improved telephone and inter-office communications systems, 7) increased privacy for professional staff, 8) development of a visually more attractive work environment.

Although initial cost estimated from consulting contractors and our consulting architect place remodeling expenses at between $3,000 and $5,000, we are at present meeting the same specifications for an anticipated total cost of less that $500 through the use of cost-control measures, re-use of existing materials, solicitation of used furnishings, and the use of volunteer labor.

In view of the over $30,000 presently being expended each month for the services of national office personnel, a projected twenty to twenty-five percent increase in staff productivity as a result of the remodeling should yield a substantial return on this relatively small investment.

Demolition of outmoded walls and construction of new wall dividers were accomplished for the most part while the office was closed for the New Year's weekend. Plastering and painting have been completed on both the main volunteer work area (which can now also serve for press conferences, NAC meetings, and staff meetings) and the reception area. Work is presently under way on the individual offices.

Members of the office staff, both clerical and professional, have participated on the renovation work. Office morale is steadily improving concurrent with the reality of and prospects for a substantially improved work environment.

Additional space on the 9th floor of 38 Park Row has been acquired to house the recently expanded direct mail-stenciling operation.

All major goals of the reorganization and remodeling are being achieved.

From: Edwin A. Day, Business Manager

Subject: Job Specifications /Present and Projected Activities -

The function and task of the National CORE Business Manager is that of 1) within the policy guidelines of the annual CORE Convention and the National Action Council, and 2) within the limitations of present available funds, DEVELOPING, PROCURING, AND MAINTAINING THOSE PHYSICAL FACILITIES AND WORK ENVIRONMENTS MOST CAPABLE OF FACILITATING THE HUMAN RESOURCES OF CORE TO ASSERT THEIR GREATEST COLLECTIVE EFFECTIVENESS.

As a matter of logistics and designated need, first priority has been assigned to the operations of the National Office, with the projection that, with the attainment of a more tolerable level of effectiveness in this office, the Business Manager will be able to actively extend his work to include regional and field operations.

Within the context of the present financial situation, emphasis is being placed primarily in the "defensive sphere": cutting costs while at least maintaining, if not improving, productivity. Hopefully, once operations have achieved a more tolerable balance between actual funds and actual program and a more tolerable level of internal organization, emphasis may be shifted to the "offensive sphere.": 1) increasing productivity while maintaining costs, or 2) increasing productivity within the context of a decreasing productivity/ cost ratio.

Present operation priorities for the Business Manager are:

1) Renovation and reorganization of the National Office in order to maintain (and most probably improve) present levels of productivity while substantially diminishing total employment and total payroll.

2) Reorganization and substantial upgrading of the bookkeeping department in order to develop effective and long over-due records, checks and controls over financial outlays and commitments.

3) Cost analysis and cost reductions in the areas of purchasing and supplies.

4) Cost analysis and cost reductions in the areas of services and staff expenses.

Priority #1 is at present well under way. Due to the increasing needs for action on priority #2, action in this area is slated to commence immediately, concurrent with the completion of priority #1.

SPECIAL STEERING COMMITTEE MEETING — JANUARY 15, 1965
National CORE Office

Members present: McKissick, Brown, Ussery, Hall, Burton, Rosenfeld, Gartner, Peck, Turner, Curvin, Lacey, Sprowal

The meeting was called to order at 10:10 by the chairman, Floyd McKissick. The agenda for the meeting was announced:

1. Affiliations and disaffiliations.
2. State of CORE report - by Wiley, Rich, etc.
3. Communications between staff and NAC including the following suggested items for discussion announced in the call for this meeting:
   a. "The Dept. of Finance shall submit monthly statements of income and expenditures in addition to monthly budget projections for income and expenses to NAC members and key Staff personnel. The Dept. of Organization shall submit monthly reports to NAC members on all national, regional and chapter projects authorized by the NAC. Activity and plans for staff recruitment and training, as well as chapter servicing will be included in this report."
   b. "That the Associate Director also submit monthly reports and note in them the disposition of all directives from NAC to staff."
   c. "That minutes of staff meetings be promptly sent to NAC members and key staff personnel."
4. Staff issues, including the following suggested items announced in the call.
   a. "That much more information be made available to the NAC about persons being considered for openings so that intelligent decisions in line with the NAC's repponsibilities in hiring can be made."
   b. "The serious absence of direction for program reflects the need for a program assistant in the department of organization. Every effort should be made to fill this position as soon as possible."
   c. "That the fund-raising and community relations departments should be separated. A committee of the NAC and staff was appointed to study the question of fund-raising nation-wide August 8 and 9. This committee should either be vitalized or abolished."
5. National program
6. Regional Action Councils, including the following item suggested in the call: "That the RAC be recognized as a significant level of organization and be strenghthened and encouraged in every way possible. That the Dept. of Organization set up again the regional conferences that were discontinued last year and make its resources available to the RAC for their org. and development.
7. Allocations and priorities, including the following item suggested in the call: "That the NAC set up priorities for the allocation of funds and another set of priorities for cut-backs when they become necessary. It is our further recommendation that the training institute be given top priority in the plans for new expenditures."
8. National Director's overseas trip, including the following item suggested in the call: "That in the future no extended trips be planned by the National Director outside the country without prior approval of the NAC or its Steering Committee."

9. The National Convention
10. The next NAC meeting

The Steering Committee accepted by common consent the resignation of George Wiley from the NAC. Dr. Wiley is now serving as associate director.. It was ruled by the chairman that Dr. Wiley in his new position does not have a vote in this session of the Steering Committee since there are no constitutional provisions to that effect.

Affiliations and Disaffiliations - James McCain

The following chapters were recommended for affiliation by the Director of Organization:

Tyler, Texas CORE
Gainesville, Florida CORE
West Ascension, La. CORE
West Feliciana, La. CORE
Davenport, Iowa CORE
Westchester, NY CORE (New Rochelle, N.Y.)
Utica, NY CORE
Warren, Ohio CORE
De Ridder, La. CORE

Motion- that the chapters be affiliated (Ussery, Gartner). Passed unanimously. It was further recommended that the following chapters be disaffiliated: San Fernando Valley CORE and Santa Monica Bay Area CORE. According to the West Coast NAC members, the latter chapter voted to disband itself. Motion - that the latter chapter (Santa Monica Bay Area CORE) be disaffiliated but that action on the former be deferred pending an up-to-date report by the Second Vice Chairman (Gartner, Ussery). Motion passed unanimously.

State of CORE Report - George Wiley, Marvin Rich, Etc.

General discussion

The Associate Director described his views on the priority needs of CORE at this time---to take hold of the organization with respect to organization's problems, thus bringing the internal house into order, and to deal with the question of staff training and the direction of the program. He noted that some changes have already been made. Mr. Edwin Day, past executive secretary of Syracuse CORE, has been brought into the National Office as Business Manager. Mr. Day's initial assignment is the physical reorganization of the office, to oversee business functions (e.g. bookkeeping dept.), to improve the lines of communication within the organization, and to implement such economy procedures that are necessary to make the operation of the office more efficient.

Financial situation

Mr. Wiley commented on theproblem of making decisions without adequate information and the need for a good picture of the state of the organization. The information needed to complete such a picture is not presently available for a number of reasons (e.g. lag in bookkeeping dept., absence of adequate reports from field staff personnel) but a report will be able to be compiled by the week preceding the Feb. 6 NAC meeting. (Reports are being requested from all personnel in the Dept. of Organization by Jan. 25 in order to make the completion of such a report possible.)

A summary of the growth of the national organization was given:

Year	No. on staff	Annual budget
1959	7	$ 62,000
1960	14	125,000
1961	17	240,000
1962	42	617,000
1963	49	525,000
1964	92	900,000

CORE faces however serious financial problems, so serious in fact that the problems of retrenchment must be dealt with.

DEBTS

	12/20/64	1/15/65
Bills/supplies	95,200	85,593
Legal	21,047	6,000
Loans	41,667	71,667
Staff	5,350	9,377
Chicago Project	8,100	5,000
Western office	2,000	1,000
Taxes	6,000	6,000
Southern Project	2,700	3,000
CURRENT	182,000	187,000
	Cash in hand	30,000
	DEBT	$157,000

The Financial Crisis

It was explained that presently the amount of staff time involved in dealing with creditors is unconscionable. It will take at least a year to get out of this kind of debt; a budget must be projected that will achieve this goal. In the month of January, as the result of personal contact, $25,000 has come into the office thus far but this does not necessarily represent an increase in overall income (since some of these funds would have come in normally at a later date). The Scholarship, Education and Defense fund is getting off the ground and is a bright spot. In some areas it can absorb expenses. It has established a legal defense budget of $77,400 annually. These have beena voter registration campaign in South Carolina which now is in the $9,000 -- $10,000 range. Their next priority is for leadership development and training. After that they will explore freedom schools and community centers.

Our changing financial situation is reflected in the fact that we have no longer been able to obtain interest-free loans as we once were, reflecting the frequency of borrowing attempts in recent months.

As the result of a number of problems (e.g. staff inadequacies and lack of adequate administration), the bookkeeping dept. is far behind in its work. The audit for the fiscal year ending May, 1964 was just begun at the beginning of January. The new business manager's next assignment is to put that dept. back on its feet.

A serious item among the debts owed is the amount of taxes owed to the government. This must be a top priority item for repayment for obvious reasons.

The budget must be projected within income and in the light of the debt owed. Mr. Wiley assessed that a monthly budget of $65,000 would be appropriate in view of the above discussion.

Retrenchment and priorities

In view of the fact that a full financial statement is not available it was decided by common consent that discussion on retrenchment and the priorities for cutbacks be postponed until such information is available with the understanding that this information will be in the hands of the NAC before its next meeting.

Associate Director's Job Priorities

The Associate Director outlined his own job priorities as follows:

1) Next 10 days - prepare "state of the organization" report for the NAC.
2) Southern staff conference next weekend. It is important to work out accounting procedures with the southern office, so that a more accurate financial statement from that region can be compiled.

Administrative changes

There have been certain administrative changes in the office:

1. Phone bill cut from $5,500 to $3,500 monthly through controls and some change in the crisis situation of the South. Educational procedures on the use of the phone are being worked out.
2. The stencil department and the membership department have been combined. All contributors and internal lists are handled by the combined department. The new system has resulted in a reduction of the office staff by three clerks.

3. The office is being renovated at minimal cost ($300-$500) through the efforts of several volunteers and Mr. Day.
4. There have been a number of resignations in the office (out of 6 persons on balance), but the retrenchment is not yet sufficient and more will probably be needed.
5. There has been a net loss of about 7 field staff in the South and 1 in the North as the result of retrenchment.

Hiring and firing

When asked for his interpretation of the NAC's authority in the question of hiring and firing, the Associate Director stated that in his opinion hiring was subject to review by the NAC but in the case of firing the question was less clear and the NAC had less authority. Discussion followed.

Marvin Rich's Resignation

Marvin Rich announced his resignation to be effective in the spring. Motion - with extreme regret the NAC accept Mr. Rich's resignation; this regret is tempered, however, with the knowledge that he will be working in his new position of the Executive Director of a fraternal organization, the CORE Scholarship, Ed. and Defense Fund (Gartner, Ussery). Motion to table - (Ussery, Lacey). Motion passed.

Communication - NAC and Staff

George Wiley explained that a memoranda was to be sent out Dec. 20 but was delayed. The minutes of staff meetings, which will be held weekly, will be sent out from now on. Motion - This Steering Committee direct the Associate Director to report on a monthly basis on the following:

1. State of implementation of previous NAC directives
2. Major staff decisions regarding finances, program and organization
3. General summary of departmental activities in the areas of finance, program and organization
4. Any other matters he considers important to communicate.

(Gartner, Ussery)

Motion passed, 1 against (Curvin)

By common consent it was agreed that Wiley will communicate to the staff such information that they must have in order to be kept abreast of the developments within CORE, recognizing that there are problems of communication there as well.

The Associate Director reported that the Business Manager will work on bringing the contact list up to date as a means of improving communication.

CLOSED SESSION

OPEN SESSION

Agenda

Motion - that the National CORE Convention plans and the mechanics of the next NAC meeting be discussed before breaking for the evening and that the Steering Committee divide itself into three groups to discuss program, community relations and the West Coast problem. (Turner, Brown). Motion passed.

Convention

The question was raised by Virginia Burton about Gordon Carey's functions in the two months after the last NAC meeting, since the convention was to be his main assignment. Motion - that the Convention Committee be free to look for other than campuses when selecting a site for the convention. (Brown, Turner). Motion passed. Motion - that the Convention Planning Committee bring in a report by the next meeting, even if they are able to communicate only by mail. (Turner). Motion passed.

Next NAC Meeting

By common consent the meeting will be held in New York February 5 to February 7, to be set up by Wiley and the administrative staff at a minimum cost. Tentative plans are being made for a Friday evening bull session. The probability of a cancellation of this meeting is near zero.

Steering Committee Meeting - January 15-17

It was recommended that the expenditures borne by Steering Committee members for this special call meeting, in view of the financial crisis of the organization, be borne on a volunteer basis by splitting up the cost and assessing it accordingly, Volunteers are Curvin, Lacey, Rosenfeld, Brown, Ussery and Turner.

Farmer's Trip to Africa

According to the staff, the trip was underwritten by [illegible] AMSAC, to be taken at this time. It was further suggested that questions regarding the timing of the trip should be referred to the next meeting, since the National Director feels strongly about his own time priorities. Rich commented that the time spent in Israel may be worthwhile financially. Motion - table discussion until such time as Farmer can be present. (Gartner, Ussery). Motion passed.

Church Burnings in Louisiana

Marvin Rich announced that there had been two church burnings in Jonesboro, La. It was suggested that a telegram should be sent to Katzenbach in the Justice Department on the need for significent increase of protection in Louisiana, in view of a number of recent incidents of violence in that state. Farmer should also bring attention to bear on the problem from Africa. Motion - instruct Marvin Rich to make whatever contact with the President and the press as seems appropriate to get action on the church burnings in Louisiana. Also that this body telegram its concern to the Jonesboro community and finally that the staff take those steps it deems appropriate to get the churches rebuilt. (Gartner). Motion passed unanimously. By common consent it was agreed that the Director of Organization would communicate with the Southern Office and college contacts in order to involve students in the rebuilding of the churches.

California Fair Housing Fight

Motion - that the NAC send a telegram to the California authorities to protest any release of money for the building of California housing. That any appropriate additional contact to Weaver by the staff be taken to facilitate action. (Brown, Gartner).

National Program

The program subcommittee reported on its discussion of Saturday evening. Turner reported that much of the discussion concerned the question of membership training and education as a crucial first step to program development. Area conferences should become more disciplined training institutes for the development of second line leadership. Extensive memos should be sent on many program ideas so that chapters can choose the one or ones most appropriate to their own community needs. Suggested memo topics are:

1. The War on Poverty - a CORE interpretation
2. The CORE Community Center - how it differs from other social agencies, its purpose and function
3. Urban renewal - e.g., Trenton, New Jersey's experience
4. Target groups for organization by CORE; their problems and techniques for organizing them (e.g., veterans, mothers on public assistance, unemployed, people in public housing, unwed mothers)

If such a membership education program is to succeed, however, chapters must also communicate with the National Office, giving them up-to-date information on chapter membership lists and names of officers.

Discussion

The national training institute proposed by the NAC has not yet been financed (although the Scholarship Fund has made the institute a major commitment). The Department of Organization reported that certain memos are being prepared and articles on community organization are being readied for circulation. Shirley Lacey commented that the "what" of program is less important for chapters than the "how". It was the general feeling that national action projects such as the Freedom Rides are no longer what is required in order to rejuvenate CORE chapters and give them direction. Motion - instruct staff that the priorities of the NAC are as follows:

1. Develop a comprehensive series of local training institutes for more intensive training for leadership and program development
2. That a series of instructional memoranda be prepared and disseminated through the Department of Organization

3. Regarding national projects there are two priority items
   a. Development of a special South Carolina political program focused on the November, 1966, Senatorial election.
   b. The planning and development of a nationwide Mississippi boycott (Gartner, Brown). Motion passed. Clarification of the motion - that the statement prepared by the National Director at Nyack be the first in the series of memoranda referred to in the motion.

Other suggestions for memos were tenant-landlord relations and the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party; what is needed in the reports is not just the advice of experts, but "gutsy" descriptions by CORE people. Motion passed unanimously. It was agreed by common consent that NAC members also prepare such memos on policy, program items and direction, to be turned in to Wiley by January 25.

The Associate Director informed the NAC of a leadership training program in community organization being conducted by Syracuse University with Poverty Bill money. Applicants are being sought now.

Community Relations

Jim Peck requested that chapters send information on their projects and activities to the CORElator for wider circulation. James Farmer will have a weekly column starting next week in the Amsterdam News. Marvin Rich reported that in the area of fund-raising, several years ago 100% of all income came through direct mail; now 60% comes in through direct mail. The rest comes through personal solicitation, rallies, benefits, associate memberships, etc. (There is a need for a competent, meticulous technician to handle direct mailing now.) One of the problems in the fund-raising area is that there is no separate fund-raising department, although CORE cannot really afford to pay a professional fund-raiser at the present time. It is hard to get volunteers to do fund-raising; training is needed for people in CORE who can learn fund-raising techniques.

Mrs. Eva Levy spoke of the relation of program to fund-raising; in the case of giving money to specific Southern projects, this can be problematical. There has to be an education of givers; in the Negro community, for example, there is no pattern of giving to CORE. New standards for giving have to be set. The problems of fund-raising in the Negro community were discussed at length. Suggestions were - to pressure national organizations such as lodges and fraternal organizations from the top as well as on a local level; CORE might also adopt a singing group and sponsor jazz or rock and roll entertainers. (There are special problems with entertainers, however--timing, arrangements, the artist's own preferences.) It is important for CORE to analyze its attitude toward the Negro community if it is to be successful in fund-raising there (e.g., accepting or critical). The income-cost ratio of any venture must always be kept in mind.

The Poverty Program

A number of questions were raised regarding CORE's role in the President's War on Poverty. Overtures have been made to CORE chapters across the country to get involved. Questions raised, however, are: what are we organizing for? who are we organizing for? why the overtures to CORE? do we as CORE apply alone or as part of a community configuration? what are the possibilities of being bought off? There is a possibility of seeing the program as a short-term way to get a toehold, to develop a political base and train leadership, with the realization that the funds will be cut as soon as we get too militant. Motion - that there be a workshop session at the NAC meeting on the real "ins and outs" of the Poverty Program. (Turner, Rosenfeld). Motion passed unanimously. Wiley shall arrange it.

Meeting adjourned at 2:30 P.M., Sunday, January 17, 1965

NATIONAL CORE STAFF MEETINGS

January 19, 1965

George Wiley asked Staff to turn in reports for the February 6-8 NAC meeting by January 25th. He hopes to incorporate these into an overall report to be mailed to NAC members prior to the meeting.

The proposed Mississippi boycott will be discussed with the Southern Staff at the Southern Staff Conference.

It was agreed that CORE chapters should receive quarterly reminders of taxes due National, as well as reports on how monies are spent.

Bob Curvin and field secretary, Joyce Ware will be asked to represent the organization at a meeting of the Advisory Council on Public Welfare, February 18 - 19.

Carl Rachlin will represent the organization at the Leadership Conference meeting in Washington, D. C. (re Title VI of the Civil Rights Act) on January 29th.

George Wiley will represent CORE at the State of the Race Summit Conference called by A. Philip Randolph, January 30th.

Marvin Rich advised that between $5000 and $8000 would be needed for postage for appeals the week of January 27th.

George requested a breakdown of telephone bills, by credit card number, for the last three or four months.

January 25, 1965

In future, all authorizations for additions to Staff must come from Mr. Farmer and/or Dr. Wiley. Department heads may terminate employment within their departments.

The union rejected a request that Bob Gore be considered part of management, rather than remaining in the bargaining unit.

Gasoline credit cards are to be individualized for purposes of identification. Ed Day will request separate invoices for each card.

Total money spent with the Humble Oil Company during 1964 will be used as a basis for discussion of credit extended the organization by this company with one of its representatives (Day or Wiley).

Field personnel will be reminded that repairs on leased cars are to be paid for by National Car or from whomever said cars are leased, and not charged to CORE.

Carl Rachlin was asked to take immediate action on the matter of car insurance.

Wiley suggested that a form be distributed to all CORE centers, through Richard Haley, inquiring as to their needs for equipment, books, etc. It was also suggested that the possibility of new equipment be investigated via mailings to dealers in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, and other metropolitan centers; also that there be an investigation of such gifts being given through SEDF, tax deductible. Wherever possible, equipment and supplies should be shipped directly from the donor to the Centers (Rich, B.Brown)

February 1, 1965

Marvin Rich advised that December, 1964 income was some $45,000 less than in December, 1963. January, 1965 in was about $48,000. February is projected at $70,000.

Clora Coleman will check out the possibility of purchasing airline tickets for the February 6 - 8 NAC meeting through Carl Rachlin's American Express credit card (Ambassador Travel will not extend further credit untill the balance owed is further decreased.)

Dave Dennis and Dick Jewett will attend the February 6 - 8 NAC meeting at the suggestion of George Wiley, approved by Richard Haley. Northeast and North Central Field Secretaries are being brought in for this meeting and for an all-day conference on Monday, February 8th.

In future, press releases and other items of general interest will be distributed to all departments in the office and to regional offices, field personnel, project directors, etc.

Wiley reminded Staff to adhere to the line of authority in hiring and expenditures. He pointed out that this need not always be so where "flow of information" is concerned, particularly if a bottleneck may be created by so doing.

Wiley, who attended the State of the Race Conference this weekend, reported that he had held out for a joint statement by the participating organizations which encompassed all areas of civil rights activity, including direct action, and had succeeded. He also asked that there be on-going discussions among the civil rights organizations represented. Political action and community organization were emphasized during the meeting. Wiley suggested that further thought be given to direct support by CORE for a broader minimum wage law - one of the issues discussed. He was advised by one of the participants that 70% of Negro workers are not covered by this law.

There will be a general Staff meeting for all National Office personnel, Wednesday, February 3, at 10:30 A.M. for reports and discussions on matters of general interest. All National Office Staff are also invited to meet and chat informally with NAC members Friday evening, February 5, beginning at 7:00 P.M. There will be a guest speaker, Mr. Karl Linn, on community organization, during the evening.

Next regular Staff meeting will be held Friday morning, February 5th.

RE: Job Specification and Recent Activities (for NAC)

The Director of the Organization Department is responsible for the supervision of the field staff, including regional offices. He is thus responsible for recommendations for the hiring and dismissal of field personnel; assigning them to various CORE regions; maintaining and collating information about field staff, including field program reports and financial reporting.

Additionally, he is responsible for organizing and developing CORE chapters. This includes receiving and making decisions on the organizing of new chapters and the maintenance, servicing, affiliation and/or disaffiliation of chapters. The Director of Organization is, thus, the staff officer who makes final recommendations to the National Director or the National Action Council on the acquisition of personnel and the functioning of chapters.

Under the directives of the National Action Council, the Director of the Organization Department is responsible for supervising assistants in training and in program. These assistants develop, under his guidance, training and program which affect the total organization.

During the past months, in addition to the above duties, and travel tangential to those duties, I have spent a considerable amount of time studying the War on Poverty program and attempting to relate that program to CORE activity. Specifically, this has meant two things: (1) translating pre-existent federal programs to staff, and (2) interpreting new federal programs to staff. Eminent among these studies has been the literacy program being developed in the Bronx. Hopefully, this same kind of program can be used elsewhere.

RE: Summary of Activities, Recent Months

In the last few months, my activities have centered around three main areas in addition to normal office routine: (1) chapter development, (2) inter-organizational development, and (3) development of training program.

CHAPTER DEVELOPMENT - I have visited chapters in Tucson, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Trenton, Kansas City and Chicago. In Tucson there was a need for a four-day workshop. Originally, this was to be run by the West Coast field secretary, but at the last minute this was not possible. Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Kansas City were trips requested by the chapters for purposes revolving around difficulties in local organizing problems. Trenton involved meetings after the arrest of some of our staff there. St. Louis, Milwaukee and Chicago involved the "stamping out of fires".

INTER-ORGANIZATIONAL DEVELOPMENT - We have always considered the relationships between CORE and other organizations to be important. On many occasions over the past months I have met with church agencies and other organizations concerned with civil rights. Specifically, I have met with persons from the NAACP, SNCC and other major civil rights organizations. I have met with persons at 475 Riverside Drive connected with the United Presbyterian Church, the United Church of Christ, the Methodist Church and the Episcopal Church. Additionally, I attended a week-end conference of Commissioners of Religion and Race in Cleveland and a week-long conference of the Methodist Student Movement in Lincoln, Nebraska. Next week I will attend a meeting of ministers from the Synod of Pittsburgh (Presbyterian) to map out a program with them regarding race relations and the local CORE group.

DEVELOPMENT OF TRAINING PROGRAM - While this was to have been an area of high priority for me, other things occurred to preclude the maximun effort. However, I have visited with officials of the National Training Laboratory in Washington to discuss aid they can give. I have talked at length with Michael Harrington and Walter Thabit, a housing expert, both of whom are willing to help wherever possible. I have also talked with Nicholas Von Hoffman in Chicago. He was formerly with The Woodlawn Organization and is now a reporter for the Chicago Daily News. He has agreed to do whatever he can to enhance our program.

I have drawn up a tentative outline for several regional institutes which will, hopefully, last for one week each. These institutes will have three aspects: (1) staff, (2) chapter leaders, and (3) potential community leaders. The major emphases will be organizational techniques, political history (so that we can view the movement in perspective), reasons for deeper involvement in the community, and (4) of course, CORE philosophy in relation to these.

We have been in constant consultation with CORE SEDF so that they will be apprised of our plans. They, in turn, will be able to transmit these plans in their own way to the SEDF Board.

RE: Field Report for N.A.C.
Period: Sept. 1964 - Jan. 1965

I. Program, objectives and activities.

After spending July in Mississippi, and most of August in Atlantic City with the F.D.P. challenge, I proceeded to begin the job I was originally hired for. I located and set up this office, hired field staff, and an office secretary, and drew up the following outline of procedure.

A. I broke the region into sections and assigned field secretaries to each.

B. Instructed the field staff to make short visits to each chapter so that we could get an overall picture of the chapters in our region. Armed with this information I could isolate the weakest chapters and concentrate on them first.

II. Staff.

Herb Callender-Field Secretary, assigned to New York State and has since been on loan to Trenton CORE to establish techniques for dealing with urban renewal.

Joyce Ware-Originally assigned to New England, but with the dismissal of John McDowell, I have been using her as a "floater". She is now assigned to New York City on some special pilot projects but she has also been used in areas outside of the city.

Eric Mann-Field Secretary, assigned to southern half of region and given the task of cleaning up Trailways which is a hangover project from previous National policy. (See V)

Judy Howell-Task Force, Youth Co-ordinator. . Presently working on the Remedial Reading Program. (See V)

We have an "unknown" task force worker with Brooklyn CORE. I became aware of this only last week. Apparently this position was arranged when rent strikes were the big thing in New York.

My feeling is that this worker should be supported by the chapter and not the National Office.

III. Facilities.

A. Regional Office located at 48 W. 125 St. Phones are EN 9-0100 and EN 9-0101

B. Automobile owned by me which is used in the field. The only financial arrangement is that I have an Esso credit card to be used only for the maintenance of this auto.

C. The only equipment we have that belongs to CORE is a typewriter (non-electric); the desks, files, and an air conditioner are the property of the landlord and their use is included in the rent.

IV. Budget

I have, to this date, not worked up a budget because this office handles no money, and aside from the expense reports turned in by field staff, the auto and its accompanying expenses, we have only the rent, $125.00 a month, and the phone.

All bills have been paid by the national office and the records of payments are on file.

We have no debts or obligations that are unknown to the bookkeeping department.

V. Evaluation.

Before attempting to evaluate the Northeast Regional set-up, I find it necessary to list the following major difficulties that had to be overcome in the five months of our existence.

A. No direction from above.
B. The breakdown of relations between the National Office and the New York chapters.
C. The lack of service given to the chapters outside New York City by the previous field staff.
D. My own lack of familiarity with the region.
E. Shortage of staff.
F. Lack of funds for travel.
G. Personnel problems.
H. Lack of a Regional Action Council.

Taking the sum of these problems plus the fact that many of our chapters have suffered in their attempts to change direction, it has been a miracle that we have accomplished what we have.

I do feel, at this point, that we will be, within the next month, in a position to be a real asset to the regional chapters. Within the next two weeks, I will make a tour of the New England chapters after which I will then be in a better position to assign the field secretaries to the chapters in most need. I expect, by convention time to have a complete and comprehensive report on each chapter with concrete recommendations.

We are now in a position to assist our chapters with programs centered around community organizing. An example is the report on Kingston CORE submitted by Joyce Ware (See her report). I have since been to Kingston, and using techniques learned through the Trenton project (Herb Callender's report), the chapter is moving and becoming a real force in the community.

Let me add, that we would have been much further advanced if it had not been for projects such as Trailways which were thrust upon us by previous National Office commitments.

We have been able to establish a chapter in Pittsburg, Pa. and Carlisle, Pa. Until now, we only had one chapter in the entire state, Philadelphia, and that was located in the far southeast corner which left the rest of the state free of any CORE activity. I plan to establish chapters in Harrisburg and Williamsport this summer.

We now have a group in Wilmington, Delaware seeking to join CORE. Either Joyce Ware or myself will be going there on the second of February.

We have no chapters in the state of Delaware which I find ridiculous as here is a state that still has the whipping post and probably all of the other factors of a society that will legally condone such an act as punishment.

I have also laid the groundwork for the establishment of CORE chapters in southern New Jersey where we have none, except for the chapter I established in Camden. I am working on a comprehensive report for you spelling out the reasons why civil rights activity is badly needed in the areas mentioned above, as some of the conditions are equal to the deep South.

VI. Recommendations and Miscellaneous Remarks.

A. That James Farmer spend more time in personal visits to his chapters.
B. That his secretary be instructed to give the CORE chapters adequate prior notice of Jim's appearances in their locale.
C. That N.A.C. members pay periodic visits to the chapters they represent and send reports to their regional office.

I remain,

Yours for freedom.

Trenton, New Jersey
Herb Callender-Field Secretary N.E. Region
January 21, 1965

From: Nov. 1964 to Present

Program:

A. Objectives:
To change present plans of urban renewal in Trenton so that there is:
1. Adequate relocation facilities in Trenton's John Fitch Way Project #3.
2. That there will be low rent housing built as part of the reuse of the Fitch Way area.
3. That out of this project there can be mobilization of South, East and North Trenton areas; to combat housing, education and employment problems.
4. The recruitment of these people would be for membership in the reorganized CORE chapter.

B. Activities: (See attached fact sheets)

1. Making contact in the John Fitch Way area.
2. Door-to-door informing of residents of their rights under urban renewal.
3. Meetings with city officials in Trenton to obtain information on plans for Fitch Way area.
4. Meetings with community in east, south and north Trenton.
5. Training of interested people for various positions; i.e. public relations, housing chairman, schools chairman, etc.
6. Picket lines (There have been two)
   a. City Hall
   b. Mayor Arthur J. Holland's home
7. Planning direct action project.
   (Scheduled for latter January)

Staff:

1.	Herb Callender	Age 31	N.E. Field Secretary
2.	Marva Amis	21	Volunteer Worker Phila.CORE
3.	Fran Crayton	21	" " Bklyn.CORE

Duties:

Field Secretary

1. Develop program for project
2. Participation in all organizational efforts
3. Arrange and attend all necessary meetings
4. Participate and supervise all direct action sub-projects
5. Document all information received on project
6. Arrange for rallies, fund raising affairs and speaking engagements.
7. Set up community office for Trenton chapter
8. Act as community and public relations man
9. Work with remaining members of chapter
10. Supervise community organization around present urban renewal movement.
11. File reports on projects with National and Regional offices
12. Keep NE regional chapters abreast of progress in Trenton
13. Train local residents for specific functions in a CORE chapter

Volunteer Workers:

1. Door-to-door mobilization of community
2. Assist in most duties of field secretary
3. Clerical and documentational work
4. Assist in workships and training programs

Facilities:

Auto: Owned by: Louis Smith N.E. Sr. Field Secretary
1960 Dodge Seneca
Good condition (after necessary repairs and snow tires)

Financial arrangement: CORE Esso Credit Card

Evaluation: (See attached fact sheets)

We were able to mobilize approx. twenty-five new members from the Negro community for chapter. There have been two picket lines,

City Hall and the Mayor's home, to dramatize the problems around the issue. In addition, there are current plans for direct action demonstrations, the first of which will be latter January and will involve chapters from N.Y., N.J., Pa. Civil disobedience as well as picket lines will be used to further bring to light the many problems around the issue. This will be followed by a reorganization meeting approx. middle of Feb. at which time a temporary formal chapter structure will be formed. Election of officers and program will be developed, at which time, we hope, the chapter will be a viable, independent unit.

The significance of the Trenton project as an example of what can be done with urban renewal problems stands out in the meetings that have been held with chapters in the NE region. To discontinue the activities here would be a tremendous defeat to a serious and effective organizational effort carried on by the NE region of CORE.

I would strongly recommend that National CORE continue to support this project and this chapter until the chapter is ready for independent activity. Trenton being the State Capital can truly set the example for many cities in the Tri-States as well as throughout other areas of the country.

COPY Made 20 January 1965 (Original, Nov. 19, 1964)

TO: NORTHEAST REGIONAL CHAPTERS

RE: Trenton, N.J. and John Fitchway #3 Urban Renewal Project

FROM: Herb Callender, Northeast Regional Field Sec.

FACT SHEET #1

I. Background

The Negro slum area of Fitch Way has been chosen as the site for middle and upper income housing built with Federal funds under the urban renewal program. 256 families are to be moved out of this area. Of these 256 families, 77% are Negroes with low income. Therefore Trenton CORE has requested that a relocation office be set up in this area to aid these families in finding other homes, also that low income housing be built there in addition to middle and upper income setups. In effect, this would "kill two birds with one stone" in that it would give the families of low income a decent place to live and provide adequate schooling. We feel that this was significant in that both the neighborhood and the school would be integrated which after all is the basis for all CORE activity.

On 5 November 1964, accompanied by Trenton CORE, Lou Smith-Regional Director, Herb Callender-Field Secretary, Joyce Sherick-Bronx CORE member, Dave Crittendon-Regional Office Secretary, and Marva Amis-Philadelphia CORE member, attended the City Council meeting where approval of the Fitch Way project was very sensitive to the presence of CORE, and responded by having Herb Callender thrown out of the meeting and subsequently arrested, charging him with disorderly conduct and disruption of a public meeting. The other CORE people including Mrs. Ruth Lewis, chapter chairman of Trenton CORE, were also arrested on the same charge, because they staged a sit-down demonstration outside the City Council doors protesting the present plans for Urban Renewal and the unjust arrest of Herb Callender. This was the first time any civil disobedience had occurred in Trenton and the "responsible Negro leadership" together with the City officials have responded by denouncing CORE and its actions. Expect no help from the local NAACP as some of their members are even expected to testify against us at our trial.

II. Urban Renewal

All Urban Renewal Projects must meet certain standards and have workable programs. John Fitch Way #3's workable program has 7 points, four of which directly concern us in this project. The four listed below were approved on 11/16/64 by the Federal Government.

1. Money available
2. Feasibility
3. Citizen participation
4 Relocation apparatus

In order to qualify for relocation, you must prove to the Federal government that you have clean, safe housing available. This project cannot do this as the amount of housing of this quality does not exist. Section 221 of the Special Financial Program states that the Federal Government will insure all housing built with Federal funds and buildings must have fire walls for FHA approval.

III. Facts on Trenton

I wish to reiterate that no action has occurred before in Trenton. The NAACP has not engaged in active programs concerning the needs of the poorer Negro populace. The "responsible Negro leadership" we feel is led by persons who have or are obtaining personal goals because of their inactivity on the issues of urban renewal and other relevant social issues. As an example of the status of this "responsible leadership", the husband of one of the responsibles heads the Redevelopment Bureau. Several others are involved in real estate sales and are closely linked to the power structure of the town.

IV. New York and New Jersey Chapter Support

A meeting was held on 11/16/64 at the Regional CORE, 48 W. 125 St. Numerous CORE chapters were present and were given the above details and were urged to support the Trenton chapter. They all promised to do their utmost to support any action planned. Chapters present were asked to send letters to the following political figures in Trenton:

Governor Hughes
Senator Case
Senator Williams
Mr. Weaver-Head of Housing Home Financing Agency, Wash.D.C.
Mr. Frank Thompson, Mercer County Congressman

Sample Letter:

Strongly request that you press for a Delay of the issuance of Federal funds for John Fitch Way Project #3 in Trenton, N. J., pending investigation of compliance with Federal standards.

TO: Mayor Arthur J. Holland, City Hall, Trenton, N. J.
Sample letter:

_____CORE wholeheartedly supports Trenton CORE in their efforts on John Fitch Way Project #3.

It is urgent that you send night letters or telegrams to the above-mentioned persons demonstrating your support for Trenton CORE. Please stand ready to give your support when and where needed for this Urban Renewal Project in Trenton. This project has great significance in that it will be a showcase for the type of effort CORE is going to endorse nationally on a program for integration through well designed urban renewal projects. The habit of rebuilding ghettoes must go and go NOW.

You will be promptly notified when any action has been formulated.

Yours for freedom,

RE: Report for NAC

PERIOD: September - January, 1965

First, I think what is necessary in this report is a description of the N.E. Regional Office. The office had four full time Field Secretaries and one Regional Director.

We the Staff did an analysis geographically of the region, taking into account the total numbers of chapters affiliated and unaffiliated. At that time we had staff persons to adequately cover the North East Region.

The area contained some 67 chapters of affiliated and unaffiliated status. At that time we divided the territory among the staff persons taking three and four states respectively. The intention was to visit each CORE chapter in the region, making a report as to its quality in terms of:

1. Is there a chapter?
2. What kinds of persons are in the chapter?
3. What are their potentials?
4. Can the chapter be rebuilt or can the chapter be strengthened?

I was immediately assigned to the states of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut having some eleven chapters total.

I immediately went to the Worcester chapter of CORE in Mass. spending a week and half there with the chapter. The chairman of the chapter is Mrs. Ruby Jarrett, an ex-CORE member from Chicago. The chapter is young and has a great deal of potential. The program which we expounded was very general, in terms of getting a chapter to analyze the local situation around housing, education and employment before going into any set action. Also knowing the advantage of what kind of community you had, and which was more viable. In the midst of my visit to the chapter, a regional project was coordinated around the Mississippi situation. The emphasis of the project was the focus to get federal protection for the workers and the people in Mississippi who attempted to register. The techniques used were the focusing on the local offices of the F.B.I. with demands which were consistent in concern. The local chapter of Worcester had a sit-in inside the local office of the F.B.I. (I might add that this chapter was the first chapter or any interest group to actually get inside the offices of the F.B.I.) The demonstration lasted some ten hours before it ceased.

I left Worcester Sunday Oct. 18, and went to Springfield, Mass. to visit with the local chapter there. Essentially the same procedure was worked there in the major problem of most of the chapters, which is knowing the value of priority in the context of projects.

At Springfield, however, we did talk about the specifics of a program in which the chapter was participating, revolving around the school situation in Springfield with the NAACP. The chairman of Springfield CORE is Oscar Bright, and the chapter consists of about 15 other people, some of whom are also in the NAACP. Specifically, I was interested in ways to build a strong chapter made up of community people, and moreover having a sound and concrete program. That chapter visit lasted some four days at which time I departed.

Upon returning to New York City, I immediately became involved in the Trailways project which centered around a complaint from some 5 porters who worked at Trailways, and which Core had involved itself in a year ago. The involvement was very personal in that it specifically dealt with 5 porters, but moreover it dealt with the employment practices generally. (See attached sheet on the Trailway project.) Specifically, the job of a field secretary was to coordinate the activities that CORE chapters carried out.

In the midst of the Trailways project, I attempted to set up an Area Conference with the chapters in the New England area to be held the third week in November at which point we had received tremendous support from the chapters involved, because of the prospectus presented by James Farmer at the Nyack conference. We felt and so did the chapters that their own procedures and future should be discussed. The area conference was called off in the hopes of having a Northeastern Regional Conference under the direction of Bob Curvin and Shirley Lacey.

The Trenton project was underway in Trenton,N.J. and the First of December I was called to Trenton to work with Herb Callender to coordinate chapter support and Ho research on the whole question of Urban Renewal. (See sheet of the Trenton project)

Before the Trenton Project, I visited the Kingston chapter of CORE and the attached sheet describes the chapter and the program which was worked out and is successfully working now. (See attached report on Kingston CORE)

At this stage of the game, we are presently coordinating with the local N.Y. chapter a program in working with the group of Social Workers, who call themselves the SOCIAL WORKERS FOR CIVIL RIGHTS. The emphasis of this program is to get workers into the offices of the chapters and man a desk for the purpose of giving services to the community which they would not normally receive.

The one other project which is under consideration is the setting up of an East Harlem project using volunteers to be coordinated under the Regional Office. However, we are not prepared at this stage to go into the meat of the project because it is still in the preliminary stages.

In consideration of expenses, my expenses have balanced out to about $60.00 per month.

RE: Field Secretary's Report for NAC

PERIOD: Sept. 1964 - Jan. 1965

During the period stated in the outline I have worked to some degree with the following chapters: Syracuse, Yonkers, New Rochelle, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Mount Vernon, and many of the chapters in New York City.

Trailways

The Trailways project brought me in contact with our chapters in Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia, as well as the New York City chapters. I am presenting a very superficial report on Trailways because a detailed report on the subject will be forthcoming as soon as some form of conclusion to the project can be achieved. Nonetheless, some general conclusions can certainly be drawn at this point:

1. The project was unsuccessful. There were many reasons for this but the primary one seems inherent in the project itself. That is, having originated from National, then being followed up by Regional, and then brought to the chapters, the chapters felt no vested interest in the project because they did not plan it, did not know about it, until their help was needed.

Also, the project itself was very difficult to pull off because of 1. the racial antagonism of management. 2. the size of the company. 3. the amount of work it would take to truly mobilize the Negro community in any way. 4. the lack of inherent emotionalism of the issue, which made it difficult to arouse the interest and enthusiasm of the "man in the street".

2. The project gave me some excellent insights into our chapter structure, and sharply focused some of the problems in several chapters.
3. The project involved CORE in a dispute with a discriminatory union and helped initiate some thinking on our policies in such a situation. Enclosed is a copy of a short position paper I wrote about our relationships with discriminatory unions.
4. The project involved the Philadelphia chapter in a dispute with the Philadelphia NAACP which has united the chapter, given it some excellent publicity, and in a small way changed the balance of power in the Negro community in CORE's favor.

FROM: Judy Howell, Task Force
RE: Progress Report on the Progressive Choice Reading Program

It has been very difficult to organize the Progressive Choice Reading Program pilot projects. There have been four (4) main reasons for this difficulty.

1. This is the first time that the chapters have been confronted with a program of this type.
2. The young people that are involved with CORE usually are not and do not hang out with illiterates or drop-outs.
3. Some chapters in communities that need this help the most are completely uncooperative and uninterested in the program (i.e. N.Y.CORE).
4. The chapters that have a program already set up say they want to incorporate PCRP into it, but refuse to sit down and arrange testing date. (i.e. CCNY CORE)

The first pilot project was opened in the South Bronx at St. Anne's Church, 140th Street and St. Anne's Ave., on Saturday, Dec. 19, 1964. Dr. Woolman brought the Institute of Educational Research staff up from Washington to train 4 instructors. Brooklyn and CCNY observers voiced interest in the program.

A testing date was set for Sat., Jan. 9, 1965, at St. Anne's. National CORE brought testing materials for the young people. However, we had a very poor showing. Out of 50 young people contacted, 10 showed up. The tests were given and 8 people were found eligible for the program. There will be another testing period on Jan. 22, 1965. Harold Davidson of Bronx CORE has urged several community groups to help him assemble a sizeable showing at that time. I will be meeting with all of the interested chapters this week. My main concern is to get the actual teaching started in the South Bronx, so that it can serve as an example for the other chapters in the pilot area.

The Mississippi Staff Salary Story

There are several different categories of staff workers as far as personal expenses go:

1) Married worker supporting a family.
2) Married worker supporting a separate household.
3) Married worker living in a freedom house arrangement.
4) Single worker living in a freedom house arrangement.
5) Single worker supporting a separate household.

And variations within these categories, depending on the location (rural, urban, etc.).

An historical accident, namely, whoever was at the Tougaloo COFO staff meeting in late summer, settled the names of those to be placed on Task Force this fall. Other people just as active who were not there for whatever reason were not considered. The original plan was to give $10 a week subsistence checks to those who were not on Task Force paychecks. This plan has not worked, however, because there has been no money to provide subsistence. As a result, there are some people working in the field who are receiving paychecks while working next to someone with as much experience and background who is not receiving a paycheck or any other form of subsistence.

In view of this inequity and because the staff feels that the present pay scale is higher than what is needed to actually meet expenses here in Mississippi, the staff has agreed on a sliding scale of pay, the scale to be set on the basis of financial need. The important aspect of any such scale is that it be open to review by the staff at any time and that there be a fairly clear distinction between categories. There should be a certain ability to make changes fairly quickly (moving out of a freedom house can raise the level of expenses overnight for instance).

Based on the present living expenses a first go-round on weekly salaries might be as follows:

	Proposed	Present
Annie Devine	$50	$40
C. O. Chinn	25	25
George Raymond	25	25

Total weekly payroll for Mississippi is thus $565. Sharpe, Hampton, Clay, Wojciechowska, Allenstein and Kaslo have good chances of obtaining outside support, thus having their names removed from this list.

As a total yearly budget now I see something on the following order:

Staff salaries	$28,600
Field Secretary	4,500
Fines and Misc.	600
Project fixed expenses	6,000
Contribution to Jackson	2,500

The Mississippi Automobile Story

Available cars and their present condition

64 Chevrolet (National lease to Suarez) - Wrecked in Meridian, sold as junk by National, awaiting copy of lease to know how to proceed.
64 Chevrolet (National lease to Raymond) - Broke down in Canton, waiting to be fixed.
62 Pontiac (owned by C. O. Chinn) - Lacks insurance, needs some mechanical work.
61 Dodge Station Wagon (donated, registered in Frank Wright's name) - Lacks insurance (hopeful possibility in Jackson being worked on).
61 Mercury Station Wagon (donated, registered in Frank Wright's name) - Lacks insurence (hopeful possibility in Jackson being worked on).
57 Ford (COFO car, Sojourner insurance) - Broke down in Virginia on FDP trip; presently somewhere in Washington, D. C.
64 Jeep (belongs to Bill Forsyth) - Wrecked recently; presently in Canton garage impounded under court order.
57 Oldsmobile (registered in Raymond's name; insured by Sojourner) - Used by Andrew Green in Madison county.
56 Plymouth (registered in Sandy Watts' name, insured by Sojourner(?) - Broke down on FDP Washington trip; presently in shop in Meridian.
48 Chevrolet (owned by Theodis Hewitt) - Lacks liability insurance.
60(?) Dodge (owned by Bill Hamlin) - About to run out of insurance, but he can get more.
64 Chevrolet truck (in name of Charney Bromberg; insured in N.Y.)- Lacks Miss. insurance; can only be used for 20 more days on N.Y. tags.
57 Volkswagen (owned by Rita Schwerner) - Driven part time by Mattie Dennis, part time by Dick Jewett. To the allotment of cars add that one car is to be used by the field secretary for travel over all parts of the district. At present that car is the VW above, but the field secretary is expecting to raise a car out of the north within a month or so, thus retiring the VW.

Projected auto allotment and usage

Western half of 4th District
Neshoba County - 64 Chevrolet (leased)
Clarke County - 61 Dodge Station Wagon
Lauderdale County (Meridian) - 61 Mercury Station Wagon
Field car (opening up Jasper & Newton) - 64 Chevrolet (leased)

Eastern half of 4th District
Leake County - 48 Chevrolet
Rankin County - 56 Plymouth
Madison County - 62 Pontiac, Jeep and/or 57 Olds and/or 60 Dodge Field car (opening up Scott & Simpson) - 64 Chevrolet truck

Junk the 57 Ford broken down in Washington.

Projected auto budget

8 X 1000 X $0.06 = $480/week car maintenance

$480/week X 52 weeks/year = $24,960/year car maintenance

Add $60/week for car hoped for from the North, $3120/year for this car.
This makes the total Mississippi automobile budget $28,080 per year.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Dr. George Wiley January 28, 1965

FROM: Carl Rachlin

RE: Legal Department (Report for NAC meeting February 6, 1965)

I. Program

A. During the last few months we have been involved in:

(a) U.S. Supreme Court - Cox v. Louisiana, argued early in October. The case was decided in our favor on all counts on January 18, 1965.

(b) Brown v. Louisiana - new case being prepared for the U. S. Supreme Court.

(c) Work on the CORE Legal Conference. This is being paid for by SEDF, but all time and preparation are being done in our department.

(d) Brewery matters and related employment problems, involving much correspondence and time spent in negotiations.

(e) Preparation of a long memorandum entitled "A Hard Look at the Civil Rights Law" discussing what the law does not do. This will go out shortly.

(f) Trailways matter - legal advice and supervision as well as negotiations in Washington with Federal agencies, coordination with CORE Northeast Regional Office, Philadelphia CORE chapter, attorneys.

(g) Cooperation with LCDC (Lawyers Constitutional Defense Committee), helping to keep it going for summer use particularly and in connection with this.

(h) Preparing Dennis v. Johnson, an important Mississippi case challenging the constitutionality of many Mississippi laws.

(i) Negotiations with President's Committee for Civil Rights under Law

(j) Completing memorandum on Rent Strikes sent to all chapters.

(k) Developing further our now substantial network of lawyers all over the United States. This means

(l) giving assistance to Tucson attorney in Civil Rights Law case

(m) Supervising Milwaukee case

(n) Same in Tulsa - sending volunteer, close CORE associate Marvin Karpatkin to Tulsa to work there on important court case.

(o) Similar in Omaha, Camden, Chicago

(p) Supervising the case in Trenton involving most of our NE Regional office as well as assisting them there in their ongoing activities with regard to Urban Renewal.

(q) We are still optimistic (less so) for an adjudication on segregated school bonds. We are still pushing this with the attorneys-general of the States of Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York.

(r) Work on a library desegregation case in Louisiana and a school case in Miss.

(s) There are several cases at the appeal stage here in New York:

(t) 3 important sit-in cases in the N.Y. Court of Appeals

(u) Very important so-called "loitering" case of Chris Sprowel to be appealed.

B. (a) As General Counsel of CORE, I deal with various internal legal matters, corporate and tax problems. These we handle, although shorthanded, as they develop. There is heavy involvement on the telephone. In large part these are local matters, some crackpot, some irrelevant, but all meaning much too much time. Because the National office is in New York, and because the Legal Department is supposed to be a repository of vast and diverse information, all sorts of inquiries are sent our way, many unnecessary, but all time-consuming. We also have fairly heavy correspondence to deal with all over the U.S. on Civil Rights matters, etc. Needless to say, our work involves coordination with the activities of Chapters and Regional Offices, and, often, participation in CORE workshops.

We were instrumental in the creation of CORE Metropolitan Legal Defense Fund, which we are in the process of setting up as a tax-exempt corporation. This group should start to be active in both fund-raising and in processing certain types of incoming calls and correspondence (e.g. police brutality) in the New York metropolitan area, thus relieving the National office of dealing with NY cases, at least at the preliminary stage.

(b) Other activities include university relations:

(i) participation in civil rights activities of universities such as helping conduct graduate seminar on civil rights for Columbia University Law School next semester.

(ii) Sit on Board as CORE Counsel of New York University Law School Hays Civil Liberties Center.

(iii) Stimulate law schools on the other hand to engage in long-range civil rights activities on our behalf such as University of Michigan and Boston College Law Schools whom we have asked to prepare a report on a new approach to landlord-tenant relations.

(iv) Maintaining close relations with and sit on Board of the Law Student Civil Rights Research Council for assistance in research problems and entree to students in many law schools in the U.S. such as Columbia, Pennsylvania, Howard, Harvard, Chicago, California, etc.

(c) Furthermore, I supervise 3 students (SEDF scholarship students) as part of their continuing legal education. They help us and it is my view that we play an important role in their legal education and their future in the civil rights field.

(d) In recent months I made trips to New Orleans (Pierson v. Ray), Washington (to argue Cox), Cleveland and Chicago (chapter problems). Of course trips to Washington were also made on other CORE business.

(e) I must attend conferences and meetings of such organizations as American Jewish Congress (member of board of their Committee of Law and Social Action), American Civil Liberties Union, LCDC (as member of the board), Workers Defense League (member of the board), Law Students Civil Rights Research Council (Advisor). After twenty-five years as an attorney I have finally become a member of the American Bar Association and hope to serve on a new committee that is being set up in the realm of constitutional law. I hope to reach many more attorneys in this way and interest them in working for CORE.

(f) Occasionally cooperation with attorneys in preparing civil rights cases other than CORE cases.

(g) Maintain a constant correspondence with numerous government agencies such as

(i) Defense Department - We have several matters pending before them and successfully handled others.

(ii) F.B.I. - while this is difficult and delicate, it is also often very useful - such as at Jonesboro where it was their help that was important.

C. Program for the next few months.

Under this heading I will outline the relationship of the legal work to program and our plans for activities in the next few months. Needless to say, activities outlined under A. and B. will continue to be part of our every-day work. The anticipated expenses related to these activities will be listed under the section entitled "Future expenses.")

It is in the areas relating to program that we have our greatest frustrations. Most of these come about because we do not have lawyers in the field at important centers to take the legal steps necessary to promote civil rights in an affirmative manner; (for that matter, as in Northern Florida, we do not always have a lawyer to defend people arrested.) Northern Florida and Southern Georgia is a particular area where we could use this assistance -- SEDF has appropriated this money and I have been interviewing people for this vacancy.

Louisiana is fairly well covered. Mississippi for some time has needed a lawyer with our philosophy. Obviously, it is important that CORE take as much charge legally as is possible. Some of our internal problems might disappear. In the event of any major program undertakings in Miss., one man will not be anywhere near sufficient. And we are currently faced with the question of Henry Aronson's resignation from CORE. However, our close ties with LCDC are proving a great advantage. They have just hired a full time lawyer for Mississippi, Alvin Bronstein, who will work in close cooperation with us. This will not cost CORE anything. Other major activities will require the assistance of LCDC which, of course, is its main function. For example, we are beginning soon an interesting reapportionment case in Mississippi which will be undertaken by LCDC.

With a regularized group of lawyers in key areas I could plan important legal activities instead of merely acting in an ad hoc fashion, and this will be of greater use to the men in the field, task force people, etc. There are lots of things that I have in mind for such purposes, one of which a big action, in advance, to step off the Plaquemines Parish program, if it developes as discussed.

Presumably, if we can get our bills paid in Louisiana, there are lots of legal problems to be developed, including a very interesting case of admission to Louisiana Tech which is rapidly progressing, and other school, employment and public facility matters, as well as certain injunctive type cases to protect our workers in the field. In Northern Florida we can try with one man, together with additional help from other sources. I have a statewide school case in mind for Louisiana, Florida and South Carolina. So far as Mississippi is concerned, it is a little more difficult, mainly because of the gross number of things to be tried. In South Carolina we have the difficulty of having no lawyer of whom we can be certain. A year ago we prepared a complaint in New York in a school board case which never got off the ground because NAACP put pressure on the plaintiffs to withdraw. The role of our lawyer in this has never been clear.

We must not neglect South Carolina where I would like to have a man as soon as our program gets going, or establish such local assistance as will cover us.

Problems do develop in areas where there are no lawyers, and if travel money were a little more available, I have competent men here to send to places such as Tulsa, etc. who have gone previously.

Hopefully we are getting New York problems under control. We need to do this in San Francisco, where there are lawyers but, because of the money, I have not been able to go there and try to see if it can be put in order, and what money would be needed to keep it on an even keel. I tried with a volunteer, Wester Sweet, of San Jose, but this did not work out. Also, this is essential in New Jersey, where there are lots of volunteers, but not enough coordination because the man who has been handling it is a volunteer. New Jersey illustrates the difficulty of relying too much on volunteers for trial work. In a recent Trenton matter two lawyers absolutely promised to be available and then were not. All one can do is bite one's nails since the men were volunteers.

II. Staff

(a) In the office itself there are only myself and a secretary. We have the part-time help of three law students on scholarships from SEDF. We have developed a mailing list of over 900 persons, of whom approximately 700 are attorneys all over the country able in one way or another to work for CORE. Almost all of these are volunteers.

(b) Our leading volunteers are:

(1) Marvin Karpatkin, in New York, who helps me with national affairs, such as the Cox defamation case, Tulsa injunction case, etc.

(2) George Schiffer, for New York affairs, who works very hard (e.g. all the World's Fair cases). SEDF gives him a substantial sum for the use of his office, telephone, equipment, etc. and also for the assistance of Jules Zalon, a young lawyer.

(c) Our leading attorneys on retainer are:

(1) Messrs Collins, Douglas, and Elie, who receive $400 per month plus expenses. This may go higher at the rate of $10.00 per hour when their work gets out of hand. As it is, they have not received their retainers or been reimbursed for expenses for the last 6 months of 1964.

(2) Floyd McKissick in North Carolina who receives $250 per month.

(3) We have other lawyers in Louisiana with a fixed rate ($10 per hour) but only for time actually spent. This is very reasonable and will help us in Louisiana for the future.

III Budget

Since the beginning of September the outstanding bills of the Legal Department have consistently stood at around $20,000. This does not include office or travel expenses for myself, which National CORE assumes. While we have managed to pay off a few bills, new ones have come in to bring it back to that amount. We have tried to keep our expenses at the absolute minimum, but even so, we have had to incur certain new expenses. Our department has been a serious victim of CORE's financial plight in recent months. Numerous volunteer attorneys have paid large sums out of their own pocket with the understanding that National CORE would reimburse them, and after six months (some longer) many are still waiting. Court stenographers who have prepared records for important cases have not been paid, and the effect of this is that many people who previously worked for us with enthusiasm are at the point where they are less than enthusiastic. We have done our best to plead their indulgence for the sake of the movement but we are in danger of losing their good will. Court stenographers have gotten to the point where they demand payment in advance. In the case of bail bondsmen...especially in the South...this presents a serious problem. This state of affairs is seriously hampering effectiveness on the legal front.

Fortunately, SEDF has come to our rescue. I met with Ann Singer of SEDF recently and went over each bill with her. Most of these bills are in an area whereby they could be picked up by SEDF. The only question is their finances. Not more than $5,000 or so would remain for National CORE to pay if they picked up all that they can pick up.

Future expenses

(a) Retainers for Collins, Douglas & Elie and for Floyd McKissick, as of January 1, 1965, are being paid by SEDF.

(b) SEDF has established the following annual budget for CORE Legal activities:

$20,000	- Louisiana
14,400	- Mississippi
14,400	- Northern Florida
3,600	- North Carolina
3,000	- Legal Conference
12,000	- Northern projects
$67,400	Total

This includes the above mentioned retainers, and covers the expenses of George Schiffer in New York and one attorney's salary in his office.

(c) Office expenses at CORE National Office:

(1) Telephone - about $125. a month

(2) No additional employees at this time, but special clerical assistance is needed from time to time, at an estimated $300 - $500 through May. This could be reduced by the use of competent volunteers if available. Additional help on work involving the Conference will come out of the SEDF grant for this purpose.

(d) Travel expenses:

(1) I hope to hire a lawyer for Northern Florida shortly and should spend a little time there helping him get started and planning.

some major efforts. Two trips.

(2) Two to three trips to Mississippi.

(3) Two to Louisiana.

To some extent some of these can be combined. But our plans for active legal programs in these areas necessitate this.

(4) I should go to South Carolina and lay the groundwork for setting up a group of lawyers to work with us in our forthcoming campaign. Two trips.

(5) One trip to Oklahoma and Texas

(6) One trip to West Coast. This latter is important particularly in light of the Chet Duncan situation and to show our interest in their problems, etc.

(7) One or two trips to Chicago.

These last three could also be combined if carefully planned.

(8) Three to four trips to Washington, D.C.

(9) One trip to Boston early in February to make a speech at Boston College Law School.

(10) One trip to Syracuse (housing rehabilitation matter)

Total travel expenses are estimated at approximately $1,500.00. Perhaps this figure can be reduced if it can be planned carefully.

(e) Other expenses:

(1) Based on previous experience, and assuming active national programs, we will need for bail bonds.....$3-4,000.

(2) Appellate work is hard to estimate, e.g. we have just received a request from Charles Oldham on the Jefferson Bank case, handled in large part from St. Louis, but with some assistance from us. This appeal would cost at least $5,000.00.

Any case that goes to the U.S. Supreme Court will cost us several thousand dollars. We can expect a couple of these per year. Currently we are awaiting word on our petition for a writ of certiorari in Callender v. Florida and Brown v. Louisiana. In large part these should be met by SEDF.

(3) We will have some printing bills, but they should not come to more than $1,000 unless, of course, cases not previously born rear up.

(4) We hope to have two lawyers plus clerical assistance for the South soon, but SEDF will pay this.

(5) Legal Department news letter - important service - no budget as yet.

(6) Special memoranda from time to time(including soon-to-go-out memorandum entitled "A Hard Look at the Civil Rights Act.") - $500-1,000.

(7) Legal texts and journals* - $200-250. We still hope to get U.S. Supreme Court Reports as a gift.

*This does not include important matters such as United States Supreme Court Reports, etc., and arrangements should be made for General Counsel to join the City Bar Association for its library and to be on its active Civil Rights Committee.

Thus, in addition to the budget for the full year of $67,400 from SEDF and assuming they will pick up about three-fourths of our outstanding bills, in summary:

Balance of outstanding bills	about $5,000.00
Telephone expenses - 5 months (Jan-May)	625.00
Clerical (emergency)	300 - 500.00
Travel expenses	1,500.00
Bailbonds (rough estimate depends on activity)	3,000- 4,000.00
Appellate work	5,000.00
Printing bills	1,000.00
Newsletter	???
Memoranda (including postage)	500 - 1,000.00
Reference books	200 - 250.00
	$18,875.00

Obviously, without assistance from SEDF, the use of volunteer attorneys, and close cooperation with LCDC, Law Students CR Research Council, etc., etc. this figure would more likely be in the neighborhood of $100,000.

COFO PROGRAM (Winter 1964 - Spring 1965)

The Council of Federated Organizations (COFO) is extending its Mississippi Summer Project into a year round project. Both volunteers and paid staff will be used to implement the programs. The following programs are planned as part of the project:

1. Freedom Democratic Party and voter registration. Suits filed by the Justice Department have opened up several counties in the state to the possibility of registering large numbers of Negroes. Emphasis will be placed on these areas, but voter registration will continue to form the basis for much of the community organization throughout the state. The Freedom Democratic Party experience of the summer has provided a basis for extensive voter education. This work will be carried on by local voter groups in different parts of the state. The Freedom Democratic Party operations may be worked out of offices distinct from the COFO offices, but there will be close connections in both staff and planning between the offices.

2. Freedom Schools. The Freedom Schools will be continued in all areas where possible, but their scope will be somewhat limited as the majority of students will be in regular school full time. Freedom schools will concentrate on late afternoon and evening courses. Content will be Negro history, political education, modern languages--all not available in the regular schools--as well as remedial math and reading and writing. In some areas freedom schools will serve to intensify regular studies. In some areas freedom schools may serve in place of regular schools in the event of trouble in the regular school system.

3. Pre-school education. Plans are underway for pre-school day care centers in several areas of the state. This program will attempt to provide nursery school enrichment programs to better prepare children for school. The program will provide working mothers with a place to leave their children under supervision during the day.

4. White Cimmunity Project. Contacts in the upper middle class and power structure will be continued, but these will be on a limited basis. Emphasis will be placed on trying to organize in the lowest classes, attempting to bridge the gap between the white and Negro communities.

5. Federal Programs. The project will attempt to implement various federal programs that are available for the Mississippi rural poor. Emphasis is being placed on programs for farmers, cooperatives--both housing and consumer, public health programs, and implementing the anti-poverty bill.

6. Community Centers. During the summer community center programs began in many areas of the state. Lack of buildings and trained staff delayed implementation of a permanent program. During the year the National Council of Churches will take on increased responsibility for some of the community centers. Emphasis in program will be on day care, citizenship, library, literacy, health program, and specialized programs arising out of skills of a particular applicant.

7. Literacy Program. The state-wide literacy program will be continued. Several different systems (each one, teach one, classes, self-help, etc.) are being used.

8. Medical Programs. The Medical Committee on Human Rights, a cooperating group, will expand its work. The programs will be partly connected with the freedom schools and the community centers. The actual content of the programs will depend on local need and available personnel, but the minimum desired program will include public health, dietary guidance, first aid, pre-natal care, and instruction in available federal, state, and local aid.

9. Legal Programs. Legal assistance under the Lawyer's Constitutional Defense Committee and the Lawyer's Guild will be continued. Lawyers will be permanently stationed in the state and will work with visiting lawyers here on a short term basis.

10. Audio-visual Program. A variety of movies and slides will be shown in different parts of the state.

11. Food & Clothing Distribution. Food and clothing is being distributed to people who have suffered harassment for movement activities or who are economically destitute for other reasons. The food and clothing is collected in other parts of the country and sent here. This distribution is done in cooperation with other interested agencies.

12. Mississippi Student Union (High School Student Organization). Chapters of this state-wide movement organization are established in many areas. Other chapters will be added. The organization serves as a focus for all civil rights-connected activities on the high school level.

13. Libraries. Usually libraries will be a part of a community center program. In some areas there may be buildings only large enough to house a library. In other places mobile libraries may be used. The libraries are simple and are only sketchily catalogued. Emphasis is placed on training local people to run the libraries.

To ensure medical aid for civil rights workers in the South . . .

To help develop urgently needed health and medical programs in the South.

more than 100 doctors, nurses, dentists, psychologists and social workers volunteered their services as the supportive medical arm of the civil rights movement in Mississippi.

Serving without pay, teams of doctors and nurses provided emergency first aid for student workers beaten or attacked . . . arranged for local medical care and hospitalization of sick or injured Mississippi Project volunteers — and provided, above all, the presence of sympathetic medical personnel in a hostile atmosphere.

The committee established contact with white and Negro physicians throughout the state to facilitate the health care of civil rights workers; launched a rest and recreation program for workers with "battle fatigue" — and took first steps to survey and help local Negro communities meet some of their major unfilled health and medical needs.

Close to two thousand volunteers will work in the intensive drive for voter registration, adult education, Freedom Schools and related programs this summer in the South. Central offices and field stations at which our medical personnel can help protect the health of civil rights workers and assist in the development of local health programs must be ready and prepared.

To help secure urgently needed medical and health care for Negro citizens, the MCHR, in cooperation with the National Council of Churches, is assisting a local community health association to establish the first of a series of rural health centers in Mississippi. In cooperation with Mississippi Negro and white physicians, MCHR public health nurses and health educators will seek to lower excessive maternal and infant mortality rates, and undertake other programs to help local communities raise their health standards.

The Medical Committee needs volunteers — doctors, nurses, dentists, psychologists, social workers — who are willing to spend time in the South this summer.

A Medical Committee doctor assists a student beaten by hoodlums in Mississippi. Since most MCHR physicians are not licensed to practice in Mississippi, they do not provide medical care except in emergencies.

An "on-the-scene" medical presence is urgently needed.

When a civil rights worker is jailed, the first person to see him is often a Medical Committee physician. Frequent visits by physicians, local and MCHR, help ensure the well-being of the workers.

In cooperation with local Negro doctors, the Medical Committee aided in medical examinations of student civil rights workers and helped maintain the health of the volunteers. The Committee established contact with white and Negro physicians throughout the state to facilitate health care of civil rights workers—the beginning of a "bridge of communication" between Negro and white communities in Mississippi.

There are only 57 practicing Negro physicians in the state of Mississippi. They carried the largest share of the burden of treating the civil rights workers, as they was formed, in July, 1964, at the urgent request of civil rights leaders in Mississippi, as an emergency medical service for civil rights workers in the Mississippi summer project.

Organized for members of the health professions who are deeply committed to the civil rights movement, the Committee has become a permanent national volunteer health corps.

Its program includes protection and care of student civil rights workers; development of rural health centers and mobile health units; health education; aid to community workers in developing health and medical programs; surveying medical needs and documenting discriminatory patterns in health services in the South, to provide a basis for change.

CHAPTER 931

AN ACT to amend the public health law, in relation to the control of atmospheric pollution, and creating an air pollution control board in the state department of health

Became a law April 28, 1957, with the approval of the Governor. Passed, by a majority vote, three-fifths being present

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. The public health law is hereby amended by inserting therein a new article, to be article twelve-A, to read as follows:

ARTICLE TWELVE-A

Air Pollution Control

Title I. General provisions and public policy (§§ 1264–1267).
II. Air pollution control board (§§ 1268–1276).
III. Procedures (§§ 1277–1284).
IV. Violations; penalties (§§ 1285–1288).
V. Variances (§§ 1289–1292).
VI. Scope and construction (§§ 1293–1298).

TITLE I

General Provisions and Public Policy

Section 1264. Short title.
1265. Declaration of policy.
1266. Statement of purpose.
1267. Definitions.

§ 1264. Short title. This article shall be known as the "Air Pollution Control Act".

§ 1265. Declaration of policy. It is declared to be the policy of the state of New York to maintain a reasonable degree of purity of the air resources of the state, which shall be consistent with the public health and welfare and the public enjoyment thereof, the industrial development of the state, the propagation and protection of flora and fauna, and the protection of physical property and other resources, and to that end to require the use of all available practical and reasonable methods to prevent and control air pollution in the state of New York. It is further declared that this can be done most effectively by focusing on goals to be achieved by a maximum of cooperation among all parties concerned and that codes, rules and regulations established under the provisions of this article should be clearly premised upon scientific knowledge of causes as well as of effects.

Explanation — Matter in italics is new; matter in brackets [ ] is old law to be omitted.

§ 1266. Statement of purpose. It is the purpose of this article to safeguard the air resources of the state from pollution by: (a) controlling or abating air pollution which shall exist when this article shall be enacted and (b) preventing new air pollution, under a program which shall be consistent with the declaration of policy above stated and in accordance with the provisions of this article.

§ 1267. Definitions. When used in this article, the following words and phrases shall have the meanings ascribed to them in this section.

1. "Board" means the air pollution control board which is created by this article.

2. "Person" means any individual, public or private corporation, political subdivision, agency, board, department or bureau of the state, municipality, partnership, association, firm, trust, estate or any other legal entity whatsoever which is recognized by law as the subject of rights and duties.

3. "Air contaminant" means a dust, fume, gas, mist, odor, smoke, vapor, pollen or any combination thereof.

4. "Air pollution" means the presence in the outdoor atmosphere of one or more air contaminants in quantities, of characteristics and of a duration which are injurious to human, plant or animal life or to property or which unreasonably interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life and property throughout the state or throughout such areas of the state as shall be affected thereby; excluding however all conditions subject to the requirements of the labor law and industrial code.

5. "Air contamination" means the presence in the outdoor atmosphere of one or more air contaminants which contribute or which are likely to contribute to a condition of air pollution.

6. "Air contamination source" means any source at, from or by reason of which there is emitted into the atmosphere any air contaminant, regardless of who the person may be who owns or operates the building, premises or other property in, at or on which such source is located or the facility, equipment or other property by which the emission is caused or from which the emission comes. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, this term includes all types of commercial and industrial plants and works, heating and power plants and stations, shops and stores; buildings and other structures of all types, including single and multiple family residences, apartment houses, office buildings, public buildings, hotels, restaurants, schools, hospitals, churches, and other institutional buildings; automobiles, trucks, tractors, buses and other motor vehicles (hereinafter called "motor vehicles"); garages; vending and service locations and stations; railroad locomotives; ships, boats and other waterborne craft; portable fuel-burning equipment; incinerators of all types, indoor and outdoor; and refuse dumps and piles.

7. "Air cleaning device" means any method, process or equipment which removes, reduces or renders less noxious air contaminants discharged into the atmosphere.

8. "Area of the state" means any city, village, township, county or other geographical area of the state as may be designated by the board.

TITLE II

Air Pollution Control Board

Section 1268. Creation of air pollution control board; membership.
1269. Organization of the board; officers; terms of office.
1270. Compensation.
1271. Jurisdiction of the board; powers and duties.
1272. Meetings of the board; quorum.
1273. Executive secretary; jurisdiction; powers and duties.
1274. Technical, scientific, legal and other services.
1275. Employees and advisers.
1276. Codes, rules and regulations.

§ 1268. Creation of air pollution control board; membership. 1. (a) There is hereby created within the department of health an air pollution control board, which shall consist of nine members, five of whom shall be the commissioners of the departments of health, agriculture and markets, commerce, conservation and labor; and four of whom shall be appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the senate and shall have the respective qualifications provided in paragraph (b) of this subdivision.

(b) Of such four members so appointed by the governor,

(i) One member shall be representative of the medical profession, and, as such, shall be a licensed doctor of medicine and shall be experienced and competent in the toxicology of air contaminants.

(ii) One member shall be representative of the engineering profession, and, as such, shall be a licensed professional engineer and shall be trained and experienced in matters of air pollution measurement and control.

(iii) One member shall be representative of industry, and, as such, shall be employed by a manufacturer or public utility carrying on a manufacturing or public utility business within the state and shall be experienced and competent in matters of air pollution evaluation and control.

(iv) One member shall be representative of the political subdivisions of the state, and, as such, shall be a member of the local governing body of a city, town or village of the state or a person otherwise employed by such a city, town or village, and shall be familiar with matters pertaining to air pollution and the control thereof in relation to real property values and the public welfare.

2. Each member of the board other than a member appointed by the governor may, by official order, filed in the office of the board, designate a deputy or other representative in his department to perform his duties under this article, except as provided in sections one thousand two hundred seventy-six and one thousand two hundred eighty-two.

The designation of such deputy or other representative shall be deemed temporary only and shall not affect the civil service or retirement rights of any person so designated.

§ 1269. Organization of the board; officers; terms of office. 1. The commissioner of health shall be the chairman of the board.

2. Of the four members of the board appointed by the governor first to be appointed, one shall be appointed for a term of one year; one for a term of two years; one for a term of three years and one for a term of four years beginning on July first, nineteen hundred fifty-seven. Thereafter all appointments shall be made for terms of four years beginning on July first of the year in which the appointment is, by the provisions of section one thousand two hundred sixty-eight required to be made. Each of such appointed members of the board shall hold office for the term for which he was appointed and until his successor shall have been appointed and taken office in his stead or until he shall resign or be removed in the manner hereinafter provided.

If any member of the board appointed by the governor shall resign or be removed from the board, the governor shall promptly appoint a member, representative of the same interest, as provided in paragraph (b) of subdivision one of section one thousand two hundred sixty-eight, as was the member so resigned or removed, to fill the vacancy for the remainder of the term of the member of the board who ceased to be a member thereof.

The governor may remove for cause, after a public hearing, any member of the board appointed by him.

§ 1270. Compensation. The members of the board, their respective deputies or representatives if any, shall receive no compensation for their services as members of the board or as such representatives or deputies, but each of them shall be allowed the necessary and actual expenses which he shall incur in the performance of his duties under this article.

§ 1271. Jurisdiction of the board; powers and duties. 1. Consistent with the policy of the state as it is declared in section one thousand two hundred sixty-five, the board shall have power to:

(a) Formulate, adopt and promulgate, amend and repeal codes and rules and regulations for controlling or prohibiting air pollution in such areas of the state as shall or may be affected by air pollution and to include in any such code, rules or regulations a general provision for controlling air contamination, as the phrase "air contamination" is defined in subdivision five of section one thousand two hundred sixty-seven; provided, however, that in exercising the provisions of this paragraph the board shall conform with the provisions of section one thousand two hundred seventy-six.

(b) Establish areas of the state and prescribe the degree of air pollution or air contamination that may be permitted therein.

(c) Hold public hearings, conduct investigations, compel the attendance of witnesses, receive such pertinent and relevant proof and other things as it may deem to be necessary, proper or desirable in order that it may effectively discharge its code, rule and regulation making duties and responsiblities under this article and its duties and responsibilities under this article to control and abate air pollution.

2. The board shall also have power to:

(a) Control and abate air pollution in accordance with any code, rule or regulation which it may promulgate under this article.

(b) Compel the attendance of witnesses.

(c) Make findings of fact and determinations.

(d) Assess such penalities as are hereinafter prescribed with respect to a violation of any provision of any code, rule or regulation or of any order which it may issue under this article.

(e) Make, modify or cancel orders which require, in accordance with the provisions of this article, the abatement of air pollution.

(f) Institute or cause to be instituted in a court of competent jurisdiction proceedings to compel compliance with the provisions of any code, rule or regulation or any determination or order which it may promulgate or issue under this article.

(g) Settle or compromise in its discretion with the approval of the attorney general and as it may deem advantageous to the state any action for the recovery of a penalty under this article.

(h) Do such other things as it may deem necessary, proper or desirable in order that it may enforce codes, rules or regulations which have been promulgated under this article.

(i) Accept, or where deemed necessary require to be submitted to it, and consider for approval plans for air cleaning devices or any part thereof and inspect the installation for compliance with the plans.

3. The board shall have the further power to:

(a) Enter and inspect any property, premise or place and stop, detain and inspect any motor vehicle for the purpose of investigating either an actual or suspected source of air pollution or air contamination or ascertaining compliance or non-compliance with any code, rule or regulation which it may promulgate under this article. Any information relating to secret processes, or methods of manufacture, or production obtained in the course of the inspection or investigation shall be kept confidential. If samples of air or air contaminants are taken for analysis, a duplicate of the analytical report shall be furnished promptly to the person who is suspected of causing such air pollution or air contamination.

(b) Receive and initiate complaints of air pollution or air contamination in alleged violation of any code, rule or regulation which it may promulgate under this article and take action with respect thereto as hereinafter provided in this article.

4. It shall be the duty and responsibility of the board to:

(a) Prepare and develop a general comprehensive plan for the control or abatement of existing air pollution and for the control or prevention of any new air pollution recognizing varying requirements for different areas of the state.

(b) Encourage voluntary cooperation by all persons in controlling air pollution and air contamination.

(c) Encourage the formulation and execution of plans by cooperative groups or associations of cities, towns and villages, industries and others who severally or jointly are or may be the source of air pollution, for the prevention and abatement of pollution.

(d) Cooperate with the appropriate agencies of the United States or other states or any interstate agencies or international agencies with respect to the control of air pollution and air contamination, or for the formulation for the submission to the legislature of interstate air pollution control compacts or agreements.

(e) Conduct or cause to be conducted studies and research with respect to air pollution control, abatement or prevention.

(f) Conduct and supervise programs of air pollution control education including the preparation and distribution of information relating to air pollution control.

(g) Determine by means of field studies and sampling the degree of air pollution in New York state.

(h) Provide advisory technical consultation services to local communities.

(i) Develop and conduct demonstration programs in cooperation with local communities.

(j) Promote the establishment of local laboratory facilities including essential instrumentation.

(k) Provide facilities and staff for training personnel of local communities in the principles of air sanitation.

(l) Serve as the agency of the state for the receipt of monies from the federal government or other public or private agencies and to expend such monies after appropriation thereof for the purpose of air pollution control studies or research.

§ 1272. Meetings of the board; quorum. 1. The board shall:

(a) Meet at least quarterly.

(b) Keep a record of all its proceedings.

(c) Determine the rules of its own procedures.

2. Special meetings of the board may be called by its chairman upon his own initiative and must be called by him upon the receipt by him of a written request therefor signed by two or more members of the board.

3. Six members of the board shall constitute a quorum when the board exercises its code, rule and regulation making responsibilities at both regular and special meetings.

4. Five members of the board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of any other business of the board at both regular and special meetings.

5. The term "members" as used in this section shall include deputies or other representatives who shall be designated in accordance with the provisions of subdivision two of section one thousand two hundred sixty-eight.

6. At least three days prior to each meeting, the executive secretary of the board shall give written notice to each member of the board of the time, place and purpose of such meeting.

§ 1273. Executive secretary; jurisdiction; powers and duties. The board shall appoint an executive secretary. Such an appointment shall be made on the affirmative vote of seven or more members.

The executive secretary shall be a professional engineer licensed to practice in the state of New York and trained and experienced in the field of air pollution control.

The executive secretary shall:

(a) Act as the administrative agent of the board.

(b) Between meetings of the board, perform in the name of the board such functions and duties and have such authority given the board by section one thousand two hundred seventy-one as the board may delegate to him by formal resolution, except the authority to promulgate, amend or repeal codes, rules and regulations, make determinations or issue and countermand orders.

(c) Keep a record of all meetings of the board.

(d) Make recommendations to the board with respect to air pollution abatement.

(e) Notify, at the direction of the chairman, the members of the board, of the time, place and purpose of each meeting.

(f) Carry out such instructions and perform such other tasks as the board may direct.

§ 1274. Technical, scientific, legal and other services. Technical, scientific, legal or other services shall be performed, in so far as practicable, by personnel of the departments of health, agriculture and markets, commerce, conservation, labor and other departments or agencies of the state, without additional compensation.

§ 1275. Employees and advisers. The board shall have the power to employ and compensate, within appropriations available therefor, such other personnel as it shall determine necessary to carry out the provisions of this article, and shall prescribe their powers and duties. The board or the executive secretary of the board may be assisted, when deemed necessary, by a council of technical advisers, properly qualified by education or experience, appointed by the board, but such technical advisers shall receive no compensation for such services to the board or to the executive secretary.

§ 1276. Codes, rules and regulations. 1. A code, rule or regulation or any amendment or repeal thereof shall be approved in writing by at least six members of the board and not by any deputy or other representative.

2. A code, rule or regulation or any amendment or repeal thereof shall not be adopted until after a public hearing within the area of the state concerned. Notice of such hearing shall be given at least thirty days prior to the scheduled date of the hearing by public advertisement of the date, time, place and purpose of such hearing. At such hearing, opportunity to be heard by the board with respect to the subject thereof shall be given to the public. A code, rule or regulation or an amendment or repeal thereof shall not become effective until sixty days after it has been signed as provided in subdivision one of this section, nor until certified copies thereof shall have been filed with the secretary of state. Any person heard at such hearing shall be given written notice of the action of the board with respect to the subject thereof.

3. The code, rule and/or regulation or any amendment thereof which shall be adopted by the board may differ in its terms and provisions as between particular types and conditions of air pollution or of air contamination; as between particular air contamination sources; and as between particular areas of the state.

4. In exercising the power conferred upon it by section one thousand two hundred seventy-one to formulate, adopt and promulgate, and to amend and repeal, codes and rules and regulations for controlling or prohibiting air pollution, the board shall give due recognition to the fact that the quantity or characteristics of air contaminants or the duration of their presence in the atmosphere, which may cause air pollution in one area of the state, may cause less air pollution or not cause any air pollution in another area of the state, and it shall take into consideration in this connection such factors, among others found by it to be proper and just, as existing physical conditions, zoning classifications, topography and prevailing wind directions and velocities and also the fact that a code, rule or regulation and the degree of conformance therewith which may be proper as to an essentially residential area of the state may not be proper as to a highly developed industrial area of the state.

TITLE III

Procedures

Section 1277. Hearings; general provisions.
1278. Notices; service of process.
1279. Complaints; investigation.
1280. Complaints; hearing.
1281. Complaints; conduct of hearings.
1282. Order or determination.
1284. Air pollution deleterious to health.

§ 1277. Hearings; general provisions. 1. Public hearings, as provided for in subdivision two of section one thousand two hundred seventy-six and in section one thousand two hundred eighty, may be held before any member or members of the board or their delegates or representatives if any, as the chairman with the concurrence of the board may designate.

2. For any hearing specified in subdivision one, those designated to conduct the hearing shall have power to issue in the name of the board notices of hearings and subpoenas requiring attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of evidence relevant to any matter involved at any such hearing and those designated shall also have the power to examine witnesses.

3. Any information relating to secret processes, or methods of manufacture, or production which may be required, ascertained or discovered by the board or those designated to conduct hearings shall not be disclosed in public hearings or otherwise and shall be kept confidential.

4. A record, or summary thereof, of the proceedings of each hearing shall be made and filed with the board. If requested by any party concerned with said hearing, full stenographic notes of the proceedings and testimony presented shall be taken and filed. The stenographer shall, upon payment of the fees allowed therefor, furnish a certified transcript of the whole or any part of his notes to any party to the action requesting the same.

5. In the case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpoena under this section, the supreme court shall have jurisdiction, upon the application of the board or its authorized delegate to issue an order requiring such person to appear and testify or produce evidence as the case may require. Any failure to obey such an order may be judged by any court as contempt thereof.

6. At any hearing, opportunity to be heard with respect to the subject thereof shall be given to the public.

7. Any person heard at such public hearing shall be given written notice of the action of the board with respect to the subject thereof.

§ 1278. Notices; service of process. 1. Notices of every public hearing shall specify the time, date, place and purpose of the hearing.

2. Service of all processes of the board, except subpoenas and except notices of hearings for the adoption of codes, rules or regulations (notices of which shall be given as provided in subdivision two of section one thousand two hundred seventy-six), shall be served in the same manner as a summons in a civil action or by registered mail upon any person to whom it is addressed, upon the mayor or counsel of a municipality or upon an officer of a district, authority, commission, private corporation or company, as the case may be.

3. Subpoenas shall be served upon a prospective witness personally and at the same time he shall be paid such fees therefor as may be provided by law.

§ 1279. Complaints; investigation. In case any written complaint shall be filed with the board and it shall have cause to believe, or in case the board itself shall have cause to believe, that any person is violating any code, rule or regulation which was promulgated by the board by causing or permitting air pollution or air contamination, the board shall cause a prompt investigation thereof to be made; and, if it shall find, after such investigation, that such a violation of any code, rule or regulation of the board exists, it shall, by conference, conciliation and persuasion, endeavor to the fullest extent possible, to eliminate the source or cause of the air pollution or air contamination which resulted in such violation.

§ 1280. Complaints; hearing. In case of failure by conference, conciliation and persuasion, to correct or remedy any source or cause of air pollution or air contamination which resulted in a violation of any code, rule or regulation of the board, the board shall cause to have issued and served upon the person complained against a written notice, together with a copy of the complaint made by it or a copy of the complaint made to it, which shall specify the provision of the code, rule or regulation of which such person is said to be in violation, and a statement of the manner in, and of the extent to which, such person is said to violate it and shall require the person so complained against to answer the charges of such complaint at a public hearing before the board at a time not less than fifteen days after the date of notice.

§ 1281. Complaints; conduct of hearings. 1. The respondent to such complaint may file a written answer thereto and may appear at such hearing in person or by representative, with or without counsel, and may submit testimony, or may do both.

2. The board at the request of any respondent to a complaint made pursuant to this article shall subpoena and compel the attendance of such witnesses as the respondent may reasonably designate and it shall require the production for examination of any book or paper relating to the matter under investigation at any such hearing.

3. The testimony taken at the hearing before the board or its delegate shall be under oath and recorded stenographically.

§ 1282. Order or determination. 1. After due consideration of the written and oral statements, the testimony and arguments that shall be submitted under the provisions of section one thousand two hundred eighty-one or, upon default in appearance of the respondent on the return day which shall be specified in the notice given as provided in section one thousand two hundred eighty, the board may issue and enter such final order, or make such final determination as it shall deem appropriate under the circumstances, and it shall notify the respondent thereof in writing by registered mail. In all proceedings before the board or its designee with respect to any alleged violation of any code, rule or regulation which shall have been promulgated by the board, the burden of proof shall be upon the board.

2. Any final order or determination or other final action by the board shall be approved in writing by at least six members of the board and not by any deputy or other representative.

§ 1283. Review. 1. Any final order or determination or other final action by the board and the validity or reasonableness of any code, rule or regulation of the board shall be subject to review as provided in article seventy-eight of the civil practice act.

2. (a) When a review in accordance with article seventy-eight of the civil practice act is not maintainable, either because the person aggrieved was not a party to the original proceedings in which the order or determination or other action which is sought to be reviewed was made or taken, or for any other reason, the order or determination of the board and the validity or reasonableness of any code, rule or regulation of the board may nevertheless be reviewed as hereinafter provided in this subdivision.

(b) Application for relief from any code, rule or regulation of the board or from any determination or order or other action which shall have been made or taken by the board or by any person acting in the name of the board shall be made by petition which shall be verified as in a civil action. Such petition shall contain a plain and concise statement of the material facts on which the petitioner relies, and shall set forth the code, rule or regulation or the determination or order or other action of the board or the part thereof which he shall claim to be unreasonable or prejudicial to him and shall specify the grounds therefor. Such petition may be accompanied by affidavits or other written proof and shall demand the relief to which the petitioner alleges he is entitled, in the alternative or otherwise. Such petition may be made by any one or more persons jointly or severally who shall be aggrieved by any such code, rule or regulation or any such determination, order or act whether or not such petitioner is or was a party to the proceeding in which such code, rule or regulation was adopted by the board or in which such determination or order or action was made or taken by the board.

(c) A proceeding brought under the provisions of this subdivision must be instituted by service of the petition and notices of application for relief within four months after the action of the board which is sought to be reviewed shall become final and binding upon the petitioner or the person whom he represents either in law or in fact; or, with the permission of the supreme court granted within two years in case the petitioner or the person whom he represented at the time such action became final and binding upon the petitioner or such person was under the age of twenty-one years, or insane, or imprisoned on a criminal charge, or had been sentenced for a term of less than life.

(d) In all respects the procedure prescribed in section one thousand two hundred eighty-seven and sections one thousand two hundred eighty-nine through one thousand three hundred six, inclusive, of article seventy-eight of the civil practice act shall be applicable to a review provided for in this subdivision two.

§ 1284. Air pollution deleterious to health. Whenever the board after investigation is of the opinion that any person is discharging or causing to be discharged into the atmosphere directly or indirectly any air contaminant and the board certifies that such discharge constitutes danger to the health of the people and that it therefore appears to be prejudicial to the interests of the people of the state to delay action for a period of fifteen days as provided in section one thousand two hundred eighty, the board shall notify the person by written notice that he must discontinue immediately the discharge of such contaminants to the atmosphere whereupon such person shall immediately discontinue such discharge. As promptly as possible thereafter, within not to exceed fifteen days, the board shall provide the person the opportunity to be heard and to present any proof that such discharge does not constitute a danger to the health of the people.

TITLE IV

Violations; Penalties

Section 1285. Violations; voluntary correction.
1286. Violations; civil liability.
1287. Injunctions.
1288. Emergencies excepted.

§ 1285. Violations; voluntary correction. If, at a hearing which shall be held before the board or its delegates or representatives in accordance with the provisions of title three of this article, the board shall determine that the person against whom a complaint was made is violating any code, rule or regulation which was promulgated by the board by causing or permitting air pollution or air contamination from an air contamination source that is under the control of such person, it shall fix a time, which shall be reasonable under all the circumstances and which may be extended by the board from time to time, during which such person shall be required to take such measures as may be necessary to prevent the violation and to give periodic progress reports thereon. Any information as to secret processes or secret methods of manufacture or production which shall be revealed by such periodic progress reports shall be kept confidential.

§ 1286. Violations; civil liability. 1. Any person who shall have been so determined by the board to have violated any code, rule or regulation which was promulgated by the board and who shall not have taken such preventive or corrective measures as shall be required by the board within the time fixed by it, either originally or as extended, as the case may be, shall be liable for a penalty not to exceed the sum of five hundred dollars for said violation and an additional penalty of not to exceed one hundred dollars for each day during which such violation continues, commencing on the first day after the expiration of the time so fixed in the order of the board for the taking of such preventive or corrective measures. In addition thereto, such person may be enjoined from continuing such violation as hereinafter provided.

2. The penalty provided for in subdivision one of this section shall be recoverable in an action brought in the name of the people of the state by the attorney general. The provisions of the civil practice act and other law relating to the recovery of penalties shall apply to actions brought for the recovery of penalty under this article.

3. An action or cause of action for the recovery of a penalty under this article may be settled or compromised by the attorney general after proceedings are brought to recover such penalties prior to the entry of judgment therefor.

§ 1287. Injunctions. If measures to prevent or correct air pollution or air contamination which is in violation of any code, rule or regulation promulgated by the board shall not be taken in accordance with the order of the board, the board may request the attorney general to bring, and if so requested it shall be his duty to bring, an action for an injunction to prevent any further or continued violation of such code, rule or regulation. In any action for injunction brought pursuant to this article, any finding of the board shall be prima facie evidence of the fact or facts found therein.

§ 1288. Emergencies excepted. The civil liabilities which shall be imposed pursuant to the provisions of this title upon persons violating the provisions of any code, rule or regulation shall not be so construed as to include any violation which was caused by an act of God, war, strike, riot, catastrophe or other condition as to which negligence or willful misconduct on the part of such person was not the proximate cause.

TITLE V

VARIANCES

Section 1289. Variances; permissive.
1290. Variances; other considerations.
1291. Variances; required.
1292. Duration.

§ 1289. Variances; permissive. Notwithstanding any other provision of this article, the board may suspend the enforcement of the whole or any part of any code, rule or regulation of the board in the case of any person who shall show that the enforcement thereof would be inequitable or unreasonable as to such person, or the board, may suspend the enforcement thereof for any other reason deemed by it to be sufficient to show that the enforcement thereof would be a hardship upon such person; and upon any suspension of the whole or any part of such code, rule or regulation the board shall grant to such person a variance therefrom.

§ 1290. Variances; other considerations. In determining under what conditions and to what extent a variance from such code, rule or regulation may be granted, the board shall give due recognition to the progress which the person requesting such variance shall have made in eliminating or preventing air pollution. In such a case the board shall consider the reasonableness of granting a variance conditioned upon such person effecting a partial abatement of the particular air pollution or a progressive abatement of such air pollution over a period of time which it shall consider reasonable under all the circumstances; or the board may prescribe other and different requirements with which the person who shall receive such variance shall comply.

§ 1291. Variances; required. The board shall grant a variance from any such code, rule or regulation to, and suspend the enforcement thereof as to, any person who shall show in the case of such person and of the activity which such person then operates that a compliance by such person with such code, rule or regulation, and of the acquisition, installation, operation and maintenance of facilities and equipment with which to accomplish such compliance, would constitute an undue hardship on such person and would be out of proportion to the benefits to be obtained thereby; provided, however, that a variance shall not be granted under the provisions of this title where the person applying therefor is causing air pollution which constitutes a health hazard; and provided, further, that any variance so granted shall not be so construed as to relieve the person who shall receive it from any liability imposed by other law for the commission or maintenance of a nuisance.

§ 1292. Duration. Any variance granted pursuant to the provisions of this title shall be granted for such period of time, not exceeding one year, as shall be specified by the board at the time of granting it, but any variance may be continued from year to year. Any variance which shall be granted by the board may be granted on the condition that the person who shall receive it shall make reports to the board periodically, as the board shall specify, as to the progress which such person shall have made toward reaching a compliance with such code, rule or regulation of the board.

TITLE VI

Scope and Construction

Section 1293. Application of article.
1294. Existing rights and remedies.
1295. Persons other than the state shall not acquire actionable rights by virtue of this article.
1296. Conflicting laws.
1297. Local laws, ordinances and regulations.
1298. Separability clause.

§ 1293. Application of article. The provisions of this article shall apply to all areas of the state.

§ 1294. Existing rights and remedies. It is the purpose of this article to provide additional and cumulative remedies to prevent and abate air pollution and air contamination. Nothing in this article contained shall abridge or alter rights of action or remedies now or hereafter existing, nor shall any provision of this article or anything done by virtue of this article be construed as estopping individuals, cities, towns or villages or the state from the exercise of their respective rights to suppress nuisances or to prevent or abate air pollution or air contamination.

§ 1295. Persons other than the state shall not acquire actionable rights by virtue of this article. The basis for proceedings or other actions that shall result from violations of any code, rule or regulation which shall be promulgated by the board shall inure solely to and shall be for the benefit of the people of the state generally and it is not intended to create in any way new or enlarged rights or to enlarge existing rights. A determination by the board that air pollution or air contamination exists or that any code, rule or regulation has been disregarded or violated, whether or not a proceeding or action may be brought by the state, shall not create by reason thereof any presumption of law or finding of fact which shall inure to or be for the benefit of any person other than the state.

§ 1296. Conflicting laws. This article shall not be construed as repealing any of the laws relating to air pollution or air contamination which are not by this article expressly repealed, but it shall be held and construed to be as ancillary to and supplementing the laws now in force, excepting as they may be in direct conflict with this article.

§ 1297. Local laws, ordinances and regulations. Any local laws, ordinances or regulations of any governing body of a city, town or village which are not inconsistent with this article or with any code, rule or regulation which shall be promulgated pursuant to this article shall not be superseded by it, and nothing in this article or in any code, rule or regulation which shall be promulgated pursuant to this article shall preclude the right of any governing body of a city, town or village to adopt local laws, ordinances or regulations which are not inconsistent with this article or with any code, rule or regulation which shall be promulgated pursuant to this article. Any local laws, ordinances or regulations of a city, town or village which comply with at least the minimum applicable requirements set forth in any code, rule or regulation promulgated pursuant to this article shall be deemed consistent with this article or with any such code, rule or regulation.

§ 1298. Separability clause. If any clause, sentence, paragraph, section or part of this article shall be adjudged by any court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, the judgment shall not affect, impair or invalidate the remainder of this article but shall be confined in its operation to the clause, sentence, paragraph, section or part of this article that shall be directly involved in the controversy in which such judgment shall have been rendered.

§ 2. This act shall take effect July first, nineteen hundred fifty-seven, except that the provisions of article twelve-A of the public health law, as added by this act, in so far as they confer power upon the air pollution control board to adopt and promulgate codes, rules and regulations for prohibiting and controlling air pollution and to enforce compliance therewith, shall take effect July first, nineteen hundred fifty-nine.

(c) Add the following subsection "(f)" and designate the present subsection "(f)" as subsection "(g)":

"Federal election."

"(f) When used in subsection (a) or (c) of this section, the words 'Federal election' shall mean any general, special, or primary election held solely or in part for the purpose of electing or selecting any candidate for the office of President, Vice President, presidential elector, Member of the Senate, or Member of the House of Representatives."

(d) Add the following subsection "(h)":

Suits by Attorney General.

"(h) In any proceeding instituted by the United States in any district court of the United States under this section in which the Attorney General requests a finding of a pattern or practice of discrimination pursuant to subsection (e) of this section the Attorney General, at the time he files the complaint, or any defendant in the proceeding, within twenty days after service upon him of the complaint, may file with the clerk of such court a request that a court of three judges be convened to hear and determine the entire case. A copy of the request for a three-judge court shall be immediately furnished by such clerk to the chief judge of the circuit (or in his absence, the presiding circuit judge of the circuit) in which the case is pending. Upon receipt of the copy of such request it shall be the duty of the chief judge of the circuit or the presiding circuit judge, as the case may be, to designate immediately three judges in such circuit, of whom at least one shall be a circuit judge and another of whom shall be a district judge of the court in which the proceeding was instituted, to hear and determine such case, and it shall be the duty of the judges so designated to assign the case for hearing at the earliest practicable date, to participate in the hearing and determination thereof, and to cause the case to be in every way expedited. An appeal from the final judgment of such court will lie to the Supreme Court.

Appeals.

Designation of judges.

"In any proceeding brought under subsection (c) of this section to enforce subsection (b) of this section, or in the event neither the Attorney General nor any defendant files a request for a three-judge court in any proceeding authorized by this subsection, it shall be the duty of the chief judge of the district (or in his absence, the acting chief judge) in which the case is pending immediately to designate a judge in such district to hear and determine the case. In the event that no judge in the district is available to hear and determine the case, the chief judge of the district, or the acting chief judge, as the case may be, shall certify this fact to the chief judge of the circuit (or, in his absence, the acting chief judge) who shall then designate a district or circuit judge of the circuit to hear and determine the case.

"It shall be the duty of the judge designated pursuant to this section to assign the case for hearing at the earliest practicable date and to cause the case to be in every way expedited."

TITLE II—INJUNCTIVE RELIEF AGAINST DISCRIMINATION IN PLACES OF PUBLIC ACCOMMODATION

Equal access.

SEC. 201. (a) All persons shall be entitled to the full and equal enjoyment of the goods, services, facilities, privileges, advantages, and accommodations of any place of public accommodation, as defined in this section, without discrimination or segregation on the ground of race, color, religion, or national origin.

Establishments affecting interstate commerce.

(b) Each of the following establishments which serves the public is a place of public accommodation within the meaning of this title if its operations affect commerce, or if discrimination or segregation by it is supported by State action:

Lodgings.

(1) any inn, hotel, motel, or other establishment which provides lodging to transient guests, other than an establishment located within a building which contains not more than five rooms for rent or hire and which is actually occupied by the proprietor of such establishment as his residence;

Restaurants, etc.

(2) any restaurant, cafeteria, lunchroom, lunch counter, soda fountain, or other facility principally engaged in selling food for consumption on the premises, including, but not limited to, any such facility located on the premises of any retail establishment; or any gasoline station;

Theaters, stadiums, etc.

(3) any motion picture house, theater, concert hall, sports arena, stadium or other place of exhibition or entertainment; and

Other covered establishments.

(4) any establishment (A) (i) which is physically located within the premises of any establishment otherwise covered by this subsection, or (ii) within the premises of which is physically located any such covered establishment, and (B) which holds itself out as serving patrons of such covered establishment.

Operations affecting commerce criteria.

(c) The operations of an establishment affect commerce within the meaning of this title if (1) it is one of the establishments described in paragraph (1) of subsection (b); (2) in the case of an establishment described in paragraph (2) of subsection (b), it serves or offers to serve interstate travelers or a substantial portion of the food which it serves, or gasoline or other products which it sells, has moved in commerce; (3) in the case of an establishment described in paragraph (3) of subsection (b), it customarily presents films, performances, athletic teams, exhibitions, or other sources of entertainment which move in commerce; and (4) in the case of an establishment described in paragraph (4) of subsection (b), it is physically located within the premises of, or there is physically located within its premises, an establishment the operations of which affect commerce within the meaning of this subsection. For purposes of this section, "commerce" means travel, trade, traffic, commerce, transportation, or communication among the several States, or between the District of Columbia and any State, or between any foreign country or any territory or possession and any State or the District of Columbia, or between points in the same State but through any other State or the District of Columbia or a foreign country.

"Commerce."

Support by State action.

(d) Discrimination or segregation by an establishment is supported by State action within the meaning of this title if such discrimination or segregation (1) is carried on under color of any law, statute, ordinance, or regulation; or (2) is carried on under color of any custom or usage required or enforced by officials of the State or political subdivision thereof; or (3) is required by action of the State or political subdivision thereof.

Private establishments.

(e) The provisions of this title shall not apply to a private club or other establishment not in fact open to the public, except to the extent that the facilities of such establishment are made available to the customers or patrons of an establishment within the scope of subsection (b).

Entitlement.

SEC. 202. All persons shall be entitled to be free, at any establishment or place, from discrimination or segregation of any kind on the ground of race, color, religion, or national origin, if such discrimination or segregation is or purports to be required by any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, rule, or order of a State or any agency or political subdivision thereof.

Interference.

SEC. 203. No person shall (a) withhold, deny, or attempt to withhold or deny, or deprive or attempt to deprive, any person of any right or privilege secured by section 201 or 202, or (b) intimidate, threaten, or coerce, or attempt to intimidate, threaten, or coerce any person with the purpose of interfering with any right or privilege secured by section 201 or 202, or (c) punish or attempt to punish any person for exercising or attempting to exercise any right or privilege secured by section 201 or 202.

Restraining orders, etc.

SEC. 204. (a) Whenever any person has engaged or there are reasonable grounds to believe that any person is about to engage in any act or practice prohibited by section 203, a civil action for preventive relief, including an application for a permanent or temporary injunction, restraining order, or other order, may be instituted by the person aggrieved and, upon timely application, the court may, in its discretion, permit the Attorney General to intervene in such civil action if he certifies that the case is of general public importance. Upon application by the complainant and in such circumstances as the court may deem just, the court may appoint an attorney for such complainant and may authorize the commencement of the civil action without the payment of fees, costs, or security.

Attorneys' fees.

(b) In any action commenced pursuant to this title, the court, in its discretion, may allow the prevailing party, other than the United States, a reasonable attorney's fee as part of the costs, and the United States shall be liable for costs the same as a private person.

Notification of State.

(c) In the case of an alleged act or practice prohibited by this title which occurs in a State, or political subdivision of a State, which has a State or local law prohibiting such act or practice and establishing or authorizing a State or local authority to grant or seek relief from such practice or to institute criminal proceedings with respect thereto upon receiving notice thereof, no civil action may be brought under subsection (a) before the expiration of thirty days after written notice of such alleged act or practice has been given to the appropriate State or local authority by registered mail or in person, provided that the court may stay proceedings in such civil action pending the termination of State or local enforcement proceedings.

Community Relations Service.

(d) In the case of an alleged act or practice prohibited by this title which occurs in a State, or political subdivision of a State, which has no State or local law prohibiting such act or practice, a civil action may be brought under subsection (a): Provided, That the court may refer the matter to the Community Relations Service established by title X of this Act for as long as the court believes there is a reasonable possibility of obtaining voluntary compliance, but for not more than sixty days: Provided further, That upon expiration of such sixty-day period, the court may extend such period for an additional period, not to exceed a cumulative total of one hundred and twenty days, if it believes there then exists a reasonable possibility of securing voluntary compliance.

Hearings and investigations.

SEC. 205. The Service is authorized to make a full investigation of any complaint referred to it by the court under section 204(d) and may hold such hearings with respect thereto as may be necessary.

The Service shall conduct any hearings with respect to any such complaint in executive session, and shall not release any testimony given therein except by agreement of all parties involved in the complaint with the permission of the court, and the Service shall endeavor to bring about a voluntary settlement between the parties.

Suits by Attorney General.

SEC. 206. (a) Whenever the Attorney General has reasonable cause to believe that any person or group of persons is engaged in a pattern or practice of resistance to the full enjoyment of any of the rights secured by this title, and that the pattern or practice is of such a nature and is intended to deny the full exercise of the rights herein described, the Attorney General may bring a civil action in the appropriate district court of the United States by filing with it a complaint (1) signed by him (or in his absence the Acting Attorney General), (2) setting forth facts pertaining to such pattern or practice, and (3) requesting such preventive relief, including an application for a permanent or temporary injunction, restraining order or other order against the person or persons responsible for such pattern or practice, as he deems necessary to insure the full enjoyment of the rights herein described.

(b) In any such proceeding the Attorney General may file with the clerk of such court a request that a court of three judges be convened to hear and determine the case. Such request by the Attorney General shall be accompanied by a certificate that, in his opinion, the case is of general public importance. A copy of the certificate and request for a three-judge court shall be immediately furnished by such clerk to the chief judge of the circuit (or in his absence, the presiding circuit judge of the circuit) in which the case is pending.

Designation of judges.

Upon receipt of the copy of such request it shall be the duty of the chief judge of the circuit or the presiding circuit judge, as the case may be, to designate immediately three judges in such circuit, of whom at least one shall be a circuit judge and another of whom shall be a district judge of the court in which the proceeding was instituted, to hear and determine such case, and it shall be the duty of the judges so designated to assign the case for hearing at the earliest practicable date, to participate in the hearing and determination thereof, and to cause the case to be in every way expedited.

Appeals.

An appeal from the final judgment of such court will lie to the Supreme Court.

In the event the Attorney General fails to file such a request in any such proceeding, it shall be the duty of the chief judge of the district (or in his absence, the acting chief judge) in which the case is pending immediately to designate a judge in such district to hear and determine the case. In the event that no judge in the district is available to hear and determine the case, the chief judge of the district, or the acting chief judge, as the case may be, shall certify this fact to the chief judge of the circuit (or in his absence, the acting chief judge) who shall then designate a district or circuit judge of the circuit to hear and determine the case.

It shall be the duty of the judge designated pursuant to this section to assign the case for hearing at the earliest practicable date and to cause the case to be in every way expedited.

District courts, jurisdiction.

SEC. 207. (a) The district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction of proceedings instituted pursuant to this title and shall exercise the same without regard to whether the aggrieved party shall have exhausted any administrative or other remedies that may be provided by law.

Enforcement.

(b) The remedies provided in this title shall be the exclusive means of enforcing the rights based on this title, but nothing in this title shall preclude any individual or any State or local agency from asserting any right based on any other Federal or State law not inconsistent with this title, including any statute or ordinance requiring nondiscrimination in public establishments or accommodations, or from pursuing any remedy, civil or criminal, which may be available for the vindication or enforcement of such right.

TITLE III—DESEGREGATION OF PUBLIC FACILITIES

Suits by Attorney General.

SEC. 301. (a) Whenever the Attorney General receives a complaint in writing signed by an individual to the effect that he is being deprived of or threatened with the loss of his right to the equal protection of the laws, on account of his race, color, religion, or national origin, by being denied equal utilization of any public facility which is owned, operated, or managed by or on behalf of any State or subdivision thereof, other than a public school or public college as defined in section 401 of title IV hereof, and the Attorney General believes the complaint is meritorious and certifies that the signer or signers of such complaint are unable, in his judgment, to initiate and maintain appropriate legal proceedings for relief and that the institution of an action will materially further the orderly progress of desegregation in public facilities, the Attorney General is authorized to institute for or in the name of the United States a civil action in any appropriate district court of the United States against such parties and for such relief as may be appropriate, and such court shall have and shall exercise jurisdiction of proceedings instituted pursuant to this section. The Attorney General may implead as defendants such additional parties as are or become necessary to the grant of effective relief hereunder.

(b) The Attorney General may deem a person or persons unable to initiate and maintain appropriate legal proceedings within the meaning of subsection (a) of this section when such person or persons are unable, either directly or through other interested persons or organizations, to bear the expense of the litigation or to obtain effective legal representation; or whenever he is satisfied that the institution of such litigation would jeopardize the personal safety, employment, or economic standing of such person or persons, their families, or their property.

Costs, fees.

SEC. 302. In any action or proceeding under this title the United States shall be liable for costs, including a reasonable attorney's fee, the same as a private person.

SEC. 303. Nothing in this title shall affect adversely the right of any person to sue for or obtain relief in any court against discrimination in any facility covered by this title.

62 Stat. 749.

SEC. 304. A complaint as used in this title is a writing or document within the meaning of section 1001, title 18, United States Code.

TITLE IV—DESEGREGATION OF PUBLIC EDUCATION

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 401. As used in this title—

"Commissioner."

(a) "Commissioner" means the Commissioner of Education.

"Desegregation."

(b) "Desegregation" means the assignment of students to public schools and within such schools without regard to their race, color, religion, or national origin, but "desegregation" shall not mean the assignment of students to public schools in order to overcome racial imbalance.

(c) "Public school" means any elementary or secondary educational institution, and "public college" means any institution of higher education or any technical or vocational school above the secondary school level, provided that such public school or public college is operated by a State, subdivision of a State, or governmental agency within a State, or operated wholly or predominantly from or through the use of governmental funds or property, or funds or property derived from a governmental source. "Public school."

(d) "School board" means any agency or agencies which administer a system of one or more public schools and any other agency which is responsible for the assignment of students to or within such system. "School board."

SURVEY AND REPORT OF EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES

SEC. 402. The Commissioner shall conduct a survey and make a report to the President and the Congress, within two years of the enactment of this title, concerning the lack of availability of equal educational opportunities for individuals by reason of race, color, religion, or national origin in public educational institutions at all levels in the United States, its territories and possessions, and the District of Columbia. Report to President and Congress.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

SEC. 403. The Commissioner is authorized, upon the application of any school board, State, municipality, school district, or other governmental unit legally responsible for operating a public school or schools, to render technical assistance to such applicant in the preparation, adoption, and implementation of plans for the desegregation of public schools. Such technical assistance may, among other activities, include making available to such agencies information regarding effective methods of coping with special educational problems occasioned by desegregation, and making available to such agencies personnel of the Office of Education or other persons specially equipped to advise and assist them in coping with such problems.

TRAINING INSTITUTES

SEC. 404. The Commissioner is authorized to arrange, through grants or contracts, with institutions of higher education for the operation of short-term or regular session institutes for special training designed to improve the ability of teachers, supervisors, counselors, and other elementary or secondary school personnel to deal effectively with special educational problems occasioned by desegregation. Individuals who attend such an institute on a full-time basis may be paid stipends for the period of their attendance at such institute in amounts specified by the Commissioner in regulations, including allowances for travel to attend such institute. Stipends, etc.

GRANTS

SEC. 405. (a) The Commissioner is authorized, upon application of a school board, to make grants to such board to pay, in whole or in part, the cost of—

(1) giving to teachers and other school personnel inservice training in dealing with problems incident to desegregation, and

(2) employing specialists to advise in problems incident to desegregation.

(b) In determining whether to make a grant, and in fixing the amount thereof and the terms and conditions on which it will be made, the Commissioner shall take into consideration the amount available Conditions.

78 STAT. 248.

for grants under this section and the other applications which are pending before him; the financial condition of the applicant and the other resources available to it; the nature, extent, and gravity of its problems incident to desegregation; and such other factors as he finds relevant.

PAYMENTS

SEC. 406. Payments pursuant to a grant or contract under this title may be made (after necessary adjustments on account of previously made overpayments or underpayments) in advance or by way of reimbursement, and in such installments, as the Commissioner may determine.

SUITS BY THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

SEC. 407. (a) Whenever the Attorney General receives a complaint in writing—

(1) signed by a parent or group of parents to the effect that his or their minor children, as members of a class of persons similarly situated, are being deprived by a school board of the equal protection of the laws, or

(2) signed by an individual, or his parent, to the effect that he has been denied admission to or not permitted to continue in attendance at a public college by reason of race, color, religion, or national origin, and the Attorney General believes the complaint is meritorious and certifies that the signer or signers of such complaint are unable, in his judgment, to initiate and maintain appropriate legal proceedings for relief and that the institution of an action will materially further the orderly achievement of desegregation in public education, the Attorney General is authorized, after giving notice of such complaint to the appropriate school board or college authority and after certifying that he is satisfied that such board or authority has had a reasonable time to adjust the conditions alleged in such complaint, to institute for or in the name of the United States a civil action in any appropriate district court of the United States against such parties and for such relief as may be appropriate, and such court shall have and shall exercise jurisdiction of proceedings instituted pursuant to this section, provided that nothing herein shall empower any official or court of the United States to issue any order seeking to achieve a racial balance in any school by requiring the transportation of pupils or students from one school to another or one school district to another in order to achieve such racial balance, or otherwise enlarge the existing power of the court to insure compliance with constitutional standards. The Attorney General may implead as defendants such additional parties as are or become necessary to the grant of effective relief hereunder.

Persons unable to initiate suits.

(b) The Attorney General may deem a person or persons unable to initiate and maintain appropriate legal proceedings within the meaning of subsection (a) of this section when such person or persons are unable, either directly or through other interested persons or organizations, to bear the expense of the litigation or to obtain effective legal representation; or whenever he is satisfied that the institution of such litigation would jeopardize the personal safety, employment, or economic standing of such person or persons, their families, or their property.

"Parent." "Complaint."

(c) The term "parent" as used in this section includes any person standing in loco parentis. A "complaint" as used in this section is a writing or document within the meaning of section 1001, title 18, United States Code.

62 Stat. 749.

SEC. 408. In any action or proceeding under this title the United States shall be liable for costs the same as a private person.

SEC. 409. Nothing in this title shall affect adversely the right of any person to sue for or obtain relief in any court against discrimination in public education.

SEC. 410. Nothing in this title shall prohibit classification and assignment for reasons other than race, color, religion, or national origin.

TITLE V—COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS

SEC. 501. Section 102 of the Civil Rights Act of 1957 (42 U.S.C. 1975a; 71 Stat. 634) is amended to read as follows:

"RULES OF PROCEDURE OF THE COMMISSION HEARINGS

"SEC. 102. (a) At least thirty days prior to the commencement of any hearing, the Commission shall cause to be published in the Federal Register notice of the date on which such hearing is to commence, the place at which it is to be held and the subject of the hearing. The Chairman, or one designated by him to act as Chairman at a hearing of the Commission, shall announce in an opening statement the subject of the hearing. Publication in Federal Register.

"(b) A copy of the Commission's rules shall be made available to any witness before the Commission, and a witness compelled to appear before the Commission or required to produce written or other matter shall be served with a copy of the Commission's rules at the time of service of the subpena.

"(c) Any person compelled to appear in person before the Commission shall be accorded the right to be accompanied and advised by counsel, who shall have the right to subject his client to reasonable examination, and to make objections on the record and to argue briefly the basis for such objections. The Commission shall proceed with reasonable dispatch to conclude any hearing in which it is engaged. Due regard shall be had for the convenience and necessity of witnesses. Right of counsel.

"(d) The Chairman or Acting Chairman may punish breaches of order and decorum by censure and exclusion from the hearings.

"(e) If the Commission determines that evidence or testimony at any hearing may tend to defame, degrade, or incriminate any person, it shall receive such evidence or testimony or summary of such evidence or testimony in executive session. The Commission shall afford any person defamed, degraded, or incriminated by such evidence or testimony an opportunity to appear and be heard in executive session, with a reasonable number of additional witnesses requested by him, before deciding to use such evidence or testimony. In the event the Commission determines to release or use such evidence or testimony in such manner as to reveal publicly the identity of the person defamed, degraded, or incriminated, such evidence or testimony, prior to such public release or use, shall be given at a public session, and the Commission shall afford such person an opportunity to appear as a voluntary witness or to file a sworn statement in his behalf and to submit brief and pertinent sworn statements of others. The Commission shall receive and dispose of requests from such person to subpena additional witnesses. Executive sessions.

"(f) Except as provided in sections 102 and 105(f) of this Act, the Chairman shall receive and the Commission shall dispose of requests to subpena additional witnesses.

"(g) No evidence or testimony or summary of evidence or testimony taken in executive session may be released or used in public Testimony, release restrictions.

sessions without the consent of the Commission. Whoever releases or uses in public without the consent of the Commission such evidence or testimony taken in executive session shall be fined not more than $1,000, or imprisoned for not more than one year.

"(h) In the discretion of the Commission, witnesses may submit brief and pertinent sworn statements in writing for inclusion in the record. The Commission shall determine the pertinency of testimony and evidence adduced at its hearings.

Transcript copies.

"(i) Every person who submits data or evidence shall be entitled to retain or, on payment of lawfully prescribed costs, procure a copy or transcript thereof, except that a witness in a hearing held in executive session may for good cause be limited to inspection of the official transcript of his testimony. Transcript copies of public sessions may be obtained by the public upon the payment of the cost thereof. An accurate transcript shall be made of the testimony of all witnesses at all hearings, either public or executive sessions, of the Commission or of any subcommittee thereof.

Witness fees.

"(j) A witness attending any session of the Commission shall receive $6 for each day's attendance and for the time necessarily occupied in going to and returning from the same, and 10 cents per mile for going from and returning to his place of residence. Witnesses who attend at points so far removed from their respective residences as to prohibit return thereto from day to day shall be entitled to an additional allowance of $10 per day for expenses of subsistence, including the time necessarily occupied in going to and returning from the place of attendance. Mileage payments shall be tendered to the witness upon service of a subpena issued on behalf of the Commission or any subcommittee thereof.

Subpena of witnesses.

"(k) The Commission shall not issue any subpena for the attendance and testimony of witnesses or for the production of written or other matter which would require the presence of the party subpenaed at a hearing to be held outside of the State wherein the witness is found or resides or is domiciled or transacts business, or has appointed an agent for receipt of service of process except that, in any event, the Commission may issue subpenas for the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of written or other matter at a hearing held within fifty miles of the place where the witness is found or resides or is domiciled or transacts business or has appointed an agent for receipt of service of process.

Organization statement, etc. Publication in Federal Register.

"(l) The Commission shall separately state and currently publish in the Federal Register (1) descriptions of its central and field organization including the established places at which, and methods whereby, the public may secure information or make requests; (2) statements of the general course and method by which its functions are channeled and determined, and (3) rules adopted as authorized by law. No person shall in any manner be subject to or required to resort to rules, organization, or procedure not so published."

SEC. 502. Section 103(a) of the Civil Rights Act of 1957 (42 U.S.C. 1975b(a); 71 Stat. 634) is amended to read as follows:

Payments to members.

"SEC. 103. (a) Each member of the Commission who is not otherwise in the service of the Government of the United States shall receive the sum of $75 per day for each day spent in the work of the Commission, shall be paid actual travel expenses, and per diem in lieu of subsistence expenses when away from his usual place of residence, in accordance with section 5 of the Administrative Expenses Act of 1946, as amended (5 U.S.C. 73b-2; 60 Stat. 808)."

75 Stat. 339, 340.

SEC. 503. Section 103(b) of the Civil Rights Act of 1957 (42 U.S.C. 1975b(b); 71 Stat. 634) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) Each member of the Commission who is otherwise in the service of the Government of the United States shall serve without compensation in addition to that received for such other service, but while engaged in the work of the Commission shall be paid actual travel expenses, and per diem in lieu of subsistence expenses when away from his usual place of residence, in accordance with the provisions of the Travel Expenses Act of 1949, as amended (5 U.S.C. 835–42; 63 Stat. 166)."

75 Stat. 339, 340.

SEC. 504. (a) Section 104(a) of the Civil Rights Act of 1957 (42 U.S.C. 1975c(a); 71 Stat. 635), as amended, is further amended to read as follows:

"DUTIES OF THE COMMISSION

"SEC. 104. (a) The Commission shall—

"(1) investigate allegations in writing under oath or affirmation that certain citizens of the United States are being deprived of their right to vote and have that vote counted by reason of their color, race, religion, or national origin; which writing, under oath or affirmation, shall set forth the facts upon which such belief or beliefs are based;

"(2) study and collect information concerning legal developments constituting a denial of equal protection of the laws under the Constitution because of race, color, religion or national origin or in the administration of justice;

"(3) appraise the laws and policies of the Federal Government with respect to denials of equal protection of the laws under the Constitution because of race, color, religion or national origin or in the administration of justice;

"(4) serve as a national clearinghouse for information in respect to denials of equal protection of the laws because of race, color, religion or national origin, including but not limited to the fields of voting, education, housing, employment, the use of public facilities, and transportation, or in the administration of justice;

"(5) investigate allegations, made in writing and under oath or affirmation, that citizens of the United States are unlawfully being accorded or denied the right to vote, or to have their votes properly counted, in any election of presidential electors, Members of the United States Senate, or of the House of Representatives, as a result of any patterns or practice of fraud or discrimination in the conduct of such election; and

"(6) Nothing in this or any other Act shall be construed as authorizing the Commission, its Advisory Committees, or any person under its supervision or control to inquire into or investigate any membership practices or internal operations of any fraternal organization, any college or university fraternity or sorority, any private club or any religious organization."

(b) Section 104(b) of the Civil Rights Act of 1957 (42 U.S.C. 1975c(b); 71 Stat. 635), as amended, is further amended by striking out the present subsection "(b)" and by substituting therefor:

77 Stat. 271.

"(b) The Commission shall submit interim reports to the President and to the Congress at such times as the Commission, the Congress or the President shall deem desirable, and shall submit to the President and to the Congress a final report of its activities, findings, and recommendations not later than January 31, 1968."

Reports to th President and Congress.

SEC. 505. Section 105(a) of the Civil Rights Act of 1957 (42 U.S.C. 1975d(a); 71 Stat. 636) is amended by striking out in the last sentence thereof "$50 per diem" and inserting in lieu thereof "$75 per diem."

SEC. 506. Section 105(f) and section 105(g) of the Civil Rights Act of 1957 (42 U.S.C. 1975d (f) and (g); 71 Stat. 636) are amended to read as follows:

Powers.

"(f) The Commission, or on the authorization of the Commission any subcommittee of two or more members, at least one of whom shall be of each major political party, may, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this Act, hold such hearings and act at such times and places as the Commission or such authorized subcommittee may deem advisable. Subpenas for the attendance and testimony of witnesses or the production of written or other matter may be issued in accordance with the rules of the Commission as contained in section 102 (j) and (k) of this Act, over the signature of the Chairman of the Commission or of such subcommittee, and may be served by any person designated by such Chairman. The holding of hearings by the Commission, or the appointment of a subcommittee to hold hearings pursuant to this subparagraph, must be approved by a majority of the Commission, or by a majority of the members present at a meeting at which at least a quorum of four members is present.

Ante, p. 250.

"(g) In case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpena, any district court of the United States or the United States court of any territory or possession, or the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, within the jurisdiction of which the inquiry is carried on or within the jurisdiction of which said person guilty of contumacy or refusal to obey is found or resides or is domiciled or transacts business, or has appointed an agent for receipt of service of process, upon application by the Attorney General of the United States shall have jurisdiction to issue to such person an order requiring such person to appear before the Commission or a subcommittee thereof, there to produce pertinent, relevant and nonprivileged evidence if so ordered, or there to give testimony touching the matter under investigation; and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by said court as a contempt thereof."

SEC. 507. Section 105 of the Civil Rights Act of 1957 (42 U.S.C. 1975d; 71 Stat. 636), as amended by section 401 of the Civil Rights Act of 1960 (42 U.S.C. 1975d(h); 74 Stat. 89), is further amended by adding a new subsection at the end to read as follows:

"(i) The Commission shall have the power to make such rules and regulations as are necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act."

TITLE VI—NONDISCRIMINATION IN FEDERALLY ASSISTED PROGRAMS

SEC. 601. No person in the United States shall, on the ground of race, color, or national origin, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance.

Rules governing grants, loans, and contracts.

SEC. 602. Each Federal department and agency which is empowered to extend Federal financial assistance to any program or activity, by way of grant, loan, or contract other than a contract of insurance or guaranty, is authorized and directed to effectuate the provisions of section 601 with respect to such program or activity by issuing rules, regulations, or orders of general applicability which shall be consistent with achievement of the objectives of the statute authorizing the financial assistance in connection with which the action is taken.

Approval by President.

No such rule, regulation, or order shall become effective unless and until approved by the President. Compliance with any requirement adopted pursuant to this section may be effected (1) by the termination of or refusal to grant or to continue assistance under such program or activity to any recipient as to whom there has been an express finding on the record, after opportunity for hearing, of a failure to comply with such requirement, but such termination or refusal shall be limited to the particular political entity, or part thereof, or other recipient as to whom such a finding has been made and, shall be limited in its effect to the particular program, or part thereof, in which such noncompliance has been so found, or (2) by any other means authorized by law: Provided, however, That no such action shall be taken until the department or agency concerned has advised the appropriate person or persons of the failure to comply with the requirement and has determined that compliance cannot be secured by voluntary means. In the case of any action terminating, or refusing to grant or continue, assistance because of failure to comply with a requirement imposed pursuant to this section, the head of the Federal department or agency shall file with the committees of the House and Senate having legislative jurisdiction over the program or activity involved a full written report of the circumstances and the grounds for such action. No such action shall become effective until thirty days have elapsed after the filing of such report. Termination.

SEC. 603. Any department or agency action taken pursuant to section 602 shall be subject to such judicial review as may otherwise be provided by law for similar action taken by such department or agency on other grounds. In the case of action, not otherwise subject to judicial review, terminating or refusing to grant or to continue financial assistance upon a finding of failure to comply with any requirement imposed pursuant to section 602, any person aggrieved (including any State or political subdivision thereof and any agency of either) may obtain judicial review of such action in accordance with section 10 of the Administrative Procedure Act, and such action shall not be deemed committed to unreviewable agency discretion within the meaning of that section. Judicial review. 60 Stat. 243. 5 USC 1009.

SEC. 604. Nothing contained in this title shall be construed to authorize action under this title by any department or agency with respect to any employment practice of any employer, employment agency, or labor organization except where a primary objective of the Federal financial assistance is to provide employment.

SEC. 605. Nothing in this title shall add to or detract from any existing authority with respect to any program or activity under which Federal financial assistance is extended by way of a contract of insurance or guaranty.

TITLE VII—EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 701. For the purposes of this title—

(a) The term "person" includes one or more individuals, labor unions, partnerships, associations, corporations, legal representatives, mutual companies, joint-stock companies, trusts, unincorporated organizations, trustees, trustees in bankruptcy, or receivers. "Person."

(b) The term "employer" means a person engaged in an industry affecting commerce who has twenty-five or more employees for each working day in each of twenty or more calendar weeks in the current or preceding calendar year, and any agent of such a person, but such term does not include (1) the United States, a corporation wholly owned by the Government of the United States, an Indian tribe, or a State or political subdivision thereof, (2) a bona fide private membership club (other than a labor organization) which is exempt from taxation under section 501(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954: Provided, That during the first year after the effective date prescribed in subsection (a) of section 716, persons having fewer than one hun- "Employer." 68A Stat. 163; 74 Stat. 534. 26 USC 501.

dred employees (and their agents) shall not be considered employers, and, during the second year after such date, persons having fewer than seventy-five employees (and their agents) shall not be considered employers, and, during the third year after such date, persons having fewer than fifty employees (and their agents) shall not be considered employers: Provided further, That it shall be the policy of the United States to insure equal employment opportunities for Federal employees without discrimination because of race, color, religion, sex or national origin and the President shall utilize his existing authority to effectuate this policy.

(c) The term "employment agency" means any person regularly undertaking with or without compensation to procure employees for an employer or to procure for employees opportunities to work for an employer and includes an agent of such a person; but shall not include an agency of the United States, or an agency of a State or political subdivision of a State, except that such term shall include the United States Employment Service and the system of State and local employment services receiving Federal assistance.

"Labor organization."

(d) The term "labor organization" means a labor organization engaged in an industry affecting commerce, and any agent of such an organization, and includes any organization of any kind, any agency, or employee representation committee, group, association, or plan so engaged in which employees participate and which exists for the purpose, in whole or in part, of dealing with employers concerning grievances, labor disputes, wages, rates of pay, hours, or other terms or conditions of employment, and any conference, general committee, joint or system board, or joint council so engaged which is subordinate to a national or international labor organization.

(e) A labor organization shall be deemed to be engaged in an industry affecting commerce if (1) it maintains or operates a hiring hall or hiring office which procures employees for an employer or procures for employees opportunities to work for an employer, or (2) the number of its members (or, where it is a labor organization composed of other labor organizations or their representatives, if the aggregate number of the members of such other labor organization) is (A) one hundred or more during the first year after the effective date prescribed in subsection (a) of section 716, (B) seventy-five or more during the second year after such date or fifty or more during the third year, or (C) twenty-five or more thereafter, and such labor organization—

29 USC 167.

(1) is the certified representative of employees under the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act, as amended, or the Railway Labor Act, as amended;

44 Stat. 577; 49 Stat. 1189.
45 USC 151.

(2) although not certified, is a national or international labor organization or a local labor organization recognized or acting as the representative of employees of an employer or employers engaged in an industry affecting commerce; or

(3) has chartered a local labor organization or subsidiary body which is representing or actively seeking to represent employees of employers within the meaning of paragraph (1) or (2); or

(4) has been chartered by a labor organization representing or actively seeking to represent employees within the meaning of paragraph (1) or (2) as the local or subordinate body through which such employees may enjoy membership or become affiliated with such labor organization; or

(5) is a conference, general committee, joint or system board, or joint council subordinate to a national or international labor organization, which includes a labor organization engaged in an industry affecting commerce within the meaning of any of the preceding paragraphs of this subsection.

"Employee." (f) The term "employee" means an individual employed by an employer.

"Commerce." (g) The term "commerce" means trade, traffic, commerce, transportation, transmission, or communication among the several States; or between a State and any place outside thereof; or within the District of Columbia, or a possession of the United States; or between points in the same State but through a point outside thereof.

"Industry affecting commerce." (h) The term "industry affecting commerce" means any activity, business, or industry in commerce or in which a labor dispute would hinder or obstruct commerce or the free flow of commerce and includes any activity or industry "affecting commerce" within the meaning of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959. 73 Stat. 519. 29 USC 401 note.

"State." (i) The term "State" includes a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Guam, Wake Island, the Canal Zone, and Outer Continental Shelf lands defined in the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act. 67 Stat. 462. 43 USC 1331 note.

EXEMPTION

Religious organizations, etc. SEC. 702. This title shall not apply to an employer with respect to the employment of aliens outside any State, or to a religious corporation, association, or society with respect to the employment of individuals of a particular religion to perform work connected with the carrying on by such corporation, association, or society of its religious activities or to an educational institution with respect to the employment of individuals to perform work connected with the educational activities of such institution.

DISCRIMINATION BECAUSE OF RACE, COLOR, RELIGION, SEX, OR NATIONAL ORIGIN

Unlawful practices. Employers. SEC. 703. (a) It shall be an unlawful employment practice for an employer—

(1) to fail or refuse to hire or to discharge any individual, or otherwise to discriminate against any individual with respect to his compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment, because of such individual's race, color, religion, sex, or national origin; or

(2) to limit, segregate, or classify his employees in any way which would deprive or tend to deprive any individual of employment opportunities or otherwise adversely affect his status as an employee, because of such individual's race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.

Employment agency. (b) It shall be an unlawful employment practice for an employment agency to fail or refuse to refer for employment, or otherwise to discriminate against, any individual because of his race, color, religion, sex, or national origin, or to classify or refer for employment any individual on the basis of his race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.

Labor organization. (c) It shall be an unlawful employment practice for a labor organization—

(1) to exclude or to expel from its membership, or otherwise to discriminate against, any individual because of his race, color, religion, sex, or national origin;

(2) to limit, segregate, or classify its membership, or to classify or fail or refuse to refer for employment any individual, in any way which would deprive or tend to deprive any individual of employment opportunities, or would limit such employment opportunities or otherwise adversely affect his status as an employee or as an applicant for employment, because of such individual's race, color, religion, sex, or national origin; or

(3) to cause or attempt to cause an employer to discriminate against an individual in violation of this section.

Training programs.

(d) It shall be an unlawful employment practice for any employer, labor organization, or joint labor-management committee controlling apprenticeship or other training or retraining, including on-the-job training programs to discriminate against any individual because of his race, color, religion, sex, or national origin in admission to, or employment in, any program established to provide apprenticeship or other training.

Exceptions.

(e) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, (1) it shall not be an unlawful employment practice for an employer to hire and employ employees, for an employment agency to classify, or refer for employment any individual, for a labor organization to classify its membership or to classify or refer for employment any individual, or for an employer, labor organization, or joint labor-management committee controlling apprenticeship or other training or retraining programs to admit or employ any individual in any such program, on the basis of his religion, sex, or national origin in those certain instances where religion, sex, or national origin is a bona fide occupational qualification reasonably necessary to the normal operation of that particular business or enterprise, and (2) it shall not be an unlawful employment practice for a school, college, university, or other educational institution or institution of learning to hire and employ employees of a particular religion if such school, college, university, or other educational institution or institution of learning is, in whole or in substantial part, owned, supported, controlled, or managed by a particular religion or by a particular religious corporation, association, or society, or if the curriculum of such school, college, university, or other educational institution or institution of learning is directed toward the propagation of a particular religion.

(f) As used in this title, the phrase "unlawful employment practice" shall not be deemed to include any action or measure taken by an employer, labor organization, joint labor-management committee, or employment agency with respect to an individual who is a member of the Communist Party of the United States or of any other organization required to register as a Communist-action or Communist-front organization by final order of the Subversive Activities Control Board pursuant to the Subversive Activities Control Act of 1950.

50 USC 781 note.

(g) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, it shall not be an unlawful employment practice for an employer to fail or refuse to hire and employ any individual for any position, for an employer to discharge any individual from any position, or for an employment agency to fail or refuse to refer any individual for employment in any position, or for a labor organization to fail or refuse to refer any individual for employment in any position, if—

(1) the occupancy of such position, or access to the premises in or upon which any part of the duties of such position is performed or is to be performed, is subject to any requirement imposed in the interest of the national security of the United States under any security program in effect pursuant to or administered under any statute of the United States or any Executive order of the President; and

(2) such individual has not fulfilled or has ceased to fulfill that requirement.

(h) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, it shall not be an unlawful employment practice for an employer to apply different standards of compensation, or different terms, conditions, or privileges of employment pursuant to a bona fide seniority or merit system, or a system which measures earnings by quantity or quality of production or to employees who work in different locations, provided that such differences are not the result of an intention to discriminate because of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin, nor shall it be an unlawful employment practice for an employer to give and to act upon the results of any professionally developed ability test provided that such test, its administration or action upon the results is not designed, intended or used to discriminate because of race, color, religion, sex or national origin. It shall not be an unlawful employment practice under this title for any employer to differentiate upon the basis of sex in determining the amount of the wages or compensation paid or to be paid to employees of such employer if such differentiation is authorized by the provisions of section 6(d) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, as amended (29 U.S.C. 206(d)). 77 Stat. 56. 29 USC 206.

(i) Nothing contained in this title shall apply to any business or enterprise on or near an Indian reservation with respect to any publicly announced employment practice of such business or enterprise under which a preferential treatment is given to any individual because he is an Indian living on or near a reservation. Indians.

(j) Nothing contained in this title shall be interpreted to require any employer, employment agency, labor organization, or joint labor-management committee subject to this title to grant preferential treatment to any individual or to any group because of the race, color, religion, sex, or national origin of such individual or group on account of an imbalance which may exist with respect to the total number or percentage of persons of any race, color, religion, sex, or national origin employed by any employer, referred or classified for employment by any employment agency or labor organization, admitted to membership or classified by any labor organization, or admitted to, or employed in, any apprenticeship or other training program, in comparison with the total number or percentage of persons of such race, color, religion, sex, or national origin in any community, State, section, or other area, or in the available work force in any community, State, section, or other area. Preferential treatment.

OTHER UNLAWFUL EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES

SEC. 704. (a) It shall be an unlawful employment practice for an employer to discriminate against any of his employees or applicants for employment, for an employment agency to discriminate against any individual, or for a labor organization to discriminate against any member thereof or applicant for membership, because he has opposed any practice made an unlawful employment practice by this title, or because he has made a charge, testified, assisted, or participated in any manner in an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under this title.

(b) It shall be an unlawful employment practice for an employer, labor organization, or employment agency to print or publish or cause to be printed or published any notice or advertisement relating to employment by such an employer or membership in or any classification or referral for employment by such a labor organization, or relating to any classification or referral for employment by such an employment agency, indicating any preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination, based on race, color, religion, sex, or national origin, except that such a notice or advertisement may indicate a preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination based on religion, sex, or national origin when religion, sex, or national origin is a bona fide occupational qualification for employment.

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY COMMISSION

Establishment.

SEC. 705. (a) There is hereby created a Commission to be known as the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which shall be composed of five members, not more than three of whom shall be members of the same political party, who shall be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. One of the original members shall be appointed for a term of one year, one for a term of two years, one for a term of three years, one for a term of four years, and one for a term of five years, beginning from the date of enactment of this title, but their successors shall be appointed for terms of five years each, except that any individual chosen to fill a vacancy shall be appointed only for the unexpired term of the member whom he shall succeed. The President shall designate one member to serve as Chairman of the Commission, and one member to serve as Vice Chairman. The Chairman shall be responsible on behalf of the Commission for the administrative operations of the Commission, and shall appoint, in accordance with the civil service laws, such officers, agents, attorneys, and employees as it deems necessary to assist it in the performance of its functions and to fix their compensation in accordance with the Classification Act of 1949, as amended. The Vice Chairman shall act as Chairman in the absence or disability of the Chairman or in the event of a vacancy in that office.

(b) A vacancy in the Commission shall not impair the right of the remaining members to exercise all the powers of the Commission and three members thereof shall constitute a quorum.

(c) The Commission shall have an official seal which shall be judicially noticed.

Reports to the President and Congress.

(d) The Commission shall at the close of each fiscal year report to the Congress and to the President concerning the action it has taken; the names, salaries, and duties of all individuals in its employ and the moneys it has disbursed; and shall make such further reports on the cause of and means of eliminating discrimination and such recommendations for further legislation as may appear desirable.

(1) by adding to section 105 thereof (5 U.S.C. 2204) the following clause:

"(32) Chairman, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission"; and

(2) by adding to clause (45) of section 106(a) thereof (5 U.S.C. 2205(a)) the following: "Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (4)."

70 Stat. 737. 5 USC 2205.

(f) The principal office of the Commission shall be in or near the District of Columbia, but it may meet or exercise any or all its powers at any other place. The Commission may establish such regional or State offices as it deems necessary to accomplish the purpose of this title.

Powers.

(g) The Commission shall have power—

(1) to cooperate with and, with their consent, utilize regional, State, local, and other agencies, both public and private, and individuals;

(2) to pay to witnesses whose depositions are taken or who are summoned before the Commission or any of its agents the same witness and mileage fees as are paid to witnesses in the courts of the United States;

(3) to furnish to persons subject to this title such technical assistance as they may request to further their compliance with this title or an order issued thereunder;

(4) upon the request of (i) any employer, whose employees or some of them, or (ii) any labor organization, whose members or some of them, refuse or threaten to refuse to cooperate in effectuating the provisions of this title, to assist in such effectuation by conciliation or such other remedial action as is provided by this title;

(5) to make such technical studies as are appropriate to effectuate the purposes and policies of this title and to make the results of such studies available to the public;

(6) to refer matters to the Attorney General with recommendations for intervention in a civil action brought by an aggrieved party under section 706, or for the institution of a civil action by the Attorney General under section 707, and to advise, consult, and assist the Attorney General on such matters.

(h) Attorneys appointed under this section may, at the direction of the Commission, appear for and represent the Commission in any case in court.

(i) The Commission shall, in any of its educational or promotional activities, cooperate with other departments and agencies in the performance of such educational and promotional activities.

(j) All officers, agents, attorneys, and employees of the Commission shall be subject to the provisions of section 9 of the Act of August 2, 1939, as amended (the Hatch Act), notwithstanding any exemption contained in such section. 53 Stat. 1148; 64 Stat. 475. 5 USC 1181.

PREVENTION OF UNLAWFUL EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES

SEC. 706. (a) Whenever it is charged in writing under oath by a person claiming to be aggrieved, or a written charge has been filed by a member of the Commission where he has reasonable cause to believe a violation of this title has occurred (and such charge sets forth the facts upon which it is based) that an employer, employment agency, or labor organization has engaged in an unlawful employment practice, the Commission shall furnish such employer, employment agency, or labor organization (hereinafter referred to as the "respondent") with a copy of such charge and shall make an investigation of such charge, provided that such charge shall not be made public by the Commission. If the Commission shall determine, after such investigation, that there is reasonable cause to believe that the charge is true, the Commission shall endeavor to eliminate any such alleged unlawful employment practice by informal methods of conference, conciliation, and persuasion. Nothing said or done during and as a part of such endeavors may be made public by the Commission without the written consent of the parties, or used as evidence in a subsequent proceeding. Any officer or employee of the Commission, who shall make public in any manner whatever any information in violation of this subsection shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than one year.

(b) In the case of an alleged unlawful employment practice occurring in a State, or political subdivision of a State, which has a State or local law prohibiting the unlawful employment practice alleged and establishing or authorizing a State or local authority to grant or seek relief from such practice or to institute criminal proceedings with respect thereto upon receiving notice thereof, no charge may be filed under subsection (a) by the person aggrieved before the expira- Legal proceedings.

tion of sixty days after proceedings have been commenced under the State or local law, unless such proceedings have been earlier terminated, provided that such sixty-day period shall be extended to one hundred and twenty days during the first year after the effective date of such State or local law. If any requirement for the commencement of such proceedings is imposed by a State or local authority other than a requirement of the filing of a written and signed statement of the facts upon which the proceeding is based, the proceeding shall be deemed to have been commenced for the purposes of this subsection at the time such statement is sent by registered mail to the appropriate State or local authority.

(c) In the case of any charge filed by a member of the Commission alleging an unlawful employment practice occurring in a State or political subdivision of a State, which has a State or local law prohibiting the practice alleged and establishing or authorizing a State or local authority to grant or seek relief from such practice or to institute criminal proceedings with respect thereto upon receiving notice thereof, the Commission shall, before taking any action with respect to such charge, notify the appropriate State or local officials and, upon request, afford them a reasonable time, but not less than sixty days (provided that such sixty-day period shall be extended to one hundred and twenty days during the first year after the effective day of such State or local law), unless a shorter period is requested, to act under such State or local law to remedy the practice alleged.

(d) A charge under subsection (a) shall be filed within ninety days after the alleged unlawful employment practice occurred, except that in the case of an unlawful employment practice with respect to which the person aggrieved has followed the procedure set out in subsection (b), such charge shall be filed by the person aggrieved within two hundred and ten days after the alleged unlawful employment practice occurred, or within thirty days after receiving notice that the State or local agency has terminated the proceedings under the State or local law, whichever is earlier, and a copy of such charge shall be filed by the Commission with the State or local agency.

(e) If within thirty days after a charge is filed with the Commission or within thirty days after expiration of any period of reference under subsection (c) (except that in either case such period may be extended to not more than sixty days upon a determination by the Commission that further efforts to secure voluntary compliance are warranted), the Commission has been unable to obtain voluntary compliance with this title, the Commission shall so notify the person aggrieved and a civil action may, within thirty days thereafter, be brought against the respondent named in the charge (1) by the person claiming to be aggrieved, or (2) if such charge was filed by a member of the Commission, by any person whom the charge alleges was aggrieved by the alleged unlawful employment practice. Upon application by the complainant and in such circumstances as the court may deem just, the court may appoint an attorney for such complainant and may authorize the commencement of the action without the payment of fees, costs, or security. Upon timely application, the court may, in its discretion, permit the Attorney General to intervene in such civil action if he certifies that the case is of general public importance. Upon request, the court may, in its discretion, stay further proceedings for not more than sixty days pending the termination of State or local proceedings described in subsection (b) or the efforts of the Commission to obtain voluntary compliance.

Courts. Jurisdiction.

(f) Each United States district court and each United States court of a place subject to the jurisdiction of the United States shall have jurisdiction of actions brought under this title. Such an action may be brought in any judicial district in the State in which the unlawful employment practice is alleged to have been committed, in the judicial district in which the employment records relevant to such practice are maintained and administered, or in the judicial district in which the plaintiff would have worked but for the alleged unlawful employment practice, but if the respondent is not found within any such district, such an action may be brought within the judicial district in which the respondent has his principal office. For purposes of sections 1404 and 1406 of title 28 of the United States Code, the judicial district in which the respondent has his principal office shall in all cases be considered a district in which the action might have been brought.

76A Stat. 699.

(g) If the court finds that the respondent has intentionally engaged in or is intentionally engaging in an unlawful employment practice charged in the complaint, the court may enjoin the respondent from engaging in such unlawful employment practice, and order such affirmative action as may be appropriate, which may include reinstatement or hiring of employees, with or without back pay (payable by the employer, employment agency, or labor organization, as the case may be, responsible for the unlawful employment practice). Interim earnings or amounts earnable with reasonable diligence by the person or persons discriminated against shall operate to reduce the back pay otherwise allowable. No order of the court shall require the admission or reinstatement of an individual as a member of a union or the hiring, reinstatement, or promotion of an individual as an employee, or the payment to him of any back pay, if such individual was refused admission, suspended, or expelled or was refused employment or advancement or was suspended or discharged for any reason other than discrimination on account of race, color, religion, sex or national origin or in violation of section 704(a).

(h) The provisions of the Act entitled "An Act to amend the Judicial Code and to define and limit the jurisdiction of courts sitting in equity, and for other purposes," approved March 23, 1932 (29 U.S.C. 101–115), shall not apply with respect to civil actions brought under this section.

47 Stat. 70.

(i) In any case in which an employer, employment agency, or labor organization fails to comply with an order of a court issued in a civil action brought under subsection (e), the Commission may commence proceedings to compel compliance with such order.

(j) Any civil action brought under subsection (e) and any proceedings brought under subsection (i) shall be subject to appeal as provided in sections 1291 and 1292, title 28, United States Code.

62 Stat. 929.

(k) In any action or proceeding under this title the court, in its discretion, may allow the prevailing party, other than the Commission or the United States, a reasonable attorney's fee as part of the costs, and the Commission and the United States shall be liable for costs the same as a private person.

65 Stat. 726;
72 Stat. 348,

Costs, fees.

Sec. 707. (a) Whenever the Attorney General has reasonable cause to believe that any person or group of persons is engaged in a pattern or practice of resistance to the full enjoyment of any of the rights secured by this title, and that the pattern or practice is of such a nature and is intended to deny the full exercise of the rights herein described, the Attorney General may bring a civil action in the appropriate district court of the United States by filing with it a complaint (1) signed by him (or in his absence the Acting Attorney General), (2) setting forth facts pertaining to such pattern or practice, and (3) requesting such relief, including an application for a permanent or temporary injunction, restraining order or other order against the person or persons responsible for such pattern or practice, as he deems necessary to insure the full enjoyment of the rights herein described.

(b) The district courts of the United States shall have and shall exercise jurisdiction of proceedings instituted pursuant to this section, and in any such proceeding the Attorney General may file with the clerk of such court a request that a court of three judges be convened to hear and determine the case. Such request by the Attorney General shall be accompanied by a certificate that, in his opinion, the case is of general public importance. A copy of the certificate and request for a three-judge court shall be immediately furnished by such clerk to the chief judge of the circuit (or in his absence, the presiding circuit judge of the circuit) in which the case is pending. Upon receipt of such request it shall be the duty of the chief judge of the circuit or the presiding circuit judge, as the case may be, to designate immediately three judges in such circuit, of whom at least one shall be a circuit judge and another of whom shall be a district judge of the court in which the proceeding was instituted, to hear and determine such case, and it shall be the duty of the judges so designated to assign the case for hearing at the earliest practicable date, to participate in the hearing and determination thereof, and to cause the case to be in every way expedited. An appeal from the final judgment of such court will lie to the Supreme Court.

In the event the Attorney General fails to file such a request in any such proceeding, it shall be the duty of the chief judge of the district (or in his absence, the acting chief judge) in which the case is pending immediately to designate a judge in such district to hear and determine the case. In the event that no judge in the district is available to hear and determine the case, the chief judge of the district, or the acting chief judge, as the case may be, shall certify this fact to the chief judge of the circuit (or in his absence, the acting chief judge) who shall then designate a district or circuit judge of the circuit to hear and determine the case.

It shall be the duty of the judge designated pursuant to this section to assign the case for hearing at the earliest practicable date and to cause the case to be in every way expedited.

EFFECT ON STATE LAWS

SEC. 708. Nothing in this title shall be deemed to exempt or relieve any person from any liability, duty, penalty, or punishment provided by any present or future law of any State or political subdivision of a State, other than any such law which purports to require or permit the doing of any act which would be an unlawful employment practice under this title.

INVESTIGATIONS, INSPECTIONS, RECORDS, STATE AGENCIES

SEC. 709. (a) In connection with any investigation of a charge filed under section 706, the Commission or its designated representative shall at all reasonable times have access to, for the purposes of examination, and the right to copy any evidence of any person being investigated or proceeded against that relates to unlawful employment practices covered by this title and is relevant to the charge under investigation.

Agreements, State and local agencies.

(b) The Commission may cooperate with State and local agencies charged with the administration of State fair employment practices laws and, with the consent of such agencies, may for the purpose of carrying out its functions and duties under this title and within the limitation of funds appropriated specifically for such purpose, utilize the services of such agencies and their employees and, notwithstanding any other provision of law, may reimburse such agencies and their employees for services rendered to assist the Commission in carrying out this title. In furtherance of such cooperative efforts, the Commission may enter into written agreements with such State or local agencies and such agreements may include provisions under which the Commission shall refrain from processing a charge in any cases or class of cases specified in such agreements and under which no person may bring a civil action under section 706 in any cases or class of cases so specified, or under which the Commission shall relieve any person or class of persons in such State or locality from requirements imposed under this section. The Commission shall rescind any such agreement whenever it determines that the agreement no longer serves the interest of effective enforcement of this title.

Records.

(c) Except as provided in subsection (d), every employer, employment agency, and labor organization subject to this title shall (1) make and keep such records relevant to the determinations of whether unlawful employment practices have been or are being committed, (2) preserve such records for such periods, and (3) make such reports therefrom, as the Commission shall prescribe by regulation or order, after public hearing, as reasonable, necessary, or appropriate for the enforcement of this title or the regulations or orders thereunder. The Commission shall, by regulation, require each employer, labor organization, and joint labor-management committee subject to this title which controls an apprenticeship or other training program to maintain such records as are reasonably necessary to carry out the purpose of this title, including, but not limited to, a list of applicants who wish to participate in such program, including the chronological order in which such applications were received, and shall furnish to the Commission, upon request, a detailed description of the manner in which persons are selected to participate in the apprenticeship or other training program. Any employer, employment agency, labor organization, or joint labor-management committee which believes that the application to it of any regulation or order issued under this section would result in undue hardship may (1) apply to the Commission for an exemption from the application of such regulation or order, or (2) bring a civil action in the United States district court for the district where such records are kept. If the Commission or the court, as the case may be, finds that the application of the regulation or order to the employer, employment agency, or labor organization in question would impose an undue hardship, the Commission or the court, as the case may be, may grant appropriate relief.

Exceptions.

(d) The provisions of subsection (c) shall not apply to any employer, employment agency, labor organization, or joint labor-management committee with respect to matters occurring in any State or political subdivision thereof which has a fair employment practice law during any period in which such employer, employment agency, labor organization, or joint labor-management committee is subject to such law, except that the Commission may require such notations on records which such employer, employment agency, labor organization, or joint labor-management committee keeps or is required to keep as are necessary because of differences in coverage or methods of enforcement between the State or local law and the provisions of this title. Where an employer is required by Executive Order 10925, issued March 6, 1961, or by any other Executive order prescribing fair employment practices for Government contractors and subcontractors, or by rules or regulations issued thereunder, to file reports relating to his employment practices with any Federal agency or committee, and he is substantially in compliance with such requirements, the Commission shall not require him to file additional reports pursuant to subsection (c) of this section.

5 USC 631 note.

Prohibited disclosures.

(e) It shall be unlawful for any officer or employee of the Commission to make public in any manner whatever any information obtained by the Commission pursuant to its authority under this section prior to the institution of any proceeding under this title involving such information. Any officer or employee of the Commission who shall make public in any manner whatever any information in violation of this subsection shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than $1,000, or imprisoned not more than one year.

INVESTIGATORY POWERS

SEC. 710. (a) For the purposes of any investigation of a charge filed under the authority contained in section 706, the Commission shall have authority to examine witnesses under oath and to require the production of documentary evidence relevant or material to the charge under investigation.

(b) If the respondent named in a charge filed under section 706 fails or refuses to comply with a demand of the Commission for permission to examine or to copy evidence in conformity with the provisions of section 709(a), or if any person required to comply with the provisions of section 709 (c) or (d) fails or refuses to do so, or if any person fails or refuses to comply with a demand by the Commission to give testimony under oath, the United States district court for the district in which such person is found, resides, or transacts business, shall, upon application of the Commission, have jurisdiction to issue to such person an order requiring him to comply with the provisions of section 709 (c) or (d) or to comply with the demand of the Commission, but the attendance of a witness may not be required outside the State where he is found, resides, or transacts business and the production of evidence may not be required outside the State where such evidence is kept.

Petitions.

(c) Within twenty days after the service upon any person charged under section 706 of a demand by the Commission for the production of documentary evidence or for permission to examine or to copy evidence in conformity with the provisions of section 709(a), such person may file in the district court of the United States for the judicial district in which he resides, is found, or transacts business, and serve upon the Commission a petition for an order of such court modifying or setting aside such demand. The time allowed for compliance with the demand in whole or in part as deemed proper and ordered by the court shall not run during the pendency of such petition in the court. Such petition shall specify each ground upon which the petitioner relies in seeking such relief, and may be based upon any failure of such demand to comply with the provisions of this title or with the limitations generally applicable to compulsory process or upon any constitutional or other legal right or privilege of such person. No objection which is not raised by such a petition may be urged in the defense to a proceeding initiated by the Commission under subsection (b) for enforcement of such a demand unless such proceeding is commenced by the Commission prior to the expiration of the twenty-day period, or unless the court determines that the defendant could not reasonably have been aware of the availability of such ground of objection.

(d) In any proceeding brought by the Commission under subsection (b), except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, the defendant may petition the court for an order modifying or setting aside the demand of the Commission.

NOTICES TO BE POSTED

SEC. 711. (a) Every employer, employment agency, and labor organization, as the case may be, shall post and keep posted in conspicuous places upon its premises where notices to employees, applicants for employment, and members are customarily posted a notice to be prepared or approved by the Commission setting forth excerpts from or, summaries of, the pertinent provisions of this title and information pertinent to the filing of a complaint.

(b) A willful violation of this section shall be punishable by a fine of not more than $100 for each separate offense.

VETERANS' PREFERENCE

SEC. 712. Nothing contained in this title shall be construed to repeal or modify any Federal, State, territorial, or local law creating special rights or preference for veterans.

RULES AND REGULATIONS

SEC. 713. (a) The Commission shall have authority from time to time to issue, amend, or rescind suitable procedural regulations to carry out the provisions of this title. Regulations issued under this section shall be in conformity with the standards and limitations of the Administrative Procedure Act. 60 Stat. 237. 5 USC 1001 note.

(b) In any action or proceeding based on any alleged unlawful employment practice, no person shall be subject to any liability or punishment for or on account of (1) the commission by such person of an unlawful employment practice if he pleads and proves that the act or omission complained of was in good faith, in conformity with, and in reliance on any written interpretation or opinion of the Commission, or (2) the failure of such person to publish and file any information required by any provision of this title if he pleads and proves that he failed to publish and file such information in good faith, in conformity with the instructions of the Commission issued under this title regarding the filing of such information. Such a defense, if established, shall be a bar to the action or proceeding, notwithstanding that (A) after such act or omission, such interpretation or opinion is modified or rescinded or is determined by judicial authority to be invalid or of no legal effect, or (B) after publishing or filing the description and annual reports, such publication or filing is determined by judicial authority not to be in conformity with the requirements of this title.

FORCIBLY RESISTING THE COMMISSION OR ITS REPRESENTATIVES

SEC. 714. The provisions of section 111, title 18, United States Code, shall apply to officers, agents, and employees of the Commission in the performance of their official duties. 62 Stat. 688.

SPECIAL STUDY BY SECRETARY OF LABOR

SEC. 715. The Secretary of Labor shall make a full and complete study of the factors which might tend to result in discrimination in employment because of age and of the consequences of such discrimination on the economy and individuals affected. The Secretary of Labor shall make a report to the Congress not later than June 30, 1965, containing the results of such study and shall include in such report such recommendations for legislation to prevent arbitrary discrimination in employment because of age as he determines advisable. Report to Congress.

EFFECTIVE DATE

SEC. 716. (a) This title shall become effective one year after the date of its enactment.

(b) Notwithstanding subsection (a), sections of this title other than sections 703, 704, 706, and 707 shall become effective immediately.

Presidential conferences.

(c) The President shall, as soon as feasible after the enactment of this title, convene one or more conferences for the purpose of enabling the leaders of groups whose members will be affected by this title to become familiar with the rights afforded and obligations imposed by its provisions, and for the purpose of making plans which will result in the fair and effective administration of this title when all of its provisions become effective. The President shall invite the participation in such conference or conferences of (1) the members of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity, (2) the members of the Commission on Civil Rights, (3) representatives of State and local agencies engaged in furthering equal employment opportunity, (4) representatives of private agencies engaged in furthering equal employment opportunity, and (5) representatives of employers, labor organizations, and employment agencies who will be subject to this title.

Membership.

TITLE VIII—REGISTRATION AND VOTING STATISTICS

Survey.

SEC. 801. The Secretary of Commerce shall promptly conduct a survey to compile registration and voting statistics in such geographic areas as may be recommended by the Commission on Civil Rights. Such a survey and compilation shall, to the extent recommended by the Commission on Civil Rights, only include a count of persons of voting age by race, color, and national origin, and determination of the extent to which such persons are registered to vote, and have voted in any statewide primary or general election in which the Members of the United States House of Representatives are nominated or elected, since January 1, 1960. Such information shall also be collected and compiled in connection with the Nineteenth Decennial Census, and at such other times as the Congress may prescribe. The provisions of section 9 and chapter 7 of title 13, United States Code, shall apply to any survey, collection, or compilation of registration and voting statistics carried out under this title: Provided, however, That no person shall be compelled to disclose his race, color, national origin, or questioned about his political party affiliation, how he voted, or the reasons therefore, nor shall any penalty be imposed for his failure or refusal to make such disclosure. Every person interrogated orally, by written survey or questionnaire or by any other means with respect to such information shall be fully advised with respect to his right to fail or refuse to furnish such information.

13 USC 9, 211-241.

TITLE IX—INTERVENTION AND PROCEDURE AFTER REMOVAL IN CIVIL RIGHTS CASES

63 Stat. 102.

SEC. 901. Title 28 of the United States Code, section 1447(d), is amended to read as follows:

"An order remanding a case to the State court from which it was removed is not reviewable on appeal or otherwise, except that an order remanding a case to the State court from which it was removed pursuant to section 1443 of this title shall be reviewable by appeal or otherwise."

62 Stat. 938.

SEC. 902. Whenever an action has been commenced in any court of the United States seeking relief from the denial of equal protection of the laws under the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution on account of race, color, religion, or national origin, the Attorney General for or in the name of the United States may intervene in such action upon timely application if the Attorney General certifies that the case is of general public importance. In such action the United States shall be entitled to the same relief as if it had instituted the action.

TITLE X—ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMUNITY RELATIONS SERVICE

SEC. 1001. (a) There is hereby established in and as a part of the Department of Commerce a Community Relations Service (hereinafter referred to as the "Service"), which shall be headed by a Director who shall be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate for a term of four years. The Director is authorized to appoint, subject to the civil service laws and regulations, such other personnel as may be necessary to enable the Service to carry out its functions and duties, and to fix their compensation in accordance with the Classification Act of 1949, as amended. The Director is further authorized to procure services as authorized by section 15 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (60 Stat. 810; 5 U.S.C. 55(a)), but at rates for individuals not in excess of $75 per diem. 63 Stat. 954; 76 Stat. 843. 5 USC 1071 note.

(b) Section 106(a) of the Federal Executive Pay Act of 1956, as amended (5 U.S.C. 2205(a)), is further amended by adding the following clause thereto: 70 Stat. 737.

"(52) Director, Community Relations Service."

SEC. 1002. It shall be the function of the Service to provide assistance to communities and persons therein in resolving disputes, disagreements, or difficulties relating to discriminatory practices based on race, color, or national origin which impair the rights of persons in such communities under the Constitution or laws of the United States or which affect or may affect interstate commerce. The Service may offer its services in cases of such disputes, disagreements, or difficulties whenever, in its judgment, peaceful relations among the citizens of the community involved are threatened thereby, and it may offer its services either upon its own motion or upon the request of an appropriate State or local official or other interested person. Functions.

SEC. 1003. (a) The Service shall, whenever possible, in performing its functions, seek and utilize the cooperation of appropriate State or local, public, or private agencies.

(b) The activities of all officers and employees of the Service in providing conciliation assistance shall be conducted in confidence and without publicity, and the Service shall hold confidential any information acquired in the regular performance of its duties upon the understanding that it would be so held. No officer or employee of the Service shall engage in the performance of investigative or prosecuting functions of any department or agency in any litigation arising out of a dispute in which he acted on behalf of the Service. Any officer or other employee of the Service, who shall make public in any manner whatever any information in violation of this subsection, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than one year.

SEC. 1004. Subject to the provisions of sections 205 and 1003(b), the Director shall, on or before January 31 of each year, submit to the Congress a report of the activities of the Service during the preceding fiscal year. Report to Congress.

TITLE XI—MISCELLANEOUS

Trial by jury.

SEC. 1101. In any proceeding for criminal contempt arising under title II, III, IV, V, VI, or VII of this Act, the accused, upon demand therefor, shall be entitled to a trial by jury, which shall conform as near as may be to the practice in criminal cases. Upon conviction, the accused shall not be fined more than $1,000 or imprisoned for more than six months.

Exceptions.

This section shall not apply to contempts committed in the presence of the court, or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice, nor to the misbehavior, misconduct, or disobedience of any officer of the court in respect to writs, orders, or process of the court. No person shall be convicted of criminal contempt hereunder unless the act or omission constituting such contempt shall have been intentional, as required in other cases of criminal contempt.

Nor shall anything herein be construed to deprive courts of their power, by civil contempt proceedings, without a jury, to secure compliance with or to prevent obstruction of, as distinguished from punishment for violations of, any lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree, or command of the court in accordance with the prevailing usages of law and equity, including the power of detention.

SEC. 1102. No person should be put twice in jeopardy under the laws of the United States for the same act or omission. For this reason, an acquittal or conviction in a prosecution for a specific crime under the laws of the United States shall bar a proceeding for criminal contempt, which is based upon the same act or omission and which arises under the provisions of this Act; and an acquittal or conviction in a proceeding for criminal contempt, which arises under the provisions of this Act, shall bar a prosecution for a specific crime under the laws of the United States based upon the same act or omission.

Attorney General, etc., authority.

SEC. 1103. Nothing in this Act shall be construed to deny, impair, or otherwise affect any right or authority of the Attorney General or of the United States or any agency or officer thereof under existing law to institute or intervene in any action or proceeding.

States' authority.

SEC. 1104. Nothing contained in any title of this Act shall be construed as indicating an intent on the part of Congress to occupy the field in which any such title operates to the exclusion of State laws on the same subject matter, nor shall any provision of this Act be construed as invalidating any provision of State law unless such provision is inconsistent with any of the purposes of this Act, or any provision thereof.

Appropriation.

SEC. 1105. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act.

Separability clause.

SEC. 1106. If any provision of this Act or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, the remainder of the Act and the application of the provision to other persons not similarly situated or to other circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

Approved July 2, 1964.

RE: RESPONSIBILITIES OF SECRETARY OF ORGANIZATION DEPARTMENT

I. Correspondence. Answers about 90% of all mail that comes into the Organization Department. This mail falls into three categories.

1. Chapter Mail - This involves answering most questions a chapter might ask of the Organization Department, sending out material, and practically anything else relevant to the chapter. There are of course, things that can not be answered, because of lack of authority or knowledge and these either Bob Gore or I answer.

2. Individual requests for information about CORE chapters, associate membership or active membership. This also involves recommending sources of information other than CORE, or just mailing out information about concepts and philosophy of CORE as part of the movement. This includes requests to start new chapters and informing field person in that area of same.

3. Field Staff mail - Task Force and Field Secretaries write for material to be sent to chapters or to themselves. They send in reports which are read, and if requests are made they are filled. These reports are sent on to me and to others in the office if they are relevant to any other department. Those field staff who do not work under a Regional Office (Mike Lesser and Winston Lockett) send in schedules and they are recorded. Secretary recommends that they visit certain chapters if so requested or the need is seen (most of these cases Maxine will ask for Bob's or my agreement.) I have asked that she take these liberties when I am not in office. Also checks all expense reports that come into this office from field staff and ok's them when I am not here.

II. Takes dictation from me.

III. Types Bob's mail most of the time

IV. Keeps up chapter contact list, which is taken care of regularly every Friday.

V. See that Press releases and like are sent to Field Secretaries

VI. Answer most of inquiries that come in over the phone.

Evaluation: Because of financial situation office secretaries have been reduced from three to one without loss of any efficiency that relates to secretarial work in the department. Maxine has done an excellent and marvelous job in keeping the department correspondence up to date. No mail has gone unanswered since she has been working here.

MEMORANDUM

CONGRESS OF RACIAL EQUALITY
38 Park Row
New York, New York 10038
February 2, 1965

TO: NAC Members and All Staffs

FROM: George Wiley

SUBJECT: Southern Staff Work Shop, New Orleans, Louisiana, January 21 - 23

I shall make no attempt here at a comprehensive report on the Southern Staff Conference but wish to record a few observations and spell out some decisions that were made. In addition to the work shops and the general discussion sessions, I had opportunities to meet separately with the staffs of the three major state projects - namely, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Florida.

I discussed with the state project directors the need for better fiscal control on expenditures. They identified a number of problems including the fact that they seldom see the bills relating to their projects, which are sent to the National office. I agreed to arrange to get an identifying number placed on each gasoline credit card. Once this is arranged the Bookkeeping Department will then make a summary breakdown of the expenditures for each credit card, each month and send it to the Southern office, the state director and the project director. It was also decided that these costs presently billed to the National office will be a part of the budget of the local project. Dick Jewett indicated that the limit of 1500 miles per month placed on the use of leased cars was not realistic for our operation in rural areas. In future leases, arrangement should be made for about 1000 miles per week.

With respect to telephone credit cards, it is difficult to break down the calls to send to individual staff members. However, someone in bookkeeping will check the calls made on each credit card against the calls listed by the individual staff member on his weekly log sheet. If there are major discrepancies, he will be notified. Otherwise, he may assume that the information submitted on his telephone log sheet is substantially correct.

Ike Reynolds' transfer to California was discussed with him. He will be leaving for the West Coast shortly.

Ways of strengthening the Southern office were discussed. Once budgets are established at the February 6th NAC meeting, all Southern staffs and projects will draw advances and operating expenses from the Southern office. Direct requests to the National office will not be honored.

The program discussion which was the major emphasis of the conference seemed to be quite meaningful to the staff. I was struck by the degree of similarity between the problems of community organization and community involvement in the South to those in the North. I was interested in several features of the organizing effort. First, the trend seems decidedly away from going into a community and starting a Freedom School or a community center. Both of these operations are increasingly being thought of as being developed in response to an expressed community interest in these activities. This interest would have to be expressed in the form of willingness on the part of community residents to contribute some of their own efforts and resources to the development of the center or school. The result is that in many areas the local people are sustaining major financial responsibilities for the projects in their area.

There was also a dominant feeling that whereas the 1964 summer project in Mississippi had many important virtues, it suffered from the fact that many people came down from the North for short periods of time with their own program and ideas and initiative and this actually inhibited the involvement of local people in the program. As a result, local people did not feel a close identification with the centers and the projects in certain instances. The result was that there was frequently very little left of the program when the people left at the end of the summer. Some centers and schools have subsequently been closed.

I also got the impression that another summer project of the type done in 1964 would not be desirable in Mississippi.

I found the morale of our Southern staff to be quite good considering the difficult conditions in which they must work. I think most of them gained new insight into their work from this conference.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CORE INCREASES PRESSURE IN JONESBORO, LOUISIANA

Jonesboro, La., March 24, 1965--Three hundred fifty students marched to the office of the school board here today, lead by Glen Johnson, a student leader, to protest inadequate courses in the Negro schools.

The demonstration, organized by CORE, centered around demands for classes in foreign languages at the secondary level and improvement in curriculum. The Superintendent of the School Board stated that he would have a reply for the students and CORE tomorrow. In the meantime, 250 students are picketing the office of the school board.

The demonstration was part of the stepped-up activity in the Jonesboro area by CORE, particularly in response to the "blockading" of the Negro area by the local police. During the past week, Negroes have not been allowed to leave the area in which they live. The blockade has been lifted, but intimidation has been continued on the part of the whites in Jonesboro.

James Farmer, the National Director of CORE, organized a march yesterday and spoke at a mass rally in the roller-skate arena, with 1,000 persons attending and the crowd overflowing onto the sidewalks. Jonesboro has a total population of 8,000.

As part of the demonstrations, four Negroes attempted to be served at the Blue Grill Restaurant in a test of local compliance to the Civil Rights Act. They were refused service and arrested on a charge of disturbing the peace. Twenty-five dollars bond was required but the charge was later dropped. The four were Mrs. Queenie Esther Thompson, 22, Mr. Freeman Scott, 17, Miss Brenda Barrett, 17, and Mr. Willard Roff, 19.

James Farmer also sent a telegram to Postmaster General John A. Gronouski protesting discriminatory policies by the local post office in Jonesboro, which will not deliver mail to Negroes. Negro residents are forced to rent a post office box or stop by the post office for their mail, even when they live on the same street as the white residents, whose mail is delivered. The Postmaster General has initiated an investigation.

CORE - Congress of Racial Equality

TO: :CORE Groups, Advisory Committee

FROM: James Farmer, National Director

SUBJECT: Expansion of CORE Staff

The last few months have revolutionized the civil rights scene. Hundreds of Americans from every section of the nation by their willingness to join the Freedom Ride to the Parchman prison have made it possible for others to make significant advances in their home communities.

The Freedom Riders that I met in Parchman were imbued with a determination to end discrimination in every form now. They are returning to their homes by the hundreds.

We in CORE have grown greatly in public support and respect. We must take advantages of our opportunities to develop more effective action against bigotry. In successive meetings the National Action Committee has approved recommendations for expanded staff and offices that I presented after consultation with staff and officers.

Regional Offices: The recommendation was for two regional office to be located in the deep south, one in the upper south, one on the west coast and one in the east. These would be manned by field secretaries primarily assigned to these offices. In addition, the National Action Committee authorized an expansion of the field staff to 10. This woild allow for five field secretaries available to go to any location.

Staff Additions: We have added the Rev. B. Elton Cox, Edward Blankenheim and Henry Thomas to the staff as field secretaries. All three have participated on the Freedom Rides. Cox is a Congregational minister from High Point, North Carolina and was active in the sit-ins there. Blankenheim was a member of Tucson, Arizona CORE before joining the Freedom Ride that lead to the bus burning in Anniston. Thomas was chairman of the Nonviolent Action Group of Washington, D. C. and has served 40 days in Mississippi prisons. He has participated in three Freedom Rides.

We have also added William Larkins to the staff as Assistant Community Relations Director. Larkins is chairman of Tallahassee CORE, a Regional Representative, and has served 49 days in the Leon County jail for sitting-in at a Woolworth lunch counter.

All of the staff will need your support in the next few months of challenge. We hope to be able to continue to provide creative, dynamic leadership to the civil rights movement.

CORElator

12 August 1965

TO: NAC Members

FROM: Alan Gartner

RE: CORE House Organs

As you know, the NAC at its meeting prior to the convention voted to discontinue the CORElator in its present form and to appoint an NAC-staff committee to study the situation and to make proposals for a replacement. Due to the press of convention business, the committee was not appointed, and with Floyd McKissick's permission I am writing this memorandum to get things going.

As I understand the discussion within the NAC, prior to its vote to stop the CORElator in its present form, it was the consensus that the CORElator did not effectively portray the "new" CORE and that it was not an effective medium for communications among and between CORE chapter and staff people.

Before going further, perhaps it will be useful to set out some facts about the CORElator. It has been mailed to the entire list of contributors to National CORE -- now approximately 75,000. We have been mailing six issues a year, every other month. The cost of the CORElator has been approximately $1,600 per issue, or 2.1¢ per copy per person. This figure includes (for a run of 75,000) printing -- $900, addressing -- $150, collation and sorting for mailing -- $100, and postage (2nd. class rate for a periodical) -- $450.

Thus the total cost of the CORElator, recognizing that there has been no staff cost for the writing and editing which Jim Peck has done without compensation, has been approximately $9,600 per year of six mailings to 75,000 people.

Before going further, let me state a number of suppositions on my part. First, that communications within CORE (that is among and between chapters, members, officers, staff and national office) have been inadequate, to say the least. While responsibility may rest upon several shoulders, I believe that the ultimate responsibility for correcting this matter rests in the national office -- the organ set up by the others to serve them. Second, we must improve such communications within the CORE family as a matter of highest priority. Third, in order to continue receiving contributions from those who have contributed in the past, and in order to inform the general public in a general way, there is need for some regular organ going to the contributors and others. Fourth, the CORElator, which sought to perform the task of informing CORE's contributors of its activities (and which was not designed to be a communications vehicle within CORE), was not totally adequate to this job. Its news was often dated; there was little if any analysis or explanation; there was too much concentration on "old" CORE activities, viz. demonstrations, etc. and too little on "new" CORE; and the CORElator as a whole had no central focus. The cause of this inadequacy is surely mixed; at least in part the fault lies with the failure of the chapters and field staff to provide the CORElator with useable material. Fifth, the funds available to do both of these communications jobs -- within CORE and to CORE's contributors -- are relatively (and too often absolutely) limited.

With these assumptions out of the way, let me move into the body of the memorandum. Perhaps it would be well to state some of the kinds of information which should be moving around within the CORE family. In no order of importance: organizational news, viz. decisions of the various governing bodies, staff changes, etc.; activities of the organization, nationally and locally; descriptions of particular projects, programs, etc.; proposals which are to come before various governing bodies; ideas and proposals from people within the organization; comments, critiques, criticisms of program, implementation of the organization. Recently, we have been making some efforts to meet some of these needs. Minutes of NAC and Steering Committee are sent to the chapters. Regular memoranda come to the chapters from the national office on a wide range of activities. We are sending out "CORE In The Field", which is a compilation from our news clipping service of chapter (and some limited national) activities. On occasion the national office has sent program proposals to the chapters -- recently there have been two mailings of "Program Ideas", and these will continue. We have been particularly deficient in developing and sending out program papers, and in the exchange of ideas, programs, critiques, etc. While the first of these failures can, we hope, be rectified by action within the national office, (we are seriously handicapped in doing an adequate job in this area until we can develop program and research staff, which is presently non-existent, because of the lack of funds), the second, the exchange of ideas, etc., requires participation of CORE members and field staff more than the national office -- in fact, the main function of the national office in this ought to be distribution.

A query: Is it better for such things as the press releases and "CORE In The Field" to be held for monthly mailings to the chapters, in addition to program ideas and other matters, or ought we send them as were have begun on a weekly basis? (We have a crew of volunteers every wednesday night who do the collating, stuffing and mailing.) Should these (and other) materials be sent out individually or should they be incorporated into a standard formant, perhaps with a title, etc.?

A proposal: Whatever format makes most sense for the above items, this office will seek to send out, as frequently as possible, program materials -- developed here or better yet garnered from the chapters, and will serve as a clearing house and distributor for any program ideas, analyses, critiques, papers, etc., which chapter and staff persons prepare. I see these functions as centered in the Program Department when one is established.

Now, as to communications with our contributors. As a sentimentalist, I would suggest retention of the name the COORElator, as well as the every other month mailing schedule -- it is frequent enough to keep them in touch and not too prohibitive in terms of postage costs. Also, as a way to save on postage costs, we ought to keep the format of a periodical. The new COORElator would stop printing a rehash of old press releases of scattered stories. It would seek to be more interprative. For example, rather than simply noting that this or that chapter demonstrated, re: police brutality, it would talk about what CORE feels ought to be the proper role of the police and why, and in such a context talk about what various chapters have done in this area ("CORE In The Field" provides ready reference material for chapter activities of this sort). Also, in addition to stories on particular areas of attention, there would be "in-depth" treatment of particular projects, of both national CORE and of local chapters. There might also be such regular features as an incident summary, a CORE personality feature (national offices, staff, chapter people), excerpts from Farmer's weekly column in the AMSTERDAM NEWS. In addition, there would be some "think" pieces, and policy suggesting or policy explaining articles. There might also be reprints from other media about CORE or matters which interest CORE.

A proposal: That a "new" CORElator be issued -- as outlined above, with whatever changes the NAC wishes. That this be understood as primarily a journal for the "outside" world, although sent to CORE chapters too. That Jim Peck be asked to edit this "new" CORElator, as described above. That this decision be reached soon - first in order to enable us to continue under our present contract with the Post Office, second, so as to retain continuing contact with our contributors, and third, and perhaps most important, that Jim Peck not be kept in limbo as to what his status with CORE will be.

TO: MEMBERS OF THE NATIONAL ACTION COUNCIL

DATE: September 29, 1965

I spent last week in the New York Office and had lengthy conversations with Farmer, Wiley, Gartner, Daye, McCain and other staff persons regarding the many problems currently facing us.

(1) The number one problem which continues to press us is "Finance" although our position has improved within the last thirty days. It is because of the financial situation that neither a Steering Committee meeting or a NAC Meeting has been called. We have not received reports from the Regions indicating those persons elected to the NAC from their respective regions. This information we should have right away.

(2) The cost of a NAC Meeting now exceeds $5,300.00 due to changes in our Constitution whereby the Regional Vice-chairmen are now on the Steering Committee.

(3) The summer projects now being over has caused many volunteers to leave our Staff. It has required the re-location of others and there is also the need to fill vacancies which now exist. At the last meeting of the NAC, it was directed that no additional personnel be hired to the staff and that in the event needed personnel change arose of an emergency nature then your National Chairman was empowered to make the necessary decision. This problem has come up fairly frequent and I have attempted to work with the staff. Major changes in personnel are now indicated.

(4) A STEERING COMMITTEE MEETING IS IMPERATIVE FOR THE WEEK OF OCTOBER 23, 1965. IF FUNDS BECOME AVAILABLE BETWEEN NOW AND OCTOBER 16, THE CHARACTER OF THIS MEETING WILL BE CHANGED TO AN NAC MEETING. IT ALL DEPENDS UPON HOW MUCH MONEY COMES IN. WE ARE SUGGESTING ALSO THAT MEMBERS OF THE NAC WHO DESIRES TO ATTEND THE MEETING WHICH WILL BE HELD IN NEW YORK TO ASK THEIR REGION TO PAY THEIR FARE. THE NEW YORK OFFICE IS TAKING CARE OF HOUSING FOR THE MEETING. I WOULD, THEREFORE, APPRECIATE ALL OF YOU INDICATING ON THE ENCLOSED POSTAL CARD IF YOU WILL BE ABLE TO ATTEND.

IF THE NEED ARISES, YOU MAY PHONE ME AT AREA 919, DURHAM, N. C. 682-8106 or 682-6576 AFTER 7 P.M. OR ON SUNDAY.

Dear Floyd.

NATIONAL ACTION COUNCIL MEMBERSHIP MEETING SEPTEMBER 10 -11, 1966 at the YMCA 180 West 135th Street, New York, New York

Roll call was taken. See attached sheet for membership attendance. Mr. Will Ussery, the National Chairman called the meeting to order at 10:45 AM. Mr. McKissick called for a reading of the minutes from the National convention. The chairman recommended that this reading be dispensed with since there was much business to be attended to. O. Leeds so moved. It was unanimously carried.

B. Barrow requested that due to the nature of the matters to be discussed, that this meeting be closed to those in attendance who were not authorized by the NAC to attend. The motion carried. R. Innis apposed. The minutes of the preceding NAC meeting were read and approved. The chairman then prepared the agenda with the members of the NAC. It was the consensus of opinion that the follow-up items of the previous NAC meeting minutes would be listed as part of the agenda, having the individuals responsible for specific items bring the members up to date.

The Ossie Davis package of entertainment was now the responsibility of Lionel Hampton, who was now stymied as a result of the thinking of his agent that there would be a loss of money. O. Leeds stated that his committee was unable to evaluate the Baltimore's Target City Project prior to this meeting, since the NAC meeting had been called sooner than tentatively planned and the first visit attempt found everyone on the Baltimore Staff away during the Labor Day week end.

O. Leeds moved that this committee undertake to evaluate Baltimore Project as soon as possible. It was carried unanimously. O. Leeds was also asked to give an account of the Committee to set up suggestions regarding the implementation of Black Power. It was suggested that this report be read later during the meeting.

The National Director was then asked to present his organizational report, which became the focal point of the following discussion:

Current income from mailing is approximately $2,500/day. We learned that the present mailing list was composed of members from the white community and that a list was presently being compiled of members from our Black communities. The cost of the subject mailing is estimated to be approximately $6,000. And it is felt that CORE should have at least 4 mailings per year. Our Director also stated that he was concentrating on appeals to the churches, and that he had been reserving Sundays for this purpose. He stated that we have received $2,000 in grants and $3,000 for taxes. He recommended that we accept the offer from William Worthy, who was representing Peace Groups for a full page advertisement, available to us without charge, regarding CORE's position on Viet Nam. The offer was accepted following discussion. Mr. Ussery suggested that the same advertisement be used to make even more money in other states, if it became available for reprinting. The idea of running the ad internationally was entertained and accepted. It was suggested that this advertisement be presented to the NAC for approval prior to release. It was decided that the Director's approval along with available NAC members be sufficient.

Our Director stated that he would remain in the office as much as possible in order to straighten out the internal problems. He then briefed the group on the three things which could be done to carry CORE through 1967: 1) File bankruptcy 2) forbearance on credit 3) pay creditors. He then stated that accountants will assist us and that we have presently reduced our operating expenses and overhead with our new move to 200 West 135th Street. He suggested that CORE drop car rental systems and think of purchasing a car, since it would be much cheaper, according to SNCC.

From there he discussed the Christmas card mailing. He told us that it would bring in some money and also help pay our old debt. It was then agreed that we do this as a business transaction and proceed with Sauer endorsing a note for us. If we cannot get Sauer then we should attempt to borrow money. At any rate our debt would be paid and it would also keep the card project in CORE.

Mr. McKissick then moved that the revenue from the sale of Xmas cards be earmarked to pay back salaries of those presently on staff, and that chapters will be notified that all revenue from sale of Xmas cards will therefore be given to staff and no percentage paid to chapters.

This motion was unanimously carried. It was then suggested that we do our own work and watch Sauer Xmas Card List, thus preventing any other organization from capitalizing on it.

Following a brief discussion regarding the use of the union label O. Leeds moved that no mail of CORE's be printed without a union label and that if this is not possible, an explanation must be made. This was carried unanimously

Discussion followed regarding SEDF pro and con. Many recommendations were made. Roy Innis moved that we demand real control (majority control) of the board of SEDF and that we take direct action and cut ourselves loose from this group at the time this negotiation seems futile and that we form a committee with NAC members to negotiate this confrontation. The vote was 6 opposed 5 in favor.

Bill Bradley prior made the following motion and following much discussion and much indecision withdrew it:

J. McKissick

"That we appoint a negotiating committee to deal with all questions relating to relationships between CORE and SEDF and that said committee come back to this body at the next meeting of NAC to present this report for action to this body. It was agreed that our National Director contact or communicate with SEDF and that if a meeting was forthcoming, a committee composed of available NAC members should meet with them.

The amendment to Bill Bradley's motion was also withdrawn. It stated that this negotiating team be empowered to sever this connection(of SEDF) if negotiation fails. Ben Swan made this motion.

Bill Bradley then gave a report of the West Coast Conference held September 3rd. He then referred to telegrams sent to the National Office requesting that Herb Callender be reinstated. He said that the West Coast region recommended that Herb be reinstated on the basis that if CORE is to be saved we must maintain experienced staff who have been in the movement a long time. The report (see the attached) from the Southern Region was then read and discussed item by item.

A motion was made that we accept recommendations of this report for consideration at this meeting. Item 1 was not supported. The motion was withdrawn. It was agreed that a week be allowed for foundation money to come through. And that if money not received by that time then the following recommendation made by our National Director be followed: "That staff be empowered to prepare proposal to be submitted to foundations and that seed money necessary for preparing proposals be sought from the foundation. If the seed money is not available from foundations, then the National office will supply the seed money at the same time recognizing the need to maintain a financial basis of $2,500/day. The motion was carried unanimously.

Item 2 of the Southern Region was directed at the National office and the NAC wherein promises were made and not lived up to.

Sol Herbert moved that members present, commit themselves. The motion was carried unanimously. Ollie Leeds pledged $10.00 per month for the next four months. Sol Herbert pledged support on the behalf of Bronx Core and Bill Bradley for the West Coast.

With regard to Item 3, a motion was made that the National office agree to pay during the three months of proposal writing $3,510 to those persons named in the recommendations and too, that those persons whose names are not submitted will receive a like amount of money when their needs are submitted to the national office:

1. If monies are available
2. National will canvass regional organization and chapters for pledges for 3 month period to defray staff salaries.

Our national director requested that these conditions be kept confidential.

It was felt that Item 3 of the subject report was not relevant. With reference to Item 4, the National Director felt that the situation will not permit us to make a committment since he was not ready at this time to give specific recommendations. It was also agreed that it is the National Director's right to select people on his staff when hiring or replacing any employee. The role of the Director of Organization was then discussed. The questions centered around two approaches a) the director of organization's role in chapter problems and his role in staff problems.

A motion was made that the National Director agree to entertain suggestions and to advise with staff regarding the filling of said vacancy. It was carried unanimously.

Ollie Leeds then read the report from the Black Power Committee. The membership approved it unanimously. The approval included recommendations that the credit union proposal be given priority and that the Black Power Committee set up rules of the articles of Incorporation and include in detail the operation and including membership and then:

1. Establish Credit Union. An example being that National Employees would pay $5.00/month

2. Open an account, then getting charter and

3. Membership (1967) agree to abide by our decisions, insurance, welfare, pledge, carry card and that membership books be kept at least by January 1967. And that furthermore this general information should be given to Regional Chapters by January 1967.

A motion was made that the Committee on Black Power be empowered to establish a credit union. (Bill Bradley) The motion was carried unanimously.

Ollie Leeds then moved that other aspects for the implementation of Black Power be explored by the committee and that specific recommendations be made to the NAC from time to time. The motion was carried unanimously.

We were then informed that Arthur Evans was requested to appear on the peace venture. A motion was made that Arthur Evans be permitted to appear on the peace venture and send a telegram.

Floyd McKissick Discussion then followed regarding the guardians. A motion was made to commend the guardians for their support of the Civilian Review Board and the National Office through its spokesman so advise them.

The North Eastern Region report was then given by Jim Williams. He stated that guidelines are still needed for the chapters. He also stated that this region would be holding their meeting that following week end.

It was recommended that a series of district visits by Floyd McKissick, whenever possible.

Discussion then followed on the North Central urban training center. A motion was made that NAC empower Art and Gene to continue negotiations in terms of follow-up for the urban training center. This motion was carried unanimously.

Following more discussion a motion was made that in each area of the U.S. in each region that the chairman be responsible in turning in to the National Chairman Chapter information regarding number of members, operation and pertinent data using criteria list developed at the Durham North Carolina convention within 1 month. The motion was carried unanimously.

Discussion followed regarding the Constitution. It was brought to the attention of the group that only 2 items were delaying the printing. These were Article XI. Section 1 (e) and Section 4 (d). A motion was made by Ben Swan that the following be substituted for the present: That the senior field staff person serving on the NAC represent staff and serve on the Steering committee. It was unanimously carried.

This was done as a result that it would be nearly impossible and most impractical for the Constitution Committee to meet. The time element was most important here.

Ollie Leeds then made a motion that the Constitution as we think it is be sent to Cecil Brown and that if he sees anything of substantive error that he communicate same to the National Chairman. If the National Chairman agrees he will hold up printing , within a week.
The motion was carried unanimously.

Following this discussion the point that regions respectively, could hire personnel was varified, with particular reference to field representatives.

Discussion then returned to National Director's remaining items in his report. In reference to Items C and F, he told us about a discussion with Jim Farmer concerning the advisory board. It was suggested that the advisory board meet twice a year at their expense and make recommendations with J. Farmer's advice to be received and reviewed by NAC.

It was then suggested that a field representative be sent to Dayton where there are many problems, and the tension is high. It was felt that we do not have the manpower right now. Jim Williams moved that the North Central Region Action Council look into the possibility of forming a chapter and look into other steps that can resolve the problems.

Fund Raising was then discussed. Will Ussery made a poster asking that $1.00 be sent to the National Office. It was suggested that this poster be used also as a postage stamp and made available to youngsters. Mr. Ussery requested that he manage this progression and asked for control to work in accordance with the National Office.

A motion was made that Will Ussery be authorized to manage Black Power Poster Campaign for CORE in such a manner that it does not tap the regular income sources of the organization. Unanimously Carried.

J. McKissick

Discussion then returned to the Peace Ad with regard to following up. Mr. McKissick moved that:1) The Freedom National Bank be recipient from monies from the peace ad 2) That we seek other peace groups to run ad for us 3) In the event that the other peace groups do not run ad that we run this ad ourselves within the United States. This motion was carried unanimously.

A report received from Herb Callender was read. A motion was made that we commend Herb Callender for his efforts. (Bill Bradley) The motion was carried.

J. McKissick

The subject of Bob Lucas's activities came up. Following discussion it was decided to leave any move of commendation to our National Director. ?

A motion was made and seconded for adjournment. The National Chairman adjourned the meeting on September 11th at 5:45.

Respectfully submitted,

Bonnie Barrow

MR. JAMES FARMER
CHAIRMAN
CORE NATIONAL ADVISORY BOARD
165 PARK ROW
NEW YORK, N.Y.

DEAR JIM:

I REALLY SHOULD SAY "DEAR MR.CORE," FOR ALTHOUGH YOU HAVE LEFT US FOR MORE THAN A YEAR, YOUR INFLUENCE WITH AND IN THE ORGANIZATION IS AS STRONG AS EVER AND YOUR CONTINUED CONTRIBUTION TO OUR GROWTH AND THINKING CONTINUES TO BE HIGHLY PRIZED. ALTHOUGH YOU ARE STILL VERY MUCH A PART OF CORE, I FEEL IT IS INCUMBENT UPON ME TO OFFER YOU OUR SINCEREST THANKS FOR THE RECENT PARTICIPATION IN THE LEXINGTON CONFERENCE. ALTHOUGH THIS CONFERENCE WAS PARTICULARLY CORE AND IN THAT REGARD NOT THE BEST IN THE WORLD, YOUR AUTHORITATIVE AND KNOWLEDGEABLE PRESENTATION OPENED MANY AREAS WHICH ARE STILL BEING DISCUSSED.

IT GOES WITHOUT SAYING THAT WE DEEPLY APPRECIATE YOUR TAKING TIME OUT FROM YOUR HECTIC SCHEDULE TO EMPHASIZE TO US THAT YOUR TIES WITH THE ORGANIZATION ARE STRONG AND ENDURING.

I WANT ALSO TO OFFER YOU MY PERSONAL THANKS AND ALSO THAT OF THE SPARROWS POINT STEELWORKERS FOR JOINING US IN WASHINGTON ON MAY 26TH. THEY WERE VERY IMPRESSED THAT A PERSONALITY SUCH AS JAMES FARMER COULD TAKE TIME OUT FROM HIS SCHEDULE TO BE WITH THEM AND TO OFFER THEM THE SUPPORT OF HIS PERSON, TO SAY NOTHING OF HIS ELOQUENT PRESENTATION .

I KNOW YOU ARE AN EXTREMELY BUSY MAN BUT I AM ANXIOUSLY LOOKING FORWARD TO YOUR PAPER ON THE CORE STRUCTURE. IT IS MY FEELING THAT AT THIS YEAR'S CONVENTION IT WOULD BE INAPPROPRIATE AND IMPOLITIC TO PUSH FORWARD ANY RADICAL CHANGE IN OUR STRUCTURE NOW. AFTER CONSULTATION WITH A NUMBER OF PEOPLE, I FEEL THAT IT MIGHT BE NECESSARY FOR US TO PRESENT SOME FORM OF STRUCTURE WHICH WOULD BE STUDIED, COMMENTED UPON, AMENDED, ETC. AND THEN AT THE 1968 CONVENTION, TO MAKE THE NECESSARY CHANGES BASED UPON A SIX MONTHS STUDY. THIS WOULD INCLUDE A TWO YEAR CONVENTION AND ALL OF THE OTHER QUESTIONS WHICH YOU RAISED AT LEXINGTON AND WHICH WE ARE NOW THINKING OF.

I HOPE TO HEAR FROM YOU VERY SOON ON THIS MATTER. KINDEST PERSONAL REGARDS.

SINCERELY,

LINCOLN O.LYNCH

August 9, 1963

Miss Osceola Archer
42 West 120th Street
New York City

Dear Miss Archer:

For some time now, CORE has felt that we should form a cultural committee. The press of history has made it physically impossible for us to get around to this task until now. We do, however, feel that the cultural and intellectual community can provide a very important service in the civil rights movement generally, and to CORE in particular.

With this end in mind, would you attend a meeting in my office at 38 Park Row, New York City, on Thursday, August 22nd, at 6:00 o'clock. This meeting will be held as a serious effort to form the nucleus of a broad, self-sustaining cultural committee in support of CORE. I would appreciate it very much if you would phone my secretary, Miss Lubelsky (CO 7-6270), in order to let her know if you are able to attend.

Thank you very much.

Warmest regards,

James Farmer

Dear Mr. Rushing:

CORE has found it advisable to have an advisory committee which can do nothing but give advice. As a matter of policy, we try to keep the active control of the organization within the hands of the active members.

Consequently, the advisory committee is useful primarily for lending prestige to the organization. Many local CORE chapters have such advisory committees. They may include national figures in your community, religious leaders, civic and labor leaders, etc. There is an obvious advantage in having persons with money in such a committee. The national organization calls a meeting of its advisory committee possibly once a year. We also occasionally ask them for advice on a particular thing. For example, a committee of the advisory committee selects the recipient of the annual Gandhi Award. We occasionally use the advisory committee for fund raising and for speaking. Probably the cleanest kind of relationship to have with such a committee is one where they have no real rights within the organization and no real responsibilities.

Sincerely,

Syracuse CORE is considering the establishment of an advisory committee similar to the advisory committees of other local CORE chapters.

Would you be able to give us any advice on the purposes and functions of such a committee, and its position within the CORE group? We'd also like to know what type of people we should attempt to get for this advisory committee.

Thanks very much.

Mr. James B. Carey
1126 16th Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Carey:

CORE faces a time of both challenge and crisis. The passage of the new Voting Rights Bill offers the entire movement an opportunity to register hundreds of thousands of Negroes throughout the South. Of the nine counties designated by the Justice Department for immediate attention by federal re registrars, the three in Louisiana: East Carroll, East Feliciana, and Plaquemine, find CORE as the only active civil rights group. And in Madison County, Mississippi, CORE has been working for several years. In addition, there are major CORE voter registration programs going on in northern Florida, and South Carolina. Already this summer, in South Carolina alone, over 6000 Negroes have been registered in the counties where CORE is presently working.

The events of the past few days in Los Angeles and elsewhere point up the need for more, not less activity by the civil rights groups. Absolutely essential is the development of programs to meet the as yet unmet problems of the ghetto, as well as training in non-violent protest. It is my firm belief that unless such programmatic development takes place - and soon - we will find increasing hostility and tension in the ghetto communities throughout the nation. CORE chapters in many cities have begun digging deeply into the ghetto community and developing this kind of program.

We must meet this challenge; and we will meet it. But we need help. At a time when the opportunities for major civil breakthroughs are greater than ever before, CORE finds itself in desperate financial straits. Saddled with a debt of over a quarter of a million dollars, we are hamstrung at every turn.

I am calling an emergency meeting of the CORE National Advisory Committee for Thursday, Sept. 9, 1965, 4:00 PM, at the CORE office. I sincerely hope that you will be able to attend what is for us an essential meeting.

Sincerely yours,

James Farmer

Dear Jim;

I am very sorry that I wasn't able to attend the meeting of the Advisory Committee at CORE the other day. It was just impossible because there were anumber of people from Africa who were in town briefly and I just had to see them before they left. I know that the financial crisis for CORE is a very serious one. In as much as we're having to scrounge around for funds ourselves all the time, I don't know how much use I can be on this technically. I believe that we are changing lists with CORE every now and then and I believe that both of us have done reasonably well on this. If you have any ideas as to how I can be helpful to CORE however don't hesitate to get in touch with me. Within the limits of my time, I will be glad to do anything I can.

ThatThat was quite an interesting experience Lulu had the other day with those three boys. I hope that you have been able to recover most of the loss. I am sure that you did the right thing by not pressing charges.

Hope to see you soon.

Sincerely yours,

George

MINUTES OF NATIONAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE MEETING, JUNE 21,1967
575 LEXINGTON AVE., N.Y.,N.Y. (DAVID MCCALL'S OFFICE)

ATTENDING: JAMES FARMER, DAVID MCCALL, ALGERNON BLACK, GEORGE HOUSER, JOHN O.KILLENS, CHARLES P.HOWARD, NATHAN SCHWERNER.

STAFF: FLOYD B.MCKISSICK, RUTH TURNER, MARGE ROGATZ

THE MEETING WAS CALLED TO ORDER AT 10:45 A.M. BY CHAIRMAN JAMES FARMER. AFTER READING THE SUGGESTED AGENDA, MR.FARMER SUMMARIZED THE MINUTES OF THE LAST MEETING AND READ THE TEXT OF THE 25TH ANNIVERSARY CONGRATULATORY STATEMENT ADOPTED AT THE MEETING. THE MINUTES WERE ACCEPTED AS SUMMARIZED.

MR.MCKISSICK WAS THEN INTRODUCED TO GIVE THE NATIONAL DIRECTOR'S REPORT. HE FIRST DISCUSSED THE MAJOR POLITICAL ACTIVITIES IN WHICH THE NATIONAL OFFICE HAS BEEN ENGAGED SINCE JANUARY'S MEETING. ADAM POWELL'S CAMPAIGN AND HIS CURRENT SITUATION WERE DESCRIBED IN SOME DETAIL AND MR.FARMER REMINDED THE COMMITTEE OF THE RESOLUTION SUPPORTING POWELL ADOPTED AT THE LAST MEETING. AFTER REVIEW OF THE REASONS FOR CORE'S SUPPORT AND MORE DISCUSSION OF POWELL AS A SYMBOL FOR BLACK PEOPLE, MR.MCKISSICK WENT ON TO DESCRIBE THE WEST COAST BLACK CONFERENCE FORMED BY WILL USSERY AND OTHERS TO ACHIEVE A UNIFIED BLACK POLITICAL VOICE AND TO ENCOURAGE THE DEVELOPMENT OF CULTURAL TIES WITH AFRICA AND THE PRODUCTION OF BLACK WRITERS' WORKS.

CORE'S CONVENTION TOO, MR.MCKISSICK CONTINUED, WILL DEVOTE CONSIDERABLE TIME TO AFRICAN SPEAKERS AND AFRICAN ARTISTS. THE THEME OF THIS YEAR'S CONVENTION IS "BLACK POWER: BLUEPRINT FOR SURVIVAL" AND THE SIX POINTS OF CORE'S PROGRAM FOR BLACK POWER WILL BE THE FOCUS OF THE WORKSHOPS. BLACK ARTISTS INCLUDING JOHN O.KILLENS, LERONE BENNETT, LEROI JONES AND OTHERS WILL PARTICIPATE. THE MAYOR OF OAKLAND WILL WELCOME THE DELEGATES AND THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IS SUPPLYING MATERIALS AND PAYING FOR THE REGISTRARS. FUND RAISING AFFAIRS ARE SCHEDULED FOR EVERY DAY AND ALL WORKSHOPS AND LARGE MEETINGS WILL BE OPEN TO THE PUBLIC. MR.HOUSER SUGGESTED SEVERAL ADDITIONAL AFRICAN LEADERS WHO MIGHT BE ABLE TO PARTICIPATE IN THE CONVENTION. THE POSSIBILITY OF A CORE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION EARLY NEXT YEAR TO TIGHTEN THE ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE WAS MENTIONED BY MR.MCKISSICK.

CONTINUING TO DESCRIBE SOME OF CORE'S POLITICAL ACTIVITIES RECENTLY, THE NTIONAL DIRECTOR TOLD THE COMMITTEE OF WILLIAM CLAY'S CANDIDACY FOR CONGRESS FROM ST.LOUIS. MR.BLACK BROUGHT UP A QUESTION OF PARTICULAR INTEREST TO HIM: HOUSING AND EMPLOYMENT OUTSIDE THE GHETTO BY INDUSTRIES WHICH ARE NOW LOCATING IN SUBURBS AND HE SUGGESTED THAT THE CONVENTION EXPRESS ITSELF ON THIS PROBLEM. IN LOUISIANA, MR.MCKISSICK REPORTED, THERE HAS BEEN THE PROGRESS OF ELECTING BLACK SCHOOL BOARD CANDIDATES, BUT A RECENT SET-BACK HAS OCCURRED. THE O.E.O. AND THE AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT HAVE FUNDED A RIVAL COOPERATIVE RATHER THAN THE HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL GRAND MARIE VEGETABLE PRODUCERS COOPERATIVE ORGANIZED BY CORE FIELD SECRETARY JOHN ZIPPERT. THE COMPETITIVE GROUP WAS SET UP SIMPLY TO PUT GRAND MARIE OUT OF BUSINESS AND THE NATIONAL OFFICE HAS BEEN IN CONTACT WITH SHRIVER TO HOLD UP FUNDING UNTIL AN INVESTIGATION OF THE SITUATION IS COMPLETED. IN BROOKLYN, CORE IS FIGHTING FOR REAPPORTIONMENT TO OBTAIN BLACK REPRESENTATION IN CONGRESS FOR THE RESIDENTS OF BEDFORD-STUYVESANT. THE SUIT AGAINST THE PRESENT GERRYMANDERED DISTRICT IS NOW IN COURT. IN MARYLAND, MR.MCKISSICK REPORTED, CORE CANDIDATE LLOYD TAYLOR HAS BEEN ELECTED AS A DELEGATE FROM BALTIMORE TO THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION. TODAY, CORE'S POSITION ON NEW YORK STATE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION ISSUES IS BEING SET FORTH BY THE ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR IN ALBANY AT A CONVENTION COMMITTEE HEARING.

MR.MCKISSICK THEN CALLED UPON GEORGE HOUSER, WHO HAS JUST RETURNED FROM AFRICA, TO DESCRIBE THE JULY TWO-WEEK SEMINAR TO BE HELD IN DAR ES SALAAM IN WHICH CORE WILL PARTICIPATE. EIGHTY GOVERNMENTS HAVE BEEN INVITED TO SEND DELEGATES AND SEVERAL PRIVATE ORGANIZ-ATIONS INCLUDING CIVIL RIGHTS GROUPS AND OTHERS WHO HAVE AN ANTI-APARTHEID POSITION, HAVE BEEN INVITED TO OBSERVE AND PARTICIPATE. THE AFRICAN LIBERATION MOVEMENT, MR.HOUSER SAID, NEEDS THE ACTIVE PARTICIPATION AND SUPPORT OF MILITANT CIVIL RIGHTS LEADERS AT THE CONFERENCE, AND EMPHASIZING THE USEFULNESS OF CORE'S PRESENCE THERE, HE DESCRIBED THE "VIOLENT MOOD" OF THE LIBERATION MOVEMENT AND THEIR REALIZATION THAT THEY MUST "GO IT ALONE" WITHOUT THE HELP OF THE U.N., THE U.S. OR EVEN THE INDEPENDENT AFRICAN NATIONS. HE REITERATED THE IMPERATIVE NEED FOR CORE TO FAMILIARIZE ITSELF WITH THE ISSUES INVOLVED AND TO ENCOURAGE AFRICAN TIES, POLITICAL AND CULTURAL.

THE NATIONAL DIRECTOR THEN GAVE A FINANCIAL REPORT. HE POINTED OUT THE REDUCTION OF SUPPLIERS DEBTS THROUGH OBTAINING A $75,000 LOAN AND THROUGH CONVINCING A NUMBER OF CREDITORS TO ACCEPT 50% OF WHAT CORE HAS OWED THEM. THE PROPOSED BUDGET, HE EMPHASIZED, IS A VERY REALISTIC ONE. THE MEMBERSHIP DRIVE IS SCHEDULED TO BEGIN AT THE CONVENTION. WITHOUT THE ACCUMULATED DEBT HE SAID, CORE'S MONTHLY COMMITMENTS ARE CLEARLY WITHIN REACH AT THIS TIME. IT WAS POINTED OUT THAT THE NATIONAL STAFF ACROSS THE COUNTRY NOW TOTALS 25 PEOPLE, INCLUDING TASK FORCE WORKERS. MR.FARMER AND THE COMMITTEE MEMBERS ALL EXPRESSED THEIR ASTONISHMENT THAT SO FEW PEOPLE ARE ACHIEVING SO MUCH IN PROGRAM IMPLEMENTATION. MR.HOWARD EXPRESSED THE HOPE THAT CORE WOULD DO MORE TO RAISE MONEY FROM THE BLACK MIDDLE-CLASS AND BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL COMMUNITY. HE SAID CORE SHOULD ORGANIZE TO LAUNCH SUCH A DRIVE. MR.MCKISSICK EXPLAINED THAT OUR REDUCED STAFF HAS NOT HAD THE TIME TO DO THIS EFFECTIVELY NOR HAS HE HIMSELF HAD THE TIME OR MONEY TO MAKE THE NECESSARY PERSONAL CONTACTS ACROSS THE COUNTRY. THE NEWLY APPROVED TAX EXEMPT SPECIAL PURPOSE FUND WILL BE OF GREAT SIGNIFICANCE IN THIS EFFORT, AS WELL AS IN ALL OTHER FUND RAISING PROJECTS.

AFTER A BREAK FOR LUNCH, THE FINANCIAL REPORT WAS RESUMED. FOUNDATION GRANTS ARE BEING SOUGHT FROM FORD($320,000 FOR A TWO-YEAR CLEVELAND TARGET CITY PROJECT) AND OTHER PROPOSALS ARE AT THE FIELD AND TACONIC FOUNDATIONS. MR.HOWARD NOTED THAT THE NATIONAL DIRECTOR IS TO BE COMMENDED FOR DEVELOPING THE CORE SPECIAL PURPOSE FUND. THE FINANCIAL REPORT WAS ACCEPTED AS READ.

MR.MCKISSICK THEN SUMMARIZED THE ACTIVITIES OF THE STAFF TO IMPLEMENT THE SUGGESTIONS THE COMMITTEE MADE AT THE LAST MEETING. HE SAID THE FUND RAISING PROGRAM THAT WAS SEVELOPED INCLUDED THE FOLLOWING:

1. CONTINUOUS MAILINGS: THE BROTHERHOOD APPEAL IN MARCH WHICH WAS SIGNED BY FARMER AND RABBI LELYVELD, SPECIAL LETTERS FROM THE NATIONAL DIRECTOR TO BUSINESS AND LABOR LEADERS AND TO SPECIAL LISTS, AND THE PLANNED MAILINGS. THE HOLIDAY CARD MAILING TO 360,000 WILL BE OUT BY SEPTEMBER AND WILL INCLUDE ITEMS FOR SALE (SUCH AS KILLENS' NEW BOOK " 'SIPPI", CAKES AND SWEETS FROM THE LOUISIANA COOPERATIVE) AND WILL ALSO INCLUDE AN ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE CORE TAX EXEMPT SPECIAL PURPOSE FUND.

2. LOANS: THE SUCCESSFUL EFFORT TO OBTAIN A GUARANTEED $75,000 LOAN, AND CONTINUING EFFORTS IN THIS AREA.

3. THE SPECIAL PURPOSE FUND WAS GRANTED TAX EXEMPTION THIS MONTH.

4. FOUNDATIONS: THE $320,000 PROPOSAL FOR A CLEVELAND TARGET CITY PROJECT NOW BEING CONSIDERED BY FORD AND THE OTHER PROPOSALS (AN ADMINISTRATIVE GRANT, A FREEDOM SCHOOLS PROPOSAL AND A TRAINING PROGRAM PROPOSAL) SUBMITTED TO VARIOUS OTHER FOUNDATIONS. THE RABINOWITZ FOUNDATION HELPED TO SUPPORT THE CORE WEEK-END LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE HELD IN LEXINGTON,KENTUCKY IN MAY.

5. THE SPECIAL EVENTS COMMITTEE: CHAIRED BY CLORA COLEMAN, THIS GROUP OF PREDOMINANTLY MIDDLE-CLASS BLACK WOMEN HELD A SUCCESSFUL COCKTAIL PARTY AND A BOOK PARTY(COMMEMORATING THE PUBLICATION OF JOHN O.KILLENS NEW BOOK " 'SIPPI"). IT IS NOW PLANNING A LAWN PARTY TO BE HELD IN JULY.

MR.MCKISSICK EXPRESSED SPECIAL THANKS TO MR.FARMER, MR.MCCALL, MR.KILLENS, RABBI LELYVELD, MR.FAIN AND MR.SCHWERNER FOR THEIR INDIVIDUAL EFFORTS IN THESE FUND RAISING ACTIVITIES.

A DISCUSSION THEN ENSUED ABOUT THE LACK OF MOST UNION SUPPORT IN THE LAST FEW YEARS AND THE NEED FOR APPROACHING THE UNIONS AGAIN. MR.MCKISSICK POINTED OUT THAT THE SPECIAL PURPOSE FUND WITH ITS TAX EXEMPT STATUS, MAKES CORE THE ONLY RIGHTS ORGANIZATION OTHER THAN THE NAACP TO HAVE A TAX EXEMPT ARM. THE FUND CAN BE USED TO STRENGHTHEN CORE IN THE FOLLOWING WAYS, HE SAID: FIRST, A SEPARATE STRUCTURE AND SEPARATE BOOKS MUST BE SET UP AND THEN IT CAN BE USED FOR ANY EDUCATIONAL AND CHARITABLE PROJECTS, SUCH AS TRAINING. IT CAN ALSO BE USED TO PAY A PORTION OF THE DIRECTOR'S AND ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR'S SALARY AND THAT OF SOME STAFF MEMBERS. CORE CAN ALSO HIRE A TRAINING DIRECTOR, BOOKKEEPER, PROGRAM DEVELOPER, CPA AND CLERICAL HELP. THE SAME OFFICE SPACE CAN BE USED BY THE NATIONAL OFFICE AND THE FUND, ALLOCATING A CERTAIN PROPORTION TO THE FUND. CORE CAN HAVE AS MANY PEOPLE ON THE FUND PAYROLL(8 OR 9) AS ON THE NATIONAL STAFF. IN ADDITION, HE SAID, CORE CAN HIRE A PERSON TO DEVELOP COOPERATIVES AND ALSO SOMEONE TO WORK FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT (NOT LAW ENACTMENT). WHEN CORE HAS SUFFICIENT FUNDS, WE CAN ALSO HAVE A PROFESSIONAL FUND RAISING PERSON AND A FULL-TIME LAWYER WHICH WOULD FREE THE NATIONAL DIRECTOR FROM DUTIES WHICH NOW TAKE ALMOST 80% OF HIS TIME.

MR.MCKISSICK THEN WENT ON TO DESCRIBE THE RECENT MEETING IN SUFFERN, N.Y., OF THE MAJOR CIVIL RIGHTS LEADERS AND THEIR DECISION TO CO-ORDINATE EFFORTS IN CLEVELAND THIS SUMMER. RUTH TURNER GAVE A SUMMARY OF FIELD ACTIVITIES. BALTIMORE, SHE REPORTED, IS BECOMING MORE AND MORE A LOCAL COMMUNITY EFFORT DIRECTED BY THE BALTIMORE CORE CHAPTER. SHE DESCRIBED THE CURRENT SUCCESSFUL CAMPAIGN BY THE MARYLAND FREEDOM UNION AT JOHNS HOPKINS AND THE RECENT CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION CAMPAIGN. IN THE WEST, AN ADDITIONAL FIELD SECRETARY HAS BEEN ASSIGNED AND THE NATIONAL OFFICE EXPECTS THE OAKLAND CONVENTION TO REJUVENATE THE 30 CHAPTERS ON THE WEST COAST. ALSO, THE WEST COAST BLACK CONFERENCE WITH 1000 MEMBERS IS EXPECTED TO AFFILIATE WITH CORE. IN THE MID-WEST, SHE SAID, TONY PEROT HAS HEADED THE CLEVELAND PROJECT PREPARATION AND CORE NOW HAS A TASK FORCE WORKER IN ST.LOUIS. A GROUP OF COMMUNITY PEOPLE IN SAGINAW, MICHIGAN HAVE RECENTLY HIRED A CORE TASK FORCE WORKER. THE NORTHEAST HAS MANY CHAPTERS BUT TOO FEW FIELD STAFF, SHE SAID. IN THE SOUTH, THE FIELD STAFF HAVE ORGANIZED THE LOUISIANA SWEET POTATO COOPERATIVE AND DIRECTED MANY POLITICAL ACTION CAMPAIGNS AND VOTER REGISTRATION. FIELD SECRETARY GEORGE RAYMOND IS RUNNING FOR STATE ASSEMBLY FROM THE 4TH DISTRICT INCLUDING CANTON.

NAT SCHWERNER BROUGHT UP THE NEED FOR CORE TO FIND WOMEN VOLUNTEERS SIMILAR TO THOSE WHO WORK REGULARLY FOR SNCC. MR.MCKISSICK NOTED THAT VOLUNTEERS HAVE WORKED IN BOOKKEEPING AND IN THE MAILING DEPARTMENT AND ALSO THAT FORMER STAFF MEMBERS CONTINUE TO VOLUNTEER THEIR SERVICES. HOWEVER, CORE NEEDS MORE STAFF JUST TO SUPERVISE VOLUNTEERS, HE SAID. THE SPECIAL EVENTS COMMITTEE WILL HOPEFULLY PROVIDE SOME VOLUNTEERS SHORTLY.

MR.FARMER SUGGESTED THAT ALL ADVISORY COMMITTEE MEMBERS SEND OUT HOLIDAY CARD BROCHURES TO THEIR FRIENDS, ORGANIZATIONS, ETC. IT WAS DECIDED THAT A LETTER FROM HIM TO THAT EFFECT WOULD BE SENT TO ALL COMMITTEE MEMBERS.

THE COMMITTEE THANKED DAVE MCCALL FOR HIS HOSPITALITY AND ADJOURNED AT 3:00 P.M.

RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED,

MARGE ROGATZ

President Kennedy sent NCDH one of the pens used to sign the Executive Order. In a letter to NCDH President Charles Abrams, he said he was aware of the contribution of NCDH in connection with the Order.

TO: NCDH Board of Directors, Advisory Council, and Friends

Return to F.L.

FROM: Frances Levenson, Director

Attached for your information are two items:

1) An analysis of the President's Order barring discrimination in federally-assisted housing programs, which includes the first rules adopted by FHA. Urban Renewal Administration and Public Housing Administration rules are referred to in "Observations" below.
2) A pamphlet, Federal, State and Local Action Affecting Race and Housing, prepared for the Princeton conference of real estate industry leaders and intergroup relations technicians, jointly sponsored by the National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials and the National Housing Center.

On behalf of the 37 organizations which form NCDH, and in line with instructions from the Board at its November 8th meeting, the following statement was issued by Algernon D. Black, Chairman of the Board, and Charles Abrams, NCDH President, the day after President Kennedy issued the Order:

> The President's Order banning discrimination in federally-aided housing is an important gain in principle. It is also a vital first step toward equal opportunity in access to shelter. The Executive Department has embraced what should long have been an accepted constitutional obligation - that the Federal Government may not discriminate nor tolerate discrimination in dispensing Federal aid.
> While enforcing compliance with civil rights by states, it was bound to set the same standard in its own house.
> We welcome the advance and congratulate President Kennedy.
> The Executive Order will be an important gain in practice as well as principle if the implementing rules and regulations are broad enough to carry out the full spirit of the Order.
> The advance, however, is far from complete. The Order fails to embrace existing housing even if such housing is federally-assisted. In failing to cover loans by federally-aided savings and loan associations and other similar institutions, it fails to protect against discriminatory practices by these lenders.
> As presently written, the Order applies at best to only 25% of new housing and not at all to existing housing.
> These are definite gaps, but they can be filled by an early enlargement of the scope of the Order. Experience, in fact, shows that the broader the scope of anti-bias measures, the fairer to all concerned and the more effective.

2--Executive Order Statement

Savings and loan associations that are members of the Federal Home Loan Bank System in 1961 held mortgages of almost $60,000,000,000. They are chartered, supervised, regulated and insured by the Federal Government, as well as being the beneficiaries of Federal loans.

As a matter of fact, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which charters these institutions, last year announced a nondiscrimination policy. We call upon the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing to see to it that this policy is implemented.

The Federal Order embodies protections which have already been afforded to 65 million people by eleven state laws. Housing production has not been retarded by these laws - nor will it be retarded by the Order.

OBSERVATIONS ON PRESIDENT'S EXECUTIVE ORDER (See attachment for full analysis)

Operative Date. In general, the Order covers all housing provided with Federal aid after November 20, 1962. In the present transition stage, at what point in the application process the Order goes into effect varies from program to program.

Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration. The Order applies to all applications for commitments received and "time stamped" in the local FHA or VA office November 21 and thereafter. FHA enters the picture with either a subdivision of "feasibility" approval in the early stages of development planning, or grants a commitment to insure a certain number of homes at a later stage. Under the agencies' rules, certain houses in an FHA- or VA-approved subdivision may be covered, whereas others in the same subdivision may not be. For example, if the builder received FHA commitments prior to November 20 on half of the houses he plans for the tract, those houses are not covered. If he applies for commitment for the balance of the houses on the same tract after November 21, they are covered, regardless of earlier FHA- or VA-subdivision approval.

From now on, the Order will go into effect as soon as a builder goes to an FHA office to ask for approval or a determination of "feasibility" of any aspect of the development. (FHA and VA approvals are interchangeable.) Houses eligible for FHA insurance may or may not advertise as such. Best informed opinion is that with the exception of some few localities, the subdivision developer -i.e., the speculative builder who builds, for example, ten or more homes - needs to be able to say that his homes are eligible for FHA or VA guarantees to market them seucessuflly. In most localities, FHA or VA means lower down payments and longer mortgage terms.

For program purposes, all groups should assume that all new subdivisions are FHA or VA, on the chance that they are. Complaints should be lodged with the local FHA or VA insuring office director. Appeals can then be taken up to the Commissioner. (A list of FHA's 76 insuring offices available from NCDH.)

We are studying the applicability of the Order to the over 500,000 units of existing FHA apartments and co-ops (Sections 608, 207, and 213). We expect to suggest specific ways in which FHA may operate to move these owners to open occupancy.

Urban Renewal. All developments which had not had the "loan and grant" finally executed by November 20 are covered. All new housing on an urban renewal site must be available to all without regard to race.

3--Executive Order Statement

The URA regulations prohibit "discrimination because of race, color, creed, or national origin in the sale, leasing, rental, or other disposition of affected real property, or in the use of such property." They affect not only housing and other types of residential construction in project areas, but also related facilities such as certain kinds of commercial establishments and publicly-owned facilities of all kinds.

The regulations also include a new policy with regard to non-cash local grants-in-aid. These are credits which a city may receive to offset its share of urban renewal costs because of facilities supplied by the city which support the project. The new policy requires such facilities to be open without discrimination to all residents of the renewal area.

The regulations require that all contracts and deeds entered into in connection with a covered project must contain an affirmative open occupancy covenant which runs with the land.

The open question with regard to urban renewal is the applicability of the Order to site selection and relocation. NCDH is studying the situation and expects to come up with specific recommendations. At this point, the rules and recommendations of URA do not interpret the Order as applying in any way to either site selection or relocation.

Public Housing. The Order requires open occupancy in all low-rent projects for which contracts for annual contributions of Federal funds were not authorized for execution before November 21. Projects under preliminary loan contract are covered. PHA estimated that approximately 70,000 units of the 100,000 units authorized by the Housing Act of 1961 are affected. Many anomalies exist in this program with regard to the different rules that apply to existing and new housing. This is an area where litigation most certainly will be necessary. NCDH plans to convene a legal group to look into this situation in detail.

Enforcement. It is clear, by the terms of the Order and the statements of Federal officials, that enforcement of the Order is the responsibility of the operating agencies and of operating personnel. Intergroup relations officers in the housing agencies will be used for education, persuasion, and to assist and service complying builders, community organizations and operating personnel who have enforcement responsibility. In addition to the existing intergroup relations staff in PHA, FHA, and URA, in the very near future assistants for intergroup relations will be appointed to the six regional offices of the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

The President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing is, in effect, the overall "watchdog." The public members have not yet been appointed. It is expected that the real responsibility will reside in the executive committee, composed of the Chairman and two public members. The Chairman is to be a full-time member of the President's staff.

The Order, with its limited coverage, emphasizes the need for:

1) Continued pressure on the White House to enlarge the scope of the Order.

2) Insistence that the operating agencies interpret the Order broadly and carry out its spirit as well as its letter.

3) More and broader state and local fair housing legislation.

BOARD MEETING NOTICE

There will be a meeting of the National Board on Tuesday, June 25th, at 2:30 p.m., at the new Episcopal Church Center, 815 Second Avenue (corner of 43rd Street), New York City. The purpose of the meeting is to develop significant program follow-up to our very successful Washington conference, particularly with reference to the Executive Order and its implementation.

It is important that before summer vacations intervene, real steps be taken to breathe some life into the Order, as well as to lay plans to press for its expansion.

The general reaction to our Washington conference has been extremely good. Nearly 400 persons from 100 communities in 25 states attended the sessions, and the many enthusiastic comments we have received since have been most gratifying.

A summary of the proceedings is being prepared and will be sent to you shortly.

In preparation for the Board meeting, I am enclosing a copy of the press statement on the Executive Order released at the conference. Since that time, two steps recommended in it were taken:

1) Public members of the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing have been appointed; and

2) FHA is making available lists of applications for commitments.

The other basic charges and recommendations remain valid.

STATEMENT REGARDING IMPLEMENTATION OF THE EXECUTIVE ORDER BARRING DISCRIMINATION IN FEDERALLY AIDED HOUSING

Algernon D. Black, chairman of the board, National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing;
James Farmer, national director, Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) Roy Wilkins, executive secretary, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP); and Whitney Young, Jr., executive director, National Urban League

More than five months have now elapsed since President John F. Kennedy, on November 20, 1962, issued Executive Order No. 11063, entitled "Equal Opportunity in Housing." The signers of this statement shared with millions of Americans a sense of gratification at this first step toward fulfillment of one of the nation's basic moral commitments.

We indicated when it was issued that the Executive Order is far narrower in scope than is required if it is to accomplish its stated goal. Nonetheless, if energetically and imaginatively implemented, we feel it can aid considerably in modifying the widespread patterns of residential segregation for which past Government policies bear so much of the responsibility.

On the record to date, however, we are forced to conclude that neither the broad spirit nor the limited letter of the Order is being made a reality. Among the more critical deficiencies in implementation of the housing mandate are the following:

1. The Order charges the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing with a broad range of responsibilities. It is directed to coordinate and review the activities of the affected Federal agencies; to carry on a broad public educational program; and to recommend general policies and implementation procedures.

Yet, after almost half a year, the committee has not been formally organized. Its chairman-director has been appointed, but the public members have not. Its executive committee, which will be its operating arm, has not been set up. It has developed no staff. It has no budget.

2. Neither the Federal housing agencies nor the President's Committee has undertaken any vital public or internal information and educational programs. The individual American citizen does not know his rights under this directive; the builders, the lenders, and the brokers are not sure what is required of them.

Even with respect to future construction to which the order applies, the rights of the individual have not been made clear. What are his rights to review of a decision which he considers unsatisfactory? Can he appeal to the President's Committee: If so, what procedures must he follow?

In many areas, it is impossible to learn exactly what housing is covered by the order, despite the fact that procedures to make this information available to the public were worked out years ago in New York on aFederal-State cooperative basis.

3. Under the so-called "good offices" section, the Federal agencies are directed "to use their good offices and to take other appropriate action permitted by law, including the institution of appropriate litigation, if required, to promote the abandonment of discriminatory practices" in existing federally-aided housing.

At this point, the "good offices" provision appears to be almost a dead letter. There is no indication that serious exploration of ways in which it might be used effectively is being undertaken. It is disturbing that the first complaint to be filed under the Executive order was dismissed by FHA, without real review by the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing. This was a case of symbolic significance, involving one of the country's largest builders of housing.

4. During recent years, departments and agencies throughout the Federal establishment have recognized the vital importance of dynamic intergroup relations programs and have given priority to the creation or expansion of services to perform this function. The Federal housing agencies have long had an intergroup relations service -- yet, at its most opportune time in history to make a far-reaching and lasting impact, this service is being under-utilized and is not being used to its full potential.

Twelve years ago, the national organizations with which we are associated played leading roles among the group of religious, civil rights, labor, and civic agencies which initiated the movement for a Presidential order banning discrimination in federally-aided housing. An order has now been issued. It should be put into effect.

Anything which suggests that the Government's interest is less than vigorous will reduce the potential effect of its action.

We respectfully call upon President Kennedy to appoint the public members to the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing without further delay.

We call upon the President's Committee to make immediate staff appointments; to establish an executive committee and put it to work; to review all activities of the Federal agencies affected by the order; and to establish an appeal procedure for cases filed with the individual agencies.

We call upon the federal agencies involved in housing to embark now upon serious, vigorous, imaginative programs of implementation, encompassing information to the public and the housing industry, as well as education of their own staffs, both in Washington and in the field.

We further call upon the Federal housing agencies to fully involve their intergroup relations service and to use it effectively at the policy-making level.

We call upon the Attorney General's office to move forward on a considered program of litigation under the order.

We call upon the President's Committee to initiate at once a broad national information program, in close cooperation with "civic, educational, religious, industry, labor, and other nongovernmental groups" -- to quote from the order -- so that the general public and the housing industry may be made aware of their rights and their obligations under the terms of this mandate.

The time is long overdue for the Executive Order on Equal Opportunity in Housing to come alive.

Dear Mr. Farmer:

Governor Herbert H. Lehman and Mr. A. Philip Randolph will be honored by the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing at a champagne supper party at the home of Marietta Tree on December 12th.

The purpose of this gala affair is two-fold: to pay tribute to these two great pioneers in the civil rights struggle; and to make it possible for NCDH to intensify its efforts for equal opportunity in housing.

During the critical months ahead, we must concentrate on making our new fair housing laws and the President's Executive Order a working reality in communities throughout the country.

Because we believe you share our deep respect for these two great men and what they mean to the movement for human rights, we are asking you to join a group of prominent citizens whose names will be listed on the invitation as sponsors of this occasion.

Since the invitations must go to press by November 15th, may we request your early response? And, may we look forward to having you with us at the party on December 12?

Sincerely,

NATIONAL COMMITTEE AGAINST DISCRIMINATION IN HOUSING
323 Lexington Avenue
New York, New York 10016

STATEMENT AND RECOMMENDATIONS
ON EXECUTIVE ORDER NO. 11063,
PROHIBITING DISCRIMINATION IN FEDERALLY-ASSISTED HOUSING

It has become imperative that Americans accept and put into practice what their Constitution requires. Nowhere is this more crucial than in the nation's housing market operations.

Today, in the very eye of the storm of the Negro Revolution, the racial ghetto stands -- largely unassailed -- as the rock upon which rests the pattern of segregated living which pervades and vitiates almost every phase of Negro life and Negro-white relationships.

Housing segregation is tied directly to slums and slum conditions, to segregated schools, to inequities in employment, to the poverty which haunts millions of Negro Americans and other minorities. It produces ripe breeding ground for extremist groups -- black and white, rabble-rousers and unscrupulous politicians. The ghetto gives birth to frustration, dispair and bitterness; it is teeming with the constant threat of racial conflict.

At this crucial period in history, a restricted housing market is dividing our nation and is crippling the effort of responsible government and private leadership to achieve the goal of equal opportunity to which we as a nation are committed.

The Federal Government has an inescapable responsibility to rectify this situation. The nation's courts, in a long history of decisions, have affirmed the unconstitutionality of racial restrictions in housing. The Congress, in its historic enactment of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, gave legislative reinforcement to our national commitment to equality of opportunity.

It remains the responsibility of the Executive Branch of the Government, however, to complete the task of prohibiting discrimination in federally-assisted housing which it set out to accomplish in 1962.

Tomorrow, November 20, 1964, marks the second anniversary of the signing of Executive Order No. 11063, entitled, "Equal Opportunity in Housing." This historic action sought to eliminate long-standing inequities in housing and to establish a sound basis upon which could be erected complete equality of opportunity for all American citizens to enjoy access to shelter without restrictions based on race, creed or national origin. The issuance of this mandate was a landmark in the nation's history. For the first time, an official policy against housing discrimination was enunciated by that branch of the Federal Government which executes the laws.

However, it must be clearly recognized that the Order was merely a first step in the right direction. As it presently stands, it can never achieve its expressed goals.

Fundamentally, the Order sought to insure that benefits of housing which result directly or indirectly from Federal financial assistance be available to all Americans without regard to their race, color, creed or national origin. In actuality, however, two major types of housing which clearly meet such qualifications were omitted from the Order's coverage. These two omissions limited its reach to less than 25 per cent of that part of the nation's housing supply which is affected by Federal financial assistance or support. It is in these operations, primarily, that discriminatory housing practices and policies continue to prevail on a widespread basis.

Federally Supervised Mortgage Lending Institutions

A major inadequacy of Executive Order 11063 is that federally-supervised banks and mortgage-lending institutions are affected only to the extent that they engage in FHA and VA loans. The failure to cover this vital area of mortgage financing creates a gap of immunity which shields and nurtures a wide and growing array of discriminatory practices in the housing market place. The institutions which were omitted are commercial banks, mutual savings banks and savings and loan associations. They command in the aggregate more than $400 billion in resources, and it is through their facilities that most of the nation's home financing is done. These institutions, which are a major source of "conventional" mortgages, are subject to regulation and control by the following agencies of the Federal Government:

Banks

Comptroller of the Currency. Charters and supervises all the 4513 national banks. These banks have been described by the courts as "instrumentalities of the Federal Government."

Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. Supervises all member banks of the Federal Reserve System including the national banks above plus 1600 of the state-chartered banks which voluntarily participate.

Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Supervises all national banks and state-chartered Federal Reserve System member banks plus all state-chartered non-member banks insured by FDIC.

Savings and Loan Associations

Federal Home Loan Bank Board. Charters and supervises all the 1906 Federal savings and loan associations.

Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. FSLIC, an agency of the FHLBB, insures the accounts of all Federal savings and loan associations and more than half of the 4452 state-chartered savings and loan associations.

Federal Home Loan Bank System. Supervises all member banks of the FHLBB, all state-chartered savings and loans insured by FSLIC, plus additional non-insured associations.

In the banking community, FDIC thus achieves the broadest reach of Federal supervision and control. Similarly, among savings and loan associations the broadest supervision is held by the FHLBS.

The simple fact is that, in a large part of the nation's housing market which is profoundly affected by the operations of Federal agencies, discrimination is still practiced without restraint. The Federal Government has a clear responsibility, under the Constitution, to put an end to this scandalous situation. In order to obtain effective coverage of federally-supervised banks and mortgage institutions, the Executive Order should therefore be extended to include all FDIC-insured banks and all FHLBS member associations.

failure to require a policy of nondiscrimination in federally-aided housing contracted for prior to November 20, 1962. This serious shortcoming permits a major segment of the nation's housing supply to continue operations in the very same discriminatory manner that originally necessitated the issuance of the Order. There appears to be no logical or legal basis to support the principle that a constitutional requirement of nondiscrimination is applicable to new federally-assisted projects but is inapplicable to old ones. Indeed, Title VI of the newly-enacted Civil Rights Act of 1964 strongly reinforces the principle that "no person in the United States shall, on the ground of race, color, or national origin, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance."

While it is true that Section 102 of the Order directs executive departments and agencies to use their good offices and take other appropriate action to end discriminatory practices in existing federally-aided housing, the fact remains that the experience of the last two years shows that this falls far short of the mandatory provision affecting future contracts.

The enormous supply of housing built with Federal assistance during the 25-year period preceding the Executive Order must be brought within the purview of the Order and made available to all Americans without regard to race, color, creed or national origin.

RECOMMENDATIONS

respectfully urges President Johnson to amend Executive Order No. 11063 as follows:

1. To prohibit discriminatory practices in mortgage loans by all banks and lending institutions which are subject in any manner to regulation, supervision or control by an agency of the Federal Government.
2. To cover all federally-aided housing which was built or contracted for prior to November 20, 1962, and which continues to enjoy Federal assistance.

In addition to the foregoing recommendations dealing with the substance of the Order, the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing also urges action on the following administrative matters:

1. The procedural power provided various Federal housing agencies to grant exemptions from the scope of the Order should be withdrawn. Under this power FHA has excluded the resale of single family homes. This exemption vitiates the reach of the Order and minimizes its effectiveness.
2. The President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing should be directed to assume broader responsibility for the implementation of the Order and should be provided with sufficient staff and budget expansion to administer an effective, national program.

Dear Jim:

Immediately after the November 3rd Election results were tabulated, revealing that initiative and referenda campaigns in California and Akron, Ohio had, in effect, nullified existing fair housing laws, the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing (NCDH) moved to initiate a series of program activities which would give maximum assistance to the housing/civil rights movement.

On February 5 and 6, the NCDH in co-sponsorship with the University of California Law School in Berkeley held a National Legal Conference on Equal Opportunity in Housing in Berkeley, California. The purpose of the conference was to provide a forum at which some of the nation's leading scholars and practitioners of law could examine the constitutionality of anti-fair housing referenda and discuss the legality of other actions which impede the achievement of equal opportunity in housing. A copy of the program of the National Legal Conference is enclosed.

As you probably know, we extended an invitation to Carl Rachlin, however, it was not possible for him to attend. I am sending kits to Carl and George Wiley and I will forward copies of the full report to them as soon as it is available. All of the sessions, by the way, were taped and a comprehensive report containing the papers and reflecting the discussions is being prepared. A copy of this also will be forwarded to you as soon as it is completed.

Another program activity agreed upon was a nationwide campaign to seek an expansion of the Executive Order on Housing. The Executive Order is not subject to popular referendum. Moreover, it seems fairly obvious that the spread of anti-fair housing referenda would be blunted if the Order were extended to prohibit discrimination by federally-aided banks dealing in the conventional mortgage market.

In this connection, we have prepared a memorandum on the extension of the Order (copy enclosed) and we are awaiting response to our request for a meeting with President Johnson or Vice President Humphrey. Charles Abrams, Al Black and Edward Rutledge join me in expressing the hope that you will find it convenient in the midst of your heavy calendar to attend this meeting and thus kick off a national campaign of far-reaching importance. In addition to the foregoing persons and yourself, we also are inviting Roy Wilkins and Whitney Young. We will be in touch with you as soon as we receive some dates from Washington.

Meanwhile, it has been much too long since we have had a chance simply to sit down and talk. In this connection, Ed and I would like to meet with you sometime soon and get the benefit of your thinking regarding both the NCDH program and ways in which we can be of greater service to CORE. Perhaps you can have your secretary call me and arrange a lunch date or some other time suitable to you.

With kindest personal regards,

Sincerely,

Jack

We are pleased to send you a report of NCDH's national survey of 1965 fair housing and related measures which have been introduced or are scheduled for introduction in state legislatures across the country. Also enclosed is a copy of a press release based on the survey. A similar roundup will be issued at the close of this year's legislative sessions.

In light of the serious threat posed by the real estate lobby's nationwide drive for referenda to repeal or prevent legislation designed to protect equal opportunity in housing, it seems to us particularly significant that the number of states - a total of 18 - involved in campaigns for new fair housing laws or for strengthening amendments to existing statutes sets a new record this year.

It is especially gratifying that Indiana has joined the fair housing roster of states with passage of a new law covering the private housing market. Also, that an effort to take the issue to a referendum was overwhelmingly defeated in the lower House of the Legislature.

As part of NCDH's information services, we undertake to keep groups and key individuals working for the enactment of fair housing measures over the country advised throughout the legislative sessions of important developments in other states where similar campaigns are being waged. This report and earlier spot information has, of course, been rushed to them.

Also, a digest of the survey will be carried in the upcoming issue of TRENDS IN HOUSING which is now on the press.

March 13, 1965

Indiana has become the first state in the nation to adopt a fair housing law during 1965, and efforts to secure legislation dealing with housing discrimination are underway in 16 additional states, according to a nationwide survey just released by the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing. The committee reports that the number of states involved in drives for legislation in this field is setting a new record in 1965. In 1963, campaigns were waged in 10 states.

The new Indiana law was overwhelmingly approved by the State Legislature after an effort to take the issue to a referendum was struck down in the House of Representatives. The fair housing bill passed in the House by a vote of 86 to 10, and in the Senate by 47 to 2. It was signed into law by Democratic Governor Roger Branigin on March 9.

"The good judgment of the Indiana Legislature and the approval of Governor Branigin are especially heartening at this time when all thoughful Americans are deeply troubled about the cruel and wanton violation of human rights by the Governor and officials of another state in our country," NCDH Executive Director Edward Rutledge told the press. "While nothing will erase the horror of the situation in Alabama, the State of Indiana has served not only her own people but the entire nation by her enlightened action. We call upon the governors and legislators of other states to join Indiana in recognizing that housing lies at the very root of the civil rights struggle in our nation, and to establish, by law, the right of every citizen to have equal opportunity in securing a home for his family."

Referendum Motion

The motion in the lower House to take the question of fair housing legislation to a vote of the Indiana electorate was defeated by a vote of 75 to 18. Arguments against submitting the issue to a popular vote included such statements as: "If Abraham Lincoln had put the Emancipation Proclamation to a referendum, it would have been defeated." ... "No tax bill would be approved in a referendum." ... "The proper place to act on legislation is in this legislative chamber."

Mr. Rutledge congratulated the lawmakers on their refusal to involve the issue in an election campaign. "We are extremely gratified," he said, "that the Indiana House of Representatives refused to subject this state to the increased tension, the hysteria, the distortions and the divisive tactics which the real estate lobby inflicted on the people of California and several cities over the country. The Indiana Legislators used reason and good sense in looking at the experience of 17 states and many cities. It has been proved beyond question that those who really believe in a system of equal opportunity have nothing to fear or lose, and much to gain, from fair housing legislation."

The Indiana fair housing law, which will go into operation in July 1965, will cover all sales and rentals of both commercial and residential property, including vacant land. It will apply to all transactions handled by real estate brokers, salesmen and mortgage lenders, as well as to real estate advertising. It does, however, carry a new type of exemption which provides that the Indiana Civil Rights Commission, which will enforce the statute, cannot issue cease and desist orders against owner-occupants of buildings with three or less units. Thus, if a complaint against an owner-occupant of a single-family, two-family, or three-family house is found to be valid, the Commission's efforts to adjust the matter will be limited to persuasion and conciliation.

Indiana had previously prohibited discrimination in public housing and urban renewal projects.

Other States

New laws to prohibit discrimination in the private housing market are being sought in nine additional states: Delaware, Illinois, Kansas, Maryland, Nebraska, Ohio, Rhode Island, Utah and Washington. Also, campaigns are underway to strengthen existing fair housing statutes in seven states: Colorado, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania.

On the other side, bills have been introduced in the states of Arkansas, Georgia, Nevada, Rhode Island, Texas and Washington which would take the issue of fair housing legislation to a referendum. And last month, a fair housing bill was defeated by the New Mexico Legislature.

Mr. Rutledge points out that the NCDH legislative survey reveals a marked trend this year to press for enactment of new fair housing laws which will "start off" with broad coverage of the housing supply. In most states the measures which are being proposed would apply to all sales of residential property and to almost all rental accommodations, as a rule exempting only the rental of apartments in owner-occupied two-family houses and rooms in private residences.

"Experience has shown that comprehensive nondiscrimination laws which apply to substantially the total housing market are not only the most effective, but are much more widely accepted," he said. "In a number of states, members of the real estate industry, as well as civil rights groups, have urged that limited statutes be expanded to put all suppliers of housing on the same basis."

Mr. Rutledge said that the National Committee and its member organizations are continuing to urge President Johnson to recognize the same need for broader coverage under the Executive Order barring discrimination in federally-aided housing which was issued by President Kennedy in 1962. The committee and its affiliates are spearheading the campaign for extension of the Order to cover all existing federally-aided housing and all mortgage lending institutions which are supervised by the Federal Government.

"The present limited Order simply will not accomplish its stated objectives," he declared. "Furthermore, as it stands it pleases no one -- neither those who are working in the civil rights movements nor members of the real estate industry. Important representatives of the industry, including the president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, the Baltimore Real Estate Board, the Home Builders Association of Greater St. Louis, builder William J. Levitt, and many other members of the industry, have called for its expansion."

"We believe the President is dedicated to building the Great Society," Mr. Rutledge continued. "We believe he will recognize that this cannot be accomplished unless the full power of government is used to end racial discrimination in housing and the evils of the racial ghetto. We believe he will extend the Executive Order on housing because it is the right and practical thing to do."

Mr. Rutledge said 18 states, the District of Columbia, the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico and 34 cities in the United States have legislation which prohibits discrimination in housing. Most of the laws and ordinances now on the books apply to both government-aided and privately-financed housing.

The National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing is an affiliation of 37 major religious, civil rights, labor and civic organizations, with headquarters at 323 Lexington Avenue, New York City.

1965 SURVEY OF STATE LEGISLATIVE ACTIVITIES

AFFECTING DISCRIMINATION IN HOUSING

(As of March 10, 1965)

NEW PRIVATE HOUSING MEASURES

1. Indiana. On March 9, 1965, Democratic Governor Roger Branigin signed the first state fair housing law enacted this year. The measure, which will become effective in July 1965, will apply to both residential and commercial property. It will cover all sales, including vacant land, and all rental accommodations. However, it carries a new type of exemption which provides that the Indiana Civil Rights Commission, which will enforce the statute, cannot issue cease and desist orders against owner-occupants of buildings with three or less dwelling units. Thus, when a complaint is filed against the owner-occupant of a single-family, two-family, or three-family house, and the owner-occupant is found to have committed a discriminatory act, the Commission's efforts to adjust the matter will be limited to persuasion and conciliation. This limitation in enforcement powers applies only to owner-occupants. All transactions of real estate brokers, salesmen and mortgage lenders are fully covered. The law also prohibits discriminatory real estate advertising.

   The vote in the lower House of the Legislature was 86 to 10, with all Democratic members and 12 of the 22 Republicans voting in favor of the bill. The Senate vote was 47 to 2. The bill was adopted by the Legislature on March 3.

   A move to carry the issue to a referendum was defeated in the lower House by a vote of 75 to 18, following a vigorous debate. Statements such as the following highlighted the argument against a referendum: "If Abraham Lincoln had put the Emancipation Proclamation to a referendum, it would have been defeated." ... "No tax bill would win on a referendum." ... "The proper place to act on legislation is in this legislative chamber."

   Earlier Indiana laws bar discrimination in public housing and urban renewal projects.

2. Delaware. A bill sponsored by official State Human Relations Commission is scheduled for introduction during March. Would cover all residential property sales; all rentals except apartments in owner-occupied two-family buildings and rooms (up to 5) in private homes; brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders; advertising. Would provide for injunctive relief, but would require complainant to post security to cover costs and damages if the respondent should be found innocent. Includes criminal penalties - fines up to $500, 90 days imprisonment, or both. Would be enforced by State Commission.

   Delaware has no nondiscrimination housing laws.

3. Illinois. H. B. 257, introduced Feb. 3, 1965. Would cover all residential sales; all rentals except rooms (up to 4) in private residences; brokers and salesmen; and mortgage lenders. Would provide for injunctive relief. Would be enforced by a newly-created State Fair Housing Practices Commission, empowered to initiate investigations on its own motion. Backed by Governor Otto Kerner.

   Illinois prohibits restrictive covenants on urban redevelopment land.

4. Kansas. S. B. 166 introduced by Senate Committee on Federal and State Affairs in late February. Would cover all residential sales; all rentals except apartments in owner-occupied two-family buildings and rooms (up to 4) in private residences; brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders; advertising. Provides for injunctive relief. Would be enforced by Kansas Commission on Civil Rights. Kansas Advisory Council on Civil Rights is spearheading statewide campaign for enactment. Kansas has no nondiscrimination housing laws.

5. Maryland. S. B. 262 (H. B. 332), sponsored by the State Commission on Interracial Problems and Relations, introduced on Feb. 5, 1965. Now in House Judiciary Committee, which held hearings on March 3. Would cover all residential property sales; all rentals except apartments in owner-occupied two-family houses and rooms in private residences; brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders; and advertising. Would be enforced by the State Commission on Interracial Problems and Relations. Backed by Democratic Governor J. Millard Tawes. Endorsed by Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan Baltimore. Opposed by Maryland Association of Real Estate Boards. Baltimore Sun reports some opponents speaking at the hearing were "marshalled by Samuel J. Setta, a Talbot County motel owner and a leader of the segregationist Maryland Petition Committee." Reported that leaders of the California referendum fight will be in Maryland to work against the fair housing proposal through local real estate boards. Maryland has no nondiscrimination housing laws.

6. Nebraska. Two bills have been introduced in this State Legislature (which, incidentally, has only one House). Legislative Bill 661, introduced Feb. 1, 1965, would cover all sales and rentals of residential property, including vacant land, with only the traditional exemption of religious and other nonprofit institutions. It would apply to brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders; and to advertising. However, no provision is made for administrative enforcement. The bill would require the district court to grant a reasonable attorney's fee to the prevailing party in civil suits which are instituted under the law. Bill 661 is in the Legislature's Miscellaneous Subjects Committee, which held a hearing on March 4. Backed by Democratic Governor Frank B. Morrison. Endorsed by Omaha Public School Superintendent and Omaha Health Director. Opposed by several members of the real estate industry, including the president of the Nebraska Real Estate Association.

   Legislative Bill 119, introduced Jan. 8, 1965, would amend the statutes governing the State Real Estate Commission to provide that brokers and salesmen who refuse to accept or to show property listings because of "race, color, or national origin, or ethnic groups" would be subject to suspension of their licenses.

   Nebraska has no nondiscrimination housing laws.

7. Ohio. S. B. 113 introduced in late February. Now in Senate Commerce and Labor Committee, which has scheduled hearings during March. Would cover all residential property sales; all rentals except apartments in owner-occupied two-family houses and rooms in private residences; brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders; and advertising. Provides for injunctive relief. Would be enforced by Ohio Civil Rights Commission. Broadly representative Ohio Committee for Civil Rights Legislation spearheading campaign for enactment.

   Ohio has no nondiscrimination housing laws.

8. Rhode Island. Three fair housing bills introduced in February. Republican Administration bill H-1047 is sponsored by ten Republican Assemblymen, including some who voted against fair housing legislation last year. Similar bill (H-1160) introduced by Democratic leadership. Would cover all residential property sales; all rentals except apartments in owner-occupied two- and three-family houses and rooms in owner-occupied homes; brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders; advertising. Would be enforced by Rhode Island Commission Against Discrimination, which whould be empowered to initiate investigations. Third bill (S-13) is all-inclusive, with no exemptions. Administration bill backed by Republican Governor John H. Chafee.

   Also before the Legislature is H-1193, which would provide for a referendum at the general election in November 1966 on the question of whether the Rhode Island Legislature should enact a fair housing law.

   Rhode Island prohibits discrimination in public housing.

9. Utah. H. B. 63, introduced in mid-February, would prohibit discrimination in a major part of the state's housing supply, including private housing. It would establish a State Citizens Council on Civil Rights, with enforcement jurisdiction. Also before the Utah Legislature is H. B. 107, calling for a referendum - described as "virtually another Proposition 14."

   Utah has no nondiscrimination housing laws.

10. Washington State. An Administration bill, 200-E, has been introduced in the Legislature. It would prohibit discriminatory practices by real estate brokers and salesmen.

    At present, complaints against brokers and salesmen are processed by the Washington State Board Against Discrimination under a court ruling that the business activities of members of the real estate industry are covered by the State's public accommodations law.

    Otherwise, Washington has no nondiscrimination legislation relating to public or private housing. A 1957 statute barring discrimination in publicly-assisted housing was struck down by a five to four vote of the State Supreme Court in 1961. The court held that the statute was invalid under both state and Federal constitutions on the ground that, among other things, it made an unreasonable classification between housing having a government-insured loan and privately-financed or mortgage-free housing.

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO STRENGTHEN EXISTING LAWS WHICH REACH THE PRIVATE HOUSING MARKET

11. Colorado. Passed by the Colorado House of Representatives on Feb. 16, 1965 (vote of 56 to 9), strengthening amendments to the 1959 fair housing law. Would extend coverage to all owner-occupied structures; provide injunctive relief; and make violators liable to fines up to $500. Bill now before the Senate.

Present fair housing law, adopted in 1959, covers all sales and rentals (including vacant land), except premises occupied by owner or lessee as household of his family. Applies to brokers, salesmen, mortgage lenders and real estate advertising. Enforcement by the Colorado Anti-Discrimination Commission.

12. Connecticut. A measure has been introduced to provide for injunctive relief to hold housing units involved in complaints available during the processing of such complaints.

Connecticut's fair housing law, adopted in 1959 and strengthened in 1961 and 1963, now covers sale or rental of all housing (including vacant land), except rental of a unit in an owner-occupied two-family house and rental of rooms in private homes. Applies to brokers, salesmen and mortgage lenders. Enforcement by the Connecticut Civil Rights Commission.

13. Massachusetts. Several bills have been introduced. H-998 would remove the requirement that a three-day notice be given respondents before applying for an injunction. H-776 would include commercial real estate under the fair housing law. H-779 would cut back coverage of the existing law to exclude the rental of apartments in owner-occupied three-family houses, as well as in the presently-exempted owner-occupied two-family structures. A measure similar to H-779 was introduced last year and was killed by the Legislature. H-758 is an anti-blockbusting measure which would impose criminal sanctions for those who incite "fear of a racial or ethnic invasion" among owners or tenants.

Present law, adopted in 1959 and strengthened in 1960, 1961 and 1963, covers sale or rental of all "publicly-offered" housing (including vacant land), except rental of a unit in an owner-occupied two-family house. (Administrative ruling holds that rental of rooms in private homes is covered by state's public accommodations statute.) Applies to brokers, salesmen, mortgage lenders and real estate advertising. Provides for injunctive relief to hold the housing at issue available during the pendency of a complaint. Also, brokers and salesmen who refuse to obey an enforcement order are liable to loss of license. Enforcement by the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination.

14. Minnesota. A bill has been introduced to empower the Minnesota Commission Against Discrimination to seek injunctive relief in housing cases.

Minnesota's fair housing law, in operation since Jan. 1, 1963, covers sale or rental of all housing except the rental of a unit in an owner-occupied two-family house and rental of rooms in private residences, and except sale of owner-occupied "privately-financed" single-family houses. (All houses with outstanding FHA-insured and VA-guaranteed mortgages are covered.) Applies to vacant land, commercial space and advertising. Covers brokers, salesmen and mortgage lenders. Enforcement by the Minnesota Commission Against Discrimination.

15. New Jersey. A. B. No. 111, introduced Jan. 18, 1965, would extend the present law to cover all residential property sales and all rentals except units in owner-occupied two-family houses and rental of rooms in one-family dwellings.

Present law, adopted 1961, covers sales and rentals in developments of 10 or more houses on contiguous land and buildings containing three or more dwelling units, excluding owner-occupied three-family houses. One- and two-family houses with outstanding FHA and VA mortgages are covered. Applies to brokers, salesmen, mortgage lenders and real estate advertising. Enforcement by New Jersey Division on Civil Rights. (See also "REFERENDUM MEASURES," page 6.)

16. New York State. Several bills were pre-filed in January. Senate Print No. 423 (Introductory 423) would make violation of the state's fair housing law a criminal offense. Assembly Print No. 454 (Introductory 454) would empower the State Commission for Human Rights, official enforcement agency, to seek injunctive relief. Senate Print No. 425 (Introductory 425) would empower the Commission to initiate investigations on its own motion. Assembly Print 1111 (Introductory 1111) would permit organizations to file verified complaints with the Commission. Assembly Print 103 (Introductory 103) would amend the penal law to establish criminal penalties for "racial blockbusting," providing that any person who incites fear among owners or tenants based on occupancy or prospective occupancy of a neighborhood by persons of certain racial, ethnic or religious affiliation shall be liable to fines up to $1000, imprisonment of one year, or both. This measure would specifically cover both licensed and unlicensed real estate agents.

New York's fair housing law, adopted in 1961 and strengthened in 1963, covers sale or rental of all housing except rental of a unit in an owner-occupied two-family house and rental of rooms in private residences. Also covers commercial space. Applies to brokers, salesmen, mortgage lenders and real estate advertising. Does not make provision for the State Commission to apply directly to the courts for injunctive relief, but the State Attorney General, upon the Commission's request, will seek restraining orders to hold the housing at issue in status quo during the pendency of a complaint. Enforcement (see above).

17. Pennsylvania. The State Human Relations Commission, which enforces this state's fair housing law, has filed with the legislative leadership official recommendations for amendments to strengthen the existing civil rights act, including provision for the Commission to seek injunctive relief.

Present law, adopted in 1961, covers sales or rental of all housing (including vacant land), except owner-occupied one- and two-family houses. Applies to brokers, salesmen, mortgage lenders and real estate advertising. Enforcement (see above).

FAIR HOUSING MEASURES DEFEATED

18. New Mexico. The House of Representatives recently defeated a comprehensive fair housing bill by a vote of 48 to 28. The measure would have covered all sales and rentals except the rental of rooms in single-family dwellings, and would have applied to brokers, salesmen and mortgage lenders. Violations would have been misdemeanors.

New Mexico has no nondiscrimination housing laws.

THE CALIFORNIA SITUATION

A bill (A. B. 1153) has been introduced in the lower House of the State Legislature. This measure would establish a State Housing Conciliation Commission, authorized to receive and investigate complaints of discrimination, but with no enforcement powers. Efforts to adjust cases would be limited to the use of persuasion and attempts to secure voluntary agreements.

At the general election last November, a majority of the California electorate voted in favor of Proposition 14, a constitutional amendment aimed at nullifying the state's fair housing laws and prohibiting such legislation in the future. The constitutionality of this amendment is now being challenged in the courts.

However, the State Attorney General has taken the position that in any event Proposition 14 would apply only to the owners of property, and that the Rumford Act, which prohibits discrimination by real estate brokers, salesmen and mortgage lenders, remains in full force. Upon the advice of the Attorney General, the Fair Employment Practice Commission (which also has jurisdiction over nondiscrimination housing laws) has continued handling complaints filed against those engaged in the real estate or mortgage financing business. In addition to its enforcement powers, FEPC is also authorized to carry out all of the educational and conciliatory functions which A.B. 1153 proposes.

REFERENDUM MEASURES

In addition to the referendum bill which has been introduced in Rhode Island (see above), measures similar to California's Proposition 14 have been introduced this year in the state legislatures of Arkansas, Georgia, Nevada, Texas and Washington. As noted heretofore, a referendum move was overwhelmingly defeated by the Indiana Legislature.

Late Note on New Jersey: Also before the Legislature in this state is Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 31, which would amend the state constitution to permit constitutional amendments by referendum.

A referendum bill has also been introduced in Utah (see above).

Dear Jim:

This is just a brief note of transmittal to enclose a copy of the recommendations for an extended Executive Order, prepared by the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing. This memorandum was handed to me while in Washington last week with the general understanding that I would see that it got to you.

Although there has been no public statement thus far, it is my understanding that the recommendations were forwarded to Vice President Humphrey during the middle of last week. The decision to place this report before the Vice President rather than the President was made in deference to Mr. Humphrey's coordinative responsibility in civil rights. It is expected that he, in turn, will forward the recommendations to President Johnson after due consideration and review by his office.

The meeting that we expect to hold with Vice President Humphrey had been delayed pending his receipt of these recommendations. That conference, which I ernestly hope you will be able to attend, now becomes doubly important in view of the inadequacies of this report.

I am getting out, as quickly as possible, a memorandum to the heads of member agencies affiliated with NCDH and also to members of our Board of Directors. The memorandum will point out that the President's Committee is recommending only that the Order be extended to include federally-aided banks and lending institutions

March 31, 1965

TO: Executive Directors of NCDH Affiliate Organizations and Members of the Board of Directors

FROM: Edward Rutledge and Jack E. Wood, Jr.

RE: CAMPAIGN FOR AN EXTENSION OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 11063

We have just learned that the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing has forwarded to Vice President Hubert Humphrey its formal report containing recommendations for an extension of the Executive Order. Although there has been no public announcement as yet, we also know that the scope of coverage being recommended by the President's Committee has been sharply narrowed to a single area -- the inclusion of housing financed by federally supervised lending institutions.

It is expected that this report will be forwarded to the White House after consideration and review by the office of the Vice President.

In view of this development, it becomes extremely important that we act NOW. We strongly recommend, therefore, that you forward letters or telegrams to the President and Vice President, urging immediate and extensive broadening of the Order.

* * * *

To clarify - the single recommendation that the Order be extended to include federally assisted banks and lending institutions falls far short of the expansive coverage which has been urged by NCDH in behalf of its 37 affiliate organizations. The NCDH memorandum, as you will recall, recommended:

1. (Halting discrimination by all federally-aided banks and lending institutions.) This would include commercial and national banks and savings and loan associations which are chartered, regulated or insured by agencies of the federal government.

2. Extending the Order (retroactively) to include all federally-aided housing built prior to November 20, 1962.

3. Revising administrative regulations and procedures which have resulted in excluding certain types of housing from the scope of the Order. Included are FHA and VA 1 and 2 family owner-occupied homes which arbitrarily have been exempted.

4. Giving the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing specific authority and broader responsibility in order to guarantee that the Order will be vigorously and effectively implemented.

* * * *

At our most recent Board of Directors meeting, it was recommended that, in addition to the memorandum submitted by the NCDH in behalf of its affiliate organizations, each agency be requested to take separate action urging an immediate expansion of the Executive Order. The NCDH staff also was directed to request a meeting with Vice President Humphrey to discuss the need for an expansion of the Order and we are waiting to be advised of the date of the conference.

In order to enable us to present a picture of nationwide support for an expanded Order, it would be helpful if you could share with us a copy of the letters or telegrams that are sent by your agency.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The creation of a Department of Housing and Urban Development, as proposed by President Johnson in his March 2nd message to Congress, was urged today (April 6) by the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing.

Speaking before the Subcommittee on Executive and Legislative Reorganization of the U. S. House Committee on Government Operations, Edward Rutledge, executive director of NCDH, said that coordination of the Government's vast housing operations in a single Department should result in more effective implementation of the Federal policy of nondiscrimination and achievement of the Federal promise of equal opportunity in housing.

The NCDH spokesman told the committee that housing discrimination and segregation lie at the very root of the nation's urban crisis. "The massive and mounting problems of our metropolitan areas will never be solved as long as the white walls of housing exclusion and the teeming racial ghettos stand unassailed," he declared.

MORE

Mr. Rutledge pointed out that almost two-thirds of the nation's population increase between 1950 and 1960 took place in suburban communities, and that this increase was almost entirely white. He said that during the same period the Negro populations in central cities had expanded enormously.

Citing examples, he told the committee that Negroes now make up more than half the population of Washington, D. C. and Newark, N. J.; more than one-third in Baltimore and New Orleans; and more than one-fourth in Philadelphia, Detroit, Cleveland, Oakland and St. Louis. He forecast that unless the housing market is freed of racial restrictions, within a few years numerous American cities will have Negro majorities.

Mr. Rutledge said that housing segregation is seriously affecting urban renewal; social welfare programs; planning for metropolitan growth; the public schools; programs to alleviate poverty and to prevent juvenile delinquency; and municipal government and taxation.

The NCDH Executive Director said that his agency and its 37 affiliated organizations are urging President Johnson to extend the Executive Order prohibiting discrimination in federally-aided housing to cover existing as well as future housing, and to reach the conventional mortgage lending market. He said the present Order, which was issued by President Kennedy in 1962, affects only about 18 per cent of the new housing supply. "It has scarcely made a dent on segregated housing patterns," he told the Congressmen.

Mr. Rutledge said that neither the traditional civil rights forces nor important segments of the housing industry are satisfied with the Order as it stands. He pointed out that a number of industry representatives, including the Greater Baltimore Real Estate Board and the Home Builders Association of Greater St. Louis, have urged President Johnson to extend the Housing Order.

STATEMENT OF EDWARD RUTLEDGE, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR
NATIONAL COMMITTEE AGAINST DISCRIMINATION IN HOUSING
Before The SUBCOMMITTEE ON EXECUTIVE AND LEGISLATIVE REORGANIZATION Of The
HOUSE COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS

April 6, 1965

Chairman Dawson and distinguished members of the committee:

My name is Edward Rutledge. I would like to thank you for this opportunity to present a statement on behalf of the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing, of which I am executive director. Our committee, generally referred to as NCDH, was formed in 1950. It is an affiliation of 37 major religious, civil rights, labor and civic organizations which are committed, through a united effort, to ending racial, religious and ethnic barriers to housing and to encouraging the development of communities in which families of diverse racial, religious and ethnic backgrounds may live in dignity and with mutual respect. A list of the NCDH member organizations is attached to the copy of this statement which I am filing with your committee.

NCDH supports and urges the establishment within the executive branch of the Government of a Department of Housing and Urban Development. We believe that simple justice demands that the Nation's urban citizens - now almost 75 per cent and soon to be more than 80 per cent of the total American population - be represented as equals at the Cabinet table.

We believe the creation of such a Department is essential if the Federal Government is to meet its proper, necessary and expanding responsibility to provide leadership and assistance to state and local governments as they struggle to cope with the enormous problems of urban growth - problems which are as complex as they are manifold.

We believe that practical considerations alone, such as efficient administration and sound management practices, provide common sense reasons for coordinating the vast and essential range of Federal programs relating to urban needs. For too many years, Federal activities in housing and urban affairs have been spread throughout a welter of programs and agencies. As a result, the most crucial problems of our metropolitan areas, affecting the social and economic life of the entire Nation, are being treated in bits and pieces. Inevitably there is a lack of overall planning, inconsistency in carrying out Federal policy, confusion, overlapping, duplication and waste.

The concern of NCDH, however, reaches far beyond the mere establishment of coordinated, efficient administrative machinery - important as this may be.

Studied from any angle, it is apparent that the massive and mounting problems of our metropolitan areas will never be solved as long as the white walls of housing exclusion and the teeming racial ghettos stand unassailed. Racial discrimination in housing has built a national pattern of segregated living which pervades and warps almost every phase of Negro life and Negro-white relationships. Our segregated communities - white and black - are the breeding ground of prejudice, fear and arrogance. Our children are growing up in a Negro society or a white society, each set against the other.

The outgrowth of housing segregation threatens the very foundation of our country's social and economic stability, as well as its future progress. We have reaped segregated schools, churches, hospitals and recreational facilities; barriers to employment opportunities; the cultural and economic deprivation of millions of our people; low aspirations and an appalling loss of potential skills and human resources; concentration in high density areas of low-income and unemployed minority-group families; overcrowded, slumlord exploited, rat-infested tenements and the bitterness, apathy and despair which are part and parcel of slum living; and psychological and spiritual damage to the vast majority of Americans, black and white alike.

Between 1950 and 1960, almost two-thirds of the Nation's population increase took place in the suburbs, an increase which was almost entirely white. During the same decade, there was enormous growth of the Negro population in the central cities. Today, Negroes make up over half of the population of Washington and Newark; more than one-third of Baltimore and New Orleans; and over one-fourth of the populations of Philadelphia, Detroit, Cleveland, Oakland and St. Louis. Unless the entire housing market is opened and the confinement of Negroes to circumscribed areas within the central cities is stopped, within a very few years numerous American cities will have Negro majorities.

Segregated patterns of residence have the most profound impact upon urban renewal; upon social welfare programs; upon planning for orderly metropolitan growth; upon public school systems; upon programs to alleviate poverty and to prevent juvenile delinquency; and upon municipal government and taxation.

5--NCDH Statement on
Department of Housing & Urban Development
April 6, 1965

As President Johnson stated on March 2 of this year in his message entitled The Problems and Future of the Central City and its Suburbs:

> "The old, the poor, the discriminated against are increasingly concentrated in central city ghettos; while others move to the suburbs leaving the central city to battle against immense odds."

It is an indisputable fact that housing discrimination and segregation hamper virtually every facet of public action dealing with the critical domestic problems of our increasingly urbanized Nation.

The Federal Government bears a very heavy responsibility for this situation which lies at the very root of the urban crisis. I need not review for this committee the Government's long history of sustaining - indeed, of promoting - residential segregation. All of us know that 80 per cent of federally-sponsored public housing is operated on a racially segregated basis. All of us have seen the huge subdivisions which circle every city, made possible only by FHA and VA assistance - subdivisions which were built as all-white communities. All of us know that urban renewal has caused wholesale removal of nonwhite families from areas of long continued occupancy, and that many integrated neighborhoods have been "renewed" on a segregated basis. The Federal Government's role in extending housing segregation as a national institution is a shameful fact.

Today, the Government has taken its stand behind the constitutional promise of equal rights for all - except in housing. Once the voting rights bill passes Congress, housing will be the major gap in Federal policy. It is our great hope that President Johnson will soon close that gap.

The Executive Order prohibiting discrimination in federally-aided housing, issued by President Kennedy in 1962, is so limited in scope that it has scarcely made a dent on segregated housing patterns. Almost all federally-aided private housing contracted for prior to November 20, 1962, was exempt from coverage. Less than one-fifth of all new construction is covered. Mortgage lending institutions are affected only to the extent that they engage in FHA and VA loans. Housing provided through conventional financing by federally-supervised mortgage lenders, who enjoy - among other things - the benefit of federally-guaranteed insurance of their deposits, is entirely excluded from coverage.

As a consequence, the Order applied to only 18 per cent of the 1,522,200 nonfarm private housing units started in 1964. Substantial Federal benefits were involved in more than 80 per cent of this new housing.

Moreover, with responsibility spread through numerous agencies, implementation of the present limited Order has been inadequate and inconsistent.

NCDH and its member organizations are urging President Johnson to expand the Housing Order to bring under its reach existing as well as future federally-aided housing, and all mortgage lending institutions which are supervised in any manner by the Federal Government. As it stands, the Order satisfies no one - neither those involved in the civil rights movement nor important segments of the housing industry. A number of industry representatives, most recently the Greater Baltimore Real Estate Board and the Home Builders Association of Greater St. Louis have urged President Johnson to extend the Order. It is our hope that the President, both on the basis of moral and practical considerations, will soon bring housing completely in line with the Federal policy of nondiscrimination.

8--NCDH Statement on
April 6, 1965

As the nation moves toward meeting the housing needs of its people by the creation of new towns and cities and greatly increased efforts to renew and rehabilitate existing communities, it becomes even more imperative that affirmative, vigorous and well-organized action be taken to insure the rights of every citizen.

Of course, the mere creation of a Department of Housing and Urban Development will not guarantee the end of discrimination in federally-aided housing. As members of this committee are aware, the U. S. Department of Agriculture, established 75 years ago to serve a predominantly rural America, recently came under severe criticism from the U. S. Commission on Civil Rights because of its systematic discrimination against Negro farmers, particularly those in the South. We were gratified to see reports in the press last week indicating that the Secretary of Agriculture is moving to correct this situation.

However, a Department of Housing and Urban Development, created in these days when the demand for Freedom Now is the foremost domestic challenge facing our country, should be expected to write a new page in the history of Federal involvement in the housing field. Responsibility for the Government's far-flung housing operations would reside in one Department, functioning under the President's direction. This coordinated authority and administration should not only carry out the Federal policy of nondiscrimination with firmness and effectiveness, but should take vigorous action to make the Federal promise of equal opportunity in housing a reality.

It would be our further expectation that a Department of Housing and Urban Development would move with all possible speed toward the realization of the 1949 Housing Act's commitment of "a decent home and a suitable environment for every American family." And a "suitable environment," in our opinion, is one which is in line with the NCDH objective stated above: communities in which families of diverse racial, religious and ethnic backgrounds may live in dignity and with mutual respect.

For the reasons we have outlined, the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing respectfully urges that the Subcommittee on Executive and Legislative Reorganization of the House Committee on Government Operations recommend the immediate creation of a Department of Housing and Urban Development, as proposed under the Administration's bill No. H. R. 6654.

Thank you again for the opportunity to present this statement.

NEWS FLASH! FAIR HOUSING FORCES WIN VICTORY IN RHODE ISLAND!

The Rhode Island Legislature has passed a law barring discrimination in a substantial part of the state's housing market. Late yesterday afternoon (April 8), the Democratic-controlled Senate approved the measure by a vote of 28 to 16, with two abstentions. It had passed the House, also Democratic-controlled, one week earlier by a vote of 54 to 42. Both Republican Governor John H. Chafee and the Democratic leadership in both Houses strongly supported the legislation, and the Governor is expected to sign it on Monday, April 12.

The new Rhode Island fair housing law will apply to all sales of residential property and to all rentals except apartments in owner-occupied two- and three-family houses. Also exempt are rentals of rooms in private residences. Real estate brokers and salesmen, mortgage lenders and advertising are covered. It will be enforced by the Rhode Island Commission Against Discrimination, which will be empowered to initiate complaints on its own motion. The legislation will become effective immediately after it is signed into law.

Rhode Island previously had prohibited discrimination only in public housing projects.

Earlier in the session, a bill which would have taken the issue of fair housing legislation to a referendum at the next general election was defeated by an overwhelming voice vote in the lower House.

Passage of the Rhode Island fair housing law came after civil rights supporters had waged statewide campaigns for such legislation for seven consecutive years, beginning in 1959 and going down to defeat each year — until 1965.

THIS YEAR'S SCORE TO DATE

Thus far, legislative campaigns in 1965 have added Rhode Island and Indiana (See NCDH Legislative Information Memo of March 10) to the 12 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and some 27 cities which have adopted measures prohibiting discrimination in the general housing market. The 12 states are Alaska, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Oregon and Pennsylvania. In addition, the State of Washington bars discrimination by real estate brokers and mortgage lenders under its public accommodations statute; Montana and Wisconsin have nondiscrimination laws covering publicly-assisted housing; and Illinois prohibits discrimination in public housing and bars the use of restrictive covenants on urban redevelopment land.

ANOTHER VICTORY IN COLORADO

On April 2, the Colorado State Legislature passed strengthening amendments to the state's 1959 Fair Housing Act to cover the sale and rental of owner-occupied structures, previously exempt from coverage. Rentals of rooms in private residences are still excluded. The vote to broaden the law was 30 to 5 in the Senate, and 57 to 3 in the House. Republican Governor John A. Love is expected to sign the bill immediately.

ONGOING CAMPAIGNS

Elsewhere, campaigns for new fair housing laws are underway in Delaware, Illinois, Maine, Nebraska, Ohio, Washington State, Wisconsin and Missouri. Proposals to strengthen existing laws are pending in the state legislatures of Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York. Also, a comprehensive fair housing bill has been introduced in the City Council of Baltimore, Maryland.

1965 DEFEATS

Fair housing bills have been defeated this year in Kansas, Maryland and New Mexico, and a bill died in Utah.

THE ANTI-FAIR HOUSING REFERENDUM MOVEMENT

Proposals for anti-fair housing referenda have been raised this year in the state legislatures of Arkansas, Indiana, Maryland, Nevada, Rhode Island, Texas, Utah and Washington State. Thus far, they have been defeated in Indiana, Nevada and in Rhode Island, and the Texas bill is reported dead in committee. An interfaith group composed of clergy and laity representing the Texas Council of Churches, the Baptist General Convention of Texas, B'nai B'rith, and the Texas Catholic Conference is credited with killing the effort to involve the issue of fair housing in an election campaign in that state.

FOR RELEASE MAY 7, 1965

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey was urged yesterday (May 6) by a top-level delegation representing the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing (NCDH) to recommend to President Johnson that the Executive Order barring discrimination in federally-aided housing be immediately expanded to cover conventional mortgage lenders and all existing housing which continues to receive Federal assistance.

The Housing Order, issued by President Kennedy on Nov. 20, 1962, affects mortgage lending institutions only to the extent they engage in loans which are insured by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) or guaranteed by the Veterans Administration (VA). Also, the non-discrimination requirement does not apply to housing which was built or contracted for prior to Nov. 20, 1962, unless such housing is owned or operated by the Federal Government.

The National Committee, an affiliation of 37 major religious, civil rights, labor and civic organizations, initiated the movement for an Executive Order on housing in 1952, and conducted a 10-year educational drive to secure its issuance. Last November, NCDH submitted to President Johnson four specific proposals for strengthening the Order: 1) coverage of commercial banks and savings and loan associations which are chartered, supervised, or whose deposits are insured by the Federal Government; 2) inclusion of all existing federally-aided housing; 3) withdrawal of administrative powers which permit Federal housing agencies to grant certain exemptions, such as FHA's exemption of the resale of one and two-family houses; and 4) increasing the responsibility and authority of the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing for implementation of the Order.

At a press conference held in Washington after the NCDH delegation met with the Vice President, Algernon D. Black, chairman of the organization's board of directors, and a religious Leader of the American Ethical Movement, said that the Order "has scarcely made a dent on discriminatory housing practices" in the two and a half years it has been in operation.

"Notwithstanding its laudable purpose," Mr. Black declared, "it is clear that this Order can never achieve its expressed goal. Its limited coverage makes it applicable to less than 10 per cent of the federally-aided housing supply, new and old. We must remember that an enormous supply of federally-aided housing was built during the span of 28 years before the Order became effective. Moreover, narrow interpretation of its provisions and inadequate enforcement have further crippled its effectiveness."

"In actual operation," the NCDH chairman went on, "the hopes and promises of equal opportunity in housing which the Order held out to millions of Negroes, Puerto Ricans, Mexican Americans and other minorities have become bitter disappointments and frustrations. Housing remains the major gap in the Federal Government's policy of nondiscrimination, and the evils of housing discrimination and segregation remain largely unchecked."

Mr. Black said that in 1964 there were 1,522,200 private nonfarm dwellings started in the United States, and that only 18 per cent of these were within the Housing Order's reach. "If all mortgage lending institutions which are benefited and supervised by the National Government had been covered, about 83 per cent of these new homes would be subject to the nondiscrimination mandate."

The NCDH spokesman said another serious shortcoming was failure to cover existing housing. "There simply is no logical basis to support the principle that a constitutional requirement of nondiscrimination applies to a new house which is receiving Federal aid, but not to an old house which is receiving Federal aid. This unwarranted exemption leaves racial and ethnic restrictions entirely untouched in a major part of the Nation's housing supply."

Mr. Black said that NCDH and its member agencies are disturbed by the failure of the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing to include existing homes in the recommendations it recently submitted to President Johnson. "We consider totally inadequate this committee's limited proposal which asks only that the Order be enlarged to include the conventional mortgage lending market," he declared.

The chairman's statement continued as follows:

"Population experts tell us that our country must plan for a population of 300 million people within the next 25 years. The 1965 Housing Act recognizes the increasing enormity of securing decent shelter for American families. Our Government is about to embark on a dramatic new national housing effort which looks not only toward the essential renewal of our present stock of homes, but the creation of many new towns and cities.

"Such an undertaking will be absolute folly unless the Federal Government makes sure that these vast projects are not built on a decaying foundation of segregation and discrimination. We will never solve the problems which are plaguing every city in the country -- segregated schools, jobs, recreation, and the tragedy of slums -- until we eliminate housing discrimination and segregation.

"There is every logical reason for President Johnson to extend the Executive Order straight across the board to insure that the benefits of housing, new and old, which result directly or indirectly from Federal assistance are made available to all Americans without regard to their race, color, creed or national origin. This is not only the right thing to do, it is the practical thing to do. No one is satisfied with the Housing Order as it stands. Leading representatives of the housing and mortgage lending industries have joined in urging its expansion to cover conventional mortgage lenders. And bringing existing housing under its reach would be no innovation.

Laws in 14 states and 27 cities go farther. Certainly the Federal Government should not lag behind."

In addition to Mr. Black, the delegation which conferred with Vice President Humphrey included the following: Paget L. Alves, Jr., Associate Director, National Urban League and NCDH Board Member; Robert Carter, General Counsel, NAACP, and member, NCDH Legal Committee; James Farmer, National Director, Congress of Racial Equality, and NCDH Board Member; Walter Fauntroy, Director of Washington Bureau, Southern Christian Leadership Conference; Jack Greenberg, Director-Counsel, NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., and member, NCDH Legal Committee; Miss Dorothy Height, Consultant-Director, National Board, YWCA, and NCDH Board Member; Norman Hill, Civil Rights Director, Industrial Union Department, AFL-CIO, and NCDH Board Member; Mrs. Charlotte Meacham, National Representative for Housing Programs, American Friends Service Committee, and NCDH Vice President; John A. Morsell, Assistant Executive Director, NAACP; William H. Oliver, Co-Director, Fair Practices and Anti-Discrimination Department, United Auto Workers, AFL-CIO, and NCDH Vice President; Joseph B. Robison, Director, Commission on Law and Social Action, American Jewish Congress, and NCDH General Counsel; Edward Rutledge, Executive Director, NCDH; James H. Scheuer, U. S. Congressman from New York and member of NCDH Advisory Council; Boris Shishkin, Secretary, Housing Committee, AFL-CIO, and NCDH Vice President; Donald S. MEMORANDUM

April 29, 1965

TO: Fair Housing Committees and Other Local Groups Engaged in Fair Housing Programs

FROM: Jack E. Wood, Director, Center for Fair Housing

This memorandum concerns a matter of the utmost importance to all those engaged in the field of housing and human relations and whose organizations are working to eliminate discrimination and to advance integration in housing.

As you know, the voluntary fair housing committee movement in a brief span of years has become an effort of vital significance in the nation's struggle to achieve full equality of opportunity. The NCDH has identified and recently been in touch with more than 1,000 such groups throughout the nation.

The rapid increase of local groups engaged in fair housing activities, however, not only has revealed the need for a nationally coordinated operation to provide them with a range of services, but also has led to widespread demand for affiliation with the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing.

In response to these demands, the NCDH has established the CENTER FOR FAIR HOUSING. An informational sheet, describing the Center, is enclosed for your use in interpreting this exciting new concept to the members of your group.

The first task of the CENTER FOR FAIR HOUSING is to conduct a comprehensive survey of the organization and program activities of local fair housing groups over the country. Questionnaires are being sent to the chairman or other appropriate contact persons for more than 1,000 committees. Information compiled through these questionnaires will facilitate the Center's efforts to provide maximum service to each local fair housing and community group.

Your organization is an integral part of the national fair housing movement and we are anxious to serve you. We would appreciate your filling out this questionnaire form and returning it to us, if at all possible, before May 12, 1965.

CENTER FOR FAIR HOUSING

The Center for Fair Housing, with which local fair housing groups may affiliate, is a program operation of the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing recently created by the NCDH Executive Committee.

Initiation of the Center is in response to the growing number of requests from local fair housing and other community groups to affiliate with NCDH. Its purpose is to establish a national coordinated service which will give practical assistance to groups throughout the country in their work to combat discrimination and achieve integrated communities. It is also hoped that affiliation with the Center will provide them with a realistic sense of identification with the rapidly expanding national fair housing committee movement.

In addition to having a channel through which new program ideas and experiences can be shared, those groups affiliated with the Center will have available to them a wide range of specific services designed to enhance the effectiveness of their program efforts. These will include:

* Direct consultation and guidance in the development and implementation of local program activities.

* Technical assistance in the analysis and evaluation of urban renewal plans and of other programs or problems.

* Field visits to counsel with local groups on matters of particular complexity or significance.

* Regional and national conferences.

* Representation of the interests and concerns of local fair housing committees before national public and private organizations.

* Periodic distribution of informational literature, including pamphlets, brochures, reprints and other publications of significance. Special effort will be made to meet the needs and "gaps" as indicated by the affiliates of the Center.

* Development and distribution of a series of "how to" materials on specific techniques: how to encourage more rapid movement of minority groups into the general housing market; how to make effective use of the services and programs of local, state and Federal agencies; how to promote the cooperation and involvement of responsible builders, brokers and mortgage lenders; how to combat panic selling and maintain racially-integrated neighborhoods.

DISCRIMINATION IN HOUSING
323 Lexington Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10016
685-8911

May 18, 1965

TO: NCDH Board of Directors

FROM: Edward Rutledge, Executive Director

SUBJECT: (1) Announcement of NCDH Board Meeting, June 28, 1965, from 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

(2) Announcement of NCDH Conference of City and State Local Human Rights Commissions on Referenda, Legislation, Etc., June 29, 1965, from 9:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., both meetings to be held at Brotherhood-in-Action Building

The next Board Meeting will be held on Monday, June 28, 1965 from 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. at the Brotherhood-in-Action Building, 560 Seventh Avenue (near 40th Street). This date was selected to coincide with the NCDH convening of a June 29 conference of city and state commissions on human rights, some state attorneys general and federal representatives to discuss the findings of the National Legal Conference on Equal Opportunity in Housing held in Berkeley, California and the legislative and legal actions occurring since that conference as related to the program activities of these agencies. Both meetings will be held at the Brotherhood-in-Action Building, and it is our hope that we will have the fullest attendance of board members at both meetings.

For those of you who are interested, the Annual Conference of Commissions on Human Rights (CCHR) is being convened in New York City that week from June 30 through July 2. This, of course, is a meeting separate and apart from our conferences, but there will be many participants at the June 29 conference who will be attending the CCHR Conference. You will be getting greater detail in regard to these meetings in the near future, but we wanted to alert you at the earliest possible time of the dates that these conferences are scheduled.

I believe you will be interested in receiving the material on the Center for Fair Housing of NCDH, which was acted upon by the Executive Committee on April 8 and reported to the Board on May 12. It is our hope that local fair housing groups will affiliate in large numbers with this Center and that local affiliates of our national member agencies also will use the services of the Center for Fair Housing.

The Board accepted one new member agency, the National Association of Housing Cooperatives, with Harold Ostroff, President, as a delegate. The other agencies who have applied and been invited to attend our next Board Meeting on June 28 for formal acceptance are The Christian Family Movement, the National Council of Catholic Men and the Board of Christian Social Concerns of the Methodist Church.

The financial situation of the NCDH is now most critical. Funds are in sight only through the first of August. It is hoped that the whole question of membership participation in supporting the National Committee can be discussed at the June 28 Board Meeting. Obviously, any suggestions you may have for support of the NCDH during this period would be most welcome now; any financial assistance you can give at this time also will be most welcome.

I am sure you are pleased that TRENDS IN HOUSING is coming out regularly and on time. We are trying to provide assistance to Margaret Fisher and relieve her of administrative duties so that she can devote full time to her very important function as Director of Information and Publications.

Attached hereto is a news release of a speech I made recently at a conference sponsored by the Washington Urban League and the Metropolitan Housing Department of the American Friends Service Committee.

We hope you are following through on our memorandum on March 31 in regard to seeking extension of the Executive Order in Housing. We need the full support of our member agencies and their local affiliates from all parts of the country in order to impress both Vice President Hubert Humphrey and President Lyndon Johnson of the urgent need for immediate action.

The agenda of the May 12 Board Meeting also is attached for your information.

Edward Rutledge, executive director of the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing, said yesterday (May 15) that the committee is "increasingly disillusioned and impatient with the utter failure of the Federal Government to protect and extend the right of Negro families to secure homes in all sections of the Nation's cities and suburbs, without regard to race." He urged civil rights supporters throughout the country to call on President Johnson for immediate strengthening of the Executive Order prohibiting discrimination in federally-aided housing.

Speaking on Saturday at a "Freedom of Choice in Housing Workshop," held at the Zion Baptist Church under the joint sponsorship of the Washington Urban League and the Metropolitan Washington Housing Program of the American Friends Service Committee, Mr. Rutledge told a large group of potential Negro home buyers and representatives of local fair housing committees that the Executive Order has "scarcely made a dent on housing discrimination and segregation." The workshop was designed to acquaint Negro families with the suburban Washington housing market.

"This Administration is committed to achieving the system of equal opportunity guaranteed by our Constitution," Mr. Rutledge declared. "Yet the Government's policy of nondiscrimination barely touches housing - the very root of a segregated society. The Federal Government today is in the untenable position of withholding funds from school districts which operate segregated schools, while its housing activities maintain and extend the segregated neighborhoods which create and maintain segregated schools; of withholding government contracts from industries which do not comply with and promote fair employment practices, while Negroes frequently are barred from jobs in these industries because they are denied access to the local federally-aided housing supply."

The NCDH executive director gave little credit to the Federal Government for the fact that 170 Negro families, assisted by local fair housing groups, have moved into previously all-white neighborhoods in the Virginia and Maryland suburbs of Washington during the last two years.

"These and similar gains in other parts of the country have come about because of the determination of the Negro families to secure the "decent home in a suitable living environment for every American family" promised by the Federal Government in 1949, and the dedication of voluntary fair housing committees which have worked in partnership with these families," Mr. Rutledge declared.

"The housing dollars of these families have not only bought more and better housing, they have bought quality education for children, convenience to jobs, and good community facilities in good neighborhoods with good neighbors. They have also given white Americans in those areas the opportunity to experience the real meaning of democracy and the value and enrichment of diversity."

"These breakthroughs in the walls of exclusion, made without incident, are setting extremely important new patterns of residence," Mr. Rutledge continued. "But what would have happened these last two years if Negro citizens had been given a real sense of confidence by the Federal Government that they could count on its full weight and power to support their search for homes in the general market? Would 170 Negro families in Washington have secured the homes of their choice, or would several thousands have been encouraged and motivated to take advantage of good buys in the suburbs and new sections of the city?"

The NCDH executive director said that the present housing Order applies to less than 10 per cent of the federally-aided housing supply, new and old, and that only 18 per cent of the new housing starts in 1964 were affected by its nondiscrimination requirement. He went on to say that the limited scope alone deters minorities from attempting to use the Order because of the extreme difficulty of identifying housing which it covers.

Mr. Rutledge pointed out that his organization and its 37 national member agencies are pressing a nationwide campaign for extension of the Executive Order to cover all existing federally-aided housing and all housing affected by mortgage loans provided by banks and savings and loan associations which are chartered, supervised, or whose deposits are insured by the Federal Government. Coverage of these two categories, he said, would bring a substantial part of the existing housing supply and about 83 per cent of all new homes under the Order's reach.

Mr. Rutledge continued: "Civil rights forces are shocked by the apparent reluctance of the President's legal advisors to recommend this expansion. Top constitutional lawyers across the Nation feel there is ample legal authority for an across-the-board Order, and that a narrow, timid interpretation of constitutional guarantees is totally unwarranted. Fair housing laws in 14 states and 27 cities go far beyond the expansions we are asking in the Order, and these laws have consistently withstood constitutional attacks in the courts. We say the President should broaden this Order, should broaden it now to the outer limits of his authority, and should see to it that it is liberally and vigorously enforced.

"In pressing for reform in the Federal Government's housing operations, we cannot overlook its past record of supporting, indeed of initiating, residential segregation. It was Federal funds, Federal insurance, and a Federal policy of racial discrimination and segregation that made possible the construction of the all-white Levittowns, Park Forests, and the myriads of all-white suburban subdivisions that ring the Nation's cities today. It was the Federal Government's policy of aiding and abetting the discriminatory practices of the real estate industry which resulted in the confinement of Negro Americans to circumscribed areas in our central cities.

"The philosophy of racial segregation which permeated the Federal housing agencies from the time they were established in the 1930's has not been eradicated. Today, with top-flight Presidential appointees heading these housing agencies, in field offices across the country some of the old experts in apartheid are still working their way, crippling and blocking implementation of even the present limited housing Order. We say these long-time experts in apartheid should be retired.

"We say that if the Federal Government could successfully implement residential segregation for more than 30 years, it can successfully implement residential desegregation from here on out. This Order must be expanded, but that is not enough. As we have seen in other fields, such as schools and employment, reaffirming a right which already belongs to people is only the first essential step.

"Merely opening the door to housing rights does not mean that those who have been denied those rights and have faced rejection over many decades, and who have had to accustom themselves to the limited confines of a segregated housing market - merely opening the door does not mean they will quickly forget all that is past and eagerly rush through the door to exercise their rights.

"The Federal housing agencies should be directed to carry out positive programs to encourage Negro and other minority families to move into the mainstream of the housing market. Minority group homeseekers, civil rights organizations and local fair housing committees should be able to count on the fullest cooperation at all levels of the Federal establishment."

Mr. Rutledge said that the NCDH Center for Fair Housing, a newly-created program operation of his organization, will provide a national coordinated service to assist the more than 1,000 voluntary fair housing groups working to create integrated communities across the United States. One of the major activities of the Center, he said, will be the development of new approaches for encouraging more rapid dispersion of minorities into all sections of the community, and more effective use of laws and regulations designed to achieve equal opportunity in housing.

The NCDH executive director urged increased participation by Negroes and other minority-group members in the local fair housing committee movement, and proposed an immediate 2-point

"Partnership Project":

1. A massive, continuing drive for broadening of the Executive Order, its effective implementation, and the institution of positive action by the Federal housing agencies to achieve integration.

2. A "Home Seekers Registration Drive," comparable to the Voters Registration Drive in the South, to make known the work of the fair housing groups and to assist Negro families in finding the homes of their choice. Such a program, he said, should include active involvement of representatives of all religious, civic, fraternal, political and social minority group organizations in the area. It should provide for widespread distribution of literature describing the laws and the services offered by local fair housing groups throughout the metropolitan area; arrangements for representatives of local committees to participate in membership and other meetings of the minority-group organizations; community-wide housing conferences and workshops held under the joint sponsorship of the minority-group organizations and fair housing committees, and direct referrals of prospective buyers and renters to appropriate groups.

The National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing, formed in 1950, is an affiliation of 37 national civil rights, civic, religious and labor organizations which seek to end racial, ethnic, and religious discrimination and to achieve an integrated housing market. A list of the member agencies will be found on the back of page 1 of this release.

FOR RELEASE SUNDAY, MAY 9, 1965

Leaders of New York City community organizations with predominantly nonwhite memberships were urged yesterday (May 8) to join forces with voluntary fair housing committees working in more than 200 communities in the Greater New York area in an accelerated program to encourage Negro and other minority group homeseekers to look for housing in all parts of the city, and its suburbs.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting sponsored by the Association of Fair Housing Committees of Metropolitan New York and the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing (NCDH), Edward Rutledge, executive director of the National Committee, told representatives of about 100 local organizations that housing segregation lies at the root of a segregated way of life, and that laws against discrimination must be recognized as an essential first step toward achieving a system of equal opportunity.

The luncheon meeting, held at the Community Church of New York, also heard brief statements from Paget Alves, Jr., associate director for housing, National Urban League; Dr. Ashley King, representing the Committee on Civil Rights in Metropolitan New York; and Thomas Elijah, chairman, and David Ludlow, executive director of the association.

Mr. Rutledge said that the NCDH Center for Fair Housing, a newly-created program operation of his organization, will provide a national coordinated service to assist more than 1,000 voluntary fair housing groups working to create integrated communities across the United States. One of the major activities of the Center, he reported, will be the development of new approaches for encouraging more rapid movement of minorities into the general housing market, and more effective use of laws and regulations prohibiting discrimination in housing.

"As we have seen in other fields such as schools, jobs, and recreational and other public facilities, our work has only begun when fair practices laws are on the books," the NCDH executive declared. "The law establishes the framework within which we can move toward achieving a society of freedom and equality. But merely opening the door, merely reaffirming by statute constitutional rights which already belong to people does not mean that those who have been denied their rights, have faced rejection over many decades, and have had to accustom themselves to the limited confines of half of a dual housing market will quickly become aware of the housing opportunities offered in an open market, nor that they will quickly forget all that is past and eagerly rush through the door to exercise their rights."

"Nor," Mr. Rutledge continued, "does passage of a fair practices law mean that all of those among us who have abridged the rights of others will in good faith accept both the letter and the spirit of a necessary social reform. However, the law does set up machinery which, if adequate and properly used, can control discriminatory behavior to a substantial degree."

Mr. Rutledge drew a sharp contrast between the response of businessmen to fair employment and fair housing laws, commenting as follows:

"In the employment field, a large part of the business community is engaging in positive programs to carry out the spirit as well as the letter of the law. Many business organizations are conducting well-planned, vigorous programs to recruit nonwhite employees, and they have sought and are receiving the active help of minority-group organizations in a partnership effort to make equal job opportunity a reality.

"On the other hand, with notable exceptions, a large part of the housing and financing industry has clung to the discriminatory practices of the past. All too often the letter of the law is obeyed only when builders, brokers and bankers are compelled to obey it. All too often the spirit of the law is ignored or opposed.

"During the past two years we have seen a nationwide campaign, spearheaded by the National Association of Real Estate Boards, to persuade the electorate to wipe out by popular vote all existing fair housing laws and prevent their future enactment.

"Discriminatory practices are deeply institutionalized in much of the organized real estate industry. Brokers, builders and bankers tell us they respond to 'the mind of the market.' Actually, to a large extent their policies and practices create 'the mind of the market.'

"When a majority of the voters in Berkeley, Seattle, Tacoma, Detroit, Akron and the State of California voted against fair housing, latent personal prejudices were built into a 'mind for segregation' by the skillful propaganda of major segments of the real estate industry. Now, these areas are facing a loss of Federal funds for urban renewal and other housing programs, and are still suffering from the tensions and divisiveness created by racist elements during the referendum campaigns."

Mr. Rutledge expressed gratification that real estate interests had been unsuccessful this year in their efforts to secure passage of legislation for anti-fair housing referenda in eight states: Arkansas, Indiana, Maryland, Nevada, Rhode Island, Texas, Utah and Washington.

The NCDH executive director said that dispersion of nonwhite families from areas of racial concentration is proceeding far too slowly in New York, where city and state fair housing laws are regarded as among the most far-reaching in the nation. Mr. Rutledge continued:

"Before the advent of local fair housing committees, a Negro homeseeker was called on to make an almost heroic effort to break through discriminatory real estate practices -- and often he had to make that effort alone.

"But today, many of those who worked in partnership with the Negro to get our fair housing laws are working in partnership with Negro homeseekers to make the promise of the laws a reality. One of the best by-products of our laws against discrimination has been the formation of this network of voluntary fair housing committees in New York City and its suburban communities, including northern New Jersey and southern Connecticut.

"There have, of course, been many gains. The fair housing laws, plus the determination of minority families to move into the mainstream and secure the homes of their choice, plus the assistance of local fair housing groups, has resulted in the movement of nonwhite families into hundreds of streets, neighborhoods and communities which formerly were restricted to white occupancy.

"During the last two years, local fair housing committees have directly assisted more than 200 Negro families in locating homes in the Greater New York area. And, I might add, all of the move-ins were made routinely and without incident of any kind.

"But overall, we have scarcely made a dent on housing segregation. Too many Negro Americans are still paying too much for too little with their housing dollars, and this will continue as long as accommodations are sought in overcrowded areas. Too many good housing buys are available in the general market, both apartments and homes for sale, that many Negro families looking for homes could readily afford but do not know about, do not see, and thus are by-passing. Too many communities with good homes, good schools, convenient transportation, good recreational and shopping facilities, and with good neighbors are being overlooked."

Mr. Rutledge said that expanding employment opportunities arising from the decentralization of industry and the emphasis on quality education should make suburban housing increasingly attractive to nonwhite families. "We must work together," he declared, "to see to it that all citizens are informed about these expanding opportunities and are encouraged to take full advantage of them."

The NCDH Executive Director urged that a "partnership project" be undertaken by minority group organizations and the fair housing groups for achieving more rapid development of integrated housing patterns. He proposed the following three-point program:

1. Stimulating maximum use of all Federal, state and local laws and regulations affecting housing discrimination and segregation: state and local fair housing laws; state real estate licensing regulations; plans and programs of government housing agencies; and the Executive Order barring discrimination in federally-aided housing, including immediate participation in the campaign to secure strengthening of the Executive Order by President Johnson.

2. Working for more effective implementation of all laws and regulations, including provision for adequate budget and staff for the enforcement agencies; liberal enforcement policies; and full support of the enforcement agencies by the political power structure.

3. A broad and continuing informational program, beamed to reach the total minority community, to be spearheaded by the minority-group organizations in cooperation with the Association of Fair Housing Committees. Such a program should include active involvement of representatives of all religious, civic, fraternal, political and social minority group organizations in the work of the Association. It should provide for widespread distribution of literature describing the laws and the services offered by local fair housing groups throughout the metropolitan area; arrangements for representatives of the Association and various local committees to participate in membership and other meetings of the minority-group organizations; community-wide housing conferences and workshops held under the joint sponsorship of the minority-group organizations and the Association; and direct referrals of prospective buyers and renters to the Association.

The Association of Fair Housing Committees of Metropolitan New York is a federation of local voluntary fair housing groups.

The National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing, formed in 1950, is an affiliation of 37 national civil rights, civic, religious and labor organizations which seek to end racial, ethnic, and religious discrimination and to achieve an integrated housing market.

FOR RELEASE
WEDNESDAY, MAY 26, 1965
AND THEREAFTER

Thirty of the Nation's leading representatives from the housing industry, government, philanthropic foundations, religious bodies, labor, and the field of intergroup relations are meeting this week at the Holly Knoll Conference Center in Capahosic, Virginia, to evaluate on-going programs and explore new approaches designed to accelerate integration in housing.

The Capahosic Housing Conference, which is being held Wednesday through Friday (May 26-28), was convened under the joint sponsorship of the Phelps-Stokes Fund and the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing (NCDH).

A principal feature of the meeting will be an in-depth examination of the program activities of "Operation Open City," a pilot project initiated by the National Committee in January 1964 for the purpose of developing practical methods and techniques which would result in more rapid dispersion of Negro and other minority group families from areas of racial concentration to neighborhoods throughout New York City. Administration of this program was transferred to the Urban League of Greater New York in the fall of 1964, under a cooperation agreement with NCDH.

Participants also will study other local community action programs for achieving housing integration, such as those conducted in various metropolitan areas by the American Friends Service Committee and the National Urban League.

"The great internal problems which threaten our Nation will never be solved until we squarely face the root evil and pervasive effect of segregated housing," declared NCDH Executive Director Edward Rutledge and Associate Executive Director Jack E. Wood, Jr., in a statement announcing the Capahosic conference.

"Unless we move rapidly to stop the growth of housing segregation and reverse present trends, the conflict over segregated schools will get worse, not better," they continued. "Equal employment opportunities will be substantially nullified by the increasing movement of industry to outlying areas, while nonwhite job hunters are forced to live in the central cities. Our cities will face mounting difficulties in raising the money to provide essential services. Urban renewal programs will be stymied by almost insurmountable racial problems. Resentment and bitter despair will continue smouldering in our urban centers, inviting increasing conflict and explosion."

The NCDH executives called on the Federal Government, state and local governments, the housing industry, philanthropic foundations and other public interest organizations, labor unions, religious institutions, and citizens throughout the country to join forces in moving the issue of housing into a priority position in the current drive for civil rights.

"By bringing together leadership from all of these areas," they said, "the Capahosic Housing Conference should help create a new sense of urgency on this crucial issue."

Mr. Rutledge and Mr. Wood said another major item on the conference agenda will be a discussion of the role and responsibility of government, private industry and foundations in support of efforts to achieve equal opportunity in housing.

"The Federal Government should, of course, take the lead and set the standard," they declared. "It has a grave responsibility to put its full weight and power behind efforts to end housing segregation. For 30 years the Federal housing agencies actively promoted residential segregation as a national institution. Federal programs resulted in the mammoth all-white suburban communities which surround our major cities, and the confinement of Negroes and other minorities to circumscribed areas in the urban core."

"Today," they continued, "the Executive Order prohibiting discrimination in federally-aided housing is so limited in scope and so narrowly interpreted that it has had practically no impact on housing segregation. Housing is the major gap in the Federal policy of nondiscrimination. The President should close the gap. He should immediately extend the Order to cover all existing federally-aided housing and all mortgage lending institutions which are chartered, supervised or whose deposits are insured by the Federal Government."

Mr. Rutledge and Mr. Wood said that the NCDH Center for Fair Housing, a program service their organization provides to assist local community groups throughout the country, will use the experience of Operation Open City to develop guidelines and to encourage local organizations in other metropolitan areas to undertake similar projects. They reported that the Center for Fair Housing is in contact with more than 1,000 voluntary fair housing committees working to advance integrated housing in 30 states.

The NCDH spokesmen said one of the principal reasons New York City was chosen as the testing ground for the demonstration program was the existence of comprehensive fair housing legislation in this area. However, they went on to say that the techniques and methods which are being developed can be adapted to any metropolitan area.

Open City's plan of action follows a two-pronged approach. First, the identification and cultivation of extensive contacts through which specific, current information on housing opportunities is widely communicated throughout the minority communities. Second, the identification of neighborhoods in all sections of the city which are predominantly or entirely occupied by whites, where housing accommodations are frequently available, and finding residents in such neighborhoods who will take the lead in forming fair housing groups to provide a "helping hand" for nonwhite home-seekers.

"This program," the two executives commented, "involved an exhaustive and continuing study of New York City neighborhoods, covering patterns of residence, average housing costs, availability of housing, convenience to transportation, schools and other community facilities, and the development of widespread 'people to people' contacts in both white and Negro communities. Detailed community profiles, prepared by the neighborhood fair housing groups, are broadly distributed by Open City through churches, civil rights agencies, social and civic clubs, and other organizations with predominantly nonwhite memberships."

Mr. Rutledge and Mr. Wood pointed out that until very recently Operation Open City was manned entirely by volunteers. The two full-time workers who administer the program, they said, are now receiving modest stipends. They also reported that during the short time the demonstration project has been in operation, fair housing groups in the five boroughs of New York City have risen from 15 to 27, and more than 600 nonwhite families have used the program's services in looking for homes. More than 400 of these are currently in the market for living quarters outside traditional Negro neighborhoods.

Mr. Wood, who chaired the planning committee for the Capahosic Housing Conferenec, lists the following persons as participants: Paget L. Alves, Associate Director, National Urban League, New York City; Alexander Joe Allen, Executive Director, Greater New York Urban League, New York City; Algernon D. Black, Ethical Culture Society Leader and Chairman, NCDH Board of Directors, New York City; Leo Bohannon, Director Mid-Western Regional Office, National Urban League, St. Louis, Mo.; Robert L. FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9, 1965
AND THEREAFTER

In a telegram congratulating President Johnson on his major civil rights speech presented at Howard University last Friday, Edward Rutledge, executive director of the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing (NCDH), told the President yesterday (June 8) that immediate expansion of the Executive Order prohibiting discrimination in federally-aided housing would help ease tensions "in the uncertain months ahead."

"No President," the NCDH spokesman told the Chief Executive, "has ever spoken more eloquently or with such deep insight and knowledge of the problems which beset Negro citizens and damage all Americans. Nor has any President ever matched deed with word as you have done."

However, Mr. Rutledge went on to say that discrimination in housing "constitutes a barrier that confronts the Negro in his effort to achieve full freedom in every other aspect of life." He urged the President to use his power to "close the remaining gap in the Federal Government's policy of nondiscrimination by extending efforts to achieve full equality of opportunity to the housing field."

The present housing Order, issued by President Kennedy in November 1962, is largely restricted to new homes with mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration or guaranteed by the Veterans Administration. Mr. Rutledge reports that it applies to about 10 per cent of the federally-assisted housing supply, new and old, and that it covered about 18 per cent of the Nation's new housing starts during 1964.

NCDH and its 38 national member organizations have recommended that the President extend the nondiscrimination requirements of the Order in two respects: 1) to reach all existing federally-aided housing; and 2) to cover the conventional mortgage lending market, including all commercial banks and savings and loan associations which are chartered, supervised, or whose deposits are insured by agencies of the Federal Government. The committee has also called for strengthening the enforcement procedures of an expanded Order. Mr. Rutledge states that under the extensions recommended by his organization the housing mandate would cover an estimated 83 per cent of all new home construction and a substantial part of the existing housing stock.

In his telegram to President Johnson, the NCDH executive said that much of the turmoil faced by the Nation's cities is the outgrowth of housing segregation and the spread of racial ghettos. He cited the continuing strife over segregated schools arising from segregated neighborhoods; discrimination in housing as a barrier to employment opportunities; conflict over urban renewal programs which displace nonwhites into a restricted housing supply, extending areas of racial concentration; and the increasing difficulty of the cities in raising adequate tax income to provide essential services.

"Your swift action now," he told the President, "would accomplish much to ease tensions during the uncertain months ahead and to set the course for full freedom during this decade."

TEXT OF TELEGRAM TO PRESIDENT JOHNSON
June 8, 1965

Dear Mr. President:

Our warmest congratulations for your magnificent and penetrating speech at Howard University. Surely the people of this Nation will be inspired and challenged by your deep personal and firm official commitment to building a society in which full equality becomes a reality for Negroes and all other people in our land. No President has ever spoken more eloquently or with such deep knowledge and insight of the problems which beset Negro citizens and damage all Americans. Nor has any President ever matched deed with word as you have done.

Once the voting bill is passed only one fundamental, but critical, gap will remain in the Federal policy of nondiscrimination. But that gap -- discrimination in housing -- constitutes a barrier that confronts the Negro in his effort to achieve full freedom in every other aspect of life. You alone, Mr. President, can knock down this remaining barrier by amending Executive Order No. 11063 to extend its coverage to all housing, past, present and future, in which the Federal Government is directly or indirectly involved, including all commercial banks and savings and loan associations which are chartered, regulated, or whose deposits are insured by agencies of the Federal Government.

There is an urgency for your action now. It will be hailed as a great promise of fulfillment to all Negroes and racial and ethnic minorities confined to racial ghettos, and to the millions of white American citizens who believe in equal opportunity in housing.

Racial discrimination in housing is one of the best known, longest standing and most intensively documented manifestations in American life. Almost as widely known is the fact that the most disruptive consequences of housing discrimination is the rise and spread of racial ghettos. Today, in the very eye of the storm of the Negro Revolution the racial ghetto stands, largely unassailed, as the rock upon which rests the pattern of segregated living which pervades and vitiates almost every phase of Negro life and Negro-white relationships.

Cities across the country are torn with strife over segregated schools arising out of segregated neighborhoods -- busing, ethnic balances, de facto -- have all become fighting words. Police brutality charges, counter-charges, violence and riots boil up in the ghettos. Dope traffic and other sordid violations with their accompanying crime statistics, graft and strongly alleged and deeply believed police involvement are rampant. School drop-outs and great numbers of unemployed youth sputter as the "social dynamite" exploding in the ghetto; city housing inspectors who "look the other way" at code infractions; courts that penalize housing lawlessness by "slaps on the wrists;" overcrowded, slumlord-exploited, rat- and vermin-infested tenements breed patterns of bitterness, antipathy and rent strikes; sullen masses provide ripe breeding grounds for provocation by Black Nationalists, Muslims, rabble-rousers and self-seeking politicians.

The rising turmoil involves the entire city; many run to the suburbs to "escape" the rising crescendo, leaving the inner-core to be agitated anew by urban renewal programs which displace nonwhites into restricted housing supply, and leaving the city with a declining tax base inadequate to provide essential services.

Your swift action now would accomplish much to ease tensions during the uncertain months ahead and to set the course for full freedom during this decade so that America can move realistically toward your goal of a Great Society -- neither white nor black, but one Nation, indivisible with liberty and justice for all.

We know you agree, Mr. President, it is imperative that this Nation provide fullest opportunities for Negro citizens to move freely into the mainstream of American life. We submit that this can never be accomplished in the framework of a segregated society stemming from segregated housing patterns.

We earnestly request that you extend the Housing Order now and we pledge you the fullest support of our 38 national member agencies with more than 60 million members, and the cooperation of more than one thousand local fair housing committees now working in 30 States.

Respectfully,

Edward Rutledge

TO: NCDH Board of Directors

FROM: Edward Rutledge, Executive Director

SUBJECT: Dates for NCDH National Conference, Election of New Officers and Board Members and Constitutional Changes

The purpose of this memorandum is to advise you of the following: (1) Dates of the National Conference and next NCDH Board Meeting; (2) Election of new officers and board members at the September 9th Board Meeting and (3) Recommended NCDH Constitutional amendments.

1. You have been notified in previous memoranda from the Chairman of the Board, Algernon D. Black, and in TRENDS IN HOUSING that NCDH is convening a National Conference in Chicago on October 21-23. It will be held at the Sherman House and will follow the National Annual Convention of NAIRO. The theme of the Conference will be "A Thousand Harlems: How to Break Up the Racial Ghetto."

We plan to hold the Board Meeting in Chicago at either a dinner meeting beginning at 7:00 p.m. on October 22 or on the afternoon of October 23 at 3:00 p.m., depending on hotel and conference program arrangements which will be announced to you shortly. Please reserve these dates.

In the event that you are unable to attend personally due to financial considerations, we hope you will feel free to designate a representative in your agency--perhaps from a Midwestern regional office--to represent your organization at both the Conference and the Board Meeting.

2. At the special NCDH Board Meeting held on September 9, the following officers and board members were unanimously elected: George R. Metcalf as President; Mrs. Marietta Tree as Vice President; Dr. Frank S. Horne as Chairman of the Executive Committee; Board Members:

Malcolm Andresen, Wayne Phillips, Richard Ravitch and William Scheide.

3. Recommended amendments to the NCDH Constitution, voted upon unanimously at the September 9 Board Meeting, are submitted in this memorandum and will be presented at the October Board Meeting for ratification. On the basis of the discussion held regarding these amendments, Frances Levenson, Chairman of NCDH's Membership Committee, has submitted the following constitutional changes adopted at the Board Meeting on September 9. These amendments provide for a Board of Directors composed of one representative from each member organization rather than two as applies now and for directors-at-large to be selected by the Board equal to the number of organizational members of the Board as follows:

Constitutional Changes

Section (2)(a):	Each member shall designate (two) one representative(s) who shall be a Director(s).
Section (3):	Each member may also designate alternates to serve at meetings of the Board of Directors in the absence of the representative(s) designated as a Director(s).
Section (4):	The Board of Directors, by a majority vote, may elect Directors-at-large up to (one half) the number of Directors designated by the member(s) organizations. Such Directors shall be elected for a specific term not to exceed three years.

Fair Housing Law Enacted in Ohio

Five New Laws in 1965

On July 23, Ohio became the 16th state in the nation to enact legislation barring discrimination in private housing. Its law applies to all residential property except sale or rental of owner-occupied one- and two-family houses; to real estate agents with respect to housing covered by the law; and to all operations of mortgage lenders.

Enforcement will be by the Ohio Civil Rights Commission, which may investigate complaints, attempt conciliation, hold hearings, issue orders, and seek court enforcement when required. Before exercising enforcement powers, the commission must find that a complainant is a bona fide homeseeker. The law becomes effective Oct. 30, 1965.

Rental Housing

Maine's new law covers rental housing only, excluding units in owner-occupied 2-family houses and rooms in owner-occupied homes where four or less are rented. It provides no enforcement agency. (Trends, May-June, 1965.)

Gary, Ind. This city's new fair housing ordinance applies to all sales and rentals (including vacant lots), except rental of units in owner-occupied 2- or 3-family houses and rental of rooms in private homes; and to real estate agents and mortgage lenders with respect to housing covered by the law.

Enforcement is by a newly-created Commission on Human Relations, empowered to initiate investigations on its own motion; investigate charges of discrimination; to subpoena witnesses; hold public hearings; issue cease and desist orders; and seek court enforcement when necessary. The new ordinance became effective on June 4, 1965.

In 1965, four states adopted their first nondiscrimination housing laws covering private housing: Indiana, Rhode Island (Trends, Mar.-Apr., 1965), Maine and Ohio. Colorado, Connecticut and New York strengthened existing laws.

Positive Action Urged To Extend Integration

NCDH Meeting on Housing-Jobs-Schools

More than 200 government officials from all sections of the United States met in New York City on June 29 to discuss the urgent need for positive, aggressive action to make anti-discrimination laws and regulations more effective instruments for achieving an integrated society.

Convened by the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing (NCDH), the conference was held at the Brotherhood-in-Action Building. It focused on four major topics: Jobs and Housing; Equality in Housing and the Law; Schools and Housing; and Achieving Integration in Housing.

"There is growing dissatisfaction, disillusionment and frustration with the limited impact of anti-discrimination laws and regulations on racial segregation," NCDH Executive Director Edward Rutledge said in a statement outlining the purpose of the meeting. "NCDH is calling for new, determined approaches in implementing these measures—for bold, affirmative, imaginative action to wipe out inherently discriminatory segregation and to actively promote the development of integrated communities."

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., Chairman of the Federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, headed a list of distinguished speakers at the meeting. Attending were representatives of Federal agencies; chairmen and executive directors of state, county and city human relations commissions; state attorneys general; and top constitutional lawyers and intergroup relations officials.

Roosevelt Arriving to Speak on Jobs and Housing

Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Jr., is greeted by NCDH President Charles Abrams (at podium) as he arrives to address the Brotherhood-in-Action Housing Conference. Mr. Roosevelt was introduced by Congressman James H. Scheuer of New York, long a member of the NCDH Advisory Council.

NCDH Conference

In opening remarks, NCDH President Charles Abrams reviewed the spread of nondiscrimination laws affecting housing. He reported that as of June 1, 1965, the Federal Government and at least 91 states and localities had taken official action to achieve an open market.

However, Mr. Abrams warned of the strength of opposition forces. "During the last two years," he declared, "we have witnessed a concerted effort, led by local real estate interests and actively promoted by the National Association of Real Estate Boards (NAREB), to persuade the people to turn back the clock and legalize housing segregation at the ballot box. This is an extremely serious threat to the entire movement for equal rights."

(The New York Times June 30th report on the NCDH conference said officials of NAREB were unavailable for comment on Mr. Abrams's charge.)

Jobs and Housing

Representative James H. Scheuer, Democratic Member of Congress from New York, introduced Mr. Roosevelt. Congressman Scheuer has long been a member of the NCDH Advisory Council, and is a pioneering builder of open occupancy housing.

The head of the Government's fair employment commission stressed the interrelationship of housing, jobs and education. Quoting from President Johnson's address to graduates of Howard University on June 4, he said the injustices suffered by Negro Americans are "a seamless web. They cause each other. They result from each other. They reinforce each other."

Calling segregated housing a serious obstacle to employment opportunities, Mr. Roosevelt said the problem is growing with the movement of industries to outlying areas at the same time they are recruiting Negro employees. He said thousands of Negroes are losing jobs because they are denied homes near the location of new plants.

Bipartisan Greeting Between Two Noted Liberals

State Senator George R. Metcalf, Republican of New York and sponsor of the pioneering Metcalf-Baker Fair Housing Laws, and Mr. Roosevelt, a well-known Democrat also of New York, exchange greetings. Looking on are (left to right) NCDH Treasurer D. John Heyman, Associate Executive Director Jack E. Wood, Jr., and Edward Rutledge, NCDH Executive Director. Senator Metcalf, who decided to retire from the New York State Legislature this year, is a member of the NCDH Board of Directors.

"The American business community," the speaker declared, "should use its influence with those segments of the real estate industry which cling to ancient wrongs, with property owners, and with the public at large, to end racial barriers to housing. As employers, they have a stake—moral and financial—in doing this. As Americans in leadership positions, they have an obligation to their country to do it."

Mr. Roosevelt called on businessmen to use their political and civic leadership in support of open housing; to support laws for equal rights and promote their spread across the country; and to cooperate with public and private efforts to extend equal opportunity.

Fair Housing and the Law

Jack Greenberg, Director-Counsel, NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., chaired the seminar on Equal Housing Opportunity and the Law. Mr. Greenberg reviewed the historic role of law in the civil rights struggle, and noted that this session would cover the substance of discussions at the National Legal Conference on Equal Opportunity in Housing, held in Berkeley last February under the sponsorship of NCDH and the University of California Law School (Trends, Mar.-Apr., 1965).

Reports on the Berkeley conference were presented by Sol Rabkin, Director, Law Department, Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, and Chairman of the NCDH Legal Committee; Joseph B. Robison, Director, Commission on Law and Social Action, American Jewish Congress, and NCDH General Counsel; and Martin E. Sloane, Washington attorney.

(Since the Berkeley meeting was reported in a past issue of Trends, this article will only cover points developed by Mr. Rabkin and Mr. Robison not reported heretofore. Copies of Initiative and Referenda in Civil Rights, by Rabkin; The Possibility of a Frontal Assault on the State Action Concept, by Robison; and The Executive Order on Housing and Conventional Financing, by Sloane are available from NCDH.)

Anti-Fair Housing Referenda

Mr. Rabkin questioned the propriety of civil rights forces opposing all use of initiative and referendum as a law-making process. He suggested greater attention be given to tightening state referendum provisions, as well as other action to protect civil rights under law. Major points emerging from the discussion:

- Civil rights issues should be immune from referenda. Mr. Rabkin noted that Massachusetts exempts religious issues from referendum; Maryland bars appropriations laws; other states exempt public health and safety laws.

High Court Will Rule on Prop. 14

Fall Decision Expected

Litigation involving seven cases which attack the constitutionality of the "segregation amendment" to the California Constitution is scheduled for consideration by the State Supreme Court no later than Oct. 25, 1965, according to recent reports received by Trends. The amendment (Article I, Section 26) appeared on the ballot as Proposition 14 and was adopted by referendum on Nov. 3, 1964 (Trends, Jan.-Feb., 1965, and following issues).

NCDH has joined more than 40 California organizations in entering the case as friends of the court. Represented among those from California are the state's major religious bodies, civic and civil rights agencies, labor unions, fair housing committees, official human relations commissions, and city governments.

Major Arguments

Major arguments presented in the amicus brief include the following:

¶ By vesting "absolute discretion" in the owner as to disposition of his property, "the amendment attempts to sweep within the pale of state constitutional protection both reasonable and unreasonable motivations, ethical and unethical considerations, licit and illicit reasons for selecting willing buyers and renters."

¶ The amendment was proposed and passed for the precise objective of guaranteeing the right to discriminate on racial, religious and ethnic grounds in the sale and rental of real property. It was sponsored by California real estate interests, who made it clear during the initiative campaign that Proposition 14 was intended to nullify the state's fair housing laws and prevent the enactment of such legislation in the future.

¶ Article I, Section 26, of the California Constitution clearly violates the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution by placing the protection of the state's legal system behind those who discriminate against minority citizens, by denying those who suffer discrimination redress of law, and by arbitrarily barring the exercise of state power to regulate discrimination in the transfer of real property.

Poll Finds New Outlook On Housing Integration

White Response Explodes "Flight" Theory

The response of white Americans to a question concerning a Negro neighbor next door "may point to a major breakthrough toward real integration in many parts of the United States," according to a LOOK MAGAZINE article on a comprehensive Gallup survey of the American mood today.

"Eight in ten white Americans said they would not move," reports LOOK, going on to note that support of integration is even more marked among teen-agers, and that less than one-fourth of the white Southerners polled said they would move. (See chart below.)

"Greatest Surprise"

The report also included the following observations:

"This unexpected response to the Negro as neighbor [LOOK said it was the greatest surprise of the survey] does not mean that Negroes will now receive a warm welcome from white real-estate dealers. It does suggest, however, that many Americans are willing to accept, in theory at least, an idea that seemed unthinkable to most of them a few years before. Whatever they might think, large numbers of Americans now seem to deem it socially unacceptable to express themselves as bigots."

A sharp change in the attitude of Americans on the subject of equal rights was shown by a comparison of two Gallup polls commissioned by LOOK: one in 1959 found that only 5 per cent cited integration as the most important problem facing the nation, whereas in the current survey almost 25 per cent considered it the number one problem. Only keeping the peace topped integration among the major concerns listed.

"The reaction of our white majority to the persistent Negro challenge strongly suggests that while the little men of our land have been making the ugly headlines, most Americans have been doing some basic thinking," says LOOK.

"Suppose a Negro family moved next door to you. What would you do?" The surprising response of whites:

New Jersey Supreme Court Upholds Fair Housing Law

Rejects "Absolute Property Rights" Argument

In a unanimous decision handed down on June 28, the New Jersey Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the state's fair housing law. The high court's action resolved conflicting opinions by two lower courts—one having upheld the law, the other having ruled it invalid. The appeal against the statute was brought by the New Jersey Home Builders Association and the State Association of Real Estate Boards.

The New Jersey law, enacted in 1961, covers the sale of privately-financed homes in developments of 10 or more; rental of apartments in buildings with three or more units (excluding owner-occupied three-family houses); and all sales and rentals of government-aided housing, including homes with outstanding FHA-insured or VA-guaranteed mortgages. It also applies to real estate brokers and salesmen and to mortgage lenders with respect to housing covered by the law.

Highlights from the Ruling

The following excerpts are drawn from the June 28 decision:

"Private property rights are not absolute. They are always subject to the reasonable exercise of the police power. . . . In the State's exercise of its police power it has placed myriad restrictions upon the property owner's right to use land as he chooses. For example, the law of nuisance, easements by necessity, the division of the benefits of water, sanitary regulations, building codes, zoning ordinances and statutes, and planning regulations, have all been recognized as legitimate restrictions on the use of private property. . . .

More pertinent to the issue before us, the rule against perpetuities, the rule against certain restraints on the alienation of land, the rule prohibiting a testator from devising his property subject to a condition which violates the public welfare, and rent ceiling laws are all examples of legitimate police power restrictions upon the right of a private property owner to dispose of his property as he chooses. . . .

In short, the private property owner has the right to use and dispose of his property as he chooses only so long as his action is not contrary to the general welfare. . . . The statute here is certainly as reasonable a regulation of private property toward the achievement of a highly desirable public goal as are planning and zoning laws. The latter have long been upheld when attacked as taking property without due process of law."

Reasonable Classification

The Court also struck down arguments that the law was unconstitutional because it applies to some but not all housing:

"A classification having some reasonable basis is not invalid merely because it is not made with mathematical nicety or because in practice it results in some inequality. . . . evils in the same field may be of different dimensions and proportions, and the reform may, therefore, take one step at a time, attacking the evil where it seems most acute to the legislative mind. . . . It is common knowledge that the economic status of Negroes in New Jersey is considerably less than that of the white population. The Legislature, recognizing this fact, could have supposed that multiple housing developments are more likely to be within the Negroes' limited means. Furthermore, the Legislature could have found that by freeing the large multiple housing developments from discrimination, a desired pattern of interracial living will be more readily established in the whole community."

Background of the Case

The case grew out of a complaint of discrimination filed with the New Jersey Division on Civil Rights by Mrs. Delia David. Mrs. David charged she was denied rental of an apartment by the Vesta Company solely because she is a Negro. In this case, David v. Vesta Co., 81 N. J. Super. 593 (Bergen Cty. Ct. 1963), the lower court held the law unconstitutional. An appeal was taken by Mrs. David and the Division on Civil Rights.

Meanwhile, a builder against whom no charge of discrimination was pending, together with the home builders and real estate associations, instituted a second constitutional challenge of the law. In this case, N. J. Home Builders Ass'n. v. Div. on Civil Rights, 81 N. J. Super. 243 (Ch. Div. 1963), the lower court upheld the statute, the home builders appealed, and the New Jersey Committee Against Discrimination in Housing and eight other public interest organizations entered the case as friends of the court.

In previous decisions, the New Jersey Supreme Court twice upheld the constitutionality of an earlier anti-discrimination law which applied only to government-aided housing. One of these cases, Levitt & Sons, Inc. v. Division Against Discrimination, 31 N. J. 514, 158 A 2d 177, was carried to the United States Supreme Court, which refused to consider an appeal. This particular litigation involved the 16,000-home New Jersey Levittown (now called Willingboro), which has been successfully integrated for several years (Trends, May-June, 1960; Sept.-Oct., 1963).

Pressure Mounts For Broad Order

Johnson Urged to Act

The drive for expansion of Executive Order 11063, prohibiting discrimination in federally-aided housing, is in full swing with groups and individuals in all sections of the country urging President Johnson to take immediate action.

NCDH is recommending that the housing order be extended to cover all existing federally-aided housing and all banks and savings and loan associations which are chartered, supervised, or whose deposits are insured by the Federal Government. Also, that the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing be directed to assume broad responsibilities to assure forceful and effective implementation of an expanded order, and that it be provided with adequate staff and budget to administer a comprehensive national program.

Religious Support

At the annual General Assembly of the Unitarian Universalist Association, held in Boston from May 25 to May 28, the delegates adopted a broad resolution supporting open occupancy, and including a call on the President to extend the housing order. Similar action was taken at the convention of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, held during June. As noted elsewhere in this issue, the recent NAACP convention also urged the President to act in this area.

Copies of NCDH's recommendations to President Johnson and background information are available from NCDH. Communications to the President should be sent NOW, with copies to NCDH.

FAIR HOUSING NEWS EXCHANGE

A Reporting Service of the
NCDH Center for Fair Housing

Chicago's North Shore

Fifty college students and hundreds of adult residents have been working for several weeks with Chicago's North Shore Summer Project (NSSP), a grass-roots effort to secure equal treatment and equal service for all homeseekers by realtors in that city's northern suburban communities. NSSP is being sponsored by the American Friends Service Committee and a large number of local religious, fair housing and civil rights groups. One hundred twenty North Shore clergymen are supporting the project.

This symbol of Chicago's North Shore Summer Project has been made into window and car stickers and badges. NSSP is selling the badges for 25¢; and the stickers for 10¢; with lower quantity prices. Interested persons should write to NSSP, 730 Elm St., Winnetka, Ill.

NSSP's main targets are the more than 100 members of the Evanston-North Shore Real Estate Board, which serves 11 communities with 325,000 residents. In 1964, with at least 2,000 homes for sale through the multiple listing service in North Shore communities, and with 20,000 Negro families in Chicago who can afford this type of suburban housing, only five Negro families moved into the North Shore area.

"For three years," says the NSSP Statement of Purpose, "North Shore fair housing committees have helped Negro homeseekers look at the few houses open to them. Now, Negroes are asking to be served by real estate men as first-class citizens. And Negroes are being turned away, just as they are at the courthouses in the South."

The college students, most of whom are North Shore residents, were given training for one week before embarking on eight weeks of interviewing local homeowners whose houses are being offered for sale through the multiple listing service. Their goal is to persuade the owners to list on a nondiscriminatory basis and to sign petitions asking the realtors to service all prospective customers alike.

With a strong religious base, NSSP is putting emphasis on its community education program, including discussion groups and neighborhood seminars. In late July, the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King spoke to an audience of 10,000 people at a meeting sponsored by NSSP on the village green of Winnetka. It was the first large-scale civil rights rally ever held in this North Shore suburb. A fair housing group is working in each community; a committee of clergymen is involving most of the ministers in the area. Another committee searches for and encourages buyers. In addition there are the usual organizational committees.

When attempts to negotiate with the Board of Realtors continued to be unsuccessful, a week's series of silent vigils were held in mid-July at the headquarters of the Evanston-North Shore Real Estate Board. Each vigil was limited to 15 "sentinels"—clergy, Negro and other minority-group homeseekers, North Shore property owners, and other NSSP workers.

Chicago's North Shore communities are notorious not only for barring Negro residents. A recent survey by the Anti-Defamation League found that 60 per cent of the homes in the suburban town of Kenilworth are closed to Jews; 32 per cent in Lake Bluff; 30 per cent in Winnetka; 29 per cent in Lake Forest; and 24 per cent in Northfield. In Evanston proper, more than 16 per cent of the homes were found to be unavailable to Jews.

New Haven's HOME

The Housing Opportunities Made Equal Program (HOME) of the Greater New Haven Human Relations Council assisted 131 minority-group families in securing homes in predominantly white neighborhoods during 1964. Rentals accounted for 110 of the 131 placements; buyers, 21. The program handled 174 applications for housing assistance, with requests from 17 renters and 26 buyers on the active list at the close of the one-year period.

Twelve per cent of the complaints of housing discrimination received by the Connecticut Civil Rights Commission during 1964 were referred by HOME.

Last spring, HOME attempted to help about 75 low-income and welfare-assisted families find shelter at the request of the Department of Social Welfare. Housing aides found most apartments available to these families were substandard, overpriced, too small, and generally segregated.

The Housing Committee of the New Haven HRC reports its major activities during the year included: efforts to secure Negro membership on the New Haven Real Estate Board; support of scattered site use for public housing; sparking formation of tenants unions; housing code enforcement; and support of fair housing and other civil rights legislation in the 1965 session of the Connecticut Legislature.

FAIR HOUSING MOVEMENT IN THE U.S.A.

Sherman House
Chicago

This important working conference will overlap the Annual Meeting of the National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials (NAIRO) also to be held at the Sherman House on October 19-21. NAIRO has scheduled a major session on housing for the 21st which NCDH conferees are invited to attend, and NAIRO members are invited to participate fully in the NCDH conference. Further details will be coming to you soon. Plan to attend!

"Ring for Rights"

Radio WMCA, a public-spirited radio station in New York City, in cooperation with the Committee on Civil Rights in Metropolitan New York (CCRM), is operating a call-in program, "Ring for Rights," to which persons may report cases of housing discrimination and get assistance. CCRM is a citywide fair housing organization.

At intervals throughout the day, WMCA announces a "Ring for Rights" telephone number and urges persons who have been subjected, or have reason to believe they have been subjected, to discrimination to make use of the service. Trained telephone volunteers direct callers to appropriate government and voluntary agencies for aid. Progress on each complaint is followed up by CCRM, and complaints under the fair housing law are filed when necessary and appropriate.

"Ring for Rights" is patterned on WMCA's "Call for Action" program which has handled more than 20,000 cases of housing code violations in the last two years.

Discriminatory Tactics

Discriminatory methods used by many real estate brokers and salesmen when approached by Negro customers range from the blatently overt to the extremely elusive. Often "checkers" are needed to establish discrimination. The following list, compiled by the Fair Housing Council of the Delaware Valley, highlights the need for fair housing groups to increase their efforts to locate and develop a cooperative working relationship with responsible real estate dealers.

1. Broker claims house has just been taken off the market.
2. Dummy agreement of sale kept on file to "prove" to Negro that house in which he is interested has been sold.
3. Salesman either gives no sales talk or makes derogatory remarks about the property.
4. Broker always out of town when Negro customer calls, and no one else can show the property.
5. Key is out with another salesman; can't find key, so house can't be shown.
6. Inflated asking price quoted Negro customer; quickly reduced for white buyer.
7. White neighbor encouraged to buy, rent or take option on property to take it off the market.
8. Tells Negro customer, "Don't call me; I'll call you." Never calls.
9. "For Sale" sign removed so Negro homeseeker passing by won't realize the house is on the market.
10. Price raised in middle of transaction.
11. Furniture kept in vacant house to give impression it's owner-occupied and therefore not subject to fair housing laws.
12. Broker refuses to cooperate with nondiscriminatory real estate agent, thereby forcing agent to pull out of transaction or forfeit commission.
13. Broker's service withdrawn from person wanting to sell on open market.
14. Salesman of development housing hides in closet or slips out back door to avoid talking with Negro customer.
15. Broker says openly he will not sell the property to a Negro.

Work with Realtors

In California, according to reports received by the NCDH Center for Fair Housing, relationships between real estate boards and fair housing groups range from very good to very poor.

The Palo Alto Board of Realtors recently voted unanimously not to accept any residential properties with racial restrictions for its multiple listing service. A good relationship between the local fair housing group and this Board has developed over the years.

Symbol of the Fair Housing Foundation of Long Beach, Calif.

In Centinella Bay, the Human Relations Committee recently held a meeting, described as "quite successful," with 8 of the 10 realty boards in the area.

Approximately 30 brokers and salesmen met with the Fair Housing Foundation of Long Beach at a recent luncheon, but the LB group reports efforts to establish cooperation with leadership of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors have not been productive thus far.

The chairman of the Equal Rights Committee of the Bellflower Real Estate Board attended the first meeting of a group which is interested in forming a fair housing committee in that town. Only one Negro family resides in Bellflower, where a major Kaiser hospital is now under construction. Kaiser is an equal opportunity employer, and it is expected Negro employees will be looking for homes nearby. The group is concerned with promoting integration and avoiding the development of a ghetto area.

40,000 Good Neighbors

Careful planning over a six-month period and first-class organization were the key to the more than 40,000 signatures secured in a recent Good Neighbor pledge signing campaign in the Northern Virginia suburban communities of Washington. This is believed to be by far the largest such campaign ever conducted.

Northern Virginia Fair Housing, Inc., sponsored the drive in cooperation with clergy of the three major faiths. One hundred forty churches and synagogues actively participated. A Fair Housing Sabbath, an Interfaith Convocation at a local high school, and a pulpit exchange of white and Negro ministers were part of the preparation for the canvass.

The three counties making up Northern Virginia were divided into regions for the campaign, with 21 areas and 173 precincts. More than 2,500 volunteers were responsible to precinct captains. The need for canvassers was publicized by an article in the Washington Post, and all those who volunteered were required to attend a training course in solicitation techniques.

Canvassers talked to 57,000 people during visits to 72,000 residences, representing one-third of the total number of homes in Northern Virginia. The average was 30 home visits per canvasser. Additional signatures received through cards distributed in churches and synagogues came to 11,000.

The campaign was launched prior to the canvassing by publicizing the fair housing pledge already signed by 100 prominent Northern Virginia residents.

Co-chairmen for the drive were the Most Reverend John J. Russell, Roman Catholic Bishop of Richmond; the Rev. David G. Colwell, President, Council of Churches of Greater Washington; and Rabbi Noah Golinken, past President, Washington Board of Rabbis.

According to Commitment, newsletter of the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice, prior to the pledge signing campaign Bishop Russell, suggested to priests of the Richmond Diocese that they remind their parishioners that segregation is immoral.

Using the Want Ads

Some 450 personal want ads supporting fair housing legislation, purchased by individual local citizens, appeared in The Milwaukee Journal on May 15. The paper said the project set a record in the paper's history.

The idea of using individual classified ads to show grass-roots support of fair housing grew out of an informal gathering of clergymen and laymen who met to discuss means of counteracting an advertisement run by the Milwaukee Board of Realtors opposing proposed fair housing legislation pending in the Wisconsin Legislature.

Letters were sent out asking individuals to buy three line ads costing approximately $2.10. The letter included several suggestions for the ad copy, and requested persons who participated to cut out the entire classified ad section of the Journal, circle their own ad, and mail it with a covering letter to their state assemblyman or senator, or both.

The advantages to such a project, its sponsors noted, are that it shows individual action and personal commitment, and the cost is insignificant as compared with that of a display ad placed by an organization.

NCDH Gains New Board Members

NCDH is gratified to announce the recent addition of several distinguished citizens to its Board of Directors as well as the affiliation of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., and the National Association of Housing Cooperatives. A total of 39 national organizations are now NCDH member agencies.

Additions to the Board are Mrs. Jonas E. Salk, member-at-large; Robert L. Carter for NAACP; Neil Gold for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, AFL-CIO; and Jack Greenberg for the Legal Defense Fund. Harold Ostroff now represents the Association of Housing Cooperatives, having previously served for the Jewish Labor Committee.

Robert L. Carter, NAACP General Counsel, has played a major role for the past 20 years in cases establishing constitutional precedents in the drive for equal rights in such areas as employment, schools and housing. This noted lawyer has won 23 of 24 cases argued before the U. S. Supreme Court. The author of many Law Review and magazine articles, he is one of four legal authorities whose essays appear in the new book, Equality, a symposium on "benign" quotas and compensatory treatment for Negroes, published by Pantheon.

MRS. JONAS E. SALK

Donna Salk, wife of the eminent scientist, was Chairman of the Pittsburgh Commission on Human Rights from 1959 to 1963, having served as a Commissioner from 1955. Now living in California, she was San Diego County Co-Chairman for "NO on Proposition 14," working against the anti-fair housing referendum. She heads the housing committee of the San Diego Citizens Interracial Council; is Vice President of the San Diego Urban League; Trustee of Tuskegee Institute; and Advisory Board member of the Republic National Bank.

JACK GREENBERG

Jack Greenberg, Director-Counsel, NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., is a noted constitutional lawyer who has been the chief advocate in many history-making civil rights cases in such fields as housing, education and travel. Although only 30 years old at the time, while assistant to Thurgood Marshall he argued one of the historic 1954 school cases before the U. S. Supreme Court. A well-known author, his book, Race Relations and American Law, is widely regarded as a basic resource and is in the select White House library.

NEIL NEWTON GOLD

Neil Gold, Assistant to the President of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, AFL-CIO, came to his important post in the labor movement from an academic background. Educated at Columbia University, he has taught American History at Rutgers University and was a staff interviewer for Columbia University's Oral History Project. Mr. Gold is Executive Director of the Sidney Hillman Foundation and a member of the Executive Committee of the American Immigration and Citizenship Conference. He is a native of New York City.

HAROLD OSTROFF

Harold Ostroff is Executive Assistant to the President, United Housing Foundation. He also serves as President of the National Association of Housing Cooperatives, which has affiliates throughout the country. Trained as an engineer, he has been actively involved for many years in the construction aspects of the housing cooperative movement, serving as a director and Vice President of Community Services, Inc., a subsidiary organization of the United Housing Foundation which is concerned chiefly with construction.

• Attention should be given to raising the percentage of voters required to sign petitions in order to get an issue on the ballot.

• Make it illegal to pay canvassers for obtaining signatures on petitions, as does Oregon.

• Inform the electorate on what the real issues are.

• Step up community education to increase support of equal opportunity.

• Immediate consultation of representative forces supporting civil rights when an anti-fair housing referendum is threatened, with agreement upon a united counter strategy. Participants from California and Detroit emphasized that early action and a well-organized, coordinated effort are crucial.

• Inform members of the legislature and the public of the cost to the entire community of an anti-fair housing referendum: violation of moral principles; intergroup tensions; threat to zoning regulations and urban renewal funds. These arguments were effectively used in Texas, where a 1965 referendum bill was buried in committee.

• Institute court cases challenging the constitutionality of measures adopted by referenda which would legalize discrimination.

Reach of the 14th Amendment

In discussing the "Application of the 14th Amendment to Discrimination in Housing," Mr. Robison said litigation to test the reach and "stretch" of the Constitution and direct operation of the 14th Amendment may be the most important area in which legal experts will move in the private housing field.

"Do we, in fact, have a Federal fair housing law already on the books?" he queried. "The prohibition of discrimination in the 14th Amendment is limited to state action, but what constitutes state action? The Supreme Court has held that private enterprises exercising governmental functions involve state action. How does this concept apply to large private developers who plan communities, zone areas into residential, business and industrial patterns, and pick school and park sites?"

Mr. Robison said, ideally, litigation to test the applicability of the 14th Amendment to private housing should be built on this type of development. He urged participants to be on the lookout for self-contained communities where the developer generally exercises governmental functions and at the same time engages in discrimination. Details on such cases should be sent to NCDH.

The speaker stressed that even when odds are against winning a case, litigation has a positive political function aside from law and the courts. He cited the Stuyvesant Town case, lost by civil rights forces in the courts, but which led to development of an expanding body of fair housing legislation.

Schools and Housing

Robert L. Carter, General Counsel of NAACP and member of the NCDH Legal Committee, spoke on "Schools and Housing: Affirmative Action Under Law," with NCDH Board Chairman Algernon D. Black presiding.

The NAACP counsel said that often government agencies, including those directed by public policy or law to achieve nondiscrimination, follow practices which intensify segregation, particularly in schools and housing. He charged that public school administrators, under a mandate to desegregate, have heightened confinement of the Negro to the racial ghetto by rigidly applying the neighborhood school concept—a practice resulting in massive and increasing concentration throughout the North of Negro and white children in schools that are separate and apart.

"When neighborhood school lines follow ethnic and socio-economic residential patterns," Mr. Carter declared, "schools of high quality and prestige are provided for some, while schools of low quality and academic disrepute are provided for others. Almost invariably, relegation to these latter schools is the lot of the mass of Negro children."

In housing, the speaker said the programs of city, state and Federal agencies—new construction, public housing, urban renewal, rehabilitation—have enormous influence on residential patterns. Often, he asserted, housing programs perpetuate existing ghettos, create new ones, and make more difficult a school board effort to rezone or reorganize for desegregation.

"Discrimination and segregation in housing are at the root of the whole syndrome of racism involved in the civil rights struggle," Mr. Carter declared. "Effective and permanent success in ending any single facet of the civil rights problem is improbable so long as segregation persists in housing."

He noted that the interrelationship of housing and all other aspects of segregation is most demonstrable in respect to schools, observing: that housing desegregation is critical to successful widespread desegregation of schools in large urban centers; that, under present housing patterns, reorganization of schools for desegregation can be most successful in smaller communities where the Negro ghetto is limited in size and depth; but

Discussion from the Conference Floor

The Involuntary Ghetto

NCDH Board Chairman Algernon D. Black makes the point that today's racial ghettos are not voluntary and temporary as in the case of the European immigrants. Mr. Black chaired the session on Schools and Housing.

that de facto school segregation in every community can be minimized or alleviated by firm, creative action and new kinds of public school organization.

Mr. Carter said the majority of officials charged with the administration of local and state laws or public policies against discrimination have failed to consult with housing and school officials in order to assess the possible impact of their programs on segregation.

"The point I want to leave," he declared, "is that the agencies represented here, along with housing and school officials, have a responsibility they will not have assumed in the absence of a coordinated effort . . . Unless these evils—segregated housing and schools—are bested, the goal of equal rights and equal citizenship for all Americans, which is part of your official responsibility, will never be realized."

Achieving Integration

Dr. Frank S. Horne, NCDH Vice President, and Consultant on Human Relations, New York City Housing and Redevelopment Board, was the principal speaker at the final session, focused on "Achieving Integration in Housing: Affirmative Action Under the Law," with Mr. Rutledge presiding.

Needed: Educational Materials

Harold Hatcher, Executive Director of the Indiana Civil Rights Commission, consults with Carol Smith of the NCDH staff about educational literature to aid in implementing his state's new fair housing law.

Dr. Horne threw out a challenge for a change in policy from negative nondiscrimination to positive integration. "Integration in housing," he declared, "is the process through which we move from the restrictions of the ghetto to the freedom of the marketplace. It is vital to the inclusion of all Americans into every aspect of our way of life, on the same terms, without regard to race, religion or ethnic origin."

A Poet and Philosopher Calls for Practical Action

Dr. Frank S. Horne, often called the "dean of the housing-civil rights field," makes an impassioned plea for affirmative, practical action to achieve an integrated society. Dr. Horne developed and headed the Race Relations Service of the Federal housing agencies, served as Executive Director of the New York City Commission on Human Rights, and is now Consultant on Human Rights of the New York City Housing and Redevelopment Board. A Vice President and founding member of NCDH, Dr. Horne is also widely acclaimed as a poet.

Nondiscrimination alone, Dr. Horne said, is not enough. He noted that in some cases integration efforts have actually been stymied by narrow interpretation of anti-bias housing laws by official agencies.

"To move from the color consciousness of ghetto to a color-blind open market will require positive, aggressive color-conscious implementation of nondiscrimination policies covering the total housing supply," the speaker asserted. "It will call for a reorientation of the planning, financing and marketing policies of private and public agencies from the imposed racism of the ghetto to a consciously created inclusive pattern of integrated occupancy of buildings, projects, streets and neighborhoods."

Dr. Horne also quoted from the President's Howard University address:

> It is not enough to open the gates of opportunity. All our citizens must have the ability to walk through those gates . . . You do not take a man who for years has been hobbled by chains, liberate him, bring him to the starting line of a race, saying "You are free to compete with all the others," and still justly believe you have been completely fair.

The speaker said that despite the spread of anti-bias laws, the Executive order, small shifts in governmental and real estate practices, and some dispersion of nonwhites, racial ghettos continue to expand. He said, however, "the portents are good and the signs fortuitous if we learn how to use the great new forces at hand, including the drive of the civil rights revolution and fair housing stirrings at the grass-roots."

He called for the following action:

¶ Immediate extension of the Executive order and action to insure its effective enforcement, in line with NCDH recommendations. (See page 4.)

¶ Action by the HHFA Administrator (Secretary for the Department of Housing and Urban Development when a newly-created Cabinet post is established) to insure that the constituent housing agencies follow policies and procedures to positively implement integration.

¶ Liberal and aggressive use of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to promote integration.

¶ More state and local fair housing laws, and vigorous, affirmative use of existing laws to advance integration.

¶ Public and private agencies in any way related to the housing market must give priority to advancing integration.

¶ Civil rights proponents must become deeply involved with housing and planning programs at state and local levels; and with the effective use of Federal aids to promote integration of low and moderate income families.

¶ Development of closer contact with members of the real estate and mortgage financing industries by seeking out personal and organizational relationships which may influence their policies and practices.

¶ Support and expansion of the voluntary fair housing committee movement; active recruitment and movement of nonwhite families into good neighborhoods largely occupied by whites; active recruitment and movement of white families into good neighborhoods largely occupied by nonwhites and into adjacent areas.

(NCDH expects to announce the availability of the texts of Mr. Carter's and Dr. Horne's addresses in the near future.)

Title VI and URA

NCDH Associate Executive Director Jack E. Wood, Jr., then spoke on the urgent need for an affirmative and consistent approach by the Federal establishment. He was sharply critical of the limited application of Title VI by the Urban Renewal Administration.

NAACP Adopts Broad Plan to Accelerate Open Occupancy

Convention Approves Multi-Pronged Program

NAACP's Annual Convention, meeting in Denver from June 28 through July 3, with more than 2,000 delegates attending, adopted the most far-reaching housing policy in the 56-year-old organization's history.

Jack E. Wood, Jr., NCDH Associate Executive Director and former NAACP Housing Director, played a leading role in developing the expanded 1965 housing program, and this year—as in the past—planned and directed the convention's housing workshops. Mr. Wood and NAACP General Counsel Robert L. Carter were the principal speakers at the workshops, with responses from a panel composed of Morris Fleissig, Planning and Community Development Consultant of Newark, N. J.; Harold Fleming, Executive Vice President, Potomac Institute of Washington, D. C.; Booker T. McGraw, Assistant to the Administrator for Intergroup Relations, HHFA; and NCDH Executive Director Edward Rutledge.

Promote Integration

The thrust of NAACP's 1965 Policy Statement on Housing is the active and affirmative promotion of racial and economic integration. With that goal in mind, local branches are urged to expand their housing activities: to become involved at every step in the planning and execution of urban renewal and other government housing programs; to demand that lending institutions expand the availability of mortgage funds; to secure the cooperation of private industry and local leadership in promoting integration; to lobby for fair housing laws with strong enforcement provisions; where necessary, to initiate litigation and direct action against government agencies and private institutions which directly or indirectly practice or encourage discrimination; to participate in and support local fair housing committees; and to cooperate with members of the National Association of Real Estate Brokers, known as Realtists.

NAACP also urges rent receivership legislation to permit municipalities to correct housing code violations; the selection by official housing agencies of sites which will advance integrated housing and schools; vest pocket public housing projects on scattered sites in good neighborhoods; construction of middle-income and public housing in urban renewal areas; support of rent subsidy and other Federal programs, such as 221d (3), to expand the supply of housing in integrated areas for low- and moderate-income families.

Citywide Sanctions

Another major point in the policy statement was emphasized by Mr. Wood in his address at the convention: insistence that the Urban Renewal Administration apply the nondiscrimination requirement under Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Act on a citywide basis, rather than its present limitation to the single renewal area. (For further discussion of this issue, see page 9.)

NAACP also issued a strong appeal to President Johnson for immediate expansion of the Executive order on housing and for action to insure its effective enforcement. (For more on the housing order, see page 4.)

Copies of the 1965 NAACP Policy Statement on Housing and Mr. Wood's address, "Operation Open Occupancy: An Affirmative Action Program for Local NAACP Branches," are available from NCDH.

"URA may deal only with a local public agency established by the local government," he stated. "Every step of the program is predicated on the resources and authority of the city government as a whole. Yet, when it comes to nondiscrimination, URA sets aside the citywide concept and applies Title VI only to the small project area."

Problems in Kentucky

Mr. Wood said URA's limitation is inconsistent with the regulations of other Federal agencies. "The U. S. Office of Education will not approve funds for the construction of one school building unless the entire city school system adopts and follows a policy of nondiscrimination," he said. Similarly, he went on, a unit of a hospital system cannot secure Federal funds unless the entire system complies with the nondiscrimination command of Title VI.

"Every urban renewal project is part and parcel of a city's total housing program, profoundly affecting its general housing patterns," he continued. "Every urban renewal grant is a Federal grant to a city. It should be withheld unless nondiscrimination is established and effectively enforced, under fair housing legislation, in the citywide housing market."

Mr. Wood said NCDH will continue to press URA to apply Title VI on a citywide basis, and that litigation should be instituted if it does not do so.

A group of distinguished officials presented responses at this session.

Naming of Weaver Hailed by NCDH

SECRETARY WEAVER

The appointment of Robert C. Weaver as Secretary of the new Department of Housing and Urban Development was hailed by NCDH. One of the nation's top experts in urban affairs, Secretary Weaver was one of the founders of NCDH, and its president when he became HHFA Administrator in 1961.

The unprecedented speed with which the Senate unanimously confirmed his nomination is a historic tribute that strongly affirms the President's choice of "precisely the right man" for the new Cabinet post.

In a wire to the President, NCDH said that the naming of Weaver to head this important new Department of Government will bring "new hope and confidence" to urban areas that urgent problems will be dealt with fairly, democratically and expeditiously.

NCDH also praised the selection of M.I.T.'s Robert C. Wood, another noted expert on urban problems, as Under Secretary of HUD.

President Urged to Act Now on Housing Order

NCDH Asks Directive, Pending Legislation

NCDH has again urged President Johnson to expand the Executive Housing Order immediately, pending the enactment by Congress of Federal legislation outlawing discrimination in the sale and rental of housing, as called for by the President in his State of the Union Message. The following NCDH statement, adopted January 18, has been sent to the White House:

"The National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing notes with gratification the recognition by President Johnson in his State of the Union Message, delivered to Congress on January 12, of the need for effective Federal action against the nationwide evil of housing segregation and discrimination.

"Since its formation in 1950, NCDH has favored use of the legislative process to outlaw all forms of housing discrimination. We, of course, support the use of comprehensive Federal legislation, as proposed by the President, to deal with those aspects of housing discrimination which cannot now be reached by Presidential mandate. However, because of the urgent and pervasive nature of this problem, we feel Executive action is essential now, pending enactment of such legislation.

Meaningful Implementation

"NCDH is convinced the most meaningful way of implementing the basic aims expressed by the President would be his immediate extension of the Executive Housing Order to encompass all housing which is affected in any manner whatsoever by Federal aids and powers, including the mortgage lending operations of commercial banks and savings and loan associations which are regulated by Federal agencies.

"Such Executive action is clearly within the President's authority and responsibility, and should be taken now. Enunciation of a firm and unequivocal Federal policy is particularly urgent at this time in order to insure that the new Department of Housing and Urban Development will be able to formulate and put into immediate operation practical, effective programs to eradicate the explosive problems which are the inevitable outgrowth of the racial ghettos of urban America.

"NCDH considers the appointment by the President of Robert C. Weaver and Robert C. Wood, two of the nation's top experts in urban affairs, as Secretary and Under Secretary of the new Department, a wise and sound judgment of the highest order. It is our hope that the directive under which this Department will operate will make it clear that one of its primary purposes is to eliminate the ghettoized pattern of urban housing which now exists and which is rapidly expanding because of lack of urgently needed counteraction."

Edward Rutledge, NCDH Executive Director, urges fair housing groups and individuals from all sections of the country to join in calling on President Johnson to take immediate Executive action.

"Neither our cities and their people nor the new Department of Housing and Urban Development can afford to have the issue of Federal support of segregated housing held in abeyance awaiting legislation when an immediate remedy is at hand," Mr. Rutledge declares.

New Program Offers Direct Legal Aid to Local Groups

Legal Defense Fund and NCDH Launch Service

A new legal program to assist local groups which are working to end housing discrimination and build integrated communities has been launched by NCDH and the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc.

The program will provide fair housing committees and other community organizations with direct legal assistance for litigation aimed at combating housing activities—either by private or government action—which extend or perpetuate segregation.

Heretofore, many valid complaints and potential lawsuits in the housing field have not received attention because legal aid was not available. NCDH and the Legal Defense Fund (one of the 41 organizations affiliated with NCDH) believe this joint effort can result in significant cases of far-reaching import.

Agency Roles

As the principal legal arm of the civil rights movement, the Fund will provide counsel in appropriate cases, using its extensive contacts with lawyers throughout the country. As the central servicing agency for the fair housing movement, NCDH will encourage local groups to assemble the necessary data for legal action related to housing problems which should be resolved by the courts.

The types of lawsuits either contemplated or already in progress include the following:

¶ Suits against local real estate boards charging violation of anti-trust laws. This type of action has already been instituted by the Legal Defense Fund in Akron, Ohio (Trends, Mar.-Apr., 1965), and Trenton, N. J.

¶ Suits to challenge the selection of public housing sites which will virtually guarantee segregated projects.

¶ Suits to challenge urban renewal projects which will perpetuate or extend segregated housing and schools. An urban renewal project in North Carolina is being challenged because it would remove a small pocket of Negro residents from an otherwise white neighborhood and would effectively prevent the integration of schools.

¶ Cases against state and local anti-discrimination commissions which are lax in enforcing fair housing laws.

For the guidance of local groups which may wish to explore the feasibility of similar action, the anti-trust cases referred to above are briefly described:

Bratcher, et al v. The Akron Area Board of Realtors, et al. This case was brought by three groups of plaintiffs: Negro residents of Akron who had encountered discrimination in efforts to buy homes located in predominantly white areas; Negro real estate brokers who lost commissions when white brokers refused to work cooperatively with them; white sellers who had tried, without success, to sell property on a nondiscriminatory basis. The theory of the case is that the real estate board's policy and practice of keeping Negroes out of white neighborhoods restrains the trade or business of buying and selling real property, in violation of the Federal anti-trust laws.

Board Membership

Martin v. The Trenton and Mercer County Board of Realtors. In the New Jersey case, Mrs. Martin, a real estate broker, has for a period of 10 years attempted to become a member of the all-white real estate board and has been rejected without explanation six times. Her case also is being brought under the anti-trust laws and similarly alleges that there is a combination and conspiracy to keep Negroes out of predominantly white neighborhoods by depriving a Negro broker membership in the board and access to its multiple listing system.

NCDH urges local organizations to take a close look at the housing activities of both private and public agencies in their communities, and to consider making use of this important new legal service. Those interested in the possibility of litigation aimed at stopping housing abuses should make contact with NCDH, providing as detailed information as possible.

News Briefs

NCDH President George R. Metcalf announces that two additional national organizations have recently affiliated with NCDH, bringing the total number of agencies to 41. The two new affiliates are the National Community Relations Advisory Council, with Arnold Aronson, Director of Program Planning, to represent NCRAC on the NCDH board; and the Unitarian Universalist Association, Department of Social Responsibility, with Homer A. Jack, the Department's Director, as representative to the NCDH board.

Ann Arbor, Mich.*, adopted sweeping amendments to its fair housing ordinance on Dec. 20, 1965. Expanded coverage will embrace all real property transactions, exempting only rental of rooms in private residences.

NCDH's pilot project to develop a blueprint for programs to expand housing opportunities for families living in poverty areas, being conducted under contract with the Office of Economic Opportunity (Trends, Sept.-Oct., 1965), is well underway. Jack E. Wood, Jr., NCDH associate executive director, reports that the enthusiastic response from representatives of both public and private agencies in the four cities selected for study (Atlanta, Denver, Providence and Rochester) has been especially encouraging. Housing program plans for these cities are now in preparation.

During the spring, NCDH will hold a two-and-a-half day national workshop for top OEO officials from all sections of the country, and will lay before them a blueprint for similar projects which may be undertaken in their areas. A planning conference to firm up the content and format of the national workshop has been scheduled for early February. Participating in the planning sessions will be the OEO directors from the four study-cities, private agency leadership, housing experts, and representatives from OEO's Washington office.

How the Fair Housing Laws Are Working

More Integrated Areas, But Ghettos Are Expanding

Fair housing laws in states and cities over the country have been an important factor in the slow but steady movement of Negro families of predominantly middle-class status into the general community during recent years. In many sections of the country, a considerable increase in the number of neighborhoods which are integrated to some degree can be attributed to existence of the laws.

On the other hand, the growing body of legislation designed to wipe out housing discrimination and segregation has had little impact thus far on the restrictions faced by the overwhelming majority of nonwhite Americans. Even the most comprehensive statute has failed to halt or to substantially deter expansion of racial ghettos.

These are the overriding conclusions emerging from a survey recently conducted by the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing. The NCDH study is based primarily on reports from 15 official agencies administering anti-discrimination laws, each of which applies to both government-aided and privately-financed housing, and which have been in operation for periods ranging from almost two to more than six years.

Scope of Survey

The survey covers fair housing laws in the states of California (see note page 4), Colorado, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, Oregon and Pennsylvania; the District of Columbia; and the cities of Chicago, New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. Not included in the report are seven state and 24 city laws which apply to the general market. The majority of those not included have been in effect too short a period of time to warrant evaluation; others lack administrative machinery for providing the requested information; a few commissions failed to complete the NCDH questionnaires.

Other Conclusions

Other major conclusions to be drawn from the NCDH survey include the following:

¶ The intent of the fair housing laws cannot be realized unless prevailing concentration on the individual complaint process is broadened to include affirmative and extensive action to achieve integration. As NCDH Vice President Loren Miller recently commented, a fundamental weakness in implementation of the fair housing laws is the heavy reliance placed on individual initiative when the need is for massive social action.

¶ Even with respect to complaint loads, the laws are under-utilized in every jurisdiction. Only modest acceleration in the filing of complaints has occurred where the coverage of laws has been expanded and with the passage of time.

¶ The figures indicate widespread lack of information about the laws, and that relatively few minority-group homeseekers who are informed about them have faith in their effectiveness.

¶ The fact that only a small percentage of the aggrieved persons who file complaints get the housing to which they are entitled creates a negative attitude about the value of the laws, and indicates major weaknesses in enforcement procedures.

¶ The high percentage of cases which are dismissed for lack of evidence underscores the need for greatly expanded educational programs on how to use fair housing statutes and ordinances. It also suggests the need for more liberal interpretation of the laws and a more imaginative approach toward achieving their goal.

¶ Fair housing legislation is but one of many tools required to break up the racial ghettos. An increase in the supply of low-to-moderate cost housing, with dispersion of such housing throughout cities and suburbs, is absolutely essential in order to move beyond tokenism and develop an integrated community.

Additional Findings

Other findings confirm those of a similar NCDH survey conducted two years ago (Trends, Sept.-Oct., 1963). The fair housing laws have not had an adverse effect on business. With the exception of a few market areas where oversupply or general economic conditions have slowed construction, the building of homes and apartments continues apace.

Nor is there evidence that fair housing legislation has caused an increase in the movement of whites to suburbia, or accelerated racial change in neighborhoods which have become integrated and are vulnerable to resegregation. Both phenomena occur in areas with and without such laws, and there is no indication they have affected the degree of either. In fact, in some cases it can be shown that the fair housing law has helped stabilize changing neighborhoods.

Industry support of fair housing legislation has been notable in Massachusetts and Oregon. Reports from other states and cities show that response from real estate men ranges from a fair amount of cooperation to outright hostility. In general, home builders have shown more support for the laws, and boards of realtors have tended to spearhead the opposition to them.

The reports also indicate that some commissions are taking affirmative action to influence housing market practices on a broader scale, particularly through special programs beamed toward the real estate industry. Activities which focus directly on encouraging minority-group families to disperse throughout the community often are left largely to voluntary groups.

All commissions report the rapid growth and spread of local fair housing committees in their jurisdictions. The degree of cooperation between the public agencies and these voluntary committees, which serve as "goad and watchdog," varies from place to place. In some instances, a "partnership" attitude has developed which strengthens the work of each. Also, in a few areas, a heavy proportion of the complaints filed grow out of the activities of the fair housing groups.

Only a few of the commissions report regular liaison with planning bodies, housing and redevelopment boards, public housing authorities, relocation agencies, school boards, and other government agencies whose operations extensively influence racial patterns of residence.

Limiting Factors

Before examining the overall figures submitted by the reporting commissions, it should be pointed out that the effectiveness of the fair housing laws cannot be measured by complaint statistics alone. In some cases, the adjustment of a single complaint establishes a policy of open occupancy for all of the housing accommodations controlled by a large builder or real estate firm. (Of course, all settlements should include such a requirement.) Some commissions initiate investigations of discriminatory practices and take action to bring about compliance; some negotiate with real estate and financing interests, promoting voluntary open occupancy agreements. Also, in every jurisdiction competent observers report that a considerable number of nonwhite families have moved into formerly restricted areas without resort to the laws.

Another factor which should be taken into account is the weaknesses of the statutes and the evolutionary nature of their development. Throughout most of the time they have been in operation, most of the laws have been sharply limited as to coverage of the housing market and enforcement machinery and powers. Even now, only a few of the 46 state and city laws which apply to the private housing market have arrived at comprehensive coverage after a period of years.

Gap Closed Slowly

The chronology in New York State illustrates the latter point. Until 1961, the New York law prohibited discrimination only in government-aided housing. In that year, coverage was extended to a small portion of the private housing supply—most rentals in multiple dwellings with three or more units, and sales in developments of 10 or more homes. This expansion brought only 25 per cent of the state's housing supply outside of New York City (where coverage of apartment houses upped the percentage) under the purview of the law. The present coverage of all residential property sales and most rentals, encompassing 95 per cent of the state's housing supply, did not go into effect until Sept. 1, 1963.

Furthermore, despite its long history as a pioneer in civil rights legislation, it was not until 1965 that the Legislature provided the New York State Commission for Human Rights, charged with administering the fair housing law, with some of the most urgently needed enforcement provisions (Trends, Sept.-Oct., 1965).

Over the years, the laws in Connecticut, Colorado, Massachusetts and New York City have been similarly broadened, and those in New Hampshire and New Jersey strengthened somewhat.

Overview of the Record

Overall figures submitted by the commissions, adjusted to take care of minor variances in the closing dates of reports and methods of keeping records, indicate that through June 30, 1965:

- 7,300 formal complaints had been filed under the 15 laws covered by the NCDH survey. These range from 103 in Oregon to 3,906 in New York State, the latter figure representing the combined total for both state and New York City legislation. The Oregon, New York State and New York City records cover the entire six year reporting period.
- 42 per cent of the complaints were reported as "satisfactorily closed." In general, satisfactory closing means the complainant got or was offered the housing at issue or a comparable unit, or was placed on a waiting list, and the respondent agreed to comply with the law in future housing transactions.

However, no more than 12 per cent of those filing complaints actually secured the housing they sought or a comparable unit. About 15 per cent were offered housing but refused it. Many complainants found it impossible to wait out the period of investigation and settlement; some found the housing offered unsuitable; others were no longer interested.

- 43 per cent of all complaints were dismissed. Some involved housing not covered by the law; the largest number were dismissed on grounds of insufficient evidence to substantiate the complaint; some cases were dropped by the complainants.
- Almost all settlements were made by conciliation, with less than one per cent of the cases reaching the courts. Slightly more than one per cent were scheduled for public hearings and many of these

Note on California: The precise status of fair housing legislation in California cannot be determined until pending litigation has been resolved by the courts. At the general election in November 1964, the California electorate adopted an initiative constitutional amendment (Proposition 14) aimed at wiping out the state's fair housing law (Trends, Jan.-Feb., 1965 and following issues). Constitutionality of that amendment is now under challenge in the courts. If it is held unconstitutional, California's fair housing laws remain intact. Even if upheld by the courts, the "segregation amendment" will not nullify all of the state's fair housing provisions, but will leave in effect at least those which prohibit discrimination by real estate brokers and mortgage financing institutions. Thus, California is properly included among the fair housing states.

FAIR HOUSING NEWS EXCHANGE

A Reporting Service of the

NCDH Center for Fair Housing

New Jersey's CHOICE

During recent months, some 200 Negro families have moved into formerly all-white neighborhoods in northern New Jersey, using the facilities offered by 60 grassroots fair housing committees whose listing service activities are coordinated by CHOICE (Clearing House: Opportunities for Integrating Communities).

Sponsored by the Urban League of Essex County and the New York Metropolitan Region of the American Friends Service Committee, CHOICE provides for cross-contact among the 60 groups which cover 300 communities in nine counties; finds and refers clients for their services; and carefully follows up each referral to be sure the customer's needs and desires are met in as routine and efficient fashion as possible.

The program is directed by Mrs. Irma Thexton, a housewife and mother of four, who works with nine other part-time volunteers out of the Urban League Office at 589 Central Avenue in Newark.

Finding Clients

Finding clients who are interested in "pioneering" is a big part of the job, and CHOICE concentrates on opening white neighborhoods. "We're not a bit interested in continuing or perpetuating the classic fringe move," Mrs. Thexton comments. These are some of the methods used to attract customers:

- Advertisements in daily newspapers and the Negro press in Newark and New York City.
- Announcements over radio stations, contributed as a public service.
- Widespread distribution of literature describing the services offered by CHOICE and the local groups.
- Close contact with civil rights and other organizations with predominantly minority-group memberships.
- Contact with personnel departments of fair employment firms and institutions.
- Holding conferences and workshops and providing speakers for meetings.
- Word-of-mouth, especially by satisfied customers.

Locating Housing

Locating available housing is the job of the local committees. Two resources are used: 1) lists of "open housing" are compiled and kept up-to-date by members of each of the 60 fair housing groups (An article in the New York Herald Tribune on Oct. 24, 1965, described copies of these lists on hand at the CHOICE office as a "telephone-size directory."); and 2) the multiple listing service used by real estate firms. (These must sometimes be pried open.)

Compiling fair housing group lists. Real estate pages of newspapers covering the area are regularly scanned for advertisements of housing on the market. Designated members of the committee covering the community identify appropriate properties and seek a pledge of nondiscrimination from each owner. Originally this was done by phone, but only about 20 per cent of the calls resulted in open occupancy commitments.

Now, one or more committee members call in person on the seller, usually accompanied by a "friendly neighbor" who lives near the location of the advertised property. "This works about 50 per cent of the time," says Mrs. Thexton. "The big thing is the neighbor. The seller can't very well say 'What will my neighbors think?' when we have a neighbor right there to answer him."

Year-Round Drive

The "friendly neighbor" is apt to be a person who has signed a Good Neighbor pledge. The New Jersey fair housing groups, as part of their year-round program, continuously seek these pledges from residents of the 300 communities. Their goal is to cover all neighborhoods in the area, including all newcomers.

Of course, additional listings are obtained from families who are moving and are in sympathy with the committees' goals.

Doing Business With Real Estate Firms. CHOICE and the 60 committees, according to the Tribune article, strike fear into the hearts of diehard real estate dealers. "Actually," comments the clearing house director, "the real estate people have come a long way from our first dealings with them." There are indications that Negro homeseekers calling at real estate offices are more likely to receive equal services than in times past. "The broker," Mrs. Thexton observes, "doesn't know whether the Negro buyer is by himself or working with us."

Nonetheless, unless the brokerage firm is known to be cooperative, CHOICE is convinced the homeseeker is more apt to get a complete look at the multiple listing books and to inspect all properties of interest in white neighborhoods if accompanied by a member of the local fair housing committee, using the "Escort System" developed by AFSC.

Also, it has become widely known throughout northern New Jersey that, when necessary, CHOICE and the local groups will not hesitate to take recourse to the New Jersey fair housing law or to engage in direct action.

Servicing Procedures

When a homeseeker makes contact with CHOICE, these steps are taken:

- During a conference with the client, CHOICE explains that it serves as a referral agency and that under the program all listings and contacts with real estate firms are handled through a local committee in accordance with the convenience and wishes of the client.
- At the same time, a Client's Card is filled out for CHOICE's master file. The completed card provides detailed information on the type and size of housing desired, price range, first and second choice of location, and an expression of the client's willingness to "pioneer."
- A copy of all information supplied by the homeseeker is then referred to the appropriate fair housing committee (or, in some cases, committees). A committee member assigned to each client makes direct contact with him and follows through. If the homeseeker wishes to buy a home, the cooperative house-hunting project may go on over an extended period of time—brokers say the average customer inspects from 30 to 35 homes before reaching a decision.
- Meanwhile, progress is carefully followed up in each case by the CHOICE office, and detailed records are maintained. Follow-up folders are geographically divided into five groups, and volunteers check on one group each day.

Important Adjunct

An important adjunct to CHOICE and the work of the 60 hometown groups is "Fair Housing Service Agency," the AFSC Housing Opportunities program for northern New Jersey. The Service Agency functions as a resource on "how-to" techniques, provides materials and speakers, maintains liaison with government agencies and edits a bimonthly area newsletter in cooperation with the New Jersey Committee Against Discrimination in Housing. It also conducts workshops and conferences.

Keeping Integration

"Ludlow," Mayor Paul Jones of Shaker Heights (Ohio) recently commented, "may represent a turning of the tide in transitional patterns." Many observers have expressed a similar view, for in Ludlow a fair housing group has succeeded in reversing a rapid trend toward conversion of an integrated community into an upper-class Negro ghetto.

For ten years, Negro and white residents of Ludlow, a suburban area which cuts across the city lines of Cleveland and Shaker Heights, have worked without professional help to keep the integrated character of their neighborhood. In the last four years, an accelerating rate of racial change among homeowners has been reduced from 10 per cent per year to less than one per cent in 1965. School enrollment has changed from 80 per cent Negro to 65 per cent, with the first three grades now almost evenly balanced and the racial composition of the kindergarten now standing at 50 per cent white, 50 per cent nonwhite.

Ludlow is a community of some 600 homes in the $18,000 to $60,000 range. Several high rise buildings, providing about 1,100 apartments, are located in one corner of the area. The neighborhood is handsome, with schools noted for their exceptionally high quality, fine shopping and community facilities, and excellent transportation. About half of Ludlow lies in high-income Shaker Heights (residents have the highest median income of any U. S. city of more than 25,000); it is also adjacent to a large predominantly-nonwhite area.

The first Negro families moved into Ludlow in 1955. A year later, tours along the tree-lined streets found 25 per cent of the houses posted with "For Sale" signs. After the garage of a new nonwhite resident was bombed in 1956, three Negro and three white couples set the wheels in motion to organize the Ludlow Community Association (LCA) for the specific purpose of maintaining a neighborhood in which "families of different religious, racial, nationality and social backgrounds live in harmony and freedom of thought and spirit." No "quotas" were to be considered, nor would LCA attempt to dissuade Negro families who had decided they wanted to live in Ludlow. The organization would, however, concentrate on attracting white buyers to give a psychological lift to white residents who were leaning toward moving out. LCA would also encourage Negroes to break the color barrier in other neighborhoods which were all-white.

There was never a dip in property values, and community relations were increasingly harmonious. Nonetheless, it was a downhill fight for LCA during the early years. Realtors and banks closed the Ludlow housing market to whites: they were not shown homes for sale in the area, and it became difficult—often impossible—for them to secure mortgage financing. In 1959 and 1960, no whites bought homes in Ludlow. By the end of 1960, Negroes comprised 42 per cent of all homeowners in the community. If the rate of change had continued, that percentage would have risen to 84 by 1965.

For Interracial Areas

A National Newsletter for Interracial Communities is being published periodically to provide a special forum through which fair housing groups which are concentrating on stabilization programs can share experiences and useful ideas.

Published by the Marynook Homeowners Association of Chicago, the second issue of the Newsletter (Autumn 1965) reports on the activities of five local organizations which are working to keep neighborhoods integrated, and carries a directory listing 18 similar groups over the country.

For further information, contact Mrs. Hugh Brodkey, 8624 University Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60619.

By 1962, the trend had been set in reverse and a steady acceleration of white buyers began. More than 50 whites have bought homes in Ludlow in recent years, and the rate of change has slowed to a trickle. The racial composition of the community is now 78 per cent white, 22 per cent nonwhite (apartment houses have about 98 per cent white occupancy); homeownership is stabilized at about 57 per cent nonwhite, 43 per cent white.

Ludlow, says Prof. Marvin Sussman, head of the department of sociology at Western Reserve University, "demonstrates what can be done if people want to do it."

How did LCA do it?

First, the dedicated and skilled leadership has involved substantially the entire community. The association was organized block-by-block, and more than 80 per cent of all homeowners are among its membership. In addition to working for integrated housing throughout the metropolitan area, LCA mounted four major activities to attract white buyers:

• A listing service to handle sales in Ludlow. (LCA's first president serves as its attorney without fee.) Prospective buyers are invited to small cocktail parties and taken on informal tours of homes for sale in the community.

• A continuing campaign to publicize the assets of the neighborhood and advertise available homes for sale. More than $20,000 in donations were secured from three Cleveland foundations and several business firms to cover the cost of promotional materials. (Donations are deductible for income tax purposes.) An attractive brochure was published, and 15,000 copies distributed to business firms, hospitals and universities. A 30-minute film about Ludlow was produced and has had about 100 showings at schools, churches, clubs, etc. LCA also spends $200 each month advertising available houses it is handling in three Cleveland newspapers.

• Its own financing subsidiary, The Ludlow Company, was set up to provide second mortgages for qualified buyers who lack sufficient capital for the down payment. The company will lend up to $5,000 for up to five years—long enough to build sufficient equity in the first mortgage—at an interest rate half a percentage point above the prevailing rate for first mortgage loans. The company was organized with 400 common shares publicly offered at $100 a share. Several Shaker Heights businessmen bought 130 shares and later donated them to LCA for resale.

• Meetings with real estate brokers, lending agency officials, and community leaders to stop panic peddling (Shaker Heights has an anti-blockbusting ordinance with stiff penalties) and to develop more cooperative attitudes and practices regarding the community. Also, an LCA Building Codes and Zoning Committee stopped several housing violations.

One additional point should be stressed: no single factor has contributed more to getting and to keeping integration in Ludlow than the excellence of the Shaker Heights school system which serves the community.

Kansas City

The Greater Kansas City Council on Religion and Race is sponsoring a six-county Good Neighbor pledge signing campaign as part of a drive to organize and blanket the entire metropolitan area with 22 fair housing councils. These groups are now underway and are concentrating on building membership and laying plans for the pledge campaign to be conducted in February and March.

A citizens committee, People for Fair Housing, has been formed with 16 subcommittees representing business and industry, religious and educational institutions, labor, government, civil rights groups, civic and social clubs. Special units handle speakers, publicity, literature, special events and record-keeping.

terms. They have held that fair housing legislation is clearly within the bounds of the police power of states and cities; that in the exercise of this power it is proper for the Legislature to take into account the changing needs of society; that Legislatures have wide discretion to determine the means of protecting the public interest; that the evil conditions stemming from discrimination and segregation in housing are within the competence of law makers to correct; and that neither property rights nor contract rights are absolute, but are, and have always been, subject to governmental regulations for the common good.

In a recent unanimous decision of the New Jersey Supreme Court upholding the validity of that state's fair housing statute, the high court had this to say: ". . . the private property owner has the right to use and dispose of his property as he chooses only so long as his action is not contrary to the general welfare . . . The statute here is certainly as reasonable a regulation of private property toward the achievement of a highly desirable public goal as are planning and zoning laws. The latter have long been upheld when attacked as taking property without due process of law." (Trends, July-Aug., 1965).

Strike Limited Law

In only one state has an anti-discrimination housing law been held unconstitutional. In 1961, the Washington State Supreme Court, in a 5-4 decision, struck down legislation which applied only to FHA-insured and other publicly-assisted housing. Three of the five judges in the majority condemned the law on the ground that it violated both Federal and state constitutions by making an unreasonable classification between homes having government-insured loans and all other housing; two of the judges ruled against the law on several counts. Apparently the statute would have been upheld 7-2 had it provided universal coverage of the housing supply (Trends, Sept.-Oct., 1961).

On the other hand, courts in New York State and New Jersey have upheld laws applying to some but not all housing. A year after the adverse decision in Washington, New Jersey's highest court turned down charges that a similar law made an unreasonable classification, declaring: "The statute need not be a perfect and all encompassing remedy so long as it represents a reasonable approach toward solution of the problem . . . when, as in the present situation, there is a fair basis for singling out the class or group affected, the regulation is constitutionally unassailable." (Trends, Mar.-Apr., 1962).

Statistical Reports

Digests of the statistical data reported by the 15 commissions follow in the order each law affecting the general housing market went into operation. All amendments indicated have been to expand the coverage of housing, or to strengthen enforcement provisions or both.

New York City. Effective April 1, 1958. Amended 1961, 1962, 1965. Covers all sales; all rentals except units in owner-occupied 2-family houses; brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders; advertising. City Commission on Human Rights may initiate complaints and seek court injunctions to hold the housing at issue in status quo while complaint is pending.

Complaints filed – 1,722; satisfactorily closed–799; dismissed–806 (376 for lack of evidence to substantiate charges); pending–117. Complainant offered housing–527 (244 secured unit at issue or a comparable one, 283 refused the unit offered).

Existence of the law has resulted in a degree of integration in many formerly "all-white" neighborhoods in many sections of the city. An undetermined number of predominantly middle-class Negro families are known to have moved into rental and cooperative apartment houses and, to a lesser degree, into homes in outlying areas. Nonetheless, 80 per cent of the city's more than one million Negroes still live in four ghettos whose boundaries continue expanding.

The Commission reports the real estate industry is generally indifferent to the law or responds grudgingly on a case-by-case basis. It is working with cooperative brokers to secure agreements among real estate firms covering various market areas to provide equal services to all customers routinely.

Local fair housing and other community groups have been qualified by the Commission to serve as "outposts" for receiving complaints which are forwarded to its offices for processing. Shortage of staff (several key posts have remained vacant over extended periods), lack of sanctions, and administrative delays in securing injunctions are regarded as serious handicaps.

Colorado. Effective May 1, 1959. Amended 1965. Now covers all publicly-offered sales and apartment rentals; brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders; advertising. State Civil Rights Commission may initiate, and may seek injunctive relief or damages up to $500.

Complaints filed–229; satisfactorily closed –177; dismissed–41; pending–11. Further breakdown of figures not available.

The Commission reports voluntary compliance by the real estate industry has increased in recent months as a result of the law's expanded coverage. It works in close cooperation with the six fair housing groups which have formed in the Denver suburbs in the last two years, and with the Fair Housing Center, a metropolitan-wide listing service recently organized with major religious and some industry support.

Prescription for Effective Fair Housing Laws

At the NCDH nationwide conference held in Chicago during the fall (Trends, Sept.-Oct., 1965), Robert L. Carter, General Counsel for NAACP and member of the NCDH Legal Committee, gave the following prescription for curing the weaknesses of fair housing laws and making them effective instruments for achieving integrated communities.

1. Comprehensive coverage of the housing market, applying to owners, builders, brokers, mortgage lenders, and advertising. Limited fair housing laws guarantee citizens only part of an established right; partial coverage creates complications and confusion for everyone — homeseekers, the industry, and enforcement commissions.

2. Vigorous and affirmative implementation, backed up by provision for enforcement commissions to initiate complaints (including industry-wide investigations), issue subpoenas, hold hearings, issue orders, seek injunctive relief, award compensatory damages, and go to court for enforcement. Enforcement procedures should be streamlined; most are far too cumbersome. Success stories should be widely publicized.

3. Liberal interpretation of the law and recognition by the commission and the political power structure that its basic objective is to end segregation and promote integration. Concentrated attention should be given to moving both the suppliers of housing and homeseekers beyond the case-by-case concept. The goal is to create positive business practices and home-shopping habits which will advance integration.

4. Genuine, unequivocal backing of the fair housing law and the commission that administers it by top political leadership. The commission should have a departmental standing equal in status to the most important agencies of government. It should influence all government activities which affect racial patterns of residence from the planning stage on, including the reorganization, construction, rehabilitation and up-grading of schools. The commission head should have "cabinet" rank and function as a member of the inner-circle of government. Adequate budget should be provided, with freedom to select staff on the basis of professional qualifications, and with no political strings attached.

"It's time," asserts Mr. Carter, "that governors and mayors stopped regarding civil rights commissions as appendages to be shown off at election time and then forgotten. In the final analysis, a commission's chance to do a really effective job hinges in large measure on the depth of commitment of government's man at the top."

Although Denver has had a "buyers' market" for about two years, the Commission reports the industry itself admits it stems from economic and housing market conditions and is unrelated to the fair housing law.

Pittsburgh. Effective June 1, 1959. Covers sales or rentals by persons owning or controlling five or more units whether or not contiguous; brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders; advertising.

Complaints filed—208; satisfactorily closed —90; dismissed—107 (59 for lack of evidence, 18 not covered by law); pending—11. Complainant offered housing—40 (26 got unit at issue or comparable one, 14 refused unit offered.)

A 1965 survey by the Pittsburgh Commission on Human Relations, conducted in cooperation with the metropolitan area real estate board, found 57 per cent of local realtors oppose the law; 20 per cent approve. These findings served as the basis for proposals for affirmative action which the Commission has submitted to the board. Many nonwhite families have moved to formerly white neighborhoods without use of the law. Commission reports an increase in complaints from lower-income families in last two-and-a-half years. It works closely with fair housing groups, both in-city and suburban. Construction, sales, rentals and home ownership have increased in Pittsburgh in recent years.

Massachusetts. Effective July 21, 1959. Amended 1960, 1961, 1963, 1965. Now covers all publicly-offered sales and rentals except apartments in owner-occupied 2-family houses; brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders; advertising. Brokers who refuse to obey an enforcement order are liable to loss of license. Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination can initiate and seek injunctive relief. Statistics through 1964 only.

Complaints filed—427; satisfactorily closed —227; dismissed—139 (90 for lack of evidence, 28 not covered by law); pending—61. Complainants offered housing—162 (60 got unit at issue or comparable one, 102 refused unit offered).

The Commission reports a sharp increase in its complaint load in 1965. Large percentage of all complaints are brought through Boston's Fair Housing, Inc. Commission has gained substantial support from real estate interests. Considers under-use of law and inadequate budget for informational and community education programs greatest weaknesses. Industry spokesmen say the law has not disrupted business in any way.

Oregon. Effective Aug. 5, 1959. Covers persons engaged in the business of selling and renting real property. Those charged with discrimination are required to hold the housing at issue available until complaint has been adjusted. Attorney General may initiate investigations. Brokers who violate the fair housing law are liable to loss of license.

Complaints filed—103; satisfactorily closed —74; dismissed—28 (19 for lack of evidence); pending—1. Complainants offered housing—45 (19 got unit at issue or a comparable one, 26 refused unit offered).

The Oregon Civil Rights Division reports that the real estate industry generally accepts the law, and that considerable voluntary compliance has led to a steady increase in integrated neighborhoods. The real estate board and the Oregon Real Estate Commissioner have stated the law has not adversely affected business.

Connecticut. Effective Oct. 1, 1959. Amended 1961, 1963, 1965. Covers all sales; all rentals except units in owner-occupied 2-family houses; brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders. Connecticut Commission on Civil Rights can initiate and has limited injunctive relief provision. Violators are liable to fines up to $100, or 30 days in jail, or both.

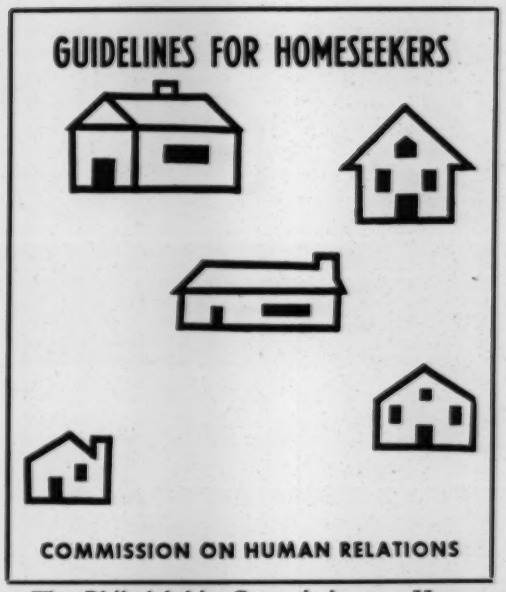
Complaints filed—302; satisfactorily closed —169; dismissed—107 (64 for lack of evidence, 15 not covered by law); pending—26. Complainants offered housing—147 (64 got the unit at issue or a comparable one, 83 refused unit offered).

The Commission reports industry generally is uncooperative, but that the number of "friendly" real estate agents is growing. The relationship with local fair housing groups is close, and Commission personnel have assisted in the formation and servicing of a growing number in the last two years. Real estate business is booming in the state.

New York State. Effective Sept. 1, 1961, for private housing. Amended 1963, 1965. (Earlier law covered publicly-assisted housing, including FHA and VA.) Now covers all sales; rentals except units in owner-occupied 2-family houses; brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders; advertising. State Commission for Human Rights can initiate, seek injunctive relief, and award compensatory damages. Violators of the law are subject to penal action. Statistics which follow include 1959-1961 coverage of government-aided housing.

Complaints filed—2,184; satisfactorily closed—726; dismissed—1,266 (716 for lack of evidence, 434 not covered by law); pending—166. Complainants offered housing—309 (195 got unit at issue or a comparable one, 114 refused unit offered).

Surveys by the State Commission indicate that voluntary compliance because of existence of the law has opened far more housing than the individual complaint process. Working with limited coverage through 1963 and grossly inadequate enforcement provisions until mid-1965, the Housing Division of the Commission (complaints are handled by another unit) has opened large subdivisions and apartment developments in numerous parts of the state by negotiating agreements with the housing industry and other government agencies. Leading industry representatives participate in local housing advisory councils across the state, cooperating in the development and institution of such agreements.



The Philadelphia Commission on Human Relations distributes this booklet, "Guidelines for Homeseekers," to help families considering buying a home make a sound investment. Included is information about how to use laws and regulations which protect every family's freedom of choice. In one week after publication was announced, 1800 copies were requested.

Pennsylvania. Effective Sept. 1, 1961. Covers sales and rentals except those involving owner-occupied 1- and 2-family houses; brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders; advertising. Commission may initiate complaints.

Complaints filed—558; satisfactorily closed —275; dismissed—178 (136 for lack of evidenee, 23 not covered by law); pending—96. Complainants offered housing—205 (80 got the unit at issue or a comparable one, 125 refused unit offered).

The Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission reports it can identify about 100 neighborhoods which have become integrated in recent years. It feels limited coverage and lack of injunctive relief the law's greatest weaknesses.

Reports housing business off in some market areas due to over-supply and local economic conditions.

An Important New Study of Race and Housing

NEGROES IN CITIES, by Karl E. Taeuber and Alma F. Taeuber, of the University of Wisconsin, constitutes a warning to urban America that unless massive action is taken to end racial barriers to housing, the explosive conditions generated by confinement to ghettos will continue unabated. The Taeuber study examines contrasting patterns of residential segregation from city to city and neighborhood to neighborhood. Its major conclusion: of the three principal factors which trap the Negro in the ghetto — free choice, discrimination and poverty, discrimination is by far the strongest. Ranks the degree of residential segregation in 170 American cities. Available from Aldine Publishing Company, 64 East Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill., 60605. 352 pages. $9.75.

New Jersey. Effective Sept. 13, 1961, for private housing. (Earlier legislation covered publicly-aided housing, including FHA and VA.) Covers sales in developments of 10 or more; most apartment rentals; all housing built with FHA and VA assistance; brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders; advertising. Statistics which follow include 1959-1961 coverage of government-aided housing.

Complaints filed—598; satisfactorily closed —154; dismissed—278 (178 for lack of evidence, 28 not covered by law); pending—166. Figures not available on number of complainants offered housing. However, the New Jersey Division on Civil Rights reports that in all satisfactory closings the complainant is offered housing or is given a pre-emptive right to the next available unit which is comparable to the accommodation sought.

Minnesota. Effective Dec. 31, 1962. Amended 1965. Covers all sales except owner-occupied 1-family houses (homes with FHA and VA assistance are covered); all rentals except units in owner-occupied 2-family homes; brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders; advertising. Minnesota Commission Against Discrimination may initiate complaints.

Complaints filed—178; satisfactorily closed —89; dismissed—22 (4 for lack of evidence, 13 not covered by law); pending—67. Complainants got unit at issue—31. Breakdown not available for the remaining 58 satisfactory closings, but the Commission advises complainants were either offered housing or placed on waiting lists.

The Minnesota law reaches approximately 30 per cent of the state's housing supply—a condition which creates widespread confusion in attempts to identify housing covered by the statute and discourages use of the law.

Philadelphia. Effective June 10, 1963. Coverage substantially the same as the Pennsylvania law. Violators are liable to fines up to $300, 90 days in jail, or both.

Complaints filed—123; satisfactorily closed —47; dismissed—42 (33 for lack of evidence); pending—34. Complainants offered housing—49 (17 got the unit at issue, 32 refused unit offered).

The Philadelphia Commission on Human Relations is seeking amendments to provide comprehensive coverage and stronger enforcement machinery. Some home builders contend they are discriminated against by the law's exemption of owner-occupied houses and have indicated they would support universal coverage. Substantial opposition among realtors is reported.

California. Effective Sept. 20, 1963. Covers sales or rentals involving buildings with 4 or more units (applies to all government-aided housing, including FHA and VA); brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders. (See note on California, page 4.) California Fair Employment Practice Commission, which administers the law, may initiate complaints, and may seek injunctive relief or damages up to $500.

Complaints filed—240; satisfactorily closed —95; dismissed—107 (65 for lack of evidence, 16 not covered by law); pending—38. Complainants offered housing—66 (31 got unit at issue or a comparable one, 35 refused unit offered). Other satisfactorily closed cases involved withdrawal of eviction notices, cash settlements, etc.

The Commission is faced with highly organized opposition spearheaded by real estate boards. Confusion over present status of the law (see note referred to above) has resulted in a heavy drop in the complaint load. Real estate business continues at a high level.

Chicago. Effective Sept. 24, 1963. Covers operations of licensed real estate brokers. Also prohibits "blockbusting." Violators of ordinance are liable to loss of license.

Complaints filed—110; satisfactorily closed —51; dismissed 46 (28 for lack of evidence, 18 not covered by law); pending—13. Breakdown of figures on cases satisfactorily closed not available.

The Chicago Commission on Human Relations reports existence of the ordinance is having some effect on industry policies. Management firms controlling 70,000 rental units have instituted nondiscriminatory policies. Of these, 30,000 were brought under open occupancy agreements through settlement of complaints by the Commission. It is also reported the law has stimulated an increasing "stay put" attitude among residents of integrated neighborhoods which were vulnerable to resegregation. Restriction of the ordinance to brokers and lack of state legislation to open the Chicago suburbs are considered greatest handicaps. Construction rate and real estate business generally continue at same high level.

Michigan. Effective Jan. 1, 1964. The State Attorney General has ruled that the new State Constitution prohibits discrimination in all housing and mortgage lending transactions. This ruling is now under attack in the courts.

Fair Housing Statutes and Ordinances with digests of state laws and list of city measures available from NCDH. 9 pages. 25¢ each.

Complaints filed—105; satisfactorily closed —32; dismissed—17 (14 for lack of evidence); pending—56. Further breakdown of figures not available.

The Michigan Civil Rights Commission has instituted a program to counter substantial opposition within the real estate industry and to promote affirmative compliance with the law. A proposed 6-point voluntary agreement is being presented to local real estate boards throughout the state, a number of which have cooperated with the Commission in setting up special workshops.

The Commission states that serious handicaps to effective implementation of the law are the traditional case-by-case approach; the time involved in processing complaints; and the fact that the Commission does not exercise the injunctive procedure to prevent cases from becoming moot because the housing at issue goes off the market before the matter is adjusted.

Construction is booming, particularly in the Detroit area, which has the state's largest concentration of nonwhite population.

District of Columbia. Effective Jan. 20, 1964. Covers all sales; all apartment rentals except units in owner-occupied 2-family houses; brokers and salesmen; mortgage lenders; advertising. District Commissioners' Council on Human Relations may initiate and may refer to corporation counsel cases for injunctive relief. Penalties provide fines up to $300 or imprisonment up to 10 days. Brokers who violate the regulation are liable to loss of license.

Complaints filed—170; satisfactorily closed —89; dismissed—73 (53 for lack of evidence); pending—8. Complainants offered housing—49 (27 got the unit at issue, 22 refused unit offered). The other satisfactorily closed cases involved withdrawal of eviction notices, discriminatory advertising, cases involving individually-owned properties which were no longer available, etc.

Efforts to achieve equal housing opportunities in metropolitan Washington are confronted by a situation unique in two respects. The 1960 census showed the nonwhite population of the District of Columbia represented 54 per cent of the total (now estimated by government sources at 63 per cent). Also, the suburbs which surround Washington lie in two different states, neither of which has fair housing legislation. Thus, the majority and rapidly-expanding nonwhite population of the nation's capital is entirely hemmed in by the "white noose" of Maryland and Virginia suburbs. In the last two years, more than 300 Negro families have broken through the barriers and moved into these suburban communities with the assistance of local fair housing committees. The five voluntary committees which blanket Greater Washington are among the few of more than 1,000 in the nation with waiting lists of homeseekers and insufficient lists of available housing to meet their needs.

Dear Moore

MID-QUEENS CITIZENS' COMMITTEE FOR CIVIL RIGHTS
Post Office Box 584
Flushing, New York 11352

Dear Friend:

For the past year and a half, our committee has been making efforts to make the management of Electchester Houses, a cooperative housing project sponsored by Local 3 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, live up to the open occupancy laws of our city and state.

The enclosed chronology of events details the frustrating story of the negotiations conducted by our committee under the auspices of the City Commission on Human Rights, including the agreements made and repudiated by Mr. Van Arsdale and the Electchester management. At this point, it is obvious that the Electchester management is not willing to move toward more than token integration (less than 1 per cent) and that the political influence of Mr. Van Arsdale has immobilized the City Commission.

Under these circumstances, our committee feels compelled to call for a public informational picket line on Tuesday, April 6 between twelve noon and 2:00 p.m. in front of Mr. Van Arsdale's office at the New York City Central Labor Council, 386 Park Avenue South (at 27th Street) in Manhattan.

We appeal to you to join us on the picket line and to take the other actions indicated below.

Sincerely,

MID-QUEENS CITIZENS' COMMITTEE FOR CIVIL RIGHTS

CHRONOLOGY OF EFFORTS TO INTEGRATE ELECTCHESTER

October 1963	Letter to Van Arsdale requesting a meeting.
November 1963	After numerous phone calls, Mr. Ottley, who has no powers to negotiate, meets with Committee. Promises to report to Van Arsdale.
Nov. 13, 1963	Letter to Van Arsdale requesting a personal meeting.
Nov. 27, 1963	Third letter to Van Arsdale requesting a meeting and formation of a joint committee.
Jan. 2, 1964	Another letter to Van Arsdale repeating same demands.
Jan. 1964	Meeting arranged between community leaders and a union committee. Only Mr. Ottley came, again with no powers to negotiate.
Feb. 4, 1964	Another letter to Van Arsdale, with copy to Commission on Human Rights.
Mar. 9, 1964	Distribution of leaflets throughout Electchester explaining the situation.
Mar. 10, 1964	Press conference at Pomonok Community Center. Van Arsdale appears, agrees to a meeting at Commission offices.
Mar. 26, 1964	Meeting at Commission office between Committee, Van Arsdale, management of Electchester Housing Corporations, City and State Commissions on Human Rights. City Commission finds "a pattern of exclusion" of minority groups, as proven by 0.3% minority occupancy. Recommends a 4-point program of overcoming the situation, including: Accelerated recruitment of minority group tenants, periodic meetings with both the Commission and this Committee, and reports on progress in this direction. Van Arsdale and the management representatives agree to Commission proposals.
Apr. 8, 1964	Commission confirms the agreement of March 26 in letter to all parties.
Apr. 24, 1964	Presidents of the Housing Companies deny by letter that agreement was reached on March 26. Claim to have admitted eight Negro families out of nine vacancies since March 26.*
May 25, 1964	Committee writes Van Arsdale, expressing shock at abrogation of agreement.
June 17, 1964	Meeting at Commission office. Van Arsdale and management spokesmen again deny any agreement. Claim 11 of 13 vacancies have gone to Negroes since March 26.*
Nov. 25, 1964	Committee writes to Human Rights Commission asking that they enforce the March 26 agreement and requesting another meeting be called with Van Arsdale and management representatives. [redacted]

*Note. This Committee's survey shows that as of December 4, 1964, there were only four new Negro families in Electchester.

JAN 25 1965

Dear Mr. Farmer:

I am happy to announce that generous contributions by sponsors of The National Committee On Tithing in Investment make it possible for the board to go ahead with plans to announce the tithing movement by ads in the Times and elsewhere. A proof of the copy prepared by advertising friends is enclosed. We are ready to go to press.

However, although we already have your agreement to sponsor NCTI, the Times requires specific permission to list your name as a sponsor in a N. Y. Times ad. The enclosed list includes your name among those we would like to name in the ad.

Your listing on the enclosed card is as we would like it to appear in the ad. If this is agreeable with you, please check the card for accuracy, and make only necessary corrections. Please give your approval by signing the card, and return it promptly so that your name can be included in these major announcements.

These ads, in my opinion, will give new hope to countless Americans that equal housing opportunity may become a reality for them. A stamped reply envelope is enclosed to speed your answer.

Cordially,

Many Americans want open occupancy in housing, but only a few of us in our daily lives can take the time and trouble to work for it. We are caught in what Life Magazine has called "the terrible silence of the decent."

The following proposal – Tithing in Investment – is based on the idea that one's investments can be an eloquent voice for integration. In just a few months – and with very little promotion – this plan has attracted nearly 3,000 sponsors. They

Is Open Housing Sound Business?

As with all investments, there is risk in open housing. But in our judgment there are many sound investment opportunities in this field; and these opportunities may multiply as NCTI's success encourages

What Can You Do To Help?

You can become a sponsor of NCTI. This does not obligate you to contribute money. The only commitment you make is to the idea of Tithing in Investment. If you want to contribute money to be used for this educational work, wonderful. We can use it. There are other ways to help, too:

with very little promotion—this plan has attracted nearly 3,000 sponsors. They include churchmen, educators, congressmen, businessmen, authors, union leaders, lawyers, economists, artists, entertainers and many others. The list grows longer every day.

Money talks. If you want your money to speak for your beliefs, you will want to consider this proposal for Tithing in Investment.

What Is Tithing In Investment?

It is investment by individuals or by non-profit institutions of about 10 per cent of their available investment capital in housing that is open to all. The National Committee on Tithing in Investment (NCTI) will serve as a clearinghouse for information about such investments. Organized as a non-profit agency, NCTI will not invest. But it will alert individuals and non-profit groups to investment opportunities in equal housing.

NCTI will bring together investors of good will and housing professionals who are committed to open occupancy. In this way the investor will gradually build up a "tithing portfolio," consisting of investments favorable to open occupancy housing. Such a portfolio might include equity multiply as NCTI's success encourages builders and developers to open their housing to everyone. However, NCTI will not advise investors on the financial soundness or safety of the investment. That is clearly the responsibility of the investor's broker or banker. NCTI will provide information on the social soundness of the investment—that is, whether the company's selling and renting policies are in line with the investor's own convictions.

What Good Will It Do?

Plenty! There is today a tragic shortage of capital available to developers and apartment house owners who wish to practice equal housing. The consequences are all too clear: each year about 1.5 million new family units are built, nearly all of them on a "de facto" segregated basis. And each year we get larger "black belts" in our cities and larger "white belts" in our suburbs.

One clear way to reverse this trend is to pour investment capital into equal housing. The money is available. Think what a tremendous difference it would make if the churches, the colleges, the labor unions and the foundations earmarked a small portion of their investments for equal housing. Farmer Cites 3 New Goals For Civil Rights Drive

By ROBERT A. CARTER
Journal-Courier Staff Reporter

Between one and two million new Negro voters can be registered in the south within six to nine months after the passage of pending voter rights bills, James Farmer, head of the Congress of Racial Equality said here Thursday.

Farmer, speaking under the joint auspices of the Yale Political Union and the Yale Law Forum, told an audience of some 400 at the Yale Law School auditorium that political involvement was only one of three new goals the civil rights movement must now pursue.

The other two are job opportunities and compensatory education programs, he said.

Although he called for passage of the voting rights bill, Farmer does not believe it will be sufficient. "In civil rights we tend to solve a problem by passing a law, then forgetting both the problem and the law," Farmer told his audience.

The articulate Farmer spent nearly two hours delivering an address that dealt with the origin, philosophical basis and the future of the civil rights movement.

He touched on a wide variety of subjects, often with wry comments that delighted the audience. His observations:

—On changing attitudes of northern police toward demonstraters: "Three Pinkerton men carried me away from the entrance to the World's Fair. All they had to say was 'Mr. Farmer, you should lose some weight.' " —On nonviolence: "CORE advocates a policy of nonviolence; without it the last five years would have been a bloodbath. But the average Negro is no more non-violent than, say, a white man."

—On the cause of the civil rights movement: "Three things caused it; the war, increasing education, and Africa. When I was a boy we'd go to Tarzan movies and identify with Tarzan; now black men stand tall."

—On the effects of the movement: "We have won many victories, but the greatest has been over ourselves—over our lack of self-esteem. A boy came up to me the other day and said, 'Mr. Farmer, I desegregated that lunch counter. Not you, Not Martin Luther King. I did it.' "

The Negro's battle for equality, Farmer said, is not finished, but merely entering a more subtle and difficult phase.

"Marching with our feet was easy; the lunch counters were a pushover," he said.

More difficult tasks which lie ahead are political mobilization, the providing of jobs and the r e m e d y of century-long maleducation of Negro citizens.

A start toward the first had been made with the organization of the Mississippi Freedom Democratic party and a similar Freedom Democratic Movement in Brooklyn, he said.

"Perhaps one contribution of the civil rights movement will be getting ordinary people involved in the political process," he said.

Job opportunities, unavailable in rapidly automating industry, must be found in the provision of new homes, roads, hospital facilities and in the solution of American transportation and educational problems, he said.

CORE is moving toward new solutions of job discrimination problems, through the use of such devices as consumer cooperatives, and credit unions, according to Farmer.

The third new goal — education — is perhaps the most massive, Farmer said. "I have seen high school drop-outs and even some who didn't drop out, who need extensive education before they are ready to even begin retraining," he said.

In the press conference held earlier Thursday Farmer vigorously denied recent reports that the civil rights movement was

"infiltrated with Communists."

Such charges, he said, were "an insult to the Negro community and to the civil rights movement."

"This implies," the CORE leader said, "that Negroes would not protest if Communists were not there.

"In fact Negroes are protesting real injustices, and I believe that the incidence of Communists in the civil rights movement is rather less than the incidence of Communists in American society as a whole."

Reporters at the press conference repeatedly attempted to draw Farmer out on planned nation CORE policy. He was chary about committing himself to firm future action.

"We plan continued direct action in Louisiana, North Carolina and northern Florida," he said. Questioned further, he said that political action and legal remedies would also be undertaken.

The planned action in Louisiana, disclosed after the press conference, involves so-called "direct action," (non-violent protest demonstrations) in the rural areas of Louisiana.

Farmer said that only New Orleans and Baton Rouge, of all Louisiana communities, had demonstrated any degree of compliance with the public accommodations section of the Civil Rights Act.

"In the rural areas, there is still complete segregation," he said.

While CORE plans increased action in Louisiana to combat this, Farmer said, "this doesn't mean we are abandoning Mississippi."

Farmer said that, while CORE planned to continue to direct its efforts to the securing of "full citizenship" for Negroes, its quest was having effects on other areas of American life.

"We are still concentrating on civil rights," he said," but our methods are finding their way into other causes. The Free Speech Movement at (The University of California at) Berkeley is an example."

Farmer said he advocates passage of a federal statute against the murder of persons engaged in protecting or advocating the exercise of constitutional rights.

Such a statute would allow the prosecution for murder in federal courts of persons who murder civil rights workers.

Farmer said that, in his view, voting rights legislation before Congress was inadequate literacy test is outmod said. "People can ge quaintance with politic from radio and televisio Farmer [illegible] e to abandon the high school diploma as a test for possible employment.

He pointed out that in many areas, full qualified minority group members cannot obtain jobs because they have not obtained diplomas —either because of school segregation, or because of the necessity to quit school to take jobs. "We can suggest candidates for jobs," he said, "but we can't give them high school diplomas."

Touching on another point, Farmer said that, while he believes President Johnson is sincere on his attack upon poverty, "many anti-poverty agencies do not include adequate representation of the poor themselves.

"It is quite possible that CORE chapters will undertake direct action against anti-poverty agencies —such as the one in New York —which do not represent the poor," he said.

"Not enough money is being spent," he said. Alluding to recent requests by the president for additional appropriations for the conduct of the war in Southeast Asia, he said: "I am for more talk in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic and more action in the United States."

What Next? Five Negro Leaders Reply

After the march on Washington, after the bombing in Birmingham, five principals in the civil-rights campaign discuss what action is called for now.

On Aug. 28, some 200,000 Americans — mostly Negroes, but including many whites — converged on Washington for the largest civil-rights demonstration the country has ever seen. Now, as the echoes of the march fade into history — and the echoes of the Birmingham bombing reverberate — these questions emerge: Where do Negroes go from here? What are the next steps in the civil-rights campaign? The New York Times Magazine put these questions to five Negro leaders. Here in alphabetical order are their answers.

'MORE EFFECTIVE TECHNIQUES'

By KENNETH B. CLARK

Professor of Psychology at City College

THE Aug. 28 march demonstrated the discipline, the seriousness, the persistence and the insistence of the bulk of American Negroes and some whites that racial injustices must now be eliminated from American life. Yet it is possible that the "success" of the march could confuse the issue and delay the attainment of the goal of racial equality. Some Negroes could interpret the demonstration as evidence of direct political power and believe the fact that it occurred will magically produce the desired results. And some whites could congratulate themselves on the fact that Negroes were permitted to let off steam harmlessly.

Such ideas, although comforting, would be serious misinterpretations of the meaning of the current civil-rights movement. Any political or other actions based upon them would be in error and probably tragic in their consequences.

IN a most disturbing sense, a society which permitted the perpetrators of 28 bombings in Birmingham to remain free and unpunished, a society which permits the convicted killer of a Negro woman to complete his harvest before enjoying the luxury of six months in a white prison, a society in which the highest elected official of a state incites the primitive passions of his people for personal political gain, a society which can continue to accept flagrant and subtle forms of racism in the same generation in which the horrors of death camps were exposed to the world is a society in serious trouble.

Negro organizations and their white allies must now develop precise and more effective techniques to deal directly with the areas of resistance to racial injustice in America. They must consolidate and conserve past gains and use them as the basis for removing the existing inequities. Specifically:

Ways must be found to make the Congress of the United States and the various state legislative bodies more sensitive and responsive to the present mood of urgency.

Serious negotiations with the leaders of American labor and of individual unions should be initiated and sustained.

If these discussions do not result in the elimination of patterns of racial exclusion from the American labor movement then more direct action techniques must be developed and used until these goals are obtained.

More systematic organized and sustained forms of selective patronage should be used by Negroes to eliminate the remaining forms of racial discrimination in employment and in places of public accommodation.

The problem of residential segregation has to be attacked by direct action and effective protests against the discriminatory practices of banks, real-estate groups and offending landlords.

Police brutality must be curbed and law-enforcement agencies and officials made to understand that it is their duty and responsibility to protect all citizens impartially. If this cannot be done by reason it must be done by disciplined civil disobedience.

Desegregation of schools, from the elementary through graduate and professional levels, must be accelerated. The present snail's pace of grudging tokenism should give way to a pace more consistent with the letter and the spirit of the May 17, 1954, Supreme Court decision and the trained manpower needs of the nation. Here, too, it may be necessary, unfortunately, for Negroes to develop and use appropriate, nonviolent direct-action approaches.

Massive pressure for voter registration among Negroes in the South must be developed and sustained without regard to the risk. The executive and judicial branches of the Federal Government must protect the constitutional rights of Negroes to vote and participate in their government. These rights either must be enforced by representation sanctions against the states or Negroes must find some way of withholding the taxes paid in these states in direct proportion to their representation. Taxation without representation is still tyranny.

As for the next steps, apathy, indifference, battle weariness, return to inertia and wishful thinking are some of the major dangers to be counteracted. The momentum of the Negro surge for equality during the past few years and particularly during recent months has been admirable—but also exhausting. The challenge now is to sustain the dynamism of recent demonstrations until the legitimate goals are achieved.

'WE CANNOT AFFORD TO FAIL'

By JAMES FARMER

National director of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE)

GOVERNOR WALLACE of Alabama is probably most to blame for the outrage of Birmingham. However, Wallace is not alone. All of us share the blame because we have not done enough to end racial injustice. I have not been able to sleep since Birmingham because I have not done enough. Those who are not on the picket lines share the blame. Those who remain silent share the blame. Those who are neutral share the blame.

Birmingham will not stop the movement. It will not slow it down, rather it will help speed up the process of mass involvement of the Negro community. (Continued on Page 91)

JOBS WITHOUT BIAS—Negroes must "demonstrate in the streets" until they attain this goal, says an integration leader.

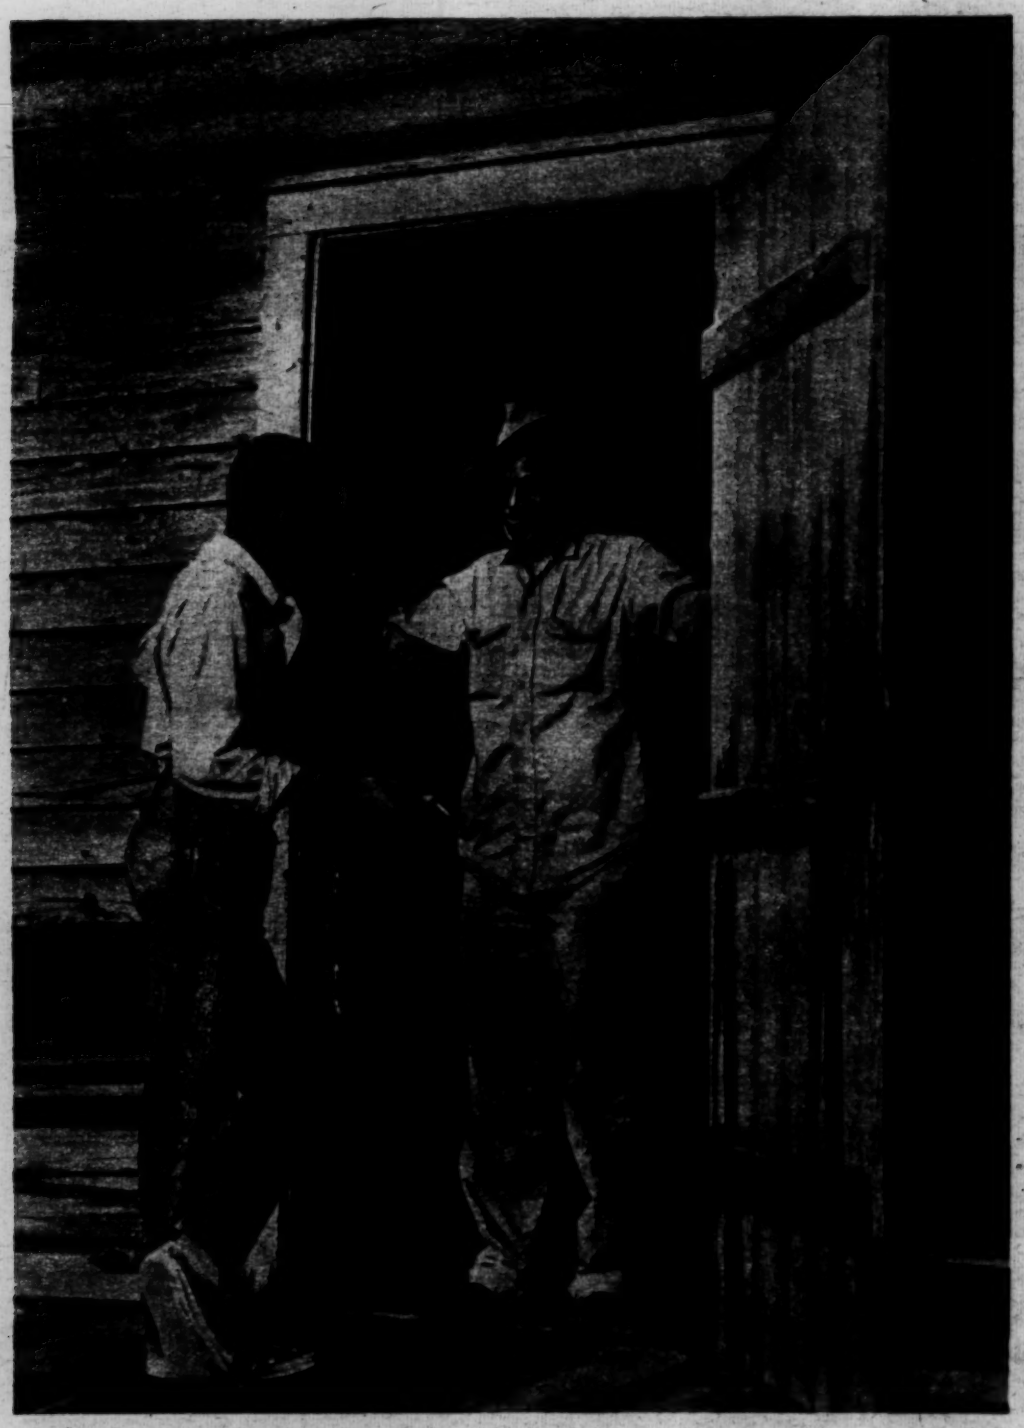
The Southern Negro Drives for the Vote

"The most important step a Negro can take is in the direction of the ballot box," the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. has said. Traditionally, Negroes of the rural Deep South have been reluctant to register, some out of fear of physical or economic retaliation, others out of apathy born of deprivation and the absence of any real choice among the segregationist candidates of a one-party system. Now thousands of volunteers, assisted by a handful of professionals, are conducting voter registration campaigns that, they hope, will assure the Negro a voice in government. This mammoth, occasionally dangerous, task was once almost the sole province of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Today, the N.A.A.C.P. has been joined by the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, the National Urban League, and state and local groups. In all, 27 registration campaigns are in progress across the South. They are coordinated and financed by the Voter Education Project, an organization with a budget of $262,000 underwritten by several Northern foundations. This new concern for the rights and responsibilities of full citizenship already has made itself felt in other phases of the Negro's struggle. It will assume overriding importance as the legal efforts of the Justice Department and other forces eliminate discriminatory disfranchisement. The pictures on these pages are scenes of a typical registration drive—this one conducted by CORE in the Sixth Congressional District of Louisiana. —CLAUDE SITTON.

TARGET AREA—This house in a Negro enclave near Plaquemine, La., is typical of the homes in the region where registration workers call. An open sewer runs in the foreground.



CANVASS—Danny Mitchell, a member of the CORE task force in Iberville Parish, tries to persuade a resident to register. The group has numbered about 45, most of them volunteers.

REHEARSAL—Bette Poole, right, helps a would-be voter practice filling out registration forms. Negroes have been turned down, CORE workers say, for failing to dot an "i."

CRAM SESSION—Registrants must pass a "citizenship test" with six questions chosen from a list of 42. Here, Mimi Feingold, a CORE volunteer, coaches a prospective voter.

PROTEST—Some of the 200,000 in the March on Washington.

What Next?: A Symposium

No longer are we just a few scattered militants and intellectuals. Now the revolt has cut across the formerly divisive lines of class, cultural achievement and education. To a greater extent than ever before, even the timorous, the former "Uncle Toms," have been swept along in the tide of Negro self-consciousness and revolt against discrimination. They have become involved not so much by choice as by necessity. The realization has come to most Negroes that there is no escape for them as individuals. We are in what might be called the "everyman" stage of development in the struggle.

The problems are obviously enormous. To mention just two: (1) Sloganeering is frequently mistaken for a program. (2) A dangerous racial polarization in the national community seems possible.

To combat the first problem, more sweep needs to be given to the present revolutionary struggle by analysis and criticism and creative thought, as well as by more detailed planning.

Real differences in point of view should be expressed and encouraged. Unity of goal should not be mistaken for uniformity of action and approach.

In combating the second danger, the march on Washington was a good first step. Its interracial character was impressive. Now we need steps to make constructive use of the millions of potential white allies according to the stage of their present commitment in the struggle. Ways must be found to let each add his thrust to the movement as far as he is at present willing to go, without hampering or holding back those who are willing to go further. Churches and unions must be encouraged to go beyond lip service and to take specific action for equality.

Direct - action demonstrations will be continued, but objectives should be more clearly pointed out in each campaign—both for better understanding among the demonstrators and for greater appreciation and support among the general public. In addition, means of maintaining the discipline of nonviolence need to be tightened. We require schools and workshops in every area of the country to train demonstrators and potential demonstrators in the discipline of nonviolence. We need, also, to train special cadres to monitor each mass demonstration, to stop trouble before it occurs, to isolate difficulties and move the demonstration on.

OUR ultimate objective is equality — economic, political, educational, cultural, social. These things will not be achieved merely by breaking down the barriers of segregation and discrimination. The wounds inflicted by 350 years of deprivation will not be erased automatically. Nothing short of a massive program of remedial education and training for skills can even begin to solve the problem. The nation cannot afford to fail to take the necessary compensatory steps to advance those whom it has deprived over the years. Such a program requires billions of dollars—perhaps as much as $3,000,000,000 a year for a period of five or 10 years—in order to be effective. Money in that amount can come only from the Government. It may be the President's prime opportunity to achieve lasting greatness.

Any plan for the future, therefore, which seeks to calm troubled waters will have to sweep barriers away, rather than pour oil over turbulent tides.

The hundreds of thousands who marched in Washington marched to level barriers. They summed up everything in a word—NOW. What is the content of NOW?

Everything, not some things, in the President's civil-rights bill is part of NOW.

IMMEDIATE and effective Federal action to curb the shocking police brutality in the South is an urgent part of NOW. Just lately, the Department of Justice has indicted leaders of the civil-rights movement in Albany, Ga., and Birmingham, Ala., alleging that false statements were made under oath. This zealousness to punish Negroes for statements is in sharp contrast to the inaction of the same department in hundreds of cases of extreme police brutality.

The right to vote is part of NOW. To walk unafraid to the ballot box and cast a free vote remains still a myth in most of the South.

Unemployment is a form of brutality, especially violent for those who live on the edge of poverty. Negroes have twice as much of it as others. NOW means jobs, F.E.P.C., training, leveling obstacles of discrimination and the creation of new jobs by public works.

These are some of the imperatives of NOW. If they are met, the passionate determination Negroes have recently made so manifest can be mellowed without being compromised. Then slower, long-range planning can begin.

THE far-reaching solutions for lifting the "weight of centuries" will necessarily involve systematic liquidation of ghetto life, loans and grants to provide equal opportunities for the unequally equipped, adult education, remedial clinics for damaged families and individuals and integrated housing construction on a scale commensurate with the extent of slums, rather than with the extent of budgets.

The present spontaneous, largely disorganized and spasmodic methods of piecemeal approaches, differing from city to city, and with a variety of tempos, will have to give way to broad national planning. A nation which could put more than 11,000,000 men in arms in a few short years, which poured torrents of sophisticated munitions from hundreds of thousands of coordinated facilities and deployed them in war, has the capacity to master a problem of much less complexity. It needs only the same will it possessed when it felt its existence threatened.

The long-deferred issue of second-class citizenship has become our nation's first-class crisis. We can deal with it now, or we can drive a seething humanity to a desperation it tried, asked and hoped to avoid.

'FILIBUSTER OF THE PEOPLE'

By A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and the Negro American Labor Council

THE objective of Aug. 28 was more than civil-rights legislation. The full march was a challenge to the conscience of the country; it was a creative dialogue between Negroes and their white allies, on the one hand, and the President, the Congress and our American democratic society, on the other. Its aim was to achieve a national consensus not only for civil-rights legislation— but for its implementation.

Historically, the social forces of revolutions have been expressed through human beings. Hence, the leadership of the civil-rights revolution cannot escape the moral responsibility for the maintenance of the highest order of unselfish, courageous and uncompromising fidelity to the ideals, values, hopes and faith of this sacred crusade for the recognition of, and respect for, the God-given human rights of Americans of color.

What then, is to be done?

First, Negro civil-rights leadership must maintain unity without uniformity.

Second, the coalition of the Negro community with the labor and church communities that supported the march must be preserved, broadened and deepened. If freedom is indivisible then the fight for freedom by those forces devoted to freedom should be indivisible. Negroes — like other minority groups — cannot win their rights alone. The coalition of moral forces represented by civil rights, labor and church groups is unquestionably one of the most powerful instrumentalities yet devised to help create that ethical basis for interracial brotherhood which is imperative to give meaningfulness to civil-rights laws.

Third, demonstrations in the streets—a recognized American tradition—by Negroes and their white allies must continue without relaxation until basic, tangible progress in the acquisition of jobs and apprenticeship training for jobs in industry, unions and government, and the abolition of race bias in public accommodations, schools and housing is made.

HAD it not been for demonstrations in the streets of Birmingham, Ala., and other cities in the North and South. it is quite unlikely that President Kennedy would have submitted his package of proposals for civil-rights legislation to the Congress. If street demonstrations were necessary to secure this action by

Bad Breath due to Mucosity

Simple treatment clears away offending phlegm and mucous drip

Offensive bad breath that comes from mucosity, or excessive mucous discharge, is quickly removed with Glyco-Thymoline. The reason is this: sticky phlegm and mucous drip that lodge in nose and throat passages often become nasty-smelling, resulting in bad breath mucosity.

Glyco-Thymoline, formulated for this very condition, is soothing, alkaline. Because it speedily loosens and removes stubborn, sticky phlegm and mucous, Glyco-Thymoline literally rinses away bad breath mucosity... freshens mouth and taste instantly. Excellent also for smoker's and denture breath. 6 oz. or 15½ oz. bottles, all drug stores. Get the President, it is reasonable to assume that further street demonstrations will be indispensable to bring about the enactment of the proposals into laws, without emasculation.

Fourth, major emphasis should be placed upon building the unity of Negro leadership together with a coalition of the Negro, labor and church communities. This, of course, is the job of existing civil-rights organizations. No new movement is necessary.

The Birmingham tragedy—the wanton bombing of a church and the murder of four little girls—marked not only a breakdown of law and order but also has shaken and weakened the faith and confidence of Negroes and, no doubt, of numerous liberal-minded white people in constitutional government and our free, democratic, Christian society. It damages the image of the United States in Africa in particular, and the world of color in general.

IT is a matter of record that no white person or mob in the South responsible for the murder of a Negro has ever been brought to justice. However, Negroes, despite this unspeakable crime, must not forsake or abandon the nonviolent philosophy as a framework within which they should carry on their relentless struggle for the abolition of race bias.

We have no choice but to fight ceaselessly for civil-rights legislation. If it should be killed, joblessness will continue to worsen, and humiliation in places of accommodation will go on unabated. Then frustration—even desperation—may burst into fires of violent interracial conflict. Indeed, if the civil-rights revolution is aborted by a counter-revolution, symbolized by the filibuster, it may not only turn against white America but move to devour its own children.

MOURNERS—Members of the families of three of the four girls killed in the church bombing at Birmingham, Ala., are helped away after the funeral services. One has fainted.

NEGROES demand an end to the bestiality of Birmingham with its bombings and slaughter of innocent children. The spectacle of the Federal Government helpless in the face of such terror is incomprehensible to a people who have fought and died in its defense and who properly look to it for protection of their rights and lives. Failure to provide such protection increases frustration and seriously imperils continuance of the nonviolent character of the Negro protest. Prompt, effective action to end this terror is imperative.

The painfully slow pace of past desegregation can no longer be tolerated. To insist upon acceleration is neither radical nor extremist. It is rational and necessary.

Negroes want in in American society, and they want the ways opened now. They reject separation, whether advocated by the Black Muslims, the White Citizens Councils or the Communist party. They are committed to a pluralistic society with equal rights, opportunities and freedom for all.

EQUALLY clear are the indicated next steps. There is no likelihood of an abatement of the present upsurge of militancy among Negroes. What is required now more than ever is responsible militancy. Not demonstrations for demonstrations' sake. But demonstrations for specific purposes, pressed uncompromisingly, but conducted in an orderly fashion.

The presence of thousands of white persons in the Washington march revealed to Negroes and to the nation that colored citizens are not alone in this struggle for equal rights. A vast reservoir of goodwill exists in the white populace. This goodwill must be cultivated and mobilized for effective action in the struggle. The religious groups —Protestant, Catholic and Jewish—demonstrated by their participation in the march that they are prepared now to go beyond resolutions and to take an active role. Liberal elements in the labor movement reiterated the demand for an end to the color bar in employment.

THE church groups exert influence in areas where Negroes and other traditional civil - rights advocates are politically weak. With organized religion in support of the President's civil - rights bill, the chances for its enactment will be greatly enhanced. Senators from states where the issue of civil rights has not been regarded heretofore as urgent may be persuaded to vote for cloture to shut off a Senate filibuster.

The church groups can be an important factor in gaining support of both Republican and Democratic members of Congress in the nonindustrial states of the Midwest and Rocky Mountain regions. How they vote may well determine the outcome of the legislation.

Meanwhile, the civil-rights groups must redouble their efforts to increase the Negro vote in all regions, pursue a course of responsible militancy, conduct a vast program of public information, and enlist the active support of all possible elements within the American society.

CORE DEMONSTRATES AT NIAGARA-MOHAWK

A BLACK PAPER

Nineteen months ago CORE initiated its campaign to eliminate racial discrimination from the employment practices of the Niagara-Mohawk Power Corporation, largest of the publicly-sanctioned gas and electric power monopolies in America. Using sophisticated northern tactics, Niagara-Mohawk continues to practice showcase token integration as a substitute for honest integration of its extensive work forces: six Negroes out of 1400 personnel in Buffalo, 19 Negroes out of 1500 employees in Syracuse, no Negroes out of 200 workers in Niagara Falls. Moreover, even these "token" Negro employees continue to work in exclusively menial jobs; as janitors, meter readers, laborers. CORE testing revealed that until the present protests Negroes in Niagara Falls were not even permitted to apply for Niagara-Mohawk jobs. Recently in Syracuse, Niagara Mohawk responded to the application of a Negro college graduate with 10 years of administrative experience with the offer of a janitor's job so that he could "work his way up through the ranks". In Syracuse, after months of demonstrations and dozens of arrests, Negro employment still hovers at the all-time high of one percent of the Niagara Mohawk work force. Niagara Mohawk continues to refuse any meaningful assurance that it plans to live up to the Presidential Order requiring Federal contractors to bring their employment patterns in line with the ethnic and racial balance of the community. This is the substance of CORE's demands. CORE calls for Niagara Mohawk to publicly state this as their goal, and to say within a reasonable number of years they expect to achieve this goal. CORE calls on Niagara Mohawk to do

St. Louis 15, Missouri

Dear Charlie:

I started work full time for CORE two days ago. There are so many loose ends at this point, I don't quite know where I am at, but at least I feel I have been putting in full time.

James T. McCain will arrive heseon Sunday, October 13th and will probably stay with me the entire time he is in New York. We hope to have a number of extended discussions with him and possibly a weekend out of town Friday, October 18 through Sunday, October 20. On October 22, the Committee against Discrimination in Housing is holding a Conference for the Sharkey-Brown-Isaacs Bill to outlaw discrimination in rental of apartments. The New York group will probably participate. Also planned is a demonstration and wide distribution of leaflets (this is CORE, not the Committee) aimed at the Democrats, possibly with a heading "Mayor Wagner -- Democrat or Dixiecrat?" If this campaign goes through, and I think it will, McCain will be occupied with a great deal of work. To make it effective, we have to make it clear that Negro voters can be permanently alienated from the Democrats if they refuse to pass needed legislation. My guess is that McCain will not be ready to leave New York until October 28th. If there is any possibility of your attending the weekend, please let us know.

I enclose copy for a two-page letter which we hope you will sign. As usual, the letter should be re-written and greatly tightened up. For this purpose, I hope you and Marian will do a re-write job and I am also sending copies to Peck, the Farmers and the Riches for this purpose.

I took final copy of THIS IS CORE and the RULES FOR ACTION to Si Frankel, commercial artist who did our red flyer of a few years ago, yesterday. First he is going to work on designing a simple two-color card appropriate for Chanukah or Christmas and New Years. This is an additional avenue for fund-raising, but is not to be counted on for much help this first year.

I should like to know more about what is going on in St. Louis. Is there a danger that CORE will disappear in the process of (OVER) working with NAACP?

Please send several copies of your signature so that the letter house may choose the best one for making the signature cut for the letter. I have ordered a special business reply envelope with "Attention Charles R. Oldham, Chairman" written on it, for use with this appeal.

McCain said he had heard nothing further from you on the vote campaign. But he has some people in Columbia, South Carolina, interested in such a campaign and in affiliating the group with CORE. This would not conflict with King's Crusade for Freedom as that will concentrate on only ten of the larger Southern cities.

How about that Organizational Manual? I am sure that a new edition would be helpful to our groups and to McCain.

It has also been suggested that a somewhat extended discussion of nonviolence and race relations, north and south, would be useful to Crusade for Citizenship as well as CORE. Will work on getting such if I can get the time.

We never found the material for Henry Hodge. It may turn up in the reorganization of the files. What happened if you know?

I plan to write to the people in Nashville. I am wondering whether anything is functioning there. If so or not so, probably McCain should go there after St. Louis. Also, I should think that at some point it might be worth while for several St. Louis people to go to Nashville and try to give the group some aid and encouragement: soon the excitement about the schools will have quieted down.

So long,

October 8, 1957

Dear Jim,

I have looked at the James T. McCain flyer and I think it is pretty good. The last sentence, however, seems to be alittle cumbersome. I offer the following as a suggestion.

non-violent
New/techinques have been devised by CORE which c all for the full use of the New Civil Rights Legislation. Mr. McCain is anxious to establish new groups to sparkplug and implement the voting and registration for Negroes initiated by Martin Luther King.

The letter from Mr. Solomon from So. Car. interests me. I think that we should follow up on it as soon as possible. Maybe McCain could look into the situation a little bit before he comes to New York, then he could have a first hand report.

I think that we should start working now on the new techniques and ideas to be used in a voting and registration drive in the South using the Civil Rights bill as the basis for action. We should get several copies of the bill, then find out what has been done toward appointment of a commission and who the people are. Find out who will be handeling the matter in the Atty. Gen. office, to whom complaints should be made, what sort of information and evidence will be needed to prove a violation of the law particularly as pertains to voter registration, etc.

I think the big problem in all these cases will be to gather the proper type of evidence and obtain the necessary complaining witnesses. Jim should be briefied thoughly on just how far he can go in recruiting complaining witnesses. I suggest that the CORE office obtain a subscription to the Vanderbilt Race/Law Reporter - I think that approximates the name of the magazine. It has a complete report of all laws and court decisions affecting race relations. Jim will have to become familar with those laws and will have to work within the scope of them. Also we may be affected by the same type of tro uble that beset the NAACP. We can soft pedle the CORE name maybe if we feel there is danger of such involvement - maybe the groups will not want to formally affiliate with CORE to avoid the possibility of having the records subpoeaned. Or maybe we just wouldn't keep records.

I believe that we can still use Jim around the first of November in St. Louis for a training program of actual action. I am s ure that we should have some picket lines, etc going by that time. Incidently in the vote drive we should use the churches, and any other group that will provide us access tothe community. Hope this letter has been of some help. I think we should leave Gibbons on the letterhead. He could be a great help to us.

Dear Charlie:

I enclose a copy of a letter to Anna Holden. It will give you some picture of McCain's present field trip. If he gets anywhere with his contacts in Memphis, he may have to return there for a few days. Memphis was included in this initial trip because we wished to have him present at the Tuesday, November 5, meeting of the Southern Leaders Conference. But he arrived Friday night in Memphis and will try to contact some people there about the possible formation of a CORE group.

In addition to Memphis, Nashville and St. Louis, he may stop in Louisville also. In this case, all St. Louis people with Louisville contacts should give him the benefit of their information.

His next trip is sketched for December. It may start in Baltimore, but we are not certain of that. He will visit Arlington, Alexandria, Richmond, Newport News and Norfolk, Virginia (or at least some of them). A major effort will be to organize a group in that part of Virginia which is really a suburb of Washington. He will then go on to North Carolina and South Carolina. In the latter, he will spend at least three weeks, working on the Registration campaign and also on the formation of CORE groups in Sumter and Columbia (possible action on street buses as well as registration).

Last weekend in Baltimore, we had a hot discussion, bringing all the questions of personality clashes to the surface (everything from sex to politics was thrown in). The recommendation was that officers be chosen carefully, excluding both Adah Jenkins and Joan Wertheimer as the two major controversial (that is leaders of opposing factions) figures. Herb Kelman feels that officer compromise will go through, but he and the rest of us are not at all certain that the argument about taking over the Mondawmin project will not continue. As this argument is not over real issues so much as a way of expressing personality clashes, it could well mean the end of the Baltimore group. In any case, we feel we have done all we could; if trouble does not persist, we can give them some of McCain's time to help get new members. But if trouble persists, then we feel nothing can be done, and his time should not be wasted.

Dear Charlie and Marian:

Mr. McCain has just returned. After seeing him briefly, I am writing you on the points he mentioned.

I am confused about the Howard Johnson matter and who was to get what information for whom. If Lula was securing information, she will know as I am sending her a copy of this letter.

I have not heard again from Henry Hodge. The return receipt on the certified mail sent to him is dated November 25 at Los Angeles. I shall ask him to send the entire story to both of us. His address: 4051 South Harvard, Los Angeles 62.

Did your copy of NEGRO VOTER IN SOUTH CAROLINA arrive? If not, McCain will send you a copy from here.

For the southern groups, I suggest the name, Committee on Registration Enlistments (CORE). As a National Organization, I should think that all those who join could become members of CORE with their names on our lists in New York and with very few records and no lists except of leaders in the South. Would not this accomplish a strong organizational tie-in without the possibility of segregationists being able to seize local lists?

CORE Finances: Returns have been excellent on your letter. Checking account now has over $3,000 and Reserve $5,000. Appeals to outside lists have been successful this fall although not as successful as last year. The Holiday Card proaction is a colossal flop and will cost us at least $1,000 more than it brings in this year. This can probably be recouped in future years through the sale of the left-over cards. Apparent difficulty: many people do not like the cards. Recommendation: designing next year's card right after the New Year, sending competing designs around to a few people to find which is generally popular. I gather that no one in St. Louis likes our card as, even with the good relations with NAACP there, we have had no orders at all from any of the local people.

CORE Council: How about New York February 22-23? Convention: Nashville? Dates: June 26-29 incl.? July3-6 incl.? Aug. 29- Sept. 1?

So long,

Jim Peck

Dear Jim,

Just a short letter with a few thoughts. McCain was here for about a week. I feel that he should do a pretty good job, unfortunately we did not have too much going on at the time he was here and he did not see as much CORE action as I wished that he could. He made some tests and was on a literature line in front of one of the chain stores for a while.

The literature line was put up by the NAACP and our group is cooperating with them in helping them maintain an action program. We have been doing some of their picket duty etc.

On the future of CORE. It is my opinion that McCain might be most helpful in and around Sumpter S.C. on a voters registration drive. He knows a lot of people down there and perhaps could get some good groups started. I would suggest that any groups in the south might be called Committee On Registration (C.O.R.) In order to avoid some of the difficulty that the NAACP has had we might not have them join officially with the national office - just make them a local group writing to your group for information and advice. They could keep a minimum of records - particularly of members and letters written to the CORE group in new york.

Write Charlie

Another thing that we should do is to investigate fully how the Presidents new civil rights commission is going to operate. We should know all the details for handling and processing a complaint to this commission - the type and amount of evidence necessary, etc. I think it would be a good idea to get all this information available and have a study session with McCain so that he will know how to handle almost any type of situation. I can see that he will be setting up potential test cases for the civil rights commission if he does much work in the south on registration.

I would also like to know what Henry Hodge wanted from the home office and what information you have on his situation. He requested me to get some affidavits for him a few months ago which I did, however, he has never given me the complete story. You might have the L.A. CORE group investigate the matter and find out the complete story if you think it is advisable. Also I want to know whether you think we should have a council meeting before the convention.

Best regards to you - and congratulate Marvin for me and his very nice wife.

Dear Charlie:

In looking over your letter of November 25th, I have decided that there are several points I have never answered.

How do we "investigate fully how the President's new civil rights commission is going to operate." I am not clear on just how we proceed on this. Also, I feel that it requires someone to investigate who has technical aptitude and who can then explain it to McCain in terms of how he works each day. If you could make the investigation or find someone to do it, it would help. If you can't, let me know, and I shall see whether we can get someone here to do it. It is important that I not do it, as I shall never be able to do extra correspondence and keep up on the clerical details at the same time.

On the Vanderbilt Race Relations Law Reporter, nothing has been done. I think the suggestion is a good one, but I hesitate to subscribe from the office because I am convinced that we are never going to have time in the office to read it. Also, except for me (and here only because I was a legal proofreader), there is no one coming into the office who can read a story about legalities and really get it straight. I know you are busy. But if you think you would read the material, subscribe and send us the bill for it.

Nothing much is happening in the Hodge case as far as I can judge from his Christmas card. He now has our material and will photostat it for the L. A. file and return it. The original post office material listed CORE and the American Jewish Congress as subversive along with one or two front groups. The later letter apologizes. I wrote Joan Love some time ago and sent you a copy of the letter, but I do not believe you returned that letter. If you have it, return it as I am short a file copy. Henry Hodge says he plans definitely to attend next summer's convention. His new address is 2623 South Manhattan Place, L. A. 18. We hear very little from the L. A. group, and I wonder whether it is really active now.

So long,

Dear Jim,

It is about time that I answered a few of your letters. You and James McCain have been very good about sending me mail and I have been very poor about replies.

I had a couple of things on my mind. First about Howard Johnson's restaurant here in St. Louis. I would like to know what the final result was in the situation in Deleware or was it Maryland where service was refused to a foreign potentate. From the newspapers it appeared that the main office of the Howard Johnson chain told the local owners that they would have to serve every one. This is the report that was in time. I wonder if you have any information as to the final action taken and whether this particular restaurant now serves all food buyers. If this is true perhaps a similar type of approach would work here in St. Louis. When we first considered doing something here in St. Louis about the Howard Johnson restaurant we wrote a couple of letters to them in office and never received a reply. Since that time I have lost my correspondence or mispoaced it and I can't remember where the main office was but it seems to me that it was in Mass. or Conn. In any event I thought that McCain might run down there some time when he was near there or scheduled to take a trip in that direction andhave a talk with the proper party. You would of course have to arrange an appointment.

The local background for HJ in St. Louis is as follows. There are six in the St. Louis area and all of them serve Negroes except the one located in the Negro neighborhood. All the other HJ's serve Negroes of course they do not receive much Negro trade, but they get quite a bit. In our talks with local management we were told that the National office had nothing to do with setting policy, but I hardly believe that this is true, especially since all the others serve.

In regard to the President's Commission I think Marvin should be more than capable of making an analysis of the situation so as to suggest possible procedures. As I see the situation in the South we should do all we can to obtain the support of the Commission and the attorney Genreal's office. Once we get into the field of voter registration in the South we will assurardly run into situations where Negroes are refused or certainly treated in a substantially differentmanner than the White voters. I thin that our procedure here should be to know what type of evidence the Commision and the Attorney General want in prosecuting offenses of this nature. In most law cases it is just a question of obtainin the right evidence and getting enough of it. For this reason we should prepare a memorandum of procedure for the use of the Souther groups to make complaints to the Commission and the attorney general. We can also use McCain as a contact man for these registration groups. One of the best methods of obtaining methods is by the good old wire tap, however, this is frowned upon except when used by state and federal officers. I suggest that we consider buying a couple of transistor tape recorders so that we can record conversations between registrars and the applicant. This way the evidence would be preserved. I discussed this with McCain when he was here, however, I think that it needs to be mulled over in a council meeting before we put it into effect. McCain would need a lot of training in order to use the recorder effectively. Not from a mechanical view point, but from a view point of stressing the necessities of obtain the correct information such as name, address, date, place, etc in each conversation.

Please excuse this mx damn typewriter but it is Marian's old portable that her father got her when she was in grade school and it is almost worn out.

Some time I would like to get the whole Hodge story. Maybe he will come to St. Louis. He always writes me about three or four lines and I can't read all I want to between them.

Expenses of $2,500 per month seem high, but I knw that you cut as many corners as you can. I just wonder if we can keep up the income necessary for such expenses.

I am ready for a council meeting anytime you people are. February, March or April. However if it gets to late maybe we should just wait for the convention.

Dear Charlie and Marian:

I have looked through the Report of St. Louis CORE for the CORElator: it sounds excellent. The employment work is impressive, and of course all that restaurant testing. And the card is a signal idea and should get around in large quantities so that the open places really get the benefit of patronage from Negroes. I hope the public meeting, which was so well attended, will result in additional memberships.

Generally speaking, I am very optimistic about CORE these days. This weekend, Baltimore and New York CORE have a Study-Recreation Weekend in Pendle Hill (near Philadelphia) with the National sponsoring a Dinner, Open Meeting and Social open to people in the Philadelphia area.

I am enclosing Lula's Financial Report and her analysis. I suspect that in order to keep growing, we shall have to send a great many appeals to outside lists: this may up the monthly expenses to over $2,500 a month for the rest of the fiscal year.

Incidentally, office details are increasing, and it is necessary to have Lula come in as often as she can. At some point, we will need additional personnel both in the office and in the field: hope we can greatly increase the income, and thus expand program again.

We expect to have an audit done, beginning next week, by Apfel and Englander, the best known firm in the non-profit organization field.

Be sure to let us know which weekend in March will be convenient for Council meeting for both of you. I assume you will be pleased to come to NYC.

Sincerely yours,

Jim Robinson

Dear Charlie and Marian:

I enclose a preliminary write-up of the Workshop idea. I should appreciate any suggestions on it. So far, I have done very little work on this item, largely because I have been bogged down in a morass of clerical details and fund-raising. We are having more trouble raising money than earlier in the years, but we hope to have all bills paid up by the end of the month (Friday).

I hope you can both come to New York early or stay a day or two after the Council meeting. Please let me know. I should like to take you to the theatre. It is easier to get tickets for the Wednesday matinees or Thursday or Monday evenings than for Friday evening. If Friday evening is the only possible time for you, I should certainly be able to get something for that evening. Off-Broadway, we could get Sunday evening tickets.

McCain's reports are fairly good I think. I am not sure that the new groups in S. C. are too solid from an organizational point of view, but, project-wide, they look good. If some of the new people attend the Council, you will get an opportunity to question them more closely.

Apfel & Englander is the accountant firm doing our auditing. To our amusement, they gave us a Negro accountant. Specializing in auditing for nonprofit organizations, they have to be prepared for everything! We intend to mail the audit, plus an unaudited report on this year so far and a budget in March. Auditing for the current year can be done between June1 and June 10.

Let me hear from you,

Dear Marv,

An address change has just come in for Harold J. Gibbons, WPWU, and the new address is 1641 South Kingshighway, St. Louis 10.

This reminds me that now Hoffa, Gibbons & Co. are legally in control of the Teamsters, and perhaps still in need of feeling some connection to morality, etc., this need might well be supplied by a sizeable (4 or 5 figure suggested) contribution to CORE.

I am sending a copy of this letter to Charlie, as I think one or the other of you or both together would be best fitted to handle the delicate adjustments of Mr. Gibbons' moral sense to CORE's best advantage.

Here's hoping we get more than the minimum $1,000 as that is such a very tiny price to pay to re-establish some faint connection with the human race.

Jim

Dear Charlie:

Do let me know as soon as you can when you and Marian will be coming. This is especially urgent if you want to see any plays.

Did you like the new folders? I sure hope so as they certainly cost enough.

I enclose a carbon of the material from Nashville on school integration. This will be re-worked into a pamphlet. We think the material is excellent although a lot of cutting, tightening up and re-write is necessary. If you have time to go over it and make suggestions, good. Some re-writing would be better. Peck is taking the material to a professional pamphlet writer this morning, and he will work on it also. All of us should send suggestions to Peck. Speed is essential as the completely re-written material must be sent back to Nashville for approval before it can go to the printer.

If neither you nor anyone else in St. Louis is going to work on this copy, then please return to me after you have read it.

I do not believe the S. C. groups are tieing in very well with National CORE. I have asked for more information from both Clarendon County and Charleston, but none has come in. Therefore, material has not gone to the groups. No application came in from Columbia. So Sumter is the only one so far acted upon.

But they have worked hard on registration. And the exciting news from Sumter is that in Ward (or whatever) 3-B of Sumter, Negroes elected 16 of the 17 delegates to the County Democratic meeting.

Marvin Rich did not find my letter about Gibbons amusing. Also, he thinks we had better discuss this matter further in the National Action Committee before proceeding as publicity would be given to any sizeable gifts, and we must be willing to go along if we want the money. I would be inclined to go along, but we had better make sure of the others.

So long.

I just received an enthusiastic letter from Rev. A. L. Davis, Jr., New Zion Baptist Church, 2319 Third Street, New Orleans 15, Louisiana, saying that he is interested in our summer institute and will do all in his power to see that such an institute in New Orleans is a success.

If the immediate follow-up looks promising, I think we had better take New Orleans without waiting very long, don't you?

Dear Marian:

I just received a letter from Charlie saying you are not coming to the Council meeting. As you are the Secretary, this leaves us in a difficult position: we have no one to take minutes, and we cannot go through the minutes difficulties of last July's Convention.

If you cannot take extra time off at school, why not fly after school on Friday and return Sunday afternoon on any flight leaving New York after 4 p. m.? This would take care of the immediate business of the Council. Of course, I should much prefer it if you could spend a day or two in the City.

If the money costs are the only difficulty, please let us know and we shall try to adjust them even though our financial situation has not been strong since the beginning of 1958. But I suspect that, if you do not come, we shall have to spend money for getting the minutes taken anyway.

Sincerely,

Jim Robinson

Dear Jim,

I presume that you have been expecting a letter from me for some time, certainly I have been intendingto write to you for some time. As letter after letter arrived from you I sorta had a feeling of mounting exasperation and why the hell doesn't he write.

Marian is not coming to New York. She says that it is to far to go just for a week end and she refuses to spend money for the trip plus losing two orthree days pay at school. Accordingly I am coming by myself and I will leave St. Louis 4:15 p.m. and will arrive in N. Y. 8:28 some time later. I amcoming on TWA and I will get the airport bus into town and then I will take a cab (on flight 98) to your apt.

In regard to Rev. A. L. Davis from New Orleans I think that some prior investigation is in order. We ought to know somethingabut him andhis church. From my experiences with Negro Churches I have long ago learned to be wary of thepreachers.

Incidently I must come back on Monday so don't make any extensive plans for entertainment.

Dear Charlie and Marian:

The Summer Institute idea is probably being dropped: I do not have sufficient time to keep with it, and there has not been enough positive response in any one community to keep the idea going without constant stimulation from the office.

Also, the financial picture is not sufficiently strong to allow a full-steam ahead on an optional project which would cost several thousand dollars. I hope we can develop the same idea for a later date.

The Nashville pamphlet is moving ahead nicely. I have seen preliminary galley proofs. Anna Holden wrote to ADL and to John Constable, Director of Information of Southern Regional Council about distribution. I have an additional list of organizations to which I shall write and send proofs when proofs are available, offering on pre-paid large orders to imprint the name and address of the distributing organization.

In the copy of Anna's letter to Constable of Southern Regional Council (for which Anna formerly worked), she says, 'need to save my travelling money for job-hunting -- I am seriously looking for something, in case you hear of anything. Dr. Valien is going away on leave and I feel sure my job will be abolished, though he hasn't said so in so many words.' I have written her to ask whether she would be interested in a job with CORE, pointing out that finances are uncertain, etc., and suggesting if interested she write us and stop in St. Louis to see you and Marian. Her Nashville address is 2010 Meharry Boulevard, Nashville 8. I hope her job does not fold, as she is needed in Nashville for the September school opening of second grade. If she is interested in a CORE job, I do not want to lose her to some other organization. But I would like your impression if you see or talk with her.

Money is a constant problem when you don't have enough of it. We have had some preliminary discussions about approaching Harold

Gibbons for a grant from the Teamsters. Although I think that some of our committee people may be squeamish about the Teamsters, I doubt that anyone would be sufficiently so to preclude accepting the cash. Perhaps you could write to Marvin Rich, 1489 First Ave., and arrange between you the best way of going about it. We may discuss it further at the Action Committee meeting (possibly as early as this coming Sunday), but I feel we shall not really get anywhere with discussion until we see more clearly how to proceed.

For background in approaching unions for large sums, I think we can point to the fact that we constantly work on membership recruitment, increasing contributions considerably each year. Hence, we are not necessarily in the category of organizations which ask for large hand-outs year after year. On the other hand, we do want a large hand-out now; and, in addition, we should like to get onto the annual contribution lists of many locals even though these gifts usually are small (ranging from $5 to $50 annually).

Contributions are running at a low ebb at present. However, we have one appeal going to 2,000 outside names today, and we may have another 4,000 appeals in another two weeks. Also, I have not yet gotten around to sorting through our own list for follow-up letters, etc. An appeal based on the enclosed S. C. Registration material, running to as many as 25,000 names, and including our own list, is planned for late April. If successful, it might be repeated in May. Following that, we shall have appeals based on the Nashville pamphlet, but these cannot go to our own list as we will have them sent the maximum number of appeals to that list (three is maximum in my view although many organizations send four); however, simply sending the pamphlet to our list will produce some contributions.

I enclose the Treasurer's Report to the Council. Since the Report, we have transferred $1,000 from Reserve to Operating Accounts.

So you can see why the Teamsters are very much on my mind. Especially so if we decide to expand staff to include Anna Holden.

Dear Charlie:

I am leaving Sunday for a few days in South Carolina, including a meeting of the CORE groups there on April 23rd, late afternoon and evening.

Peck tells me he does not have a St. Louis story for the forthcoming CORElator as yet.

I enclose rough galley proofs of the Nashville pamphlet. Corrections and additions are not indicated. I am writing about 30 organizations and sending these proofs to solicit pre-publication quantity orders, offering to imprint the name and address of the distributing group as well as CORE's. We shall see whether this helps.

Have you any ideas on the solicitation of money thru Gibbons from the Teamsters? We need some substantial contributions.

UP TO DATE arrived from a St. Louis address we do not have in our group contact files. We have only Wanda Penny, Walter Hayes and you and Marian. Certainly, there must be other active key people who should get the announcements, copies of constitution, minutes, etc. I am particularly anxious to get new people involved in an interest in the national organization to stimulate the Conference-Convention. Will you please send me a list right away? Incidentally, UP TO DATE did not come to the office at all and Jim Peck did not receive a copy. Hope you have last year's contact list. As soon as we get enough new contacts, we shall issue a new list.

Dear Jim:

Please send me $6.00 worth of RULES FOR ACTION and $4.00 worth of THIS IS CORE, for use of the St. Louis group. I have made a hurried reading of the national story, and it sounds pretty good. I will take time in the next day or two to go over it more carefully, and will return it with my suggestions.

In regard to the press release for Jim Peck, consider following to be the same:

St. Louis CORE for the past six months has been in negotiation with the three main department stores in the downtown area of St. Louis in regard to opening of their eating facilities. Two weeks ago it became apparent that further negotiations were useless. Accordingly, demonstration was authorized, and last Thursday, April 17, ten CORE members appeared at Stix Baer Fuller Department Store cafeteria to request service. When we were not served, members of the group remained in line for two hours. Further demonstrations are planned for the weeks to come.

Demonstration was quite orderly and was very interesting in view of the fact that approximately seven years ago St. Louis CORE had demonstrated at the first floor counter of Stix Baer Fuller for approximately eighteen months before an opening of these facilities was obtained. Several of the store personnel, and particularly the store detectives, recognized our group and became quite friendly, asking questions about how many children so and so had, how they were getting along, and things of this nature.

One interesting exchange occurred immediately after the demonstration started, when one of the new store detectives approached some members of the group and requested them to leave the store. This detective explained that it didn't do any good to stand there, that all we were doing was causing trouble for the girls behind the counter, and that there were a lot of places in St. Louis where he couldn't go to eat. The detective pointed down the street and said, "I can't eat at the Missouri Athletic Club." (This is a high class joint where you have to have lots of moola.) The CORE member he was talking to made this reply: "You shouldn't be up here telling us how to run our demonstration, you should be standing in front of the Missouri Athletic Club."

On Thursday, April 24, we plan to have another demonstration at the tea room, and we propose to continue our activities until some change of policy is effected. Efforts are also being made to have other civic groups and individuals discuss the problem with the store management.

Very truly yours,

Charles

Dear Mr.:

Please send me $2.00 worth of RULES FOR ACTION and $1.00 worth of CODE to use at the St. Louis Group. I have been a practicing lawyer in the natural state, and it sounds pretty good. I like I also like to see it myself before I buy it with my enthusiasm.

As you if more certainly [illegible] return it with my enthusiasm.

Yours,

In regard to the group reference [illegible], contact Jeffcoate to be the same:

St. Louis CORE for the past six months has been in negotiation with the store management department stores in the community. We [illegible] two weeks ago it became apparent that further negotiations were fruitless. Accordingly, demonstration was instituted, and last Tuesday, April 14, ten CORE members appeared at Gaty Bros. Dollar department store carrying placards to request service. When we were not served, members of the group remained in line for one hour. Further demonstrations are planned for Saturday, April 25, when we hope to have another demonstration at the Gaty store and we propose to continue our activities until some change is effected. Reports are also being made to have other groups in other cities picket Gaty's in sympathy with the store management.

Yours truly,

St. Louis Story For The Corelator

St. Louis C.O.R.E. re-opened negotiations with Stix, Baer & Fuller Department Store six weeks ago in an attempt to open the Tea Room and the Humpty Dumpty (a small cafeteria adjacent to the parking lot). Management said they could not ope open at this time and gave no reason. Management admitted readily, however, that they were very pleased with the First Floor Lunch Counter (seating about 80) where Negroes have been served for several years. Despite this they would not open the Tea Room nor Humpty Dumpty.

We talked by telephone a month later and received no encouragement. We decided to stage a small demonstration for 90 minutes standing in front of the steam table waiting for service. This wwas done last Thursday . Further demonstrations are planned for this store and also the two other department stores who refuse to serve Negroes in t their Tea Rooms. Efforts are being made to obtain the support of the Mayor's Council on Human Relations and other community groups.

Dear Charlie:

I was glad to get your letter of May 14th. I am enclosing two copies of the Amended Constitution. By this time, you should have received the Council minutes, with some discussion therein about the Constitution.

I agree with you that no really serious situation is involved in Baltimore's objections to the constitution. Basically, we should not change back into a Federation, but we can adjust some of the phrasing if it becomes important. I think, however, that the objections probably stem from a continued atmosphere of contention in the group. I think the group may be unstable and heading for final dissolution, but I think also there is nothing much we can do to give any further help.

I am enclosing the brochures about Frogmore. Few reservations are yet in, but there has not been time. I am glad that you and Marian and one other persons(probably) will be coming from St. Louis. But I hope that number can be expanded: we are suffering extremely loose connections between the groups, probably reflecting our several years without much group coordination work. Also, we need to deepen the commitment to nonviolent direct action in our older groups as well as transmit the idea more thoroughly to the new groups (difficult because Registration is not really direct action).

Peck says he will give you advance notice on the CORElator deadline. Your present program in all three department stores sounds really ambitious.

I shall write Mr. Gibbons a letter, enclosing the CORElator. You will get a copy for follow-up on the dough.

Dear Jim:

I am enclosing herewith the document for the CORElator. The content on same looks pretty good and should be used quite extensively for fund raising. I think this is the type of thing that we need to secure additional funds.

In regard to this problem about Baltimore, I am enclosing a carbon copy of letter I sent to Marion Bardoff which should be self-explanatory. Personally, I don't consider this a real serious situation, and they have been operating for about a year under the new constitution and no serious problems have arisen.

In regard to the convention, Marion and I both plan to come, and may possibly bring another person from St. Louis. Incidently, I have misplaced my copy of the new constitution, so would you mail one to me at your convenience.

In regard to our present activities, we are engaging in demonstrations in the three department stores on a once-a-week basis. I will write a full report for the next issue of the CORElator. You might ask Jim to give me a couple of weeks advance notice on the deadline, as it takes me that long to do anything.

Dear Charlie and Marian:

I am enclosing a brochure about Penn Community Center where the Convention is being held. Actually, I expect the Sunday and Monday Conference sessions to be the most valuable we have had in years although we have no definite schedule as yet. We shall, of course, expect one of the St. Louis delegates to discuss in some detail each of the projects you have been engaged in this year.

There is a good chance of a summer issue of the CORE-lator, and I hope you have pictures of your recent activities (possible to get one inside the department store eating facilities?). When the story is ready, it can be sent in here to the office.

I hope that one or more delegates from St. Louis in addition to you and Marian may be able to come. As the camp is a family type, they offer reduced rates for children, which would facilitate a delegate bringinghis family if he desired to do so.

As swimming is scheduled, all should come with swim-suits... in the S. C. heat, a swim will certainly be welcome.

We expect to begin registration late Sunday morning and continue with the first session after lunch(about 2 p. m.). However, arrival on Saturday is all right with the camp, and I hope to get there for Saturday evening, which should leave me more rested for the sessions on Sunday and thereafter. So if you and any other St. Louis delegates prefer to arrive early, it will be all right. I do need to have arrival times for anyone not there at the Sunday luncheon. Also departure time for anyone leaving before Wednesday afternoon.

Dear Charlie:

We have a new person (just a few months) in New York CORE, formerly with Boston CORE. He is Mr. Thomas L. Roberts, 100 LaSalle Street, New York 27, New York. He is a Negro lawyer in a mixed legal firm (one of three partners), a graduate of Harvard Law School. We think he would be a valuable addition to the National Action Committee and suggest that you appoint him. The appointment could simply be announced at the Convention, or you could hold it until the Convention, but I am sure approval is just a matter of course.

Income the year just ended May 31, 1958 ran in excess of $23,000, but we still ran a deficit of $500 plus. Books now in audit.

Lula Farmer and I did an analysis of the figures and a projected budget for this current year yesterday. We feel we can start a third employee in September. I have written Miss Joan Berry, currently an internee (NAIRO) with New York Urban League, and I have the personnel outlines of all the other NAIRO internees. As Miss Berry can take dictation and type as well as direct program, she might be the right person for a combination job, relieving me of most of my program responsibilities and doing some organizing directed specifically at the North. If other ideas on personnel occur to you and you have specific persons in mind, you might question them about their interest in advance of the Convention. Lula and I feel that a budget of about $39,000 is within the realm of possibility.

Dear Charlie and Marian:

McCain was in today and we called Mrs. Gilmore. McCain will be in Charleston, West Virginia from August 6th to about the 15th. Literature was sent yesterday, and I wrote her a confirmation letter this afternoon. This looks like a wonderful lead, and I certainly hope a good group develops.

I have forgotten what developed on the Organisational Manual... did anyone volunteer to do a re-write? This item might help a good deal with new groups as I am sure the skeleton constitution is likely to do.

I invited Tom Roberts to the National Action Committee meeting today. Lula and I think he would be avvaluable addition. Home address: 100 LaSalle Street, NYC. Business: Itkin, Roberts and Greenbaum, 270 Madison Ave, NYC. Formerly Boston CORE, now New York CORE. Lawyer (Harvard Law no less).

The Action Committee was attended by: J. Farmer, L. Farmer, L. Carter, G. Houser, J. McCain, T. Roberts and myself. Marvin Rich was to attend but is ill with worms! It was a good meeting, and I think it was probably good strategy that my letter had been concerned to the point of being negative. Re-visits to the various groups are in process of being set up, and the Columbia group is to investigate the airport situation there (I think that McCain was actually hesitant about the experience we had in Charleston before participation, but gather that he was impressed with the way it worked out). Persons to contact in McCormick County (where no Negroes are registered) are being sought. And McCain is more imbued with the hows and whys of CORE organisation than before. Spirit was good. The second field position was viewed with approval, but, as we have not heard further from L. A., we are not ready for final action.

So long,

I have penned a few notes as agenda for you.

Dear Charlie and Mariam:

We were much pleased to learn that we shall have at least four people from St. Louis and possibly five.

Good luck on the fund-raising party. Some travel assistance from the National can be given, especially if it is essential to make possible Walter Hayes' attendance.

When you arrive in Beaufort Saturday evening, June 28th at 10:15, by Greyhound, James McCain will pick you up in his cardif he has arrived. If you do not find him, take a taxi to Penn Community Center; it costs about $2.

I shall probably be coming by Greyhound also, but I am due to arrive at 3:10 in the afternoon. Lula Farmer is not able to travel by bus and may have to fly down. She is checking trains also. Oops. She has checked and is flying to Charleston, meeting me there and taking the bus to Beaufort. So we should both be there Saturday afternoon.

Henry Hodge and at least three others are coming from L. A. They may have as many as six. Baltimore expects to send two delegates, and I am still working to get a delegate or two from New York (our local has improved, but getting delegates has not). As most of the S. C. groups will be well represented, it should be the best attended Convention in years.

Also, I hereby appoint Tom Roberts to the National Action Committee and authorize you to deliver such appointment when you so desire. I am somewhat hesitant because I wonder what the effect of a Harvard education and a Madison Avenue approach will do to CORE, but assume you have considered the possibilities of such subversive influence.

Marion will get the minutes to you in the next week or so. She has practically finished them, and the constitution will also be forthcoming.

Ask McCain to keep me advised on the West Virginia project. I have a few reservations about the lady there, but certainly it was the best contact available, and possibly something can be done.

Dear Marian:

Hope that you got back to Baltimore in one piece and did not have too much trouble with the sand flees on the air conditioned coaches of the railroad company.

I am writing to you in regard to a project that St. Louis CORE has against the May Department Stores. Baltimore has a May Store and perhaps some joint action can be taken by Baltimore, St. Louis, and Los Angeles. We have been in discussion with the May Company in regard to employment and service in their Famous-Barr Stores in St. Louis, and negotiations have apparently reached a stalemate. At the present time we are anticipating establishing picket lines around the Famous-Barr Store here in St. Louis on August 18 from 4 o'clock until 8:30, August 21 from 4 o'clock to 8:30, and on Saturday, August 23, from 9 o'clock until closing time at 5. We would like for the Los Angeles and Baltimore CORE groups to take joint action with us by passing out leaflets on those days and at the same time, provided, of course, that the store hours are the same. I might point out that while the action is definitely planned, there is always a possibility that there might be a break or change in the program. What we would like for the Los Angeles and Baltimore groups to do is to make an investigation as to the employment and practices of the May Company in their cities and report the same to us, and also advise us whether or not their eating facilities, if any, are open. We would also like the Baltimore and Los Angeles groups to prepare for the possibility of handing out leaflets or engaging in some other type of demonstration at the same time the St. Louis CORE group plans to initiate their program.

I will follow this letter up with a more complete report containing samples of leaflets that we are going to distribute, and a fuller statement of the exact type of demonstration we will undertake.

Please advise me whether your groups would be willing to undertake joint action and we are also definitely interested in the employment and service policies of the stores.

Dear Charlie and Marian:

I presume you are wondering why I kept after both of you for the minutes, the skeleton constitution and the handbook and then did nothing about them. The answer is simple: I just can't get to it because of our budget appeal, our outside appeal signed by Martin Luther King, our Holiday Cards, and all the activity in the field which requires at least a minimal response from the office. We have new groups in Seattle and Norfolk. The report from Norfolk which Gordon sent today was most interesting. Copies of letters are enclosed to give you some idea of what is going on.

I shall get to work on at least the skeleton local constitution very soon as we must absolutely have it available for new groups.

Lula Farmer is in Memorial Hospital. She had a swollen gland, and they did a biopsy. I don't know whether she wants people to know, but I think she would want me to tell you. I am very hopeful, but the reports won't come through before tomorrow.

Peck will soon be working on the CORElator and will want the story on the frontal attack on both eating facilities and employment policies of the department stores, particularly Famous-Barr . Good luck on that and on the interested individual from East St. Louis.

Lula expect to go home this Saturday.

P. S. Thanks so much for all the time and effort you both put into the boring jobs of writing minutes, organizational manual, etc.

Dear Sharlie and Marian:

I am enclosing copy of my letter to Harold Gibbons. Marv says this is the time to hit the Teamsters for a large contribution. Since you know Gibbons personally, I suggest you write him a letter on your own stationery, briefly stating that Henry Hodge traveled as a volunteer up and down the West Coast with some possibility of a CORE group in Seattle. You might also remind him of the registration campaign in South Carolina.

However, this material may be briefly mentioned. The main point is that we have more interest and activity than we can possibly handle with our restricted finances. We need a substantial contribution from the Teamsters as soon as possible.

At the same time, you can stress that we are doing everything possible to increase the number of individual contributors and the amount they give. Current appeals promist to add 1,000 new contributors. But costs absorb most of the initial contribution. To be able to grow to meet the increased demands on CORE, we need a large union contribution.

If you will write such a letter right away to the Washington address and then ask him to call you or call him when he is in St. Louis (most Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays), perhaps we can get something soon. I am vitally concerned as work here is piling up to the extent that we must have a secretary soon. Evenings, Saturdays and Sundays do not keep up with the work. There are probably 500 contributions which have not been receipted or the money deposited. Over 100 contributions per day are coming in. Most of our large outstanding bills have been paid, but, while we are processing money, other material to the groups and answers to numerous inquiries are not getting done, and everything is stacking on the desks, with nothing filed.

It is exciting and CORE is going places, but we shall have to have help even to introduce a modicum of efficiency into the central office.

So long.

Dear Marian:

I am enclosing the carbon copy of the affiliation application which came in yesterday from East St. Louis CORE. Also enclosed is a copy of my letter to Mrs. Gaston, Recording Secretary.

The carbon copy of the application should eventually go back to Mrs. Gaston for the permanent records of the local. But I thought you would be interested in seeing it. Also, the answer to question number 14 gives you the reason why my letter asks for more information.

Perhaps you will be able to telephone to the person in East St. Louis most likely to write us a detailed project report. If we are to accept new groups by the alternative method between Councils and Conventions, then I feel we must give them enough data to our already affiliated groups so that they will be able to make an intelligent decision (realizing, of course, that most will simply depend upon the NAC's recommendation anyway).

The Constitution requires the recommendation "of one and preferably two" representatives of National CORE who have visited the new group. So we shall need such a recommendation from you (and, optionally, from Norman Seay).

We are considering a proposal by ACI to do a 26-minute talking film on the Nashville story. Until we are clear on how to raise money for it, nothing definite will be done.

Our special (outside lists) appeal signed by Dr. King went to 49,000 people. It has been unusually successful, resulting in 1,815 new names for CORE list and gifts from these people totalling $10,708.10. Costs ran about $5,000. I think Charlie will be interested in these figures also. We hope to send another 50,000 if we can ever get to it. But tell Charlie we still need a large union contribution in order to get a secretary here. Both Lula and Gordon, when in town, work seven days also, but we cannot keep up.

Thanks for the report on East St. Louis. This gives me good material to quote in mailing out the material to the groups, and I think it insures a recommendation from the National Action Committee which meets this evening.

I am enclosing copy of a letter to Fidelity Federal Savings & Loan Association. Our Operating Account is roughly $3,000; our Emergency Account (New York Savings Bank, 3½% interest credited quarterly) roughly $6,500; and the new account, which is considered a Reserve Account, the $2,000 covered in the letter. We should be able to operate without touching that Reserve for at least eight months, thus earning at the rate of 1% per quarter for 2 and 2/3 quarters.

I agree with you that the COREIator was an especially good issue. Can St. Louis CORE use extra copies?

Dear Charlie:

I am enclosing the signature card for Fidelity Federal Savings & Loan Association. The National Action Committee approved this account last Friday, October 31, 1958. The signature card requires your signature in three (3) places. It can then be mailed to California in the enclosed envelope.

The Action Committee also approved (1) securing a larger office and (2) securing one full-time stenographic-clerical office employee. Our present office costs $594 per year including electricity. The office downstairs which we are considering would cost $1500 per year. It has more space than we currently need, but this would be handy in several ways and would probably preclude another move for a considerable period. Also, we much prefer not to change the 38 Park Row address (sounds good on mail even though it is not in actuality a first-class building).

The office move is essential if we are to have another employee. Now, whenever more than one volunteer comes in, it is impossible to walk across the office without asking everyone in it to move; in the other office, we could put people in different rooms so that those doing clerical tasks could chat without spoiling everybody else's work.

On the steno-clerical job, we now have no one in mind. Sayuri Buell declines at this time, and, with Lula largely out of the office after December, we must begin a real search soon. Any suggestions? Some persons on the NAC felt we would be wiser to go out and hire than to take someone already interested in CORE, but I would think this is true only if we cannot get someone from inside who could still work under pressure and under being bossed by me. Let me know if you have someone in mind. Other qualifications being equal, a Negro is preferred to give our office that smart integrated air so essential to maintaining it as an "international" office.

This is an appointment to a National CORE office and should be announced as such.

I presume that this has been cleared through Jim Robinson and the National Action Committee. If not I think that it will have to be approved by the National Action Committee befor e it can be effective. I am sending a copy of this letter to Jim Robinson so that he can take thenecessary action.

Dear Charlie and Marian:

I enclose copy of letter to Harold J. Gibbons. As copy is also going to Marvin Rich (leaving none in the file), you might return this copy once you are through with it.

But I hope you will notqbe through with it until you have succeeded in reaching Gibbons on the phone. Your conversation with him is important, and, from it, you can probably give us some idea of whether important help is likely to be forthcoming.

A similar letter aimed at union support generally rather than just the ILGWU is also going to Charles S. Zimmerman. In Gibbons' case, however, I think the chances are both better and more necessary: we get an occasional letter in response to appeals that "I will not give to CORE as long as Hoffa's aide is on your Advisory Board."

The Richmond Prayer Pilgrimage is apparently really rolling: Walker and Carey are going to Atlanta to confer with M. L. King; they have some white support; King signed the letter to Negro ministers asking for church support; etc. etc. Incidentally Gordon Carey seems to be extremely good as an organizer.

As you know, raises were never paid to the staff. At yesterday's NAC, 10% bonuses on money earned from September 1957 through December 1958 were voted. This totals just under $1,600. In addition, Gordon Carey's salary is increased from $80 to $90 per week effective January 1, 1959. Other salary increases are deferred for consideration in late January or February.

Holiday Card sales about $5,000. Total income since June 1, estimated at $34,000. New office rent $132 per month. Total in bank at moment(and we still owe some bills) about $13,000. 38000 MLK appeals (repeat of Sept. mailing) now in the mails.

Good luck and Merry Christmas,

Dear Charley,

It struck us here in the office that it might be a good idea for a letter to come to the newly affiliated groups from you instead of from Robinson. They are always getting things from Robinson or I and it is well to let them hear from you on occasion.

It has been the practice to write the new groups and welcome them into the family of CORE groups. I am enclosing envelopes addressed with the name and address of the Chairman of each local group which was affiliated at the Council. If you could have a short letter typed to each one on your own stationery it should serve to break the monotony of epistles from New York and also help to give them a sense of being in an organization which is not run out of New York.

In case you don't like this idea, or will not be able to get it done, just keep the envelopes for future use and let us know so that we can write each of them.

Thanks,

Gordon R. Carey

Dear Charlie and Marian:

Greetings. It was good to see you both, and I thought the Council meeting was more than usually exciting.

An inquiry came in today from Chattanooga, Tenn. from a person not on our list. Although the inquiry was not specific, I gathered that he was interested in action and not merely in acquiring free literature. I enclose copy of my reply.

Finances not good. Brotherhood appeal not very successful. Hope to work on further appeals very soon. Possible additional field man not available before August 1, and that will be helpful... if even then we can afford to add to salary expenses.

Please send all data on the place in St. Louis suggested for part of CORE's reserve fund. We should get signatures, etc. and open account before the end of this month so that we do not lose interest on a transfer at the end of the month. Please check on the security of the funds: heaven help us if we lost any of the reserve on a business failure.

Name and address of the gay divorcee you suggest I see not yet received. Please send.

Let us know if anything is developing on the Kansas City trip. Present Miami trip looks fine. Gordon writes that they are to see both the School Superintendent and the Mayor this week. Probably useless, but they have made a lot of action contacts too, and the organization meeting is set for this Thursday night.

If anyone in St. Louis CORE can give some time to helping E. St. Louis CORE develop some white membership, we should appreciate it. The characteristic "mood" of CORE and some of its techniques as well require an interracial membership, and I am concerned that the recent Council seems to underscore a trend toward becoming a largely Negro group. In groups like E. St. Louis, where white memberships should be easy enough to secure, we should do so; in some other areas, no more than a few token whites can possibly be induced to join.

I had the impression at the Frogmore Convention and again at the Nashville Council meeting that Henry Hodge would like to work on the CORE staff (he indicated he was not too well pleased with his present job).

I think he is a valuable person for CORE and yet I have the distinct feeling he would not work out on the staff.

Would this be your impression? Did he hint at a job when he stopped with you in St. Louis?

He has done a pretty good job, incidentally, of keeping in touch with us here this year... he did not use to answer letters, but now he does.

I have had no word from you in such a long time that I am beginning to wonder whether anything is wrong. Hope not.

I took the liberty of using your name, Charlie, as the signer for the follow-up appeal letter to our own CORE list. Copy enclosed. The gray slip was used to persons who usually give only $1 or $2.

I have had no word on the high-interest bank or finance company in St. Louis, and our reserve money is still in Glendale, California.

Also, Marian, no word on that friend of yours who you thought might be willing to share her lonely hours with mine! I have another interest at the moment, but...

If anything develops on Kansas City, let us know. The Miami group is apparently off to a good start. So Far, Carey's trip in Virginia has not been especially successful or eventful, but it may develop -- we did not expect it to be off to a fast start.

We have arranged for about 70,000 letters of appeal to other lists in the next five or six weeks. I certainly hope we do not lose money on these, but we are forced to make the attempt: we simply must have a larger list to avoid similar financial difficulties next year. We were surprised on the cross-check of our list to discover fewer than 2,000 persons for follow-up letter -- rather remarkable on a list of 8,500.

Dear Charles,

CORE is co-sponsoring an institute on nonviolence with the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and the Fellowship of Reconciliation. It is to be in Atlanta, Georgia from July 22 through 24 (Wed. thru Fri.). None of us here really know too much about this institute except that we are one of the sponsors.

The institute is a result, I believe, of a proposal to the SCLC by the FOR some time ago. Last fall while in Atlanta for one of the SCLC Executive Committee meetings I proposed to them that they co-sponsor a one or two week Action Institute with CORE. They voted to do this. Subsequently, as you know, we temporarily gave up the idea of this Institute and decided to have one of our own in Miami which would not be a big deal thing but run more along the line of our old workshops.

The institute this July then is a result of the FOR's proposal and we are in on it by virtue of the SCLC's decision to co-sponsor with us. Bayard Rustin told me that originally he was to have been the dean of this meeting, but at present does not plan to even be there. It is really through Bayard that we were asked in on this. Apparently the program is already pretty well set up. I will be seeing Glenn Smiley later this week and will find out more, but I suspect they have done most of the planning.

In the national office we are all convinced that CORE should play as active a part in the institute as possible. M. L. King and other big-name Southern leaders will be there. For our own prestige as well as for the contribution we will be able to make it seems like quite a good thing.

Presently we plan to have McCain present and maybe either Jimmy or me. If at all possible we thought you should be there also. This would be most essential if neither Robinson nor I could be present. We want you there regardless, however. If you can make it CORE will pay your plane fare and all other expenses.

Please let us know right away if you think you could spend those days in Atlanta. By the time we hear from you we will have additional details. Hope you can make it.

Sincerely, Carey

Dear Gordon:

I haven't answered your letter of June 28 sooner because I wanted to ascertain whether or not I would be able to go to Atlanta in July.

The press of legal business is so much that it is impossible at this time. Shake Martin King's hand for me, and anybody else you run across, and my best wishes to your wife or wife-to-be (I forget).

Dear Charlie,

I was very much concerned by your letter. This problem is of course a recurrent one. Since CORE's action projects have such dramatic potentialities, it is inevitable that the C.P. will attempt to infiltrate from time to time - this in spite of the fact that CORE is not and will never be a mass organization.

I would like to know a few more details. Is Susan Friedman the daughter of the Friedman who was recently expelled from the Machinists? Ed Brown might know since this is the guy who tried to recruit him into the C.P. during the organisation of Rice-Stix by the ILWU. At that time Friedman was working with Bridges.

Does Gene Tournour have family in St. Louis? If not, where do they live? This would seem to me to have some affect on where he ultimately ends up.

Further, which of the party personalities were at this cell meeting? This information might be particularly valuable in your discussions with the Washington University advisors. Who are they? Paul Preisler or anyone else that I know?

I will talk to Herb Hill and Jim Farmer of the NAACP staff about the youth chapter but will not talk to Herb Wright since he closes his eyes. At any rate there is not much more we can do but watch and wait.

One of the areas in which CORE might very well expand its contacts and its contributions is that of the fraternal and social organizations. I do not have any specific ins here or even much of an idea about how to go about it, but maybe Marion does. Talk to her and give me her ideas.

When are you coming to New York? Love to Marion.

Dear Charlie,

Thanks for your letter. Sorry you can't make it to the Atlanta meeting. Robinson is flying down tonite and stopping on the way back in Lexington for a couple of days.

We are slow in arrangements for the Action Institute in Miami, but things are finally shaping up. It should be an excellent two weeks if we get good participants and enough of them. If St. Louis CORE is planning to send some members to Miami it will be helpful if you can let us know as soon as possible. Also, any publicity you can give it which might reach other potential participants will be most helpful. I am enclosing a copy of the tentative Institute schedule. Any ideas you may have will be appreciated.

You will recall I proposed a field trip to St. Louis, East St. Louis, and Columbia. I will appreciate your reactions and suggestions regarding the suggested time for such a trip and also what I might hope to accomplish.

New York CORE is planning a big demonstration (poster parade) congratulating TWA on their hiring policy in flight crew employment and asking why the other major airlines cannot do likewise. They would like to make it a national demonstration with other CORE groups participating. It is planned for August 29. I have already written Los Angeles and San Francisco CORE groups asking if they could stage simultaneous demonstrations. No answers as yet. Do you think it would be feasible for St. Louis and/or East St. Louis to put on such a demonstration on that Saturday? You might bring this up with the group and let us know as soon as possible.

Sincerely,

Gordon R. Carey

Dear Charlie:

It seemed to be the consensus of the Convention that a section on CORE's work to open employment to all should be included in the Peck pamphlet on NONVIOLENCE AGAINST JIMCROW. Marvin Rich thinks we should get going on this pamphlet production as he feels it will give people a more complete picture of CORE and will be very helpful.

Knowing that you are not at all busy (!), I am therefore urging you to write a section on the principles of CORE action to open employment, with, of course, specific references to the St. Louis employment projects.

Another copy of the draft is enclosed. If possible, please return it as we are running very low on these.

Marvin is definitely coming with CORE -- by September 1st if he can get a replacement for himself at HISTADRUT. He has worked some on theatre-party plans and will see Harold Gibbons next week and work on that angle. It will be a great relief to me to have him in the office.

I hope St. Louis is working on getting someone or possibly more than one to our Miami Institute. Applications have not yet started to come in, and I am a little worried.

The Atlanta Institute was long-winded, but good on the theory of nonviolence, not much good on the practical applications. CORElator carries story of our eating project at Atlanta Airport.

Dear Charlie:

We have excellent applications for the Institute, and I hope all the multiplicitous details will work out all right. We are optimistic.

Gene Tournour finally called me and I had dinner and an evening of wandering around with him. Using his attendance at the Russian Festival or Exhibition at the Colosseum as a lead, I was able to question him at some length about his attitudes.

My conclusion is two-fold: (1) he is not and is not likely to become a Communist; and (2) some of his associations indicate that he is being cultivated by people who are pro-Communist.

He took Russian at Washington U. He intended to take the examination to become a guide at the American Exhibition in Moscow, but did not do so because the examination conflicted with the Law School entrance examinations. He did a paper at Washington U. on the Anti-semitism displayed in the USSR with particular reference to the liquidation of a number of prominent Jewish dramatists in Moscow. (I should think you could check the accuracy of this statement.)

He considers himself a materialist, but his definition is that of philosophical materialism ("matter precedes consciousness"). He does not seem to have the uncritical love for the Soviet characteristic of Communists. He did say he had not been in contact with Party members, and this I gather from what you had written may be an untruth.

On the other hand, he voluntarily referred to the wife of the man who used to run the Bookstore at Jefferson School, and this School was notorious for its Party connections. He said that she, unlike so many liberals, was well informed about the Catholic Church and appreciated its great contribution to history as a human institution; that she understood its function as a force for good especially during the Middle Ages. He also said that he was annoyed by the criticisms of Catholicism by many liberals as these criticisms are usually a mere mouthing of prejudice and are often based upon misinformation. He has become a materialist in philosophy, but this does not mean that he rejected the Church as a powerful human organization (he does, of course, reject the "idealist" nature of the Church as representing God - a concept in conflict with materialism).

He had a full-time and a part-time job here and he was busy on his freetime. This I referred to and asked if he were getting married. He had no such idea. It is entirely possible, therefore, that he is being cultivated toward a receptivity for Communism in one of the traditional Communist ways, through the girl who worked here at the Art Theatre. He was stopping in Pittsburgh after he left here, but I did not feel free to pry into the whys of this.

I certainly liked him and I did not get any impression that he was being cagey with me. But I did get the feeling that he is being worked on by someone who is either a Communist or a full-fledged fellow traveler.

How you should proceed in this kind of case I am not sure. I think I would be inclined to involve him in as much non-Communist activity as possible. Some discussion of the reasons for excluding Communists from CORE might be staged with some one taking the "Devil's Advocate" position to generate heat: this might bring out Gene's real feelings, if any, re the Party. To simply push him out of CORE might push him into the Party.

At any rate, I thought I should write you for whatever it is worth to you. Marvin Rich did not get any other sources of information about him.

We are completely overwhelmed with work here. Money is comingin but not fast enough. Rich will probably not start officially until October 2, but he is already doing some work for us.

It is Sunday and Carey (fresh from Honeymoon), Lula and I are all in the office.

Dear Charlie:

I am enclosing Solomon Baylor's letter and a copy of my reply. Please return Baylor's letter right away. You may keep my reply. If you have any comments or suggestions, fine. I am almost certain I am right on the policy as established in the past.

We are meeting on the Jim Peck pamphlet early next week. Are we going to get the stories of St. Louis' employment projects? Possibly it should give one in detail and the balance just refer to in passing. Will it be possible to stage a picture or do you have ones in file?

News releases enclosed. Do not know what coverage we got on the ones about Howard Johnson's, but each release gets picked up somewhere. Thanks so much for the picture of the child picketing. We sent some mats out on that one.

Finances have not been going too well. But we were much encouraged by an anonymous gift of one thousand dollars received today through a Philadelphia Trust Department. Twice in past years, we have received a gift from the same Trust Department, but it was $500, not $1,000 in the past. Your appeal letter has been fairly successful; our trouble lies in greatly reduced responses to mailings sent to other lists.

P. S. CORElator deadline this coming week.

October 2, 1959

Solomon Baylor, Cahirman
Baltimore CORE Chapter
1519 Pennsylvania Avenue
Baltimore 17, Maryland

Dear Mr. Baylor:

I have your letter of September 30th requesting a loan or grant of $500 to start the ball rolling on the legal defense of Baltimore CORE participants who were unjustly arrested during the Guynn Oak Park All Nations Day protest. Although I telephoned you today to say any grant is highly unlikely, and that loans are not made, I think I should put it in writing and send a copy to Charles R. Oldham, national chairman.

First, as I understand it, it is against policy to make loans or grants to affiliated locals. Such loans were not made to New York CORE during the Palisades Park fracas; although some help was requested by Chicago CORE for legal action, this was not given either. On the policy level, the relatively large degree of autonomy of CORE locals appears to be inconsistent with any loan or grant policy.

Quite apart from policy, however, the fact that the fund situation in the national organization is not presently secure would militate against grants or loans of any kind.

I would be very careful also about retainers, lawyers' fees, etc. As I understand it, the American Civil Liberties Union and some other liberal organizations have a policy of never paying anything except court costs, appeal printing costs, etc. Over-all costs, particularly if an appeal becomes necessary, can grow fast even with free legal service.

On the immediate need for money, what the New York CORE group did was to borrow from its own membership and from friends of members. Many of these friends advanced $50 or $100 or even $200, and the group undertook to guarantee return of the money. Every month a fund-raising party was held to benefit the Palisades Fund. Some functions raised as much as $100 clear. The prime method was a fund appeal by mail. We approached sympathetic liberal groups for the use of their mailing lists, and secured a well-known person as signer of the letter. The letter was nicely offset-printed. A return slip and envelope was used. We members did the folding, inserting and stamping (using a commemorative stamp). Those who contributed received receipts and a thank-you. This brought in many hundreds of dollars, but, of course, part of it was spent on the stamps, printing.

and so forth. A card index of the names of these contributors was made so that we could ask again the following year if necessary.

With CORE's stress on non-violence, the lists of such groups as the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and the pacifist groups are good ones. The Civil Liberties Union and Americans for Democratic Action would also be good. Givers to the NAACP and other civil rights groups are good only if they normally give by mail: the NAACP members who are signed up in door-to-door campaigns would be likely to respond only to a door-to-door appeal and not to a mail appeal. But you might well consider door-to-door work if enough of the members will give several hours a night to it for a period of a week or more. This should not come at the same time with NAACP campaign.

I do not know, of course, what connections Baltimore CORE members may have for getting any of these lists: a personal contact is often essential. It is also essential that no one copy another list: if they let you use it for a one-time mailing, this is all you are entitled to.

If the Afro-American newspapers are willing to play up your campaign, they may be willing to put in a fund appeal or write an editorial for the Baltimore edition with a fund-appeal init. This might or might not produce much cash, but it would have the advantage of costing nothing. Also, of course, I am not sure how far a newspaper will go along these lines.

If you have good contacts with some of the NAACP people in Baltimore who work on the funds campaign, they may have good suggestions: in recent years, the local campaigns have been notably successful.

If you do decide to have parties, be very careful of expenses, especially at the first one or two before you know how many people will turn out. Also, have a high enough gate contribution so that most of the money is clear. It is often essential to have people on the door who make people feel really welcome at the same time they collect efficiently. Was always collected from every member also.

Some CORE groups in the past have had successful big dances, but dances can be run at a loss unless the promotion and management is well planned. Bake sales, raffles, etc., cocktail parties, theatre benefits — all have been used with varying success depending upon the make-up and standing of the local group.

The first step, however, is borrowing the initial $500. This should not be too difficult. If the members are really committed to this project, there are few who cannot give outright at least $10, and a good number will often loan $25 to $50 each. Borrowing from the membership is a good motivational idea too: if everybody realizes that money must be raised to pay off non-member loans before member loans can be returned, they will often work that much harder.

I hope all of this proves helpful. From the Palisades experience, I know you have a job on your hands; yet the process itself did much to build up New York CORE, and we enjoyed the benefits for several years after the campaign was over and paid for.

Sincerely yours,

James R. Robinson

Dear Charlie and Marian:

Thanks so much for the material which you sent us on the employment project. The pamphlet is now at the printers, and we expect the proofs tomorrow. We hope to produce the pamphlet by early January.

Gordon Carey's field trip from here starts shortly after Thanksgiving, and we hope that he will be able to make stops in Columbia, Missouri, and in East St. Louis, Illinois. I enclose copy of my letter to the East St. Louis group.

I am sure he will be available to the St. Louis CORE group if you wish to have him. Also, I think it would be helpful for him to see the St. Louis CORE group in action. Won't you let us know, just as soon as possible, what date would be best for you, and how long you think he might be useful in St. Louis.

A new CORE group in Tallahassee, Florida, at an enthusiastic meeting recently. Pat Stevens, whom Vera Williams will remember from the Miami Action Institute, was instrumental in getting the group together. Rev. Steele, who led the bus boycott there, is most favorable, and Gordon Carey stayed with him while he was in Tallahassee.

Greenville, South Carolina, CORE, after the unpleasant incident involving Jackie Robinson at the Greenville airport, is planning a mass protest on January 1st, Emancipation Day, and James T. McCain is working to get the cooperation of all our South Carolina CORE groups.

So you see exciting things are happening.

Dear Charlie and Marian:

I enclose copy of letter to James T. MC Cain because it does go into details of the financial situation. Please return it in the enclosed envelope as it is the only copy I have.

Bank balance in checking account is about $4,500 -- but there are some large outstanding bills also. If the appeal to outside names which went out over a week ago should do better than anticipated, we might be better off than I now think possible. It is still possible that Holiday Cards will improve or that costs will total somewhat less than anticipated. We have had some big orders (as high as $114.00), and three sizeable orders came in Friday.

McCain does bring in some contributions; Carey brings in practically nothing. We plan to use McCain this coming week to see some of Marvin's union people.

Lula Farmer tends to think I am trying to limit benefits, etc. too stringently. I feel however that we should do as well as possible on the compensation and that fringe benefits (which operate inequitably anyway) should be held to a bare minimum. To do well on both is not possible without, in my opinion, causing us to release Carey altogether at some point this year.

Please note the proposal to ask executive employees to take a cut voluntarily (see letter to McCain). If this seems feasible to you, please write me on it right away: we want to straighten out the union contract at the next action committee meeting, and this will probably be held next Sunday.

I would like your comments generally. My own feeling is that if we can get through the present year and do not add to staff or program for next year, we should not run into this much trouble again.

Dear Charlie:

The enclosed letters and carbons should be signed and mailed out from your office. We think the St. Louis postmark may do some good: our groups are used to ignoring material coming from the national office!

We did not finish all the letters, and the balance will come later, but these should go out right away.

The field trip to Columbia, East St. Louis, etc. has been cancelled for the time being as we received no replies from the groups involved. Also, Gordon Carey wanted to stay in New York because his new wife has been ill. By the time your letter came, we had already in process a plan for him to help re-build New York CORE.

If responses to this plan prove insufficient, we could send him later in December possibly -- tentatively he has plans to go to the Greenville demonstration January 1 and then to Chicago.

At any rate, I am glad to have your opinion that we should simply select a date for East St. Louis and send him -- without bothering to try to arrange it with East St. Louis CORE.

I am not sure how valid it is to use Gordon for long spans of time in New York, and this probably means we shall face a problem. Present plans call for him to be in Chicago from January 3 to the Council, then here in New York for a week or ten days, and then again in the field. I do not feel we can be lenient again should his wife's illness prove recurrent.

The National Action Committee Sunday modified the proposed union contract in a way which may make it financially feasible. Also, we hope to get a grant to cover printing on the big-deal pamphlet.

Dear Mr. Bennett:

I need your help and the help of your local CORE group.

The finances of National CORE have not gone well this year. We may soon face the necessity of reducing our field staff from two to one.

To do so would be difficult: both men have worked hard and well.

It would also be damaging to CORE as an organization: most of our groups have been developed during the period Mr. McCain and Mr. Carey have been with us. In the last two years CORE, locally and nationally, has tripled in size. Each local group benefits from the activities of other CORE groups and from the activities of the national office. This would be a most unfortunate time to be forced to curtail this growth.

Yet, unless we can improve the financial picture, something drastic has to be done.

You can help. Get your group to pay to the national office now its $10 affiliation fee and its 10% tax (10% of all the money coming in during a fiscal year). Most of our groups are deliquent on the tax owing for 1958-59.

Contributions from members and friends would be welcome.

In the past, CORE groups have had social affairs to raise money for the National Budget in times of crisis. This year St. Louis CORE plans a Brotherhood Tea in February to raise money for both local and national CORE. They expect to net $1,000 and share this equally with national CORE. Perhaps your group could sponsor such a tea, or a dance or some other fund-raising function.

In the past, CORE groups have had social affairs to raise money for the National Office in time of crisis. This year St. Louis CORE plans a Brotherhood Ball in February to raise money for both local and national CORE. They expect to net $1,000 and share this equally with national CORE. Perhaps your group could sponsor such a ball, or a dance, or some other fund-raising function.

The National Office has not pressed groups for payments the past two years when finances have gone well. We hope you will want to help now -- when your support is vitally necessary.

Dear Mr. Hanson:

I need your help and the help of your local CORE group.

The finances of National CORE have not gone well this year. We may soon face the necessity of reducing our field staff from two to one.

To do so would be difficult: both men have worked hard and well.

It would also be damaging to CORE as an organization: most of our groups have been developed during the period Mr. McCain and Mr. Carey have been with us. In the last two years CORE, locally and nationally, has tripled in size. Each local group benefits from the activities of other CORE groups and from the activities of the national office. This would be a most unfortunate time to be forced to curtail this growth.

Yet, unless we can improve the financial picture, something drastic has to be done.

You can help. Get your group to pay to the national office now its $10 affiliation fee and its 10% tax (10% of all the money coming in during a fiscal year). Most of our groups are deliquent on the tax owing for 1958-59.

Contributions from members and friends would be welcome.

Mrs. Charles R. Oldham

St. Louis 8, Missouri

Dear Mariam,

I have your note on Charlie's plane reservations to and from Washington. The flight from St. Louis to Washington is certainly alright, as we have had no further work on any public meeting for Friday evening. What worries me is the return flight from Washington, as it leaves far too early in the day. It would essentially mean that Charlie would not be available for the Sunday morning session, which is often quite an important session. On the other hand, there is no tourist service from Washington to St. Louis after the 11:50 A.M. TWA flight until the Eastern flight at 1:50 A.M. the next morning, that is Monday morning. That flight arrives in St. Louis at 4:56 A.M.. There is also a 6:00 P.M. TWA flight, but that is first-class. Possibly the most convenient arrangement would be to fly tourist from St. Louis to Washington and first-class returning from Washington.

Earlier, Charlie had mentioned possibly stopping in Charleston, West Virginia, to visit with Mrs. Gilmore. I am wondering if this is now impossible. I am concerned about the Charleston, West Virginia CORE group, as we no longer seem to have very close contact with it and as we are getting very few reports of action there. The group is operating as an all-Negro group, and this, I feel, is a major source of difficulty in operating the projects. At the same time, I have the feeling that Mrs. Gilmore is not especially anxious to have any of our field secretaries stop there. But, as she knows both you and Charlie, I think a brief stop would be very helpful in setting up time for a later field stop by one of the secretaries. I think, in this case, the man should be Gordon Carey, as he should have easier access to the white community.

The problem in Charleston is different from that in East St. Louis, as the proportion of Negroes in Charleston is really too small to influence a store like the Diamond as Negro trade cannot account for more than 5% of the sales. As I understand it, in East St. Louis, the proportion of Negroes to whites is very high.

I wish that you too could be with us in Washington, D. C.. Possibly you can arrange it?

Cordially,

JRR:mm

Jim:

I have made plane reservations for Charlie on a tourist flight leaving St. Louis January 22 at 7:25P.M. and arriving in Washington Jan. 22 at 10:55 P.M. If there is to be a public meeting on Friday I will have to change his reservations. This will mean a savings of $25.00, if he goes tourist. This is the only tourist flight on Friday. Tourist return is 11:50 A.M. leaving Washington, Sunday .
Could the public meeting be Saturday evening? T.W.A. is booked pretty solid on Flights to Washington. Please let us know soon.

This year St. Louis CORE plans a Brotherhood Tea in February to raise money for both local and national CORE. They expect to net $1,000 and share this equally with national CORE. Perhaps your groups could sponsor such a tea, or a dance, or some other fund-raising function.

The national office has not pressed groups for payments the past two years when finances have gone well. We hope you will want to help now — when your support is vitally necessary.

Dear Charlie:

I am enclosing a copy of the proposed field work schedule for 1960, covering the period from January 1st until the Action Institute. Now that it is done - let's see how closely we live up to it! As far, as is possible, it is planned in line with the suggestions made by the 1959 convention, allowing for field time in each city, which we have an affiliated group, at least once a year.

You will notice that starting about the beginning of May, McCain has alot of open time. Some of this will be taken up by vacations and the rest will be open for additional field work possibilities, which come in between now and May. If you have any suggestions or criticisms, we will certainly appreciate them, prior to the council meeting. The entire staff has gone over the schedule rather carefully and we feel that it is about as good a tentative schedule as can be made up this far in advance. It schedules both McCain and I very tightly and in fact allows me less time in the office than is desireable.

I will be looking forward to seeing you and Marion at the Council Meeting in Washington. Except for money, things are still going pretty well in the national office.

Sincerely,

Dear Marian:

We hope to promote the Convention into a sizeable affair this year. It occurred to me today, when I inserted word about it in the receipt letter we shall be using the coming months, that we have not signed any contract.

Also, if we do get more than the 40 people which can be accommodated at the Episcopal Retreat:

(1) Will they still be able to eat with us at the Retreat?

(2) Will inexpensive housing accessible to the Retreat be available?

I realize I am keeping after you and Charlie every minute. Please pardon me.

So long,

James R. Robinson
Executive Secretary

Hope you can make a Charleston, W. Va. stop -- if not, would you phone Mrs. Gilmore? Have the feeling they operate slowly and like some NAACP chapters. jim

Dear Charlie and Marian:

Thanks for the prompt action on mailing the urgent appeal to the groups. Holiday cards were not stressed in this (they were in an earlier memo to the groups) because it was really too late to build up sales -- and we have not found the groups responsive to these "egghead" greetings. Also, the tax and $10 affiliation fee are prime responsibilities of the groups.

Holiday card sales are now slightly over $10,000 -- not so good in view of a budgeted sale of $20000, but still more than $4,000 more than a year ago. There have been 1,764 orders, of which 702 are keyed to the CORE list. We therefore expect that when the cross-check is done, we should find about 800 people to add to the CORE list (the difference is caused by duplications in mailings, many of our people using envelopes keyed to other mailing lists).

The list of local CORE group contacts is now being prepared for mimeographing next week. I SHALL MARK ON THAT LIST WHICH PEOPLE ARE TO GET YOUR FOLLOW-UP letter about local tax, fund-raising functions for national, etc. This will involve a little guess work as I did not keep a definite record of all those written the first time.

But your sending these on your letter-head from your office will be a great help. If you want, bill us for postage & paper.

The Chicago field trip for Jan. 3 to Jan 22 looks good: we have had some enthusiastic responses to the questionnaire we sent. McCain and Carey will work together. McCain is now in Boston where two public meetings were set up. He will be in the office briefly on Monday and then back in S. C. for the Greenville Airport "sit-in" protest.

What did St. Louis Core think of CORE DOES IT THIS WAY?

P. S. St. Louis CORE money came in. Thanks. We shall acknowledge soon.

Sincerely,

James R. Robinson, Executive Secretary

Dear Charlie and Marion:

I hope you have gone over the proposed field work schedule sent you a week ago. You will notice that I have scheduled both Jim McCain and myself in St. Louis and vicinity during the first week of April. We have also left a period of time up until April 17th open for field work in the Midwest if necessary.

We certainly would like to be able to spend a portion of this time in St. Louis, and make a stop in Columbia, Missouri. I also understand that you are interested in having someone go to Kansas City. Specific arrangements and plans can be made later, but I would like a confirmation of the general idea and dates as soon as possible.

Any suggestions or ideas which either of you may have will be appreciated. I will be looking forward to seeing you in Washington in January. Marvin and Jim etc. send you the best wishes for a Happy Holiday Season.

Sincerely,

Dear Charlie:

I am enclosing the list of local contacts, with the ones written before indicated. In a few cases, I may have indicated someone not written before, as we kept no record. Also, for James Peck, and for the Tallahassee group, we had not written before. This may indicate that you will want to change the copy on those letters slightly.

Holiday card sales are up to about $10,300.00, and it does not look as if they would exceed $10,500.00.

In discussing plans for the Interracial Action Institute in 1960 at the Action Committee last evening, we came up with an idea which I think may be exciting. This is to concentrate on the Grants in Miami, and to ask our affiliated local groups across the country, where a Grants store exists locally, to concentrate on that store at the same time. We are most anxious to have at least one person from each local CORE group present at the Institute, and we hope to have at least 25 full-time participants.

Thanks very much for corresponding with the local groups. I think your follow-up letter in early January will be a great help, particularly since it comes several weeks before the National Council meeting in Washington. Let me know if it becomes possible for you to make a stop in Charleston, West Virginia.

Dear Charlie:

In mimeographed material which we sent out yesterday, I included the suggestion for a fund-raising project to be put on by each affiliated local during February 1960. I wonder if you could reiterate this request in a letter going to the chairman with a copy to the treasurer of each of the affiliated group. I am enclosing the list, but I sent you a list earlier which has some indication in which people are most apt to respond, and possibly you would prefer to use that list - sometimes writing to people other than the chairman and treasurer.

Thank you so much for your excellent work as chairman at the Council meeting. I would not have thought it possible to cover the agenda with so little expenditure of time.

I am most concerned to learn of any people that would make good field secretaries. The reason for this that by next fall we shall either have to add field secretaries or face a situation as far as Gordon Carey is concerned. He does not want to spend one-half to two-thirds of his time in the field indefinitly. On the other hand, I think it will not be possible to keep him in the office two-thirds or three-quarters of the time until we have additional field people. If additional field people do not become possible, then it is likely that Gordon would be leaving us, and we would still need to find one new field secretary.

It would be helpful to have here any brochure about the place where the Convention is to be held, and also definite indications of rates, meal times if they are set by the place etc. I suppose Marion handled this, so please tell her, if you can still hear each other talk in that great big mansion of yours.

Mr. R. C. McLaren
Vice-President

Dear Mr. McLaren:

The St. Louis and East St. Louis CORE groups have received requests from the National Office of CORE to take immediate action to protest the denial of service to Negroes at the sit-down lunch counters in the Carolina and Virginia areas. We have a particular concern about reports indicating that the Negro students may be arrested and charged with trespass.

In the past few years St. Louis CORE has developed excellant relations with the Woolworth Company. Several years ago the Woolworth Company in St. Louis started serving Negroes using a program which called for the minimum of publicity and the maximum of action. This plan ultimately resulted in the complete opening of the stores in St. Louis and I believe that it worked extremely well from the viewpoint of both St. Louis CORE and the Woolworth Company.

Because of our excellant relations with the St. Louis Woolworth organization we would not like to take direct action through picket signs and leaflets to encourage your patrons in East St. Louis and St. Louis to stop shopping at your stores. We can not, however, ignore the fact that this is the same Company that is discriminating against Negroes in Carolina and Virginia. We have called an emergency meeting of the two groups for Friday evening, February 12, 1960. The purpose of this meeting will be to decide what action we will take to protest the discriminatory policies of the Corporation in other sections of the country.

It is our sincere hope that the National Office of the Woolworth Company will enter into negotations with National CORE in an attempt to settle the problem. Mr. James Robinson, the executive director of National CORE is well acquainted with the plan used in St. Louis and Mr. Marvin Rich, who is now on the staff of National CORE was in St. Louis and took part in some of the discussions with the local Woolworth chain.

Perhaps the St. Louis experience may serve as the basis for fruitful negotiations in the present situation.

COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS
WASHINGTON 25, D.C.

STAFF DIRECTOR

March 25, 1960

Dear Mr. Oldham:

At its meeting on March 20th the Commission on Civil Rights considered your telegram requesting that the Commission undertake an investigation of state actions taken in response to the current wave of demonstrations in certain southern states.

I must emphasize at the start that the Commission, being neither a law enforcement nor a supervisory agency, cannot and does not attempt to redress particular instances of alleged deprivations of constitutional rights. The Commission's functions are limited to appraising laws, and studying and collecting facts and making reports and recommendations thereon to the President and Congress.

In order to perform its duties effectively, the Commission has directed its attention to certain definite and limited subject areas, and has confined its studies to such areas rather than attempting to investigate every incident which may come within its jurisdiction. The incidents to which you have drawn the Commission's attention do not appear to fall within any of the areas presently under study by the Commission. No investigation of the matter has, therefore, been authorized. The Commission would, however, be interested to receive from you such further detailed information on these questions as you may care to submit, in case a study of this area should be undertaken at some future time.

Sincerely yours

Dear Charlie and Marian:

I enclose the second announcement of the Convention, with definite information. Here are some answers to points raised in Marian's letter:

a. Reserve 25 rooms (hope we have some cancellation privileges -- tendency for delegates to arrive several days late).

b. Four days exactly: dinner Wednesday June 29 through mid-day lunch Sunday July 3.

c. We think a public meeting is easier to arrange than a dinner. A dinner with a basic cost of $2.75, plus mailings, plus drinks, would mean a minimum charge of $5 per person, thus limiting attendance. Use your judgement, however, keeping in mind that we want the dinner or public meeting to raise funds sufficient to defray the entire deficit of the Conference-Convention.

If there are not too many conflicts, we think that the public meeting might well occur Wednesday evening, June 29th. This gives the Conference a send-off, attracts delegates early, and arouses community interest at the outset. Thursday evening might be second choice; later evenings run into the problem of persons who leave for the July 4th weekend.

d. Project. Project time now scheduled for Saturday afternoon only. We prefer the Thompson project because (1) it is closer; and (2) it stresses the sit-in at a business establishment rather than a protest against a public authority -- we feel that too often the Southern movements have concentrated on big public demonstrations against governmental bodies (where there is little hope), and we do not want our project to reinforce this idea. In terms of E. St. Louis, of course, it probably makes sense; but in the South I feel it is an exercise in beating one's head against the wall.

e. Swimming. Hope at least one swim can be arranged, either after an afternoon session or, possibly, after an evening session as we did in 1957.

f. Party. Sunday evening might be a possibility. A dance with a band and a gate fee is okay if St. Louis CORE wants to take it on. This might mean funds also. Or the party could be a more private affair in someone's home. Last year's party at Henry Hodge's was, I thought, a terrible failure. But I am not thinking this would happen in St. Louis. Possibly, however, the holding of a party at the very end (as we did last year) is more difficult than earlier: some delegates leave before the party. On the other hand, a Saturday night party usually means lateness for breakfast and session on Sunday morning. So, you worry about it. We shall send out another announcement when all these dating matters are clear.

Personnel. Still getting complaints on Holt. So am pleased he has been severed. You might speak tentatively with Gene Tournour: our field staff is extremely fluid at this point. Still looking for a good, fast typist.

Lease. Beingwworked out. Third floor, air-conditioning to be installed. Five year lease at $5,000 per year including electricity. More than twice the size of present space.

Fund-Raising. The outside firm is out of the picture at least temporarily. Monday, June 20th, is the Eleanor Roosevelt luncheon at the Plaza Hotel. This could conceivably raise a considerable sum.

At the Convention, I think we should have definite authorization to hire a fund-raising firm should we deem it advisable later. This would free us of any kick-backs in the event that we need to take such a step. I think now that we may not need to do so, but I would want to be free in case it becomes necessary later.

Thanks for all the arrangements. I know what a pain it is to have to make them when price is such a major consideration.

Sincerely yours,

James R. O'Hanlon
Executive Secretary

[redacted] just finished talking to John Lewis in Lexington, Kentucky. They have been negotiating with Woolworth, Kelley, S. S. Kresge, and Kress. Three stores have refused to open unless four or five other stores do too. They also want two or three other cities to follow along with Greensboro. They agreed to have a more specific proposal to CORE by noon, Tuesday, June 2.

[redacted]

The CORE group last night voted to remove pickets on June 6th, assuming that the June 2nd proposal is as I have outlined it.

As you know, in Nashville only six stores integrated. Kress was one of the holdouts. Now, our reports indicate that everything is going well there.

The task of binding up the wounds continues. I do hope that out of this will come a more effective student program and greater understanding on the part of the local CUAE groups.

Would very much like to receive from you a report on your meeting with Todd Settle and also from someone in St. Louis CUAE, a report on achievements in exployment, in the Industries and the success of the Stockholm situation. Not not a terribly long paragraph, but you know what I mean. I need some outcome material and I also need material for a pamphlet on exployment.

Tom and Marion were very wonderful to Mary and me. Mary likes Marion a great deal. Thanks a load. Love for.

Dear Mrs. Farmer:

In accordance with the decisions of the recent CORE Convention, I am to check appointments to the National Action Committee with three officers of CORE, the Vice-Chairman, the Treasurer, and the Secretary. I am writing you about such a proposed appointment.

The National Action Committee has proposed for appointment Mr. Val Coleman, a man who works for United Artists Pictures Corp. in New York City. Mr. Coleman was mentioned on the floor of the convention as a potential appointee. He has personally published posters for New York CORE, has worked on the sound truck advertising the Woolworth picket lines, and has done many kinds of active work with the organization. In addition to this, he has done a good deal of public relations work of one kind or another. For example, he was the person who did the fund-raising movie trailer which was shown at the convention. He has had something to do with getting CORE on such television shows as Open End.

If you approve the appointment of Mr. Coleman to the National Action Committee, please so indicate on the bottom of this letter, sign your full name, and return the letter to James R. Robinson, Executive Secretary, CORE, 38 Park Row, New York 38, New York.

It was certainly good having you with us at the convention.

Dear Charlie:

Anne Holden has written us about the whereabouts of the minute book in which she had the roll and minutes of the convention. Priscilla Stephens took the last minutes, and she told us that she took them in a minute book which was left in St. Louis. I trust that you have this book. If so, please check the last part of the minutes taken by Priscilla, and check on anything that you think is unclear. Then send the minute book registered mail to Anne Holden, 93½ Dewey Street, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

The national action committee met yesterday at lunch and asks you to add to the committee Mr. Val Coleman. Mr. Coleman has helped us a great deal in New York City in terms of picket lines and has spoken at our annual lunch. He was responsible for the fund appeal mailing similar which you saw in St. Louis, and he has been helpful in many other public relations ways. It is my understanding that the new procedure for appointments to the national action committee requires that the other officers approve. This would mean a letter from you to Henry Lodge, Vice-Chairman; Anne Holden, Secretary; and Lula Farmer, Treasurer. Henry Lodge's address is 1218 South Sycamore, Los Angeles, California. You have Anne Holden's address above. Lula Farmer is 85 Bedford Street, New York 14, N.Y. I would suggest that you ask each of these people to give their okay on the bottom of your letter and return the letter to us here at the national office. This should facilitate Mr. Coleman's appointment.

I have read Mr. Boyd's report on his trip to Fayette County. I think the report is rather impressive and indicates that he worked pretty hard for the short time that he was there.

At the meeting of the national action committee yesterday, it was felt that Mr. Boyd's position with CORE should be soon regularized. In this connection, it was decided that he should get a salary of $80.00 per week beginning today, July 14th. However, this does not indicate a definite or a permanent appointment. He will be brought to New York and will get an opportunity to talk not only with staff members but also with other members of the national action committee. We can then decide whether or not we shall admit to the permanent field staff. We felt that this method would tend to give a larger number of people some say in who is hired. George Hunt, a volunteer here in the office who has taken some of the Frankfort students to Louisville for the hearing, is very much impressed with Mr. Boyd's work with the students.

I should certainly like your reactions on Mr. Boyd. I should also make it clear that the $80.00 a week proposal was not mine and not Gordon Carey's. Both of us felt that this tends to indicate a degree of permanency which the committee does not really have in mind at this point. On the other hand, it is hardly feasible to expect him to continue to work even part time for CORE on an expenses-only basis; he actually has no money of his own.

Sincerely yours,

James R. Robinson
Executive Secretary

P.S. We are looking forward to your stop in New York. Marvin Rich says that you have room to stay out at his home. No doubt you will need a rest after the election campaign in St. Louis. Incidentally, I seem to be the only person on the staff who is enthusiastic about Mr. Kennedy's nomination.

P.S. I am enclosing letters to Mr. Hodge; Holden and Farmer for you to sign and send, I thought this would speed it up.

Dear Charlie:

I trust that the minutes of the convention turned up alright and were forwarded to Anna Holden.

The literature you requested was sent to Mrs. Paul Scheiber.

The National Action Committee of CORE has a special evening session scheduled for August 8th to discuss the south, the possible outbreak of violence, and how we might proceed to meet such situations. I trust that you will be in New York still on that date. If not, please let us know, so that we may schedule some other meeting of the National Action Committee while you are here. I believe I told you before that the Richies have offered you a place to sleep.

The Miami Action Institute is rapidly filling up. We shall have students from the south from most of the states. Also, it looks as though we should have the full thirty participants, although I still have hopes that we can cut it down to twenty-five. We have just heard from Miami and understand that three of the dime stores will open service to all on August 1st. We feel that the Institute had something to do with this. When I wrote to Mr. Harrigan of Woolworth, I enclosed a copy of the Institute announcement, and suggested that we would appreciate having the dime stores opened before the Institute began.

Robert Boyd was in town for more than a week and had discussions with various people on the National Action Committee. At our meeting, there was so much hesitation about his ability, that we simply continued him on a temporary basis until Labor Day. He is now on his way to Greenville, South Carolina, and we hope that he will be able to be of service there. At any rate, this will give him some chance to show whether he has ability as a field secretary or not.

We have some other field possibilities. Tom Rose, a young white student who is going to the Institute and has traveled rather widely to the student movements in the south, is interested in a field job. He has impressed all of us. Richard Haley, of course, would be excellent if he decides to take the job. However, at this point, he has only decided to come to the Institute and, on the basis of his experience there, to decide whether or not he wants to work on a permanent basis. It might be well for you to drop him a note. He is at Highlander Folk School, Monteagle, Tennessee. He will be arriving at the Institute several days after it opens, as this is the only way he can manage it since he is not free at Highlander until August 16th. We are also interested in Jack O'Dell, who has worked with the Youth March and with the Martin Luther King, Jr. Defense Committee.

Marvin Robinson is apparently doing an excellent job in Louisiana. Mr. McCain is now with him.

Give our regards to Marian.

Dear Friend:

Very significant progress has been made in ending lunch counter discrimination throughout the South. Since February 1, lunch counters have been desegregated in eighty-seven communities. We have reached agreement to end discrimination in a number of additional communities.

The attached list shows those communities which have desegregated. Asheville, Raleigh and Fayetteville, North Carolina; Lexington, Kentucky; Coral City, Florida; Amarillo, Texas; and Fort Smith, Arkansas should also be included. We thought that you would be much interested in receiving this account.

In spite of the very substantial progress we have not yet been wholly successful. Tallahassee, Florida where our CORE members were jailed and other communities in South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia and Florida have not yet opened to all. These are communities in which there have been sustained sit-ins by CORE groups and others. We shall do all that we can to insure that these cities establish democratic serving policies.

Our reports indicate that the public and the employees of the stores involved have accepted the change with dignity and good humor.

Your support during the past year helped bring about this civil rights revolution. I want to take this opportunity to thank you.

Sincerely,

Dear Gordon,

Enclosed please find charge of $253.00 for shipping 14,000 pounds of used clothing to Tenn.

Please make the check payable to the Hoover Motor Express Co., Inc. and mail it to me. I want to check on delivery before I send them the check.

We are having an affair soon to raise money for this purpose - and we will probably be able to reimburse you for most of this. Story with pictures will arrive in the next day or so. Pictures are being developed.

Congrats for the fine work on Woolworth etc. I was wrong about calling off boycott.

Hello to all

Dear Charlie:

We have tried to keep the CORE groups better informed of developments throughout the country and of the role that the national office and other groups have been playing. We hope that this has been of help to you.

There is one way in which we believe that we can be more helpful. Last week we sent out eight press releases on our activities. These went to the weekly and daily press and to selected magazines. We could also place one representative of each CORE group on our press list. This person could be assigned to read the releases and report to the group at meetings. These should not be sent for personal information but for use of the group.

In this way the groups could be better informed and also have more readily available the techniques developed by other CORE groups. If you would designate a person to receive these mailings, I would be happy to add him to the press list. Your CORE chapter should have someone responsible for contacts with the local press.media. You may wish to designate this person.

Thank you so much.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Charlie:

Enclosed is a carbon copy of a letter you sent to Gen. Shoup, head of the Marine Corps. Also enclosed is a news release which gives some of the background on this situation.

Have not yet received any material on the employment of Negroes in the St. Louis banks. There has been no mention of this in the St. Louis papers. It seems to me that St. Louis-CORE is hiding its light under a bushel and that this is having an effect. The last issue of Sepia was extensive in its coverage of St. Louis and dismal in its failure to mention St. Louis CORE. I think someone in CORE should write a letter of protest indicating the responsibility for many of the changes described.

One issue of the CORElator is at the printer's now and should be out by the end of next week. But there is another issue in the works, of course. Please write and tell me about what you've been doing.

Cordially,

Enclosed is the check for your hotel bill. The check is for $93.45 -- the amount of your hotel room. I'm sure we owe you lots more but you didn't really itemize it in a way the auditors will accept. Please list the $1.50 and say cab fare, okay?

How about writing something for the next issue of the CORKlator in a week or two? My best to Marion.

President Eisenhower
The White House
Washington, D. C.

Dear President Eisenhower:

The Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) has two immediate concerns which we feel compelled to bring to your attention. We believe you will see the necessity of executive action in both.

First, we are concerned about the organized attempts in New Orleans to deprive Negro children of their constitutional rights to equal educational opportunity. Enclosed is a sample of the petition circulated by CORE and signed by over 100,000 persons. These signed petitions are being sent you by parcel post. We feel that a strong statement by you would go far in alleviating the tensions in New Orleans. The nation looks to you for moral leadership.

Our second concern is with the widespread current abridgement of the rights of freedom of speech guaranteed by the First Amendment. The world sees in America the symbol of freedom, equality and democracy. Yet, today many Americans -- white and Negro -- are denied freedom of speech by restrictions placed on peaceful protest and dissemination of literature.

Recently in Sumter, South Carolina six CORE members were arrested for peaceful picketing. Two others were arrested for passing out leaflets. Yet, federal courts have held many times that the right to picket peacefully and to leaflet are protected constitutional forms of free speech.

In New Orleans, just last week, nine CORE members were arrested for passing out leaflets. There are many more instances which could be cited.

The Congress of Racial Equality respectfully requests an audience with you at your earliest opportunity to discuss these matters.

Dear Charlie:

I figured that you probably don't have enough to do with your time so I thought you might want to see this batch of field reports. I have sent some copies of field reports to Henry and thought that you might find these interesting. All but one are by Joseph Perkins -- the other is from Genevieve Hughes. Generally they are short and should give you some feeling of how the new staff operates.

Dear Charlie:

I don't know who is responsible for getting out the St. Louis CORElator. It is too good to have been done by you so please pass on my congratulations to the appropriate person. This is the kind of thing which more of our local groups should be doing. I do hope that you plan to continue publishing it at least on a quarterly basis. If you did this each individual story could be more detailed and thus more interesting.

As I have told you many times previously I think there is enough material in St. Louis for a major pamphlet on employment by CORE. In any case, we can use the photos of the individuals that you show in the CORElator. I would also like to secure copies of your correspondence with Biedermann's, Boyd's, Wolff's, Woolworth, McCrory's, the Bank of St. Louis, the Mercantile Trust Company, Lamvert's and Greenfield's. I know that this is a lot of useless paper but if you could verifax or verifax copies of this correspondence it would be most helpful.

Also short statements from the individuals pictured as to how they like their job or how their present job contrasts with their previous one could be very dramatic. We could also use personal statements from those who participated in the negotiations as to how they felt at the time and how they feel now.

I know that this is a tall order but it isn't necessary to do everything at once. Please send me the photos right away and do try to give me the other information as you secure it. Once again, the St. Louis CORElator was great. Hope to see you all at the CORE Council meeting soon.

Sincerely,

Marv Rich

Dear Charlie:

I am enclosing a copy of Genevieve's Philadelphia field report. Presently she is in Washington, D. C. helping to reorganize that group. There is also the possibility of a group in Arlington and in Silver Spring, Maryland. Haley has been stationed for the next couple of months in Fayette and Haywood' Counties. You know where Gaither is, and McCain is sticking' quite close to South Carolina. Perkins is now in Kansas City working with a professor from the University of Kansas in organizing a group. If you have any contacts there I would appreciate getting them right away.

I have recommended to the action committee that the probationary period of Perkins and Hughes be extended for another three months. We have had some complaints about both of them and it is my feeling that they should be given a few more months trial before being made permanent. I am also recommending that they be given the same increase as Gaither and Haley even though they will not become permanent and are not guaranteed it under the contract.

I really hate to extend their non-permanent status, but especially in the case of Perkins I feel he needs a little reprimand. I would like to get your frank feelings about the present members of the field staff. I believe that we are going to have somewhat of a problem in the next year or so. That is, I don't see how we can expand staff, but there are some persons interested in working for us who may be preferable to one or two of the present staff members. This presents a real problem since it means either simply keeping all the present field secretaries and missing out on good opportunities, or letting one or two of the present staff go. I would really hate to do this, but on the other hand, we can't very well do with a second class field staff if we have a better alternative.

Please let me hear from you as soon asspossible. I know that it is difficult for you to judge since you have had so little contact with them. Give my best to Marion.

Dear Gordon:

In a recent letter you requested that I give you my impressions of a couple of our field workers; i.e., Genevieve Hughes and Joe Perkins.

My reaction to Perkins is favorable. However, I have not had any opportunity to observe his work in the field, but I felt that he did a good job at the council meeting, and while his field reports tend to emphasize the "I", I don't think this is a serious drawback.

In regard to Genevieve, I have serious reservations about her abilities to do an effective job for CORE. I am making this observation from the field reports that she has submitted and from the reaction various delegates at the council meeting expressed to me about her personality. The thing which concerns me in her field reports is the great deal of analytical material relating to the thought procees and character analysis of the various individuals with whom she is working. She definitely goes overboard in this area, and her field reports read sort of like a miniature Kinsey report. By that I mean she is not reporting upon their sex activities, but rather upon their CORE activities in a psychiatric examination of their motives, impulses and behavior patterns. I am not sure what her previous experience was, but she must have been a psychiatric social worker.

I agree with you in your observation that if we have individuals who will not contribute to CORE that we should definitely make arrangements for severance of relationships in order to get more competent individuals. You really should be able to tell at the end of a six-month period whether the person has shown enough promise to make a fairly good evaluation of the potential abilities. I know that it is difficult to fire somebody, but this is one of your responsibilities as Field Director, to make recommendations in this area, and I don't think that you should be backward about it. You are the individual that has the closest contact with the field secretaries, and your recommendations should be of a positive nature so that Farmer and the Action Committee can take whatever steps are necessary for the good of the organization.

I hope this answers the questions you had in your letter.

Very truly yours,

Charles R. Oldham

P.S. — This letter sounds as if I feel you that Hughes should be fired — I didn't exactly mean it that way — My recommendation as to her is negative & I feel someone else would do a better job — this is from limited contact — you have had a better opportunity to observe than I have had. — If you have reached the same conclusion that I have, then she should be released — if your evaluation is different — then perhaps she should be kept. — The ultimate responsibility of course lies w/ Farmer & the NAC.

Dear Mr. Drumm:

This letter will serve to confirm our telephone conversation of this morning wherein I advised you that May 17 at 9 o'clock in the morning would be inconvenient because of previous obligations of my own and the fact that many of the defendants are students and would have difficulty in getting away from their classes. It is my further understanding that your office is considering dismissal of these cases. In the event the City does not dismiss these cases, I request that you give me at least a week advance notice in order that I may make arrangements for all defandants to be present.

Your cooperation in this matter will be greatly appreciated.

Dear Charlie:

The art auction was a success - we received more than $9,000.00. Expenses were less than $800.00, so we did alright. The next day we received azcheck for $5,000.00 from Mrs. Levinson. She's the gal that Tom Roberts and I visited about a year ago. I've been trying to follow up with her ever since, but this is the first real result. At this stage of the game we have about $15,000.00 in our operating account and outstanding bills of only $10,000.00. We will pay them off very quickly.

I am enclosing a copy of the recent memo to Jim which will give you some idea of the fund-raising plans for the next period. However, another memo is on the works of my plans for spending the money for new publications. So don't be too optimistic. It's always my philosophy that we should keep it coming in both ways.

Freedom Ride has been a significant success so far. Publicity in the South has been magnificent though I think that there has been relatively little of it in the North. But throughout the South people are talking about CORE and this helps to assure our future. There is one disturbing development, Thurgood Marshall continues to make nasty cracks about us. I have asked Tom Roberts to arrange a meeting with him. I am not sure that this will be effective but if it doesn't succeed then I think Jim Farmer and you should discuss some stronger action.

Do you have any suggestions about the Convention program? It is getting quite close and I am a little disturbed that the day to day rush of activity keeps us from planning this adequately. My best to you.

Dear Mr Oldham,

I am assuming that you are the same Charlie Oldham that I ~~met~~ at CORE meetings in St. Louis about 10 years ago in the days of Billie and Joe Ames. I was a law student at Harvard Law School and helped demonstrate at Forums, Woolworths, Sears Roebuck. My girl friend at the time, Becky Brown - now my wife also participated. Of course your wife Marian, was very active - please give her our regards.

After finishing Law School I decided I wanted to become a psychiatrist which I have done - but what with medical school and residency etc I have had little time for real participation in CORE activities. Recently we moved from Boston - where I had been for psychiatric training to Palo Alto (near San Francisco). I find myself in the long sought after position of considerable financial security and some leisure time. I think I could be of help to CORE on a local or perhaps national basis and essentially I am asking you to refer me to the appropriate people. Both Becky and I remain very interested and certainly financially are able to be of increasing help.

Sincerely,

RE: 1962 National Council Meeting

Council arrangements are completed. The opening session will begin promptly at 9:30 Saturday morning. In view of this, we urge you to arrive Friday night. The Council agenda is enclosed. We will be pressed for time. If necessary, we can utilize the time immediately after the banquet so be prepared to stay for a session later on Sunday.

REMINDERS:

Dates: Saturday and Sunday, February 10-11. Beginning 9:30 A.M. Saturday, ending Sunday evening.

Place: All sessions will take place at the Kemper Lane Hotel, Kemper Lane and McMillan, Cincinnati, Ohio. Telephone: WOodburn 1-6480

Co-hosts: Cincinnati CORE and Covington, Kentucky CORE

Banquet: Speakers, Mr. James Farmer, Dean Stuart Nelson of Howard University and Reverend Fred Shuttlesworth

Cost: There will be a $5.00 registration fee, payable upon arrival at the council meeting. The cost of the banquet is included in the fee.

Allow $1.00 per day for transportation, and $1.00 per meal for food.
Housing.....will be available at the Kemper Lane Hotel
The rates are: $4.00 per person per day for a double room
$3.00 per person per day for four in a room

Housing: Free housing will be made available to delegates. This housing is in private homes, and can be guaranteed only for voting delegates. It is quite likely that there will be enough free housing for all delegates. If there is not, then the delegate will be expected to pay his own hotel bill. Free housing has been secured for all who have registered to date.

Registration: All registration should be done through the National Office. If it becomes necessary, or is requested, we will make hotel reservations for you.

Arrival: Upon arrival, proceed to the Kemper Lane Hotel, (Council Headquarters). You will then be taken to prearranged housing accomodations.

Dear Kenny:

All of us in the National Office were shocked to learn that you and Willie had been sent to the Juvenile Home. Please be assurred that we are taking every possible legal step to have you freed and to prevent this from happening again. What are the conditions like inside? Of course, being inside has some advantages--or do they make you do your homework there also?

By the time you get this, the noted fok singer, Leon Bibb, should have appeared in Plaquemine. Gardner Taylor has also been there. Hope that these figures have done something to lift morale and to get things moving again. Now that the registration books are closed, I believe that Plaquemine' is quite quiet.

We had a meeting out in Los Angeles about a week ago and Rev. Davis came out quite unexpectedly. It was good to see him. I had hoped to be back in Louisiana myself before now, but it appears that I really won't be able to do so soon. With my new job in the office--Assistant to the National Director--I'm pretty much tied to the desk for the time being. I also ran into Rev. Davis' brother, Frank Davis, here in New York. He is a singer and has' indicated that he would do some benefit for us here.

If you get a chance, please write. It would be great to hear from you. You can be sure, Kenny, that all of us appreciate the tremendous sacrifice that you are making for progress. Don't be discouraged! We shall overcome!

Philadelphia: Policing the Police

RUTH MAROSSI and GERALD KREFETZ

"POLICE BRUTALITY in the United States today is a serious and continuing problem in many parts of the country." This was the finding of a recent report by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, a body created by Congress. Though most police departments work in a decent and lawful manner, the commission was "concerned about the number of unconstitutional and criminal acts committed by agents of American justice who are sworn to uphold the law and apply it impartially."

If the third degree is the most flagrant violation, it is by no means the only one. Harassment, illegal search and seizure, refusal of permission for an arrested person to telephone his family or lawyer, discrimination based on race, religion, or national origin, shakedowns, destruction of property—all these, the report indicates, are common.

The United States has a rapidly growing crime rate. In the decade ending in 1960 the number of serious crimes rose four times as fast as the population. The last two years witnessed an increase of sixteen per cent, though lately this precipitous rise has shown signs of abating. Under these circumstances it is hardly surprising that both official and public pressure are brought to bear on police departments to solve and if possible prevent criminal acts. Unfortunately, the result is sometimes overzealous law enforcement.

Many cities have internal police boards presided over by police officials who are primarily concerned with breaches of regulations within the force. Their make-up, viewpoint, and normal obligation all tend to favor the police. Even if the board should find in the complainant's favor, there is little it can do for him. The offending officer may be disciplined, but the victim receives little more than psychological compensation, for only in rare and extraordinary circumstances is a police record destroyed by the authorities. Consequently, after a run-in with the law, one must forever admit to an arrest record on applications for employment, naturalization, passports, and on other legal forms. Qualifying the answer with lengthy explanations often merely serves to arouse and increase suspicion.

PHILADELPHIA has been making a noteworthy effort to find a solution to this state of affairs. An experiment has been carried on there that guarantees an impartial hearing to victims of police mistreatment. In 1958, Mayor Richardson Dilworth established a Police Advisory Board composed of civilians to hear complaints. In cases of false arrest the citizen is guaranteed not only a written apology by the police but also the privilege of having his arrest record destroyed before his eyes.

For a number of years several Philadelphia civic organizations—the Philadelphia Fellowship Commission, the Civil Rights Committee of the Philadelphia Bar Association, the American Civil Liberties Union, the NAACP, the American Friends Service Committee, and the National Conference of Christians and Jews—had discussed the need for such a board. The incident that finally shocked Philadelphia into action concerned a patrolman who assaulted a superior and who on two separate occasions committed brutal attacks on private citizens. The police department board charged him only with insubordination. This led Councilman Henry W. Sawyer III to observe that such departmental inquiries were "a farce when it comes to hearing civilian cases."

On September 30, 1958, the mayor appointed five prominent Philadelphians who were willing to serve the city in a unique experiment, among them Clarence Pickett, a Nobel Peace Prize winner and executive secretary emeritus of the American Friends Service Committee. Because of increased case loads, the board has recently been enlarged, and two panels of four members each will hear cases alternately.

The procedures are simple and direct: anyone with a complaint against the police who files a statement within ninety days can have his case reviewed. If in the opinion of a member of the board the complaint warrants investigation, it will be thoroughly examined by a special police investigator. A public hearing is scheduled after complainants, police, and respective counsel have been given sufficient notice. Strict rules of evidence are not followed; the board attempts to keep the proceedings as informal as possible. The civilian board in no way conflicts or interferes with the jurisdiction of the police disciplinary body. It is purely advisory and its recommendations are not binding.

Here is how the board operated in one difficult case. Shortly after three o'clock on a Monday morning, a car was stopped by the police. A white clergyman was on his way home after lecturing at a university some distance away. The other occupant of the car was a Negro student, a girl. When the clergyman asked why he had been stopped, the officer first replied that it was a "routine check," but then hinted at prostitution. At the station house, the officer in charge said that seeing a racially mixed couple was reason enough to suspect prostitution. The clergyman requested a hearing by the civilian board "because of the embarrassment caused us . . . the arbitrary and unwarranted detention . . . and perhaps illegal arrest." After investigating, the board found that the car had been stopped and its occupants taken to the station house merely because the couple were of different races. It recommended that the officer involved be suspended for two days and given a departmental reprimand; he was also asked to write a letter of apology. Moreover, the board requested that a departmental directive clarify policy and prevent such incidents in the future. Here, as in other cases, police officials co-operated fully with the board and acted on its suggestions.

Within the last year, increasing publicity has doubled the number of cases brought before the board. More than half are settled amicably without hearings, and the board has found in favor of the police as often as against them. Indeed, in some cases the board has praised the "self-control and restraint as exemplary and befitting a professional police officer" in the face of civilian abuse and insults.

As one might expect, many cases presented to the board involve Negroes, who now make up nearly a fourth of Philadelphia's population. As James Barker, former head of the Philadelphia branch of the NAACP, has said, "Police violence has always been the lot of the Negro. It seldom receives much notice, nor have the maltreated complained very loudly." At least the new arrangement makes it more possible for those who feel they have been mistreated to register their complaints. But actually, complaints from Negroes, while numerous, have not been disproportionate. And the board's records indicate that cases come from all racial groups and classes, white as well as colored, businessmen as well as laborers.

THE Philadelphia experiment has been in operation for only about four years—still rather a short time as municipal institutions go. Nevertheless, it has already made its mark despite meager funds and a small staff. There has, of course, been opposition to the board. It has been accused of existing merely to protect the rights of a small part of the population. "Minority groups are handled with kid gloves, given every advantage far beyond what is due. You call them 'minority groups,' I call them high-pressure groups," remarked Bernard Lemisch, a leading attorney for Philadelphia's Fraternal Order of Police. "The board is a kangaroo court. No outsider should sit in judgment on the police. Civilians don't understand police procedures."

The main criticism from the police association, however, really lies elsewhere: it complains that the police cannot do an effective job if someone is looking over their shoulder. The 1960 meeting of the National Conference of Police Associations declared that police review boards were subverting and undermining law enforcement. Since then, patrolmen's benevolent associations have taken strong stands against the establishment of review boards in a number of other cities where Philadelphia's example is being studied or is already being followed. It must be noted, however, that Philadelphia's crime index, as reported to the FBI, has decreased although the national average has risen in recent years. This would not seem to indicate that Philadelphia's police force has been either demoralized or undermined by the board's efforts to protect citizens against police brutality.

CORE PROTESTS FINDINGS IN PHILYAW CASE. VOWS ACTION AGAINST POLICE BRUTALITY

Philadelphia chapter of CORE (Congress of Racial Equality) at its membership meeting today, expressed a vigorous protest of the findings in the Willie Philyaw case. CORE Chairman, Louis Smith stated: " This is the result that is always found in such cases. The handling of Officer Tourigan and other such cases that result in acquitals is a reflection on the City Government the Courts, the Police Department, and upon the whole Democratic system. The condonement of lawless acts by the white power Structure is the caouse for more lawlessness. This is what has caused our country so much grief in the past weeks."

Because of the City Action taken in the Philyaw case, CORE today called for an Organizational drive against Police brutality. The group will take the following steps:

1) Place watchers in especially notorious police stations in Negro areas,,with cameras.
2) Solicit cases of police brutality from the Negro community.
3) Where facts warrant, CORE will swear out warrants to arrest offending Officers.

CORE DEMANDS IN THIS DRIVE ARE:

1) That policemen and white citizens who are accused of crimes against the Negro people be tried in the Courts and brought to as speedy a justice as are the Negroes.

2) That Court action be made city polisy for dealing with cases of police brutality.

3) That the Police Department issue a directive against police brutality, harassement and all forms of misconduct by policemen in the Negro Community, under threat of discipline.

4) That harassment of Organizations on picket lines, i.e. picture taking, as in the case of the Fire Department, CORE, and Civil Rights Organizations be stopped.

5) That photographic files of people on civil rights picket be destroyed.

To further substantiate the need for CORE action in police matters, the Organization's Special Projects Committee has released a 3 year summary of Newspaper accounts of police and white citizens involved in cases of alleged brutality and criminal acts. (Copy of said report inclosed)

In order to impliment the CORE program, Chairman Smith has vowed to palce the entire resources of the Organization behind " a drive to expose and stop inhuman and unjust treatment of the Negro citizen."

ATTENTION: Arthur Williams, Allan Hoffman

Dear Friend:

On December 24, 1963, at 6 P.M. Mr. Jessee Roberts, a Negro from the Bronx, appeared at the National CORE office and announced that he had been beaten, scalded and hung in the position of crucifixion inside a Bronx Police Station House. Mr. Roberts claimed that his tormentors were two well-known Bronx Detectives.

There is no objective means of determining the truth of Mr. Roberts' claim. The Roberts Case is but one of scores of examples of alleged police brutality for which there has been no redress.

Police Commissioner Murphy has recently restated his opposition to a civilian review board. It is tragically apparent that while police brutality remains a major problem in New York--particularly for Negroes and Puerto Ricans--that neither the police department nor the city government is taking effective steps to cope with this problem.

The ad hoc City Wide Committee on Fair Police Protection is now being organized by CORE, NAACP, political groups and other independent action groups in order to combat police brutality.. We need your support.

City Councilman Theodore Weiss now has a bill before the City Council which would meet many of our demands. Our committee needs your help in fighting for this legislation.

We need not only your endorsemmnt but also your physical and financial participation. We are asking all groups to join the June 9th delegation to Mayor Wagner to support passage of the bill.

Also on June 9th, Councilman Weiss will move to get his bill out of the committee for a vote.

Our assembly will add weight to the demand for passage of the bill and we will be able to hear first hand what actions the Mayor and Council are taking.

I am hoping that you will be able to inform us in the next few days about whether:

1) your organization is supporting the drive for the Weiss Bill, by writing to Mayor Wagner, (sending us a copy)
2) whether your organization will send delegates to City Hall on June 9th, at 1:00 P.M.

Please call Arthur Williams or Allan Hoffman and inform them about the actions that you have taken.

Most important of all these things is that you send your delegates on June 9th so that we will have sufficient leverage to move the mountain of Murphy, and the Mayor.

Sincerely,

James Farmer

In many parts of the country hate groups have penetrated law enforcement agencies.

Reference (1) is enclosed. It discusses how Los Angeles City Councilman Thomas Bradley found a racist and sacreligious paper on the bulletin board of a police building.

The nedd for police review boards locally and a new do-something U. S. Department of Justice should be publicized.

Thank you.

Police Brutality

January 14, 1964

Mr. Victor S. Gettner
New York Civil Liberties Union
156 Fifth Avenue
New York City 10

Dear Mr. Gettner:

I am sorry about the delay in replying to your letter of November 20, regarding the allegations of police brutality made by the New York Chapter of CORE. I agree that the NYCLU should be notified of such complaints, and when such complaints emanate from the National Office of CORE, we shall see to it that you are notified.

We now have some 27 semi-autonomous chapters in the New York area, with a very small staff to service them from the National Office. Consequently, we frequently do not know in advance of the plans which any of the chapters may have in this connection. It is not unusual, indeed, that we learn of certain of their activities through the press after the fact. This was precisely the situation with regard to the police brutality allegations to which you refer. All that we can do in this regard is to request that the respective chapters notify the NYCLU when they have such complaints, and that we shall do. This, of course, does not guarantee that such notification will be given, in as much as we are here relying upon volunteers who are subject to discipline only when they have violated the National CORE Constitution or the CORE Rules for Action.

Thank you very much for bringing this matter to my attention, and I hope it will work out to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Sincerely yours,

James Farmer
National Director

Dear Mr. Farmer:

I noted with interest the allegations of the Congress of Racial Equality, that the New York City Police Department recently treated CORE pickets with brutality. The New York Civil Liberties Union learned of this only through the press. I am writing to you, not only because you are the Director of CORE, but also as a Director of the ACLU residing in this area you are a member of NYCLU.

As you know, the lines of communication are open between the Police Department and George E. Rundquist the Executive Director of NYCLU. While there remains much to be done, I think you will agree that the NYCLU has helped to create in the Police Department an increased understanding that law enforcement officials must observe individual rights.

Our usefulness is greatly impaired when persons and organizations complaining of police lawlessness fail to keep us informed. For instance, pressure towards our goal of a Complaint Board independent of the Police Department is most difficult unless we have detailed knowledge of complaints and their disposition.

May I hope that you will use your authority to the end that NYCLU staff will be notified of all complaints by CORE against the police in the Metropolitan area.

Sincerely yours,

Victor S. Gettner

Police Brutality

APR 10 1964

THE POLICE COMMISSIONER
CITY OF NEW YORK

April 7, 1964

Mr. James Farmer
National Director
Congress of Racial Equality
38 Park Row
New York, N.Y.

Dear Mr. Farmer:

We are as concerned as you are over allegations of misbehavior of some policemen towards minority groups, although we have little evidence to support the majority of charges. We realize that any instances of police brutality could cause great harm and we are ever alert to prevent abuse of police power and to take swift action against those found guilty of this type of behavior.

Recently, doubt has been cast in some quarters over the effectiveness of the Civilian Complaint Review Board procedures. In my opinion, most of these criticisms are due to the fact that few people realize or have knowledge of the work of the Board. For example, in the last ten years, the Board's procedures have been improved to provide for checks and doublechecks against any so-called "whitewashes". We have also made it easier for persons to file complaints and to get a full and fair hearing. A complaint may be made either in person or by telephone or letter or through a newspaper. Formerly, a complaint had to be made in person in the precinct in which the alleged incident occurred. The complaint is immediately brought to the attention of the inspector of the division, who is directed to conduct a full investigation. No precinct captain is allowed to investigate charges against his men.

The hearing conducted by the inspector is supervised by the ranking commander of the Civilian Complaint Review Board, who makes certain that all witnesses are heard and that all questions are answered. Both the patrolman and the complainant have the right to counsel.

When the hearing is completed, a report and recommendation is made to the Civilian Complaint Review Board. It is carefully reviewed, not only by the Supervisor of the Board, but by three deputy commissioners, all of whom are civilians and they all had wide and varied experience.

They are: Deputy Commissioner Walter Arm, a former newspaperman, who is the Chairman of the Board and in charge of Community Relations for the Police Department; Deputy Commissioner Theresa Melchionne, who had been a policewoman and Director of the Policewomen's Bureau, and who is now in charge of the Police Department's Youth Program, and Deputy Commissioner Edward McCabe, a former Special Agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who is now in charge of the Division of Licenses.

The Board seeks to make certain that all facts are unearthed so that a judgment can be made as to whether charges should be filed against the patrolman or whether such charges were unfounded. The Board, in effect, acts as a grand jury in deciding whether an "indictment" should be returned and passes its recommendations on to me.

The effectiveness of the Civilian Complaint Review Board has won the commendation of many individual groups in this city, including the Civil Liberties Union. I wish to assure you that we will always continue to insist on complete and impartial investigations to arrive at the truth. The Police Commissioner bears the responsibility of discipline of the members of his force and he will continue to fulfill this responsibility. I cannot see how the establishment of an independent board could do anything but weaken this responsibility and diminish the discipline so necessary to the good order and reputation of the Department. (If there is any further information you seek concerning the workings of the Board, please do not hesitate to ask.)

Thank you for your kind comments concerning the "commendable restraint" of the Police Department in the handling of civil rights demonstrations. I assure you that our policy of firm and impartial enforcement, aimed at protecting the rights of all, will continue.

As far as Mr. Callendar is concerned, his actions in a recent visit to Headquarters bore all the indications that it was not made in good faith. It was evident that the sitdown was pre-arranged, for the press was aware it was to take place and the participants came equipped with handcuffs and chains. It was evident that he had made his mind up about certain cases, before he appeared. It was evident the incident was engineered merely for propaganda purposes and to place police in the worst light possible.

Sincerely yours,

Michael J. Murphy

New York, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

Last night, at approximately 10 P.M., my wife and I were returning home from a neighborhood movie. At the northwest corner of 95th Street and Broadway, we and some fifty other citizens were appalled to see a grotesque and mortifying demonstration of police brutality. Three white policemen were slowly and methodically taking turns in beating a negro man. I have no idea what crime, if any, this person committed, but it was obvious that when we arrived on the scene, he had already been fully apprehended and was absolutely no threat to the surrounding policemen. It was also quite apparent that he was not resisting arrest.

The police officers' striking of this man could in no way be construed as self-defense. This was a naked, barbaric, criminal attack, and watching it filled me with a deep sense of shame.

Everyone in the crowd, virtually all of whom were white, were similarly appalled by this Gestapo-like cruelty. When I asked one of the policemen for his badge number and spoke out against this brutality, others joined me in protest.

I am a member of no organization, nor am I a demonstrator, nor an agitator, nor a crusader. It is clear to me that the time has come for you to publicly call out and condemn sick, sadistic members of your force, and to openly acknowledge that these things do happen, and that they revolt you, as a human being, the same way as they revolt me and the other people of our city. I feel that it is imperative that you recognize that there is a greater duty vested in you than the defense of the members of your Department and that failure to forcefully condemn such an instance, indirectly leads to an impression of approval.

How can people have respect for such a police force and hesitate in involving themselves in the reporting of crime to perpetrators of crime?

I am forwarding copies of this letter to Mayor Wagner, Deputy Commissioner Walter Arm and the Congress of Racial Equality. I think that this is something that should not be quietly brushed over. I am becoming firmly convinced that this type of act happens with horrifying frequency and should be fully exposed for the nightmare that it is.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mr. Farmer, APR 27 1964

I am interested in your charges of police brutality which have been grossly denied by the police department. I am enclosing a letter complaining of such conduct, a letter which was never acknowledged by Mayor Wagner.

Perhaps the letter was passed on to the Police Commissioner. But I doubt it.

Sincerely,

Dominick Del Giudice

124 East Fort Lee Road
Bogota, New Jersey
December 31, 1963

Dear Mayor Wagner,

Yesterday at 6 p.m., at a downtown stairway of the eighth avenue Independent subway at 42nd street, I and many other people witnessed a demonstration of New York City's police department at work, a demonstration which I certainly shall never forget. A ragged, middle-aged negro was dragged and shoved into a corner of the subway station by two policemen. One of the policemen directed the crowd to keep moving, while I clearly saw the other pound the man's face with his fist. Then, apparently feeling that the public's gaze was inhibiting them from fully performing their duties, they directed a subway attendent to unlock a room nearby- a men's toilet I believe- into which they pulled and pushed the man. What occurred within was easy to imagine.

I know that law-enforcement is not a pretty job. Still, it is difficult to imagine what crime this man could have committed that would justify the brutal treatment to which he was subjected. Nor does genuine law-enforcement need to hide its head. Finally, the cause of interracial understanding is not likely to be furthered by the sight of a feeble, confused negro being pummeled by two powerful thugs in policemen's garb.

America is supposed to be a human society, Mr. Mayor.

Sincerely,

Dominick Del Giudice

Respect for Our Police

"The way to procure insults is to submit to them. A man meets with no more respect than he exacts."—HAZLITT.

Emily Post wrote in her book of etiquette many years ago that a gentleman is expected correctly to use forebearance—but this does not mean that he must suffer insolence from clowns without reply. The same thinking, of course, applies to peace officers.

As I write this column, my eye is cocked on a front-page article which commences with a banner headline: "ROCK THROWING MOB INJURES 2 OFFICERS."

It happened in Pacoima recently, when a vile crew of 150 or more old and young punks gathered to resist officers arresting a routine traffic violator who fled to his home. There is no excuse for this monstrous occurrence. It was a vicious riot.

They're Lawbreakers

Worst part of all, it was an intolerable action against legally constituted law and order affecting the welfare of the Republic of the United States.

Now the sad part of this meaningful news item is that it is only one small segment of a larger and continuing evil pattern affecting the rapidly-multiplying breakdown of law and order and justice throughout our entire nation today. This must stop!

We citizens of Los Angeles city ond county are fortunate indeed in having some of the nation's finest law enforcement officers at their posts of duty in this area. Men like Chief of Police William Parker, Sheriff Peter Pitchess, and FBI former chief agent William Simon—the latter only recently succeeded by competent Wesley Grapp.

Except for the superior quality of these men and the outstanding law enforcement groups for which they are responsible, the situation here might be one to make the decent law-abiding citizens of our community quite ready to throw up their hands in disgust.

Who'll Be Safe?

They have steadily refused to bow to minority pleas for "review boards" which would, in effect, make our law enforcement agencies subject to political indoctrination and partisan pressure. Who would be safe on the streets afterwards?

Those who yell for special privileges and favors for their own minority groups are downgrading, at the same moment, all other American minorities.

All of us belong to certain minorities of some kind or another. It is not fair for any to demand treatment above and beyond that of any other, and it is atrocious to scream "police brutality" whenever a dedicated policeman simply does his duty.

For the high-calibre men and women of the LAPD and the Sheriff's Department are among the most dedicated public servants this writer has ever seen or known. They are giving devoted service to hard, exacting chores — and sometimes they give their lives in performance of their duties. Let's honor them.

The real "police brutality" of which we all ought to be ashamed is our occasionally unthinking failure to give credit where credit is rightfully due. All too often we clam up with the police—perhaps imagine they are "against us"—and they are really our best friends!

Back Up Police!

Possibly this frightening so-called "civil disobedience" campaign presently unleashed in the United States, which actually started with the Red-controlled student outburst against the unfairly-maligned House Committee on Un-American Activities in San Francisco several years ago, will now commence to open wide our eyes.

Now is the time for my readers to express themselves in loyal expressions or letters to Parker, Pitchess and Grapp. Let them know that the law-abiding citizens of the community are 100 per cent behind them.

Forebearance is fine, but there must be no more insolence to the police.

Los Angeles

Mr CORE -

We have been residents of this city for almost sixty years and think it is a disgrace the way your people are acting. If they disobey the law, they should be punished the same as any body else. We agree 100% with Mr George Todts inclosed article.

We happen to live in a neighborhood which is almost 75% negro and I'm sick and tired of being yelled at and laughed at by carloads of fresh negroes when I walk down the street.

Our sons were students at L.A. High with the negroes and one was on the track team, an 8 man relay with one other white boy, the rest colored. The only time there were problems was when the team went Manual Arts or Jefferson and then the negroes fought among them selves.

We have Japanese neighbors, American born, and they are quiet well behaved citizens. You never see any of them in any of the demonstrations, they are above such foolishness.

The more we hear about these demonstrations, the less respect we have for your followers. It's about time these people woke up. If they want to be treated equal they should act civilized.

Don't forget, we white citizens have our "Constitutional Rights" also, but the so called Rumford Act nullifies that

Sincerely
A 100% Americans

8 Teeners Kill Woman, Stab Mate in Store

By PATRICK DOYLE and LEEDS MOBERLEY

A middle-aged woman was knifed to death and her husband stabbed six times in their Harlem store shortly before 5 P.M. yesterday in an apparently unprovoked attack by eight Negro youths.

The murder victim, who received a single thrust in the heart with a double-edged dirk, was Mrs. Margit Sugar, 50, of 46-10 61st St., Woodside, Queens.

Her husband, Frank, grappled with the killer and finally wrested the weapon away—but not until he had received three wounds in the chest and one each in the right hand, right leg and left elbow.

Expected to Survive

He was placed on the critical list on arrival at Harlem Hospital but after blood transfusions was reported out of danger last night.

The couple, refugees from the 1956 Hungarian revolt, operated the Eve & Pete Clothing Co., a second-hand clothing store at 3 W. 125th St.—a busy location just off Fifth Ave. But crowds of late afternoon pedestrians swarmed past the place unaware of the violence inside.

Sugar told police the group of boys, ranging in age from about 14 to 20, came into the store at about 4:55 P.M. and two of them asked to look at some suits. Nervous at the sight of so many youths and suspicious of their motives, Sugar tried to brush them off with: "We don't have your size."

Without a Word

Without another word, he said, one of the boys whipped out the dirk and plunged it into Mrs. Sugar. Sugar grappled with him and was stabbed repeatedly before he got the knife away. As he collapsed, the killer gang fled.

Julius Levitt, 55, owner of the drug store next door at 1 W. 125th St., heard the commotion but not in time to save the Sugars.

"I heard these screams and thumping and shouts," Levitt told police. "My delivery boy was in the pharmacy and I sent him next door to see what was going on."

Discovers Crime

The employe, Ollie Roe, 20, dashed back to the drug store within minutes. He was trembling.

"They've both been stabbed," he gasped. "They are bleeding bad."

Levitt phoned police.

If robbery was the boys' motive, they failed. The Sugars, who had operated the store since 1960, did not have a cash register and Sugar's wallet was not taken.

Police were dispatched to all nearby subway entrances to head off suspects seeking that means of escape.

A daughter, Judith, 20, collapsed when informed of the tragedy.

The Sugars, who were in the clothing business in Budapest, fled after the crushing of the 1956 uprising by Soviet tanks and came to the U. S.

FACTS ABOUT THE CIVILIAN COMPLAINT REVIEW BOARD

(This memorandum is issued for your information to furnish you with the facts regarding the Civilian Complaint Review Board; its aims, purposes and procedures.)

1) The Civilian Complaint Review Board has been in existence for over ten years. Its function is to receive and to make certain that all charges and allegations of the unnecessary use of force by policemen or allegations of abuse of police power are fully and thoroughly investigated.

2) The procedures of the Board have made it easier for persons to lodge complaints or allegations. In the past, a complaint could only be made at the precinct of occurrence and in person. Today, complaints can be made in a variety of ways, either in person, by telephone, by letter or through a newspaper, or community group. Every complaint, no matter from what source, receives full and complete attention.

3) The investigation of such complaints is never conducted by the commanding officer of the unit against which the complaint has been lodged. In other words, if a complaint is made against a policeman in a precinct, the investigation is handled by the inspector of that division. In any case involving the member of any unit, the investigation is always made by the next highest superior rank.

4) The investigating officer is empowered to conduct a hearing to which he calls all witnesses for both sides. Testimony is taken from anybody who can contribute any knowledge or information. Both the complainant and the respondent officer are entitled to be represented by counsel.

5) The Supervisor of the Civilian Complaint Review Board (Deputy Inspector Arthur Savitt) attends most hearings as the personal representative of the Board and the Police Commissioner, to make certain that all questions are asked and that a full and thorough hearing is held.

6) At the conclusion of the hearing, the hearing officer carefully reviews all the testimony and then makes a recommendation, either that charges should be filed against the accused officer or that the charges were unfounded or unsubstantiated.

7) This report and recommendation and a full report on the hearing is then sent to the members of the Civilian Complaint Review Board for review.

8) The members of the Civilian Complaint Revue Board are civilian employees of the Police Department. They are deputy commissioners appointed by the Police Commissioner, and their function is to represent the people of the city and to make certain that a full and thorough investigation is conducted and that the rights of both the complainant and the respondent officer are fully protected.

9) At the present time the composition of the Board is as follows: Deputy Commissioner Walter Arm, in charge of Community Relations, Chairman, a former newspaperman with 25 years of experience; Deputy Commissioner Theresa A. Melchionne, in charge of the Youth Program, formerly Director of the Policewomen's Bureau of the Police Department, and Deputy Commissioner Edward J. McCabe, in charge of the Division of License a former official of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

10) The members of the Civilian Complaint Review Board review each case separately (there is no meeting of the three members to decide on cases; this to insure that each member makes his independent finding.) The members of the Board then either agree with the recommendation, disagree with it or ask for more facts to support the findings. The Board recommendations are then passed on to the Police Commissioner and discussed by him with the Chairman.

NOTE: It should be pointed out that despite the ease of filing complaints and allegations, despite the hundreds of thousands of encounters between police and the people in this city, despite the fact that police make almost 250,000 arrests a year, there has been a steady decline in the number of complaints made, either to this department or to any other agency. The Civilian Complaint Review Board now receives and investigates an average of less than 200 complaints a year. (There were 181 complaints made in 1963.) The experience of the Board has been that about ten per cent of the complaints have enough facts and foundation to result in the filing of charges against an officer. When such charges are filed, the respondent policeman is brought to departmental trial. Penalties in such cases range from reprimands and fines to dismissals. It has been found that the Civilian Complaint Review Board has been an effective channel and agency for the thorough investigation of civilian complaints. The Board is always mindful of its obligation to act as the representatives of the public in these matters and to carry out the policy of Police Commissioner Murphy that the New York City Police Department "has not condoned and will never tolerate the unnecessary use of force by any of its members."

Dear Mr. Farmer, I wrote to you sometime ago but can well appreciate that you haven't had time to answer. However I would like to call your attention to the following so that you might refer to same when you are discussing police brutality. I understand that within the last ten years there have been over 100 negroes shot by police even though the prisoner was handcuffed. Also would like to remind you of the incident with the negro soldier who was in perfect health when arrested and the next morning he was fined $50 by some judge in the courts and the poor boy was blind because the officer had been hitting him around his eyes while in jail. You should recall there was a special event at N. Y. Madison Garden for the benefit of his family.

Also would like to have you refer to the fact when you discuss respect for the law that in Harlem exist the tremendous numbers racket, dope racket, prostitution and many other rackets all with the also would like to have you keep in mind that it is most discouraging to live in slums etc but it is even much more discouraging when you are living in the greatest and richest city and in the richest country in the world, It could be less frustating to live in the slums of China or Africa.

Dear Friend:

Enclosed is a copy of an affidavit from CORE field worker Richard Jewett. It tells a story of police brutality to those fighting to secure for Negro-Americans their most fundamental right--the right to vote. Also enclosed are excerpts from a letter from Julie Jewett, Dick's wife, to Assistant Attorney General Burke Marshall. This too tells a story -- of the anguish and concern of the relatives of those on the front lines of Mississippi.

Dick Jewett has a degree in physics from MIT and an M.A. in Math from New York University. He has a Secret Clearance from the U.S. Army. But most important the Jewetts are human beings who have suffered to end bigotry and racial hatred in this country.

Won't you take some action to help the Jewetts and all of us? Please write to your Senators and ask them to pass the Civil Rights Bill now. Ask them to pass the Bill without weakening amendments. It's such a little thing to do compared to the Jewetts' personal sacrifice.

Sincerely yours,

James Farmer

Mr. Burke Marshall
Assistant Attorney General
Civil Rights Division
The Department of Justice
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Marshall:

I have not written the Justice Department before regarding this particular incident as I have known that it was investigating the case. I am writing now as I am very concerned by the outcome of the investigation.

I am aware that it is a difficult thing both to investigate and to take action on cases involving brutality when law enforcement officials are involved. I also know that it is most difficult, in fact hardly ever possible, to prove violation of the Federal criminal statutes when police brutality is at issue. I have been studying the 1961 U.S. Commission on Civil Rights Report, Book 5 on Justice and am appalled to read about the cases which have gone unprosecuted because no one could prove that section 242 or 241 of the U.S. Criminal Code had been violated.

I realize that in theory it might be best if state or local authorities were able to effectively investigate and correct where necessary its own law enforcement problems. But if they have failed and continue to fail to accept this responsibility, I cannot see how this can be allowed by the Federal authorities to go on when a citizen's basic safety and welfare are involved. The basic safety of one's person is certainly assured by the Constitution. And if federal criminal statutes do not succeed in ensuring a citizen's right to protection under the law it would seem that they are making it impossible for one's constitutional rights to be guaranteed. What kind of statutes are these?

If the statutes have not proven effective over and over again, I am wondering what the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department has planned or is developing by way of procedures to amend, and in the meantime to get around them when needed so that an individual's basic health and safety rights may be protected?

I know that the Mississippi civil rights groups are currently on a campaign to become more sophisticated and accurate in their methods of recording, documenting and following through on incidents of this kind (as well as other kinds.) But studying the federal criminal statutes as cited and discussed in the 1961 report it would seem that no matter how much evidence one has or how thoroughly cases are recorded, it is not going to make any difference. The statutes as presently constructed will be of no help. If this is so, this is a very serious problem to be handled. Again, I wonder if your Department is approaching it.

My husband was able to get up after his police beating. He was fortunate, from what I have heard of other cases. Others have been hospitalized. Many others have been or are now suffering years of pain from police brutality, and some never fully recover, as you well know. I cannot believe that the Constitution has not been gravely violated by this kind of "official" violence. And yet somehow no federal criminal statutes are being violated. There must be something basically wrong here. It does not make sense.

I am concerned about the safety of my husband. For one to say that he is "asking for it" by choosing to be working in the movement in the South is beside the point, I feel. I find it hard to accept that a next time he may be hospitalized, seriously hurt or maimed, and that still no government authority can come to his aid where state authorities have failed. A person's very life is involved here. And this just should not be permitted. I am confident you would agree.

I am equally concerned for the safety of all those who are being allowed to suffer this police terror situation. It just seems to me that the more incidents that are permitted to pass with no correction or prosecution, the more lack of faith in the justice of this country is apt to increase--and among many of those who are fighting the hardest for it--the more tension and anger will develop from the resulting utterly helpless feeling that the Law is not behind one and will not in fact protect one--not even one's basic person--no matter what is done to him.

Mr. Marshall, I have written a number of calm, collected letters on this recent incident. But now that I see so clearly the way it fits into a well developed pattern of the kind of violence which the federal authorities seemingly are not able to handle, I will admit, I am getting increasingly perplexed by this whole problem. Again, I cannot understand how the months can go by with more and more incidents of this kind, far more serious much of the time, and how our government cannot rise to the occasion to do whatever is necessary before the huge mass crises develop to ensure that the safety of its citizens under the law is protected. There is so much talk of the violence-to-come on the civil rights issue, and yet it seems very wrong that one should have to wait till huge crises force intervention before this pattern of police brutality in Mississippi is severely checked.

I would so appreciate your consideration of this letter and anything you could tell me about how this problem can be tackled and what a citizen like myself could do to help further its resolution. I realize I am talking about a state a thousand miles away. But there is where my husband is presently, and on the larger scale, I very much believe that this is a national concern.

Sincerely yours,

Julie Davis Jewett

Beating of CORE Worker,
Richard A. Jewett, in Jackson, Mississippi, Jail
March 30, 1964

My name is Richard A. Jewett. My home address is 124 West 81st Street, New York 24, New York. I have been in Mississippi working for CORE (the Congress of Racial Equality) since mid-January, 1964. During this space of time from mid-January to the end of March I have been working in Canton on voter registration.

On Monday, March 30, 1964, I left the COFO (Council of Federated Organizations) office at 1017 Lynch Street, Jackson, at about 6:30 P.M. and went out to eat dinner. I went with another worker, Miss Helen O'Neal. We went to a place up the street, called Smackover's, where we sat and had a leisurely dinner, including several cups of coffee. Neither of us had any sort of alcoholic beverage before, during, or after the meal.

After the meal was over we went across the street to a drugstore where each of us bought one or two personal items such as a toothbrush, pencils, filling a prescription and the like. We were in the drugstore for approximately fifteen minutes.

We left the drugstore and started to walk back to the COFO office. We were walking side by side on the sidewalk. We were on the north side of Lynch Street and we walking east. By this time it was dark outside, and the time was approximately 7:30 P.M. or 7:45 P.M. Just after walking by the Masonic Temple at 1072 Lynch Street we passed by a police prisoner van. Parked just behind the van was a police car with four policemen sitting inside. We walked by the car, glancing inside but not stopping or paying special attention to it.

After we had walked perhaps twenty steps beyond the police car we heard a call of "Hey!" behind us. We turned around and started back when one of the officers motioned to us. As we reached the officer who had called us (He was out of the car and standing on the sidewalk; all of the other officers remained in the car.), the officer asked me what I had been drinking. I replied, "Nothing." The officer said something like "nonsense" and then, "Come along with me." I gave a package I was carrying to Miss O'Neal, who then walked off towards the COFO office.

The officer opened up the back door of the police prisoner van, a sort of panel truck with wire mesh across the windows in back and benches on both sides and in the front of the back compartment. I climbed in and sat down on one of the side benches. The back door was then closed behind me and locked with a padlock on the outside. Two officers climbed in the front seat of the van; I could see them through a mesh-covered window that looked through from my compartment into the front seat of the van. The van was then driven to the Jackson Police Station, the police car following close behind. Once or twice the van stopped short for no apparent reason, and I was thrown towards the front of the compartment. I learned to hold tight to the bench to prevent anything serious from happening.

When the two vehicles reached the basement of the city jail, the padlock was unlocked and I stepped down and started to walk with the officers towards the elevator. Inside the elevator the light was switched off by the officer pressing the buttons for the floors.

The light was not turned on again until we reached the floor towards which we were headed.

When we reached the room where I was booked I was asked to stand in front of a desk on which there were two typewriters. A form was inserted into one of the typewriters, and a series of questions were asked me. These questions -- name, address, name of mother, name of father, date of birth, and the like -- were the same questions asked of me when I had previously entered the Jackson City Jail, so I believe the questions were all part of the form.

After the form had been completed, the officers started asking other questions. They asked who I worked for, how much money I made, when I got paid -- all of which I answered. They then asked what my wife thought of my dating a Negro girl -- which I did not answer. They asked several other questinns which I do not remember, then they asked if I would deny if I was a Communist. I said that my political beliefs were not pertinent to the charges being placed against me and that I would not answer any questions about my political beliefs. Right after this one of the officers started to hit me.

The officer was standing behind me. We had moved to a desk on another side of the room where my pockets had been emptied and several questions had been asked about the contents of my pockets. Comments were made about how much money I had (about $20) and about a sheet of paper -- very old and crinkled -- with The Movement written across the top and a list of names on it. The officers at one point had asked how long I had been here and I had replied two months. One of the officers said he didn't believe me, that he had ridden up and down Lynch Street many times but had never seen me. After this business with the pockets we had moved back to the desk with the typewriters, and the officers were arranged with two behind me and two in front of me.

The officer who began to hit me was standing behind me. He raised his arm and came down with the side of his hand across my neck. He repeated this motion about half a dozen times, each time striking hard. I gave under each blow but straightened up for the succeeding one. As he hit me the first time he said something like "Nigger-lover" but said nothing for each of the other blows.

After these blows, the officer turned me slightly towards him and started to hit me in the body and stomach and face with his fists. As he did this he forced me back the six or eight feet across the room until I was against the wall. He then took my head in one of his hands and slammed my head against the wall two or three times. After this he pulled me forward and forced me to the ground. While I was on the ground he kicked me several times in the stomach and chest.

I then got up, and he started hitting me on the body again with his fists. He also kicked up with his leg several times and kicked me in the stomach. After this he walked into one of the other rooms off the booking room.

At one point another officer joined in the hitting, but he did very little. The two remaining officers simply looked on the whole time.

The officer who had administered most of the beating came back out of the side room very soon. He was breathing very hard. At this point the officers looked at me and mumbled something about resisting arrest and nodded to each other. I had resumed my position in front of the table with the typewriters. As the officer who had done the hitting typed out something I noticed his name-plate; it read EARL GUESS. I did not notice the names of any of the other officers.

I would estimate that the whole beating took from 30 to 45 seconds.

Shortly after this the jailer came into the room and led me off to my cell. I was kept by myself in one of the investigation cells overlooking the Hinds County Courthouse.

Several of the trustees (Negro) who serviced the cell spoke to me during the next two days that I was there. They asked if I was the fellow who was beaten in the booking room on Monday night. When I replied that I was, they asked why. I said that I was a civil rights worker. Several of the people told me in turn about how they had been beaten when they had come in.

At my trial my lawyer, Mr. Jess Brown, spoke with the prosecuting attorney. I pled nolo contendere, and fines against me of $15 on one count, $25 on another count, and 30 days suspended sentence on the third count were levied. The three counts were drunkenness, resisting arrest, and vagrancy. I believe the two fines were for drunkenness and resisting arrest, the suspended sentence for vagrancy; but there was a mixup at the trial and I do not know.

I served two days in the County Jail before money came to pay my fines and release me.

Dear Mr. Black:

CORE is certainly concerned about the problem mentioned in your letter of May 13. On June 4, we are having a public hearing in regard to police brutality and other malpractices of the police department. If you have specific information about such arrests as you mentioned in your letter, I would appreciate getting documentation from you as soon as possible.

"If you wouldn't mind," Johnny said tentatively.

"What's that?" asked Harmon.

The boy dug under his pillow and produced a baseball glove. "Would you autograph my glove, too?"

"I sure will," said Killebrew, well, the next time I'm in town I'll take you out to the ball park and you can meet all the fellows."

Johnny's blue eyes shone and he blushed deeply under his freckles. He looked like a boy who didn't plan to waste any time hanging around a hospital bed.

Hold 3 for Mugging a Blind Man

Harry Levin arrives at Brooklyn Criminal Court.

By JOSEPH GEORGE

Three burly young men accused of the vicious mugging of a short, slight, 54-year-old blind man who is also partially deaf, were held in $10,000 bail each in Criminal Court, Brooklyn, yesterday.

"I won't prejudge this case," said Judge Benjamin H. Schor. "But when you rob a blind man, somebody else will prejudge you much better than I can."

The victim, Harry Levin of 1180 President St., Brooklyn, leaning on a metal cane bent in the melee, stood in court, supported by his wife, Gertrude, and a 20-year-old daughter, Debbie.

Levin's face was battered and bruised and his right ear covered by a bandage. Nine stitches had been taken in the ear when his hearing aid was torn off in the assault in the hallway outside his apartment Tuesday.

Patrolman John Gilligan, who collared the one suspect a block away, also recovered Levin's wallet containing $65. It had been tossed under a parked car. Still missing, however, was a braille watch.

The youth nabbed by Gilligan was Winston Gamble, 20, of 870 Prospect Place, Brooklyn. After questioning, he revealed the names of his companions who were picked up in their homes. They were identified as John McCluney, 16, of 696 St. Mark's Ave., and Kenneth Brown, also 16, of 1148 Union St., both Brooklyn.

Ex-Marine Gets His Man

A former Marine sergeant became detective for a day and tracked down one of three men he said had robbed him of $3,000 the day before, it came out yesterday.

Robert Fleming, 32, of 1222 Harding Ave., the Bronx, who is now a trucker, on Friday had been stopped outside a branch bank at 1620 Westchester Ave., the Bronx, by a man who jabbed a sharp object into his ribs.

He had just withdrawn $300 and the man forced him back to withdraw another $2,700. When they returned to Mr. Fleming's car, two other men—one wearing a loud yellow straw hat—were sitting in the back. They ordered him to drive off, took the money and fled.

Mr. Fleming drove around the area and spotted a man wearing the yellow hat. He trailed the man to a savings bank, and alerted a patrolman who took Clarence Lewis, 38, of 9 W. 122d St., into custody. Police said he was carrying $1,000 but denied any part in the robbery. Said Mr. Fleming; "I'll get the other two, too." Mr. Lewis was arraigned yesterday on charges of assault and robbery. Bail was set at $5,000.

Two Columbia U. Profs Victims of Street Attacks

Ten hours and 10 blocks apart, two Columbia University professors were attacked and robbed by Negro youths during the week end on the upper West Side of Manhattan.

The victim of the first attack thought it might have a racial basis. Robbery was only incidental, he thought.

About 10 p. m. Friday, L. Carrol Adams, 56, a professor of physical education at Columbia, left a Peace Corps meeting at International House and walked down Riverside Drive toward his car. Between 120th and 122d Sts., a group of 20 or 25 young Negroes ran toward him, hollering:

"Get that white man, we're going to kill you, white man," or something to that effect. They cursed him and called him an uncomplimentary name that is popular in Harlem as a description of whites.

The boys surrounded him, the professor said, and one of them hit him on the back of the head with a pipe, knocking him to the ground. In full view of the heavy traffic on Riverside, they beat and kicked him and took his wallet, keys and wristwatch. The wallet contained $70.

Prof. Adams fought his way to his feet and ran out among the cars on Riverside to try to separate himself from the boys. They followed him.

Meanwhile, one of the passing motorists had reported to Patrolmen Michael Loughran and John Hatton, who were at 125th St. and 12th Ave., that a man was being beaten near by.

The patrolmen went south on the Riverside Drive service road and met some of the boys coming toward them. The boys turned east on Tieman Place and south on Claremont Ave. Halfway between Tieman Place and LaSalle St., the patrolmen caught six of them.

Prof. Adams was treated at St. Luke's Hospital for bruises on his chest, legs and face and a cut on his head. He was released.

Prof. Adams was not available for comment yesterday. At their home in Tenafly, N. J., Mrs. Adams said her husband thought the boys wanted to kill him, in view of what they said.

"Thank goodness he's in good shape and is a fast runner," she said.

Five of the six boys who were arrested were between the ages of 13 and 15 and were charged with juvenile delinquency. The sixth, identified as William Rucker, 16, 201 W. 121st St., was charged with robbery and felnious assault.

Young Rucker appeared in Criminal Court yesterday and was held in $5,000 bail for a May 28 hearing. The five juveniles are to appear in Children's Court tomorrow.

The other incident, a simple robbery, was quick and non-violent.

Prof. John Hazard, 55, of the Columbia Law School, was walking toward his office at 8:20 a. m. yesterday, when five young Negroes accosted him at 113th St. and Morningside Drive.

One of the boys grabbed him around the neck from behind and said, "Let's have your money." The other four emptied his pockets, taking keys, a watch and a wallet containing $30. The boys disappeared into Morningside Park. Prof. Hazard was unable to provide a description of them.

Prof. Hazard told the police that the area was deserted at the time of the robbery. He lives at 20 E. 94th St.

Citizens Patrol a Crime Sector

By JOSEPH KIERNAN

Alarmed by the growing invasion of lawless marauders from two adjacent high-crime neighborhoods, the Hassidic Jewish community in Brooklyn's Crown Heights section has formed its own Citizens' Patrol Force, it was revealed yesterday.

The CPF consists of more than 100 male volunteers, mostly in their early 20s, who ride the area in three radio-equipped cars from sunset to sunrise, escorting pedestrians home from subway stations and notifying Empire Blvd. police of any potential trouble. The volunteers—some of whom are Negroes—are not armed.

Police Captain Invited

Some 75% of the 400,000 Crown Heights residents are Jewish—about 65,000 of them members of the Hassidic sect. The decision to form the patrol was made about two weeks ago when the wife of a Hassidic rabbi was forced into the basement of her apartment house by a Negro and beaten and cut before she fought him off.

A meeting was called, to which Police Capt. Eli Lazarus, commander of the Empire Blvd. station, was invited to speak. Many complained of the increase in muggings and burglaries perpetrated by invaders from the Bedford-Stuyvesant section on the north, which is predominantly Negro, and Brownsville on the east, which is predominantly Puerto Rican.

Lazarus was instrumental in having units of the Police Department's special Tactical Patrol Force assigned to Crown Heights to augment regular precinct details. This paid off almost immediately when the TPF bagged three youths last week following the mugging of blind Harry Levin in the hallway of his apartment house at 1180 President St.

Capt. Eli Lazarus
Called in by civil patrol

However, the CPF said it will go ahead with its own reconnaissance work despite the addition of the police patrol. Headquarters of the CPF are at 459 Albany Ave. Any Crown Heights resident desiring help can phone the CPF at SLocum 6-5100.

Emil Baer, acting president of the Brooklyn Jewish Community Council, said: "It is a sad commentary when private citizens have to organize to protect themselves."

Cops Rescue Infant in Fire

Patrolman John Lafferty, 25, of the W. 123d St. station, suffered smoke poisoning yesterday when he rescued an 11-month-old boy from a second-floor apartment at 214 W. 123d St., near the precinct station.

Laffery raced up the stairs to the flat followed by Patrolman Edward Ingenito, picked up Troy Perry and started down the steps. He became weakened by the smoke and handed the child to Ingenito. Outside, Lafferty collapsed.

He was taken to Flower-Fifth Ave. Hospital, where his condition was reported good. The baby was treated at Harlem Hospital.

POLICE RESCUE LEAPER IN GALE

'This is My Day to Die'-But He Didn't

(NEWS foto by Vincent Riehl)

Flanked by Patrolmen Frederick Boll and Rolf Andresen, would-be leaper Ismael Fagundo, 30, of 602 W. 137th St., is led to safety from his wind-swept perch at the top of the Brooklyn Bridge's Brooklyn tower nearly 300 feet above the East River. He said it was his day to die.

Cops Prevent Bridge Leap

By PATRICK DOYLE and PHILIP McCARTHY

While scores of stalled motorists watched tensely, four emergency service policemen inched their way to the top of the Brooklyn Bridge's Brooklyn tower last night to rescue a would-be leaper from his wind-buffeted perch nearly 300 feet above the East River.

After 30 suspense-filled minutes, they brought the man, Ismael Fagundo, 30, of 602 W. 137th St., to safety. From his precarious perch he had told them:

"This is my day to die. I got troubles."

The battle against death began shortly before 8 P.M. when a Manhattan-bound motorist spotted Fagundo slowly crawling up the main cable. He was wearing a blue suit and, when he started, a hat.

Driver Phones Cops

The driver sped to a phone and called the cops. Police from precincts on both sides of the span and from the Emergency Service Division screeched to the scene.

By the time they arrived, Fagundo had reached the top of the tower—150 feet above the bridge's roadway and 277 feet above the water. Forty-mile-an-hour winds already had whipped his hat from his head and were buffeting his body.

Two emergency patrolmen, Frederick Boll and Rolf Andresen, jumped to the cable and climbed after Fagundo. Boll had a rescue rope wraped around his waist.

Behind them crawled two other emergency cops—Patrolmen William Abair and Theodore McDonald.

Shouts at Cops

When Boll and Andresen reached the tower's peak. Fagundo shouted at them:

"Don't come near me, I'm going to jump. I'm going to jump."

The cops talked quietly, calmingly. He was doing a foolish thing, they said. Jumping would not solve anything.

Andresen offered Fagundo a smoke but, as Fagundo reached for the cigaret, the wind whipped it away and to the river below.

"Why are we fooling around here?" Andersen asked. "If you want a cigaret, come on down. I have a whole pack there."

Slip Rope Around Him

Fagundo agreed and, while Andersen continued his conversation, Boll slipped his rescue rope around the would-be jumper's middle and attached the other end around his own waist.

Then, with Fagundo between them, the cops began their descent. During the tense climb down, Andresen kept talking until, finally, they reached the roadway.

Taken to Hospital

Fagundo was taken to Kings County Hospital for observation. He never explained to police just what his troubles were.

Happy's Ex Takes New Sweetie, a Teacher, to Party

Dear Mr. Farmer:

I am very glad that CORE will conduct hearings on police brutality this week. Not only should cases of police brutality be aired, but also police partiality in favor of whites against Negroes. This is also a fault of the mass media, TV, radio and newspapers, especially Channel 4, the Tribune and Times.

For instance, last week three Negro boys were attacked by a white gang at Rockaway Beach. One boy lies paralyzed and another with a brain concussion. This was given just passing notice by the mass media. During the same week (Friday) the Times ran a full page about "Blood Brothers" in Harlem. It has assigned a Negro, Junius Griffin, to go "witch-hunting" among Harlem youth. Who investigated the white gang to find out whether its members are trained and sworn to assault Negroes? Who put white ministers and other leaders "on the carpet" for indirect responsibility, as they are doing Negro leaders such as you? What T.V. station sent out personnel into the streets, subways, and beaches to ask Negroes such questions as: "As a Negro, are you afraid since the white gang attacks upon Negro people?" Are your people angry?" What is being said about it?" How do they feel about it?" What are they going to do about it?" etc. Channels 4 and 2 did this immediately after the incidents of last week-end! Who probed to ascertain whether that Hofstra student is part of an organized effort to derogate and endanger Negroes?

I cannot help but note how quickly the New York City officials such as, Wagner, Dudley, Murphy, Arm, et al denounced the subway violence and came into a "huddle" to deal with it. What did they say about the Rockaway melée? Where were they? Why is it that they were all around and available, when they almost invariably cannot be found when we have a grievance? Why don't they attack violence committed against (Negroes) us with the same vigor as when committed by us? Would we be allowed to run a "vigilante patrol" allegedly to protect our people? These questions must be asked, not by Malcolm X, but by such leaders as you (whom I respect greatly) because you are always called upon to answer when any Negroes have committed a public offense.

Sincerely,
William D. Jones

Mr. Farmer, what do you think of a "Domestic Peace CORE" as an organization within CORE? I think that it would help to prevent violence, alleviate the misery of the masses, eradicate the ignorance (illiteracy); encourage ambition; ingratiate CORE with the masses, dispel repudiate the deleterious gossip that we have got very much [redacted] concerned about "the miserables". Couldn't we do something to help even those who do not subscribe to integration?

Dear Jim — This is from the London Observer and obviously concerns Britain, but it seemed to me unusually constructive, and I thought you might be interested. Kids are kids everywhere.

OUTLETS—2

Aggression i

FACED WITH an outbreak of violence over a dreary holiday weekend, all that most people could do was to suggest jail, raising the age for scooter and motor-cycle licences from 16 to 19, more civics classes—civics classes — and youth clubs.

What we do not seem to think of is simply to provide more ways in which people can use superabundant physical energy without necessarily breaking anything.

There are about eight million youngsters in this country between the ages of 10 and 19. No one knows what the total recreational facilities are. But—to look at some popular teenage activities—there are about 28 ice-skating rinks, 14 roller-skating rinks and 82 bowling alleys. The discrepancy is obvious.

Apart from a sprinkling of under-fives and over 45s, the ice-skating rinks are filled by young people. You can go at tremendous speed if you have the space, but in London at least the rinks are so crowded, even on an expensive night, that anyone who goes really fast is immediately—and rightly—stopped by the stewards. Ten-pin bowling almost inevitably involves long, long waits.

Teenage tracks

Waiting for somebody in a North London café, I was told that a local gaiety was to put a short-playing record on the player, leap on to one's motor-cycle, drive through the shopping centre to a café two miles away and get back before the record finished. I am sure the police stopped that little game as soon as they found out about it. But one buys a motor-cycle to go fast on it, and there are a very limited number of places, such as Silverstone or Brands Hatch, where one can go as fast as one likes.

Why cannot we have lots of motorcycle and scooter and moped tracks for ordinary teenagers? The tracks would to be organised so that the men did not kill themselve be placed where they di disturb the Sunday afte peace of the rest of us. should not be impossible.

Rock-climbing is not one's idea of enjoyment. one who lives in one of the cities of the North can soo out whether or not it is the climbing a few rocks in the district or on the Yor moors. Londoners have n except Harrison's rocks Tunbridge Wells (which sandstone and, I think, h or—farther away—others sandstone, nicer, but you h pay) near Crowborough. couldn't Londoners have rocks on, say, Hamp Heath? They could be ported from the north—or they even be plastic?

Skiing still seems one ecstasies reserved for the w or the exceptionally enterp So it must be, if one can only a fortnight once a eems one of the d for the well-off ally enterprising. f one can go for ht once a year, hundreds of miles away. But in Arcachon, near Bordeaux, I am told, people ski on pine-needles spread over the sand dunes. There is also plastic snow. Why cannot we arrange skiing surfaces with that ?

Riding is a passion with teenage girls, but in London it is not only expensive but so difficult to get that many parents just give up.

Welsh Sunday

All these are gaps in city life. Adolescents in small towns may have some compensations in having country pursuits—if they want them—nearer at hand. But they also have fewer of the cities' amenities.

Have you ever tried to get a cup of coffee on New Year's Eve in a country town in East Anglia? Or have you found anything whatever to do on a wet Sunday afternoon in Wales?

The suburbs of the great cities are often as bad. It was reported recently that police had to disperse 150 teenagers who were chanting "Open up" outside a café in Chiswick which had had to close. "I've had to close down," said the owner, adding ominously and sadly: "Now the teenagers have nowhere else to go."

The Government cannot be expected to provide all our amusements for us, and presumably skating rinks and riding schools do not provide enough return on capital to be attractive to large private investors: otherwise we should probably have more.

Perhaps what is needed is some kind of get-together between local authorities and private investors, the local authorities possibly contributing some of the millions they say they lose at present, as the results of hooliganism, towards providing more interesting ways of using adolescent energy?

Whatever the details, let us do something to make this country a little easier to be young in. Until we do, it is we who need the civics lesson, not the teenagers.

Dear Mr. Schwartz:

I would like to thank you for sending Mr. Farmer a copy your May 24 letter to the editor of the New York Times. However, I believe that it is unfortunate that you interpret Mr. Rundquist's statement as being opposed to our efforts to curb police brutality.

CORE in no way supports crime, hoodlumism or gangsterism whether it be committed by persons black or white. CORE also recognizes that there have been many irresponsible charges of police brutality made. We recognize that we have the responsibility to be as accurate in our statements as is possible. To the extent that we have failed, we shall attempt to do better in the future.

Citizens such as yourself and newspapers such as the New York Times also have a responsibility. To a large degree the newspapers of New York City are abdicating their responsibilities. For example, the New York Times has recently, through one of its reporters, created a fiction of the so-called "blood brothers." And, on the other hand, they have painted Rabbi Schrage's safety patrol in the Crown Heights section of Brooklyn as an anti-Negro vigilante group. It was this same Rabbi Schrage who was the administrator of the Yeshiva whose youths were attacked by a gang of Negroes. Rabbi Schrage was in our office on Friday, June 5 and pointed out that his safety patrol was an interracial effort on the part of Christians and Jews to stem crime from all sources. His purpose in coming to us was to appeal for our help in correcting the picture of his organization that has been fostered by the New York Times and other daily newspapers.

Sincerely yours,

Gordon R. Carey

EDITOR: The New York Times
New York, New York 10036

Dear Sir:

Law-abiding citizens oppose all forms of brutality—police or otherwise. James Farmer, the national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, does our city, and more especially our Police Department, a grave disservice when he promotes the "big lie" of police brutality. George Rundquist of the New York Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union is quoted as saying (TIMES 5-22-64):"You hear the cry of police brutality when there isn't any. It's a technique that is being used now."

Daily our newspapers report the hoodlumism that infects sections of our city. Recently, Jewish yeshivah students were attacked in Brooklyn. There were the attacks on Columbia professors by gangs of "underprivileged youths"just two days ago. Mr. Farmer is lacking in a sense of civic responsibility when he fails to realize that his propaganda contribution can only add to the fuel of a "long hot summer". Sociologists recognize that hoodlumism is an urban problem. The least that all of us, including Mr. Farmer, can do is to try to keep this disease free of racial or religious overtones. I suggest that Mr. Farmer would be well advised were he to devote his energies to the formation of an adjunct organization to C.O.R.E. to be known as the Congress of Racial Responsibility, and to leave the police in the able hands of our commissioner.

Very truly yours,

Sol Schwartz

Editorial in Herald Trib "The records are full of cases in which the polie have shot at fleeing figures, often with unintentionally fatal results. And often when something a good deal less than dangerous criminals turned out to have been involved. There is a possibility that the police have been getting a little too free and easy with their firearms, and the latest case is one that should cause the whole subject to be looked at frankly. Self-defence is one thing, so is protecting the public. But where nothing indicates more than a minor offense or disturbance of the peace, there is surely some way of apprehending the suspect besides a resort to the bullets that can miscarry with such dire results....no one would want to be so callous as to suggest that the loss of a young life is justified merely because it was a mistake..." Dear Chief Wynne:

As indicated to you on the telephone that I would, I consulted with Mr. Herman concerning the desirability and propriety of making witnesses available to your inquiry, prior to the appearance of these witnesses at the grand jury.

Mr. Herman and I are both of the opinion that it would be more proper to have witnesses appear first at the grand jury.

You may be assured of our cooperation to your investigation, subject to the foregoing.

Consequently, witnesses will not be made available on Wednesday July 29. As I further told you on the telephone, our witnesses will not be made available at any police department real estate. I am of the opinion that the witnesses are frightened of appearing in precincts, division offices, headquarters. Since it is far more difficult to secure the truth from a frightened witness than from a calm one, and since most of the witnesses are youngsters, I suggest that they be interviewed in their own homes or in my office, or in some other place where they will feel relatively at ease.

This is further to reiterate my request that the Civil Complaint Bureau and the Fourth Division cooperate in our investigation by making available to us, under suitable safeguard and conditions fixed by you, witnesses known to you but not known to us. I recognize fully that these witnesses are not required to talk to us. I would be the first to respect their right to avoid us. If, however, we are to conduct a fair and full investigation, the police department should cooperate with us to the extent of suggesting to the witnesses that the police department has no objection to their talking to us, if the witness has no objection. Certainly, these witnesses have nothing to fear from us. We have resolutely refused to release the names of witnesses to the press during the pendency of the investigation. It goes without saying that we do not expect to speak to witnesses scheduled to go to the grand jury until after they have done so.

You should recognize that in the absence of a civil review board, the community will place some weight on our objective investigation. Such an investigation should be valuable, not detrimental, to the police department and should have its full cooperation.

Very truly yours.

I am mailing you this copy of a letter directed to Senator Constance B.Motley (N.Y.State), while being fully well aware that "these days" you are --possibly more than ever!—inmidst of hard and quick decisions. On the other hand,it could well be that THIS very small communication of mine (i f used wisely and adroitly) could become the start of a significant and— to all public-minded people — useful development;especially in the "creation" and devising of tolerable 'relations" between the public (especially: protesters, pickets,etc.) and the'Police' in general; from whose ranks the potential and the actual 'billies' can be more readily spotted (and eliminated with the help, application and introduction of which would have to be demanded and (politically) put through by the appropriate Organizations,— along them,indeed.C.O.R.E.— I shall phone. My dear Senator Motley:

After having discussed the above captioned TOPIC — namely "Prevention" of individual cases of so-called "Police Brutality" occurrences by effective and meaningful SCREENING (of recruits as well as already serving personnel), rather than merely applying post-factum (civilian or other) "Complaint Boards— with you in early July, as you may recall, on the telephone, I am taking the liberty of putting,hereby, a very brief SKETCH of,at least partial,steps which could and ought to be taken in order to "free" the "active" street-police force, by legislative as well as administrative ordinances, from the presence of s n y persons (patrolmen and officers on any level) who harbor --more often unknown to themselves!! --"within"them undesirable character traits,damaging to their duties; especially, in the direction of 'uncontroled' violence ("brutality").

While it appears to be true that— at least more on the surface than in depth!— such 'psychiatric screening' is being done already, at least before 'induction' into the Force (in N.Y.City,and other larger cities),EXPERIENCE has shown that these pre-induction (psychologic) "screening measures" are NOT satisfactory — and that not just within the latest months,etc.

While it might be objected (especially, on the part of Police administrators) that such thorough "screening", i.e. pre-uncovering of character traits would be 'impracticable', too cumbersome,etc., this is, to my knowledge, NOT necessarily so. Modern "mass" psycholog.screening tests— applied to at least 50 persons at one time,like those done now routinely in the Swiss army—(Z-tests)—show the well-founded promise of good results. I shall be very glad to share with you,dear Senator Motley, any information at my disposal.

Yours respectfully and sincerely

Dear James,

I am in agreement with you that Harlem groups have been ignoring the issue of a civil review board to investig "alleged police brut." I want you consider whether today the courts do not provide such a civil review board. In my opinion they do - and yet still do not provide adequate control of police. Merely duplication of the courts' function with another modified court will not, I believe, be sufficient.

The reason I feel the courts have not performed their function well is as follows:

Today when a private citizen is oppressed by a policeman or witnesses an act of brutality, he is unable to act by filing a complaint because today's NYC police force enjoys anonymity - just like the members of a mob - and hence the policeman loses responsibility for his actions. True, police have visible numbers - but these are evident only from the front - within clubbing range. When across the street one sees four or five large police beating someone up, few people have the courage needed to walk up to the group - tap an officer on the shoulder - and say - "Pardon me", but what's your #?"

(OVER)

My suggestion which I hope you will approve of and use — is to press for large front and back licence tags to be worn by police - to rid them of the security of anonymity. The tag should be visible at a distance [like the # on a football jersey] and should contain name also.

Dear George:

Enclosed is an article from the Herald Tribune which I think puts its finger on the nub of the question. As I have always stated, I don't know what a civilian review board can do as long as it is the law in New York State that a policeman can use his gun to apprehend when he has reason to suspect that any felony has been committed. I would like to suggest that the ACLU propose a change in the law with regard to apprehension in New York State to the effect that a policeman may not use his gun to apprehend a juvenile offender unless he has reason to believe that a major felony has been committed, thus bringing the law on apprehension into line with the juvenile offender law. These kids, shot by one policeman on two separate occasions in one day, were guilty at most of petty larceny.

You know that this question has been my major concern since the day that you and I visited Commissioner Stephen Kennedy, after which visit there was a marked change in the policeman's use of guns to apprehend. Mr. Murphy has evidently reversed the Kennedy policy.

If I cannot get a thorough consideration of this policy by the ACLU Board, I would feel my presence on the Board to be of little value.

Sincerely yours,

Policeman Shoots 2 Fleeing

By Sue Reinert

Of The Herald Tribune Staff

"It's a common occurrence everyplace," said Lt. William Kelly in the 40th precinct stationhouse yesterday. "It happens every day. Don't you read the papers?"

He was talking about the fact that twice within the apace of 24 hours, Patrolman James Mullins of the Bronx precinct had shot a suspect in flight. One, a 14-year-old Negro shot yesterday morning was critically wounded in the neck. The other, a 15-year-old Puerto Rican shot Monday was in fair condition with buttock wounds.

Both incidents occurred within two blocks of the South Bronx area covered by the 40th precinct. The stationhouse is at 138th St. and Alexander Ave.

By noon yesterday — nine hours after the second shooting, Patrolman Mullins and his Negro partner, Patrolman Avant McMillion, had gone home. Lt. Kelly, asked about them, said with a trace of anger: "They're good cops. They're all good cops naturally. Otherwise they wouldn't be on the force."

Both of the suspects' names were withheld because of their age. The 14-year-old was in critical condition at Bellevue. A neurological expert and a vascular surgeon were called into consultation on his case. The 15-year-old was in fair condition at Lincoln Hospital.

Yesterday's shooting was at 3:17 a. m. in the Cypress Ave. station of the IRT Pelham Bay Line. Patrolmen Mullins and McMillion were cruising past an A & P store at 138th St. and Cypress Ave. when they noticed two things almost simultaneously, police said:

The grating on the supermarket door was broken and three youngsters were running into the subway with a large paper bag.

Two of them, a 15-year-old boy and a 14-year-old girl, were caught and Patrolman McMillion held them on the subway steps, police said.

The third ran into the station, where Patrolman Mullins ordered him to halt, police said.

They said that when he jumped onto the tracks, the patrolman fired a warning shot and then shot the boy in the cheek. All three youngsters were charged with juvenile delinquency. The wounded boy dropped the bag he was carrying. It contained groceries.

On Monday morning at 4 a. m., the two partners were cruising at St. Ann's Ave. and 139th St.—two blocks from the supermarket—when they saw a car that had been listed as stolen, police said. Two youths who were in it jumped out and ran up to a building roof at 572 E. 140th St., according to police.

After a chase across rooftops, Patrolman Mullins shot the 15-year-old boy, who was also charged with juvenile delinquency. His companion escaped.

A spokesman at Police Headquarters said yesterday that the patrolman had only been doing his duty, which was to use all necessary force to capture and restrain prisoners. "Maybe it doesn't happen every day, but it is a common occurrence," he said.

The spokesman said police have an acute sense of responsibility about the fact that they carry weapons, and that they do not pull out their guns lightly.

Mr. James Farmer
National Director
Congress of Racial Equality
38 Park Row
New York 38, N. Y.

Mr. Farmer;

For an interminable period of time, the general public has been subjected to your periodical harangues on radio, television, and in the press. Your recent vicious, baseless attack, however, on the decision rendered by the grand jury in the Lieutenant Gilligan investigation transcends the bounds of propriety.

In a manner prescribed by our legal processes, a panel of citizens -- composed of both white and Negro members -- was convened to consider the evidence in this case. A lengthy and exhaustive investigation was held, during which time the testimony of innumerable witnesses was introduced -- some of which testimony, by all published reports, conflicted with reality and apparently was shaded for reasons best known to the participants. After considerable deliberation, this grand jury exonerated Lieutenant Gilligan of any criminal wrongdoing in the death of James Powell. You, sir, have chosen to ignore the findings of this learned group and have, instead, set yourself up as a rather vituperative tin god belching and bellowing venom, and demanding the scalp of Lieutenant Gilligan.

This intensive, thorough investigation was occasioned by the demands of a small segment of the community who questioned the motives of an experienced, much-decorated police officer who, in performing the duties with which he had been charged (i. e., maintaining law and order), found it necessary to shoot to death a charging, enraged, knife-wielding delinquent. Your claims of injustice to a "small fatherless boy," an "innocent youth," a "happy-go-lucky type," serve only to becloud the issue and fan the flames of racial discontent. This "happy-go-lucky" youth -- armed with a deadly weapon and apparently intent on inflicting great bodily harm -- chased, unsuccessfully, a building superintendent, causing the latter to seek refuge. When confronted by a police officer, acting within the scope of his lawful authority, this "innocent youth" turned his attack on the officer. Unfortunately, the youth persisted beyond the point of reasonable restraint by the officer, and was shot to death.

The fact that the officer was white and the youth a Negro was not one of choice, but, rather, circumstance. I am sure that at the moment of decision the police officer thought not of the color of the lad's skin but, rather, of the deadly weapon with which the youth was armed.

It does not suffice to call this an unfortunate incident. A young life has been lost. Your tirades, however, and your demands that Lieutenant Gilligan be offered as a sacrificial lamb to satiate the howling mobs, will do naught to change this situation. They may, in fact, only worsen existing tensions.

The Negro community might better be served if the Messrs. Farmer, Wilkins, Ruskin, et. al., the acknowledged leaders of the Negro people, would concentrate their efforts towards advocating respect for law and order, rather than harmonizing in the now-familiar chorus of "Police Brutality!" If such be the result in this instance, the life of James Powell need not have been lost in vain.

Sincerely,

Thank you for your letter of October 1st, addressed to Mr. Farmer, which has been referred to me. Please accept our sincere apologies for the delay in replying. Because of the press of events during the weeks before and after the elections, we have lagged behind on our correspondence.

We very much appreciate your concern for the problems of crime and delinquency in our city, and are glad to have your suggestion for the formation of a "civilian police patrol". Mr. James Farmer
C.O.R.E.

New York, New York

Gentlemen:

Recently my son, a stranger to the Harlem area, found himself lost while driving to a meeting with a friend. He stopped in a Harlem drug store to ask for directions and was victimized by a hold up. One of the concomitant tragedies was that people in the store observing the holdup did nothing to stop it.

I have too long labored in the interest of all mankind to suggest the fact that the Negro people be condemned for the actions of a couple of Negro holdup men. I am further aware that the unfortunate circumstance of people not caring about what happens to other people is not indigenous to the Negro and is a sad commentary on the level of American morality.

My purpose in writing to you at this time is to make a recommendation that something must be done in order to dramatize the fact that decent American Negroes and whites are equally intimidated by the criminal element invading the Harlem area. I am fully aware that the criminal element is frequently white and engage in acts of encouraging gambling, prostitution, and the use of dope.

What I urge is the formation of a "civilian police patrol", modeled after the "Maccabees" who operate out of the Crown Heights, Brooklyn area. Aside from possibly serving a significant and useful purpose in the prevention of crime, they may also serve in the apprehension of criminals. Such a functioning body, carefully organized and supervised to avoid a "law-unto-themselves-vigilant" approach would also dramatize that which should be self-evident: that the Negro people are opposed to hoodlumism and insist upon more widespread and better police protection.

You have my every good wish for your continued success.

Cordially,

Police Brutality 7-16-64

Report (1:15 p.m.) from Mike Silverberg of George Schiffer's office: "Kids were in front of building across street from Wagner H.S. Janitor of school had hose; started spraying kids. Powell ran across street and into school. No one knew that a man standing around was a cop (we can presume the janitor did, or he wouldn't have talked to him.) Janitor told copy Powell had a knife. At that point Powell came running out of the school. Copy said:

"I'm going to shoot the black off of you," and shot Powell.

Powell dropped to sidewalk, cop fired two more shots into him from close range and then kicked him."

Witnesses say Powell had no knife; police say he had. Mike checked area; it is cordoned off; many police with riot helmets.

Police Brutality

July 17, 1964

The Hon. Michael Murphy
Commissioner of Police
City of New York
240 Centre Street
New York, New York

Dear Commissioner Murphy:

I was pleased to note that you have promised a thorough investigation of the dreadful events involving the homicide of young Powell yesterday.

With that in mind, permit me to relate to you the substance of a conversation with Inspector Coyle early yesterday evening at the precinct where the investigation is being conducted.

At one point I asked the Inspector whether Lt. Gilligan was being detained. He was not, Inspector Coyle advised me. Expressing surprise at this, I indicated that people whose guilt had not been ascertained, but who were charged with mild offenses while participating in civil rights activities, were generally held by the police; they were not served with a summons, an alternate procedure.

In reply he commented that while policemen have been held in custody on prior occasions, there was no reason to do so in circumstances involving justifiable homicide. At that very moment, in the same precinct building, immediately above us, the Assistant District Attorney was questioning witnesses about the case.

Since Inspector Coyle has chosen to pre-judge the case before the investigation has been completed, may I suggest that you designate as investigators persons outside his authority, but under your immediate direction?

More generally, and in addition to the civilian review board over which you and I have previously disagreed, may I once again suggest the following for your consideration:

a. In view of the obvious fact that, regardless of the reason, people living in areas populated by Negro and Puerto Rican minorities have little confidence in the fairness of the police, it is important that you who stand immediately to institute a program showing your personal concern with the rights of minorities and publicizing the steps you will take to see that they are treated at the 1st registrar-in the same fashion as white people. Only you have the stature and responsibility to undertake such a program. I am sure that the importance of this is apparent.

Nor does it suffice to say that it is the responsibility of minority peoples and their leaders to do this; only the police, on one side, are in a position to convince minorities that they will not be treated differently from whites. They are not used to equal treatment.

Neither does it suffice to say that the views held by peoples in the minority areas of the city are unfair or unreasonable. This is the simple, prevailing attitude. If the police improvement wishes, as I am sure it does, to have the cooperation and friendliness of all citizens of New York, the extra steps, as necessary to maintain the tranquility of the community must be undertaken.

b. Complaints against individual members of the Department should be obtained in the first instance by your citizens Committee; the investigation must be conducted by persons responsible to you and not by line officers. There can be such complaints are to be filed should be made widely known, that they will not be handled by persons who may be directly or indirectly concerned with the matter of the investigation must also be popularized.

c. The use by police officers of weapons while off duty must be prohibited. Neither is it that a hardened criminal escape than a young boy be killed. At this point we can leave the facts in the Powell homicide, but obviously we must consider the thought that there must have been something unusual about young Powell and his family in that he voluntarily, every day in this hot summer, took himself from the house to institutions to improve his education. The charge that a young man with such commendable motivation would attack an armed man must be considered in this light.

It is too easy for an off-duty officer to justify his use of his weapon. When he is off-duty his status should be that of any other civilian. While I realize that this may be subject to circumvention, I do think a thorough reconsideration of this matter is in order.

No one more than I--and I think I can speak for Mr. Farmer and the CORE organization--desires intimate and cordial relationships between the police and New York citizens of all qualities, races and creeds. The suggestions made above are made with a view to establishing such relationships. The police have proven that, in other situations involving Departmental problems, they can act with dispatch.

The relations between the community and the police are even more important and deserve even greater action.

Very truly yours,

Carl Rachlin

Dear Jim,

Just a brief note:

I have enclosed WDL"s wires to Screvane and Murphy.

Secondly, think it is a good time to announce a second mock Public Review Board if there is not immediate -- positive -- action from City Hall. Seems to me it is essential to put the blame for the riot where it belongs and not permit the ambiguity which the papers reflect to continue.

Best,

Workers Defense League President Rowland Watts called today for the immediate reconvening of the City Council in order to pass the Weiss Bill which would establish a Civilian Review Board into complaints of Police Brutality.

Mr. Watts called this weekend's riots in Harlem "the logical outgrowth of a situation in which the citizen feels he has no other recourse against police brutality." He stated that Police Commissioner Murphy shares much of the responsibility for this weekend's bloodshed and violence because of his continued refusal to hear criticism of the Police Department and his refusal to suspend Lt. James Gilligan, pending a public hearing.

The WDL, which has defended many victims of police brutality and which has participated with a host of other liberal organizations in a campaign for a Public Review Board, sent the following telegrams to Acting Mayor Paul R. Screvane and Police Commissioner Murphy:

TO ACTING MAYOR PAUL R. SCREVANE:

THE CITY COUNCIL BY ITS INACTION ON THE WEISS BILL CALLING FOR A PUBLIC REVIEW BOARD HAS TOLD ALL NEW YORKERS THAT THERE CAN BE NO ORDERLY CIVILIAN REDRESS AGAINST POLICE BRUTALITY. ALL PIOUS STATEMENTS URGING NEGROES TO STAY IN THEIR HOMES WILL NOT BE HEEDED UNTIL CITY OFFICIALS INDICATE THAT THE CITIZENS COMPLAINT AGAINST THE POLICE WILL BE HEARD AND ACTED UPON. URGE YOU TO CALL IMMEDIATE SESSION OF THE CITY COUNCIL TO PASS WEISS BILL AND BEGIN IMMEDIATE PUBLIC HEARINGS INTO SHOOTING OF JAMES POWELL AND POLICE BRUTALITY IN HARLEM THIS WEEKEND.

TO POLICE COMMISSIONER MICHAEL J. MURPHY:

VIOLENCE AND BLOODSHED IN HARLEM THIS WEEKEND SHOULD PROVE TO YOU BEYOND A DOUBT THAT THE CITIZEN MUST HAVE ORDERLY REDRESS FOR HIS GRIEVENCES. YOUR POSITION AGAINST A CIVILIAN REVIEW BOARD HAS CREATED AN ATMOSPHERE OF HOPELESSNESS AMONG NEGROES AND PUERTO RICANS. URGE YOU TO RECONSIDER YOUR STAND AGAINST WEISS BILL AND TO SUSPEND LT. JAMES GILLIGAN PENDING A PUBLIC HEARING.

Dear Mr. Farmer:—

Please convey my deepest sympathy to the Powell family in the senseless killing of their son James Powell. I do hope and pray that you will go all the way & why this incident had to happen and what cause this thing had to happen from the beginning there is no reason why they had had to die the way he did. God bless you and your loved ones and God be with you in your work for your people.

Farmer Press Conference September 2, 1964

Immediate -- Determination by the police department of the judgment and sense of responsibility shown by Lt. Gilligan in this instance. A failure to indict does not indicate that the Lt. acted properly.

To prevent further tragedies: to restore confidence in the police force:

1. Establish a Civilian Review Board -- a truly independent agency so that the community can have confidence that its complaints are honestly judged.

2. Better screening of the police to weed out the emotionally disturbed.

3. Review of regulations that require off-duty policement to be armed. Armed off-duty police undoubtedly apprehend some of those who break the law.

   However, police are human. Off-duty they are entitled to drink a few beers. They are armed at times when their judgment is clouded.

   Further, the person apprehended may never know or believe that the person clad in a sport shirt or bathing trunks is in fact a policeman.

4. Better training in human relations for present policemen as well as for recruits.

5. Increased recruitment of minority group personnel for the force.

THIS IS CORE'S REPORT ON THE GILLIGAN CASE

This report is the product of CORE's intensive investigation of Gilligan's slaying of James Powell. Commenced at the direction of general counsel Carl Rachlin within two hours after the event, the investigation was carried out by three attorneys and four law students. George Schiffer, assistant general counsel, was in charge. Jim Finney of Law Students Civil Rights Research Counsel coordinated the work of the students. The investigation is one of several undertaken in CORE's continuing program against police brutality.

More than twenty witnesses were interviewed in all, the investigators spent over two hundred hours. Five witnesses were discovered whom the district attorney had not been able to reach. The district attorney was also given the names and addresses of other witnesses who refused to be interviewed by CORE. Thus the CORE investigation made a substantial contribution to the district attorney's.

CORE concludes that Powell was shot needlessly. Even if Gilligan's story is believed, and many witnesses contradict it, CORE cannot understand how a highly trained, two hundred pound policeman found it necessary to shoot and kill a 122 pound boy at close range.

If this killing was not a crime, then the law and police department policy are at fault. If the law is as the Hogan report suggests, then a policeman who suspects a citizen's conduct is free to attack the citizen; if the citizen resists, the policeman may kill. But then the killer cannot be convicted, or even brought to public trial, unless a case against him can be proved beyond a reasonable doubt: proof that the suspicion had no reasonable basis, proof that the policeman used far more force than necessary.

In other words, the government of laws, not men, depends on the forbearance of a hurried policeman. He can turn a mildly comic street scene into a killing, a disorderly conduct into an execution.

In this case, Gilligan shot a half-grown boy twice with a very powerful gun. CORE is unalterably opposed to permitting or encouraging such action by police. The police in New York shoot far too many people. It is time to set positive restraints on the police use of weapons.

CORE's legal department is now preparing a study in depth of the New York law on police violence. This study will be presented to the New York legislature now considering a revised penal law.

There is alot of talk today about law and order. CORE wants law that applies to police killers, order that applies to whites as well as Negroes and justice that applies equally to all.

THE GILLIGAN CASE

Report of the Congress of Racial Equality

On the morning of July 16, 1964, at approximately 9:30 A.M., Lt. Thomas R. Gilligan, off-duty member of the New York City Police Department, shot and killed James Powell, citizen of New York City. Gilligan, aged 37, weighed 200 pounds. He had, on at least four occasions, disarmed adult criminals. Powell, aged 15, weighed 122 pounds. His height was 5 feet, 6-1/2 inches. He was a Negro.

Gilligan shot three times and two of the bullets struck Powell. When Powell had fallen to the sidewalk, Gilligan used his foot to turn the boy over. Powell was then still alive, but could not speak. The whole incident occupied perhaps thirty seconds.

The killing occurred on a hot, sunny, Thursday morning, across East 76th Street from Robert F. Wagner Junior High School. Powell had been taking voluntary summer classes there. About 15 of Powell's fellow students actually saw the shooting. Other students saw Powell fall and saw Gilligan turn him over. Still more students heard the shots and came running out. Several adult passersby also witnessed the killing.

By the time that an ambulance and police had arrived, several hundred students were on the street, in a hysterical mood. Reporters arrived.

Gilligan was impassive. While the first witnesses were still being interviewed, Gilligan went on "sick leave" and the Police Department, through Assistant Chief Inspector Coyle, issued a version of the killing exonerating him.

It is not unusual for a policeman to shoot a citizen. Neither the law nor police department policy place strong restraints on a policeman's use of force, or on a policeman's choice of force.

On the contrary, the law is interpreted by the Hogan Report as permitting a policeman to shoot and kill a total stranger if the policeman reasonably suspects the stranger's conduct and the innocent stranger fails to submit promptly. Essentially, that is what may well have happened in this case.

Powell was an only child. His father died three years ago. Powell and his mother lived in a Bronx low-cost Housing Project occupied almost exclusively by Negroes. Never poverty stricken in the terms of ghetto starvation, the family nevertheless remained in the lowest third of the city's income.

Powell had had minor trouble with the law. Once he was arrested for robbery and acquitted; twice he was caught climbing over subway turnstiles to avoid paying the fare.

As a small, fatherless boy, Powell tried to establish himself as a happy-go-lucky type, always ready to lend his things; joking and laughing. He was not a leader. Occasionally, he had a fist fight. Usually he lost. He did not fight much, never with weapons.

To his mother, Powell was all she had left since the death of her husband. Until the shooting, Mrs. Powell worked, except when she was sick. She has a bad heart.

Gilligan worked his way up as a cop with daring exploits. At least two of these prior incidents occurred when he was off-duty. Once he shot another Negro boy, allegedly to prevent his escape. Sixteen years on the police force, his rise to Lieutenant was rapid and associated with violent episodes. These episodes obviously had the approval of Gilligan's superiors, since citations and promotions resulted.

On the morning of July 16, Jimmie Powell got up to go to school. Not a particularly good student, he had decided that he would try to improve. His reading was particularly poor, so he enrolled in a remedial reading class at Wagner. The trip each way was almost an hour.

As the summer principal of Wagner fondly points out, attendance at these classes is wholly voluntary. The students are given special incentive in the form of extra credit. Their motivation is excellent. Students travel long distances to attend. No disciplinary problem exists. A majority of the students is Negro.

In the neighborhood, the story is different. East 76th, between Second and Third Avenues, is a quiet street with little traffic. On the edge of Yorkville, a number of ethnic groups -- German, Hungarian, Irish, Czech, Austrian -- are found there. In recent years, new construction and renovation of brownstones have stopped the deterioration. Few Negroes live there. The summer students had caused a certain amount of trouble. They were noisy and undisciplined in the streets. In the neighborhood, the regulars, including janitor Pat Lynch, did not like them.

Almost every day some of the students missed classes or came early for classes. They would gather on the streets, talking, flirting, doing what teen-agers do when assembled. In the ten days of summer session, this open-air social hall had become established.

On the way to school, the children tended to travel in small groups. For example, on July 16 two friends went to Jimmie Powell's house. Then all three took the bus. Powell had acquired two pocket knives a few days earlier. They were borrowed that morning by his two friends. Arriving at East 76th well before the next class, the three joined a group of boys and girls already there, and separated.

Across the street, Pat Lynch saw some boys on the stoop of 211 East 76th Street, one of the two buildings for which he was janitor. He decided to spray the stoop, plants and young trees then, although the job should have been finished earlier. Also, he did not like having these Negro kids eating on his stoop, messing it up.

He asked the students to move. After a few minutes, most did. One refused; Lynch turned the hose on the boy's face. Several kids shouted at Lynch. He turned the hose on them, boys and girls alike. One boy was drenched. He and others began to throw objects taken from nearby garbage cans at Lynch. Lynch responded with the hose. The Powell boy joined the fray near the end, as Lynch retreated into 215 East 76th Street. A pane of glass on the outer door of that building was broken by one of the missiles thrown after Lynch.

The soaking incident lasted only five or ten minutes. It was accompanied by loud, profane remarks on both sides. Lynch did make racial comments, the most often quoted being, "I'm going to wash the black off you."

After Lynch entered 215, the students who had been on the north side of East 76th Street scattered. Some joined their fellows on the south side, some lounged against the south side of cars parked at the north curb, and a few remained on the north sidewalk. Powell returned to the south side of the street.

At this time, Gilligan was in a television repair shot in 215 East 76th Street, allegedly having a radio fixed. A relative of Gilligan's lives in the building and Gilligan formerly worked out of the 19th Precinct. No satisfactory or complete explanation of Gilligan's presence at this early hour, 60 blocks from his home, has been made. He was no stranger to the repair shop. The shouting, garbage and bottle throwing and general disorder involving a score of students did not cause Gilligan to make any arrest. The Hogan Report suggests he deliberately avoided becoming involved.

East 76th Street is a narrow street with narrow sidewalks. 211 is a 16 foot wide building. The repair shop and the entry to 215 are 16 feet wide together. The sidewalk is 12 feet deep. From the repair shop door, in the shop's middle, to the 215 steps is 13 feet. From the front of the low steps it is 7 feet to the door of the building. Thus the stage of action was the size of a modest bedroom. 215 has a permanently locked inner door (as Gilligan would have known) and two outer half doors, one closed, one open.

Having reached the south side of the street, Powell joined his acquaintances. There was talk, about the Lynch incident, about other things. Powell talked to a couple of girls. Then he went to his friend and asked for his knife back. The friend, who wanted to keep it for a while, said he could not find it. Powell then went to the second pal, asked for, and got his other knife. This was seen by the two friends and one girl. No one apparently paid further attention to Powell, except one of the girls to whom he had been talking.

There is no question but that Powell wanted to discuss matters further with Lynch. None of the kids took this seriously. None joined him.

Powell crossed to the north side of the street, about outside the repair shop. He moved quickly. Without pause, he entered the double doors of 215, tried to open the inner door, found it locked, turned, took a step out.

There he was shot for the first time.

Gilligan came out of the repair shop at virtually the same time that Powell was turning to leave 215. Gilligan says he left the store as Powell was coming around a parked truck to enter 215. Many witnesses contradict this. Gilligan suggests that this happened immediately after Lynch entered 215; but this could not be. There must have been an interval, if only to allow Powell to get his knife on the south side of the street. Witnesses say Gilligan came out with his gun drawn, pointed forward, at waist level. He did not wear a badge. He was dressed in a shirt and pants. As he ran the few steps to 215, he shouted, "Hey, you!" Gilligan says that while Powell was between the doors of 215, in the instant before he turned to come out, Gilligan drew his gun, put on his badge and verbally identified himself. Almost at the same instane as Gilligan's shout, one of the girls yelled, "Look out, he's got a gun." The shots followed without interval. Gilligan fired the first shot as he reached a position in front of 215, blocking Powell's exit. The second and third shots were fired in rapid sequence. These facts are confirmed by numerous witnesses.

Gilligan says the first was a warning shot. The witnesses say the first shot took effect. Two bullets only entered the boy. One bullet was found at waist level in the inner door frame of 215, the other in the boy's chest. One bullet entered Jimmie's abdomen and passed out of his back. One bullet passed through his right forearm and into his chest.

Gilligan says that Jimmie had aknife in his hand and was attacking him. He claims he tried to ward off Jimmie's first blow, had his hand injured, then shot. Many of the witnesses saw no knife in the boy's hand or were not in a position to see. One claims to have seen a closed knife. Some claim to have seen an open knife. Lynch saw no knife, stated he was never attacked with a knife. The entire incident occurred with such extreme rapidity, occupying only a few seconds from Gilligan's leaving the repair shop. Gilligan, having more distance to cover, must have been moving approximately three times as fast as Powell, if a number of witnesses are to be believed. There was no time for Gilligan to stop or to identify himself, or to give warning. The pace of action and restricted space support the testimony contradicting Gilligan's story. The fair conclusion is that Gilligan and Powell were moving towards each other, Gilligan moving faster. If Powell was aware of Gilligan at all, it is entirely plausible to suppose that he thought himself under unprovoked attack by an armed stranger.

Some witnesses claim Powell's hands were at shoulder height, some that they were down, when he was shot. The former testimony is probably correct in view of the path of the bullet. The fair conclusion, then, is that Powell's hands were at about shoulder height when he was shot.

This tends to confirm that he either had no knife in his hand, threw the knife away in the gutter where it was found later, or was gesturing surrender. All of these alternatives are supported by different witnesses. Many witnesses state positively that there was no attack, and the position of the hands suggests that their recollection was correct.

Powell had never seen Gilligan. Consequently, there was no motive for an attack. According to many witnesses, Gilligan shot from the hip as he came. It is suggested that the bullet found in the door frame was a warning shot. If so, it was fired waist-high, directly across the path of the boy. It passed through a pane of glass in the closed front half door and buried itself only to a depth of three-fourths of an inch. It could well have passed through the boy, although the police ballistics expert does not think so.

The official version is that the second bullet struck Powell's arm, then entered his chest. But Powell continued to attack. Therefore, in self-defense, Gilligan shot again. This is Gilligan's story, corroborated by some witnesses.

This story is contradicted by witnesses and objective considerations. First, it assumes Gilligan to have halted, which he probably did not. Second, Gilligan used a .38 calibre revolver, a weapon with great stopping power. At close range, and the two cannot have been more than three to five feet apart, the shock of impact was tremendous. The impact exceeded a blow from a sledgehammer. It is objectively unbelievable that a 122 pound boy, struck in the forearm and chest by a .38 calibre bullet could continue an attack. The very closeness of Gilligan and Powell suggests that the shooting was unnecessary. The disparity in age, size and training indicate that a single blow, delivered at close quarters, would have stopped Powell.

Many witnesses confirm that the first bullet to strike made Jimmie fall against a low railing and then further forward on his face. The second bullet, they say, struck him either as he was falling or after he had fallen. Further, the second bullet was fired immediately after the first. But the first caused such a grievous injury that the medical expert states it would have been fatal shortly. A continued attack was, therefore, most improbable, and the firing of the second bullet casts doubt on the justification of the first. Some witnesses persist in stating that at least one bullet was fired after Powell was down.

The objective evidence suggests that the second bullet entered the abdomen and exited the back, from which it is concluded that the shot was fired as the boy was falling. Some witnesses, seeing Gilligan stand over the fallen boy, gun pointing, may have thought he shot then. The possibility remains that he did shoot after the boy was down.

Gilligan then turned the boy over onto his back with his foot. Although there is some contradictory testimony on this point, the weight favors that this happened. Several people were within a few feet throughout the incident, but one of Powell's two pals ran across the street to reach Powell first. He saw that Jimmie was alive and tried to talk to him. But Jimmie could say nothing. He turned to Gilligan, asked him to get an ambulance. Gilligan then pulled out his badge and said, "I'm a cop, he's my prisoner, you get the ambulance." That Gilligan first showed a badge after the shooting is confirmed by a number of witnesses. Gilligan, of course, contradicts.

The Hogan report on the case sets forth the testimony of numerous witnesses. Some of that testimony confirms, some contradicts Gilligan's own version. Gilligan's own story depends greatly on his claim to have been injured by Powell. Gilligan appears to be supported by no witnesses on this point and is contradicted by several.

On July 17, the Daily News printed two photographs of Gilligan. One showed his right hand bandaged. This comports with the hospital report of contusions to the right little finger, treated by applying a splint. The second photograph shows the hand and the entire forearm bandaged. It is thus apparent that the larger bandage was deemed unnecessary by at least one doctor shortly after the incident. The Hogan Report does not make the facts of Gilligan's alleged injury clear at all. The diagnosis of July 16 mentioned no abrasions; that of July 17 did. Further, on July 17 the doctor found a sacroiliac injury not mentioned on July 16.

The Hogan Report accurately reflects the contradictory state of the evidence. It fails to emphasize the most significant contradictions, the disparity of the opponents, the restrictions of time and space. The Hogan Report does not spell out a case of crime against Powell or justification for Gilligan. That the Grand Jury could have believed Gilligan and his supporters is clear. That the Grand Jury could have approved the killing of a boy in these circumstances reflects the ambiguity of the applicable law.

The Hogan report takes an erroneous point of view of the law, even if many of the statements, in themselves, are correct. The proper view should be to limit the use of force, especially deadly force, by the policeman. The Hogan report states that if there is a disorderly conduct, the policeman may kill if he is resisted. Indeed, the Hogan report points out, the officer has no duty to retreat even if he can safely do so. In other words, a violation of law not even a crime can be transformed by a policeman's agression to a situation in which he becomes judge, jury and executioner.

Quite to the contrary, the law requires the policeman to bend every effort to bring the suspect before the court. There the suspect, even if found guilty, might be sentenced to a small fine, to a few days in jail. It is, therefore, wholly inappropriate to kill a suspect to prevent escape when the consequences of conviction would be negligible. While the applicable law is not as clear as it should be, it certainly does not encourage killing in situations precipitated by the officer himself. While the Hogan report may be technically correct, applied to some circumstances, it is misleading in the context of this case.

Obviously, there are circumstances in which policemen must use force. Those circumstances are, however, limited by the fundamental consideration that the police exist to protect the citizen and to aid lawful process. Every person is taught that a citizen is innocent, until proven guilty. But reasonable belief that a felony has been committed and that the suspect committed it, or the reasonable belief that the suspect is committing a crime, permit a policeman to use force to effect an arrest or prevent the crime. The degree of force permitted must be reasonable. Deadly force must not be used except in felony, and even then it must be necessary. The right to use deadly force is not license to kill.

In practice the consequence of these rules is that a suspect, presumed innocent, may be killed by a policeman who has a reasonable, but erroneous, belief as to the suspect's conduct. All the constitutional protections, the whole government of laws, not men, rides in the strained perceptions of a hurried policeman.

More, the policeman may use force to defend himself, as any man. But the policeman may go further. The policeman may be the agressor, attempting a capture. If the suspect resists the agression or counter-attacks, the policeman is deemed assaulted and may use deadly force without retreating. It is, however, sheer bootstrapping to suggest, as the Hogan report does, that a violation not authorizing deadly force may be coupled with resistance to permit killing. It is highly undesirable thus to encourage shooting at minor offenders attempting to escape arrest.

The policeman's duties to use no more force than necessary and to avoid killing if possible are difficult to assess objectively. The use of the very powerful .38 calibre pistol itself imparts the risk of death from any single shot; yet the gun is standard. This circumstance again calls for restrictions on the policeman's right to shoot at all.

The special privileges of the policeman to use force may be seen to depend on the suspect's recognizing his assailant as a policeman. If an ordinary sitizen sought to interfere with the suspect in most of these situations, the suspect would have every right to resist. Only insofar as the citizen has a duty to respond to public authority, to answer in court charges against him, does he have a duty to submit to a policeman. The right of the policeman to use force depends initially on an overt breach of that duty

If, therefore, the policeman does not identify himself as such, the citizen has no obligation to obey. Further, the principle that the policeman's use of force must be reasonable and necessary, imports the obligation on him to give warning. The law, then, contemplates a sequence of events before the use of force: the policeman's perception of circumstances authorizing his intervention, the identification and the warning, the perception of identification and warning by the suspect. In the stroboscopic flicker of the event, such a sequence can easily abort. If the policeman is not trained to avoid force to the last moment, but encouraged and protected in its use, reflex will cause shooting.

The killing over, Gilligan became the suspect, entitled to all constitutional protection. His culpability must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt. In other words, Gilligan could kill on reasonable suspicion; could intervene in a situation involving no more than a child's bragadoccio; could kill. But he is answerable only beyond a reasonable doubt. This dichotomy is the major weakness of the law: the permissive standards on the use of force, the absolute standard on its punishment.

It is plain that Powell did not in fact commit a crime justifying Gilligan's interference with deadly force. But if he had a reasonable belief that such a crime existed, he had a right to intervene. If Gilligan had such belief, it could not have been based on the discomfiture of Lynch, an incident already terminated. If Gilligan saw Powell run to 215, as he claims, Gilligan knew the inner door to be locked. Indeed, as Gilligan faced Powell, the boy was already leaving 215. No crime was, therefore, in progress. Gilligan could not, therefore, have been acting to apprehend a suspected felon or to prevent a crime. At this point, law, discretion and good police practice would have suggested Gilligan stop, assess the situation, retreat if necessary to allow the boy access to the street, be certain Powell intended a crime. The immediate agressive response, the failure to retreat made death inevitable. A side step, some words might have made it wholly unnecessary to shoot under any interpretation of the facts.

If Gilligan's story that Powell attacked him is believed, the question of self-defense arises. The evidence is preponderantly that Gilligan was running at Powell. Certainly Gilligan made no move to retreat although he could have done so. Powell may well have thought himself under attack. The Gilligan story, if true, does not explain the need to kill in self defense.

The amount of force used has particular significance. Some of the witnesses say Gilligan came out of the repair shop with drawn gun. Gilligan says he drew after coming out but before Powell faced him. In either event, Powell first saw Gilligan as an armed stranger at close quarters. The readiness of the gun caused its use, whether or not there was an attack, not the danger to Gilligan from a half-grown boy.

The conclusions of one person on such questions are not, however, the necessary conclusions of another. If the facts were that Powell had an open knife in hand; that Gilligan had grounds, as an officer, to interfere; that Gilligan had stopped; that Gilligan audibly identified himself as a policeman and wore his badge; that Powell than attacked Gilligan, then, under present law Gilligan had a right to use force available to him. Powell's assumed open knife was a deadly weapon. Thus a deadly weapon could legally be used in response.

This state of the law is obviously unsatisfactory. Policemen should not shoot boys half their size. Had forbearance entailed some risk to Gilligan, so be it. The police exist to protect citizens, not to shoot them. No sympathy can be extended to a two hundred pound adult, professionally trained to use force, who kills a small boy to avoid some personal risk.

A minor, indeed comic, street incident results in death. The occurence is not unusual. Before and since the Gilligan case there have been other police shootings in ambiguous circumstances. The odds on every day greatly favor that a new incident will take place and that it will involve a Negro victim. The constitutional rights which surround a citizen mean little to the dead and maimed.

Mr. Gordon R. Carey

Dear Mr. Carey:

Thank you for yours of 30 September, but I must honestly report that its tone tends to confirm my fears. It seems to say two things at once. You deny that you defend anyone for knifing a policeman, but you call the policeman who defends himself against knifing a "murderer." You do not breathe a word of criticism of the aggressor, the knife-wielder who was first of all engaging in threatening and disorderly conduct and secondly attacked the officer who was seeking to keep the peace with a deadly weapon with evident intent to do great bodily harm and perhaps kill. That strikes me as a seriously unbalanced evaluation of a situation, more becoming the Muslim ideology than that which I have in the past associated with CORE.

It seems to me we tend to set a double standard. Policemen are supposed to be models of self-restraint as they jeopardize their lives in the under-paid job of keeping the peace. Members of mobs, j.d.s, rioters, and looters are supposed to shoot us between the eyes at high noon before twenty witnesses before we can defend ourselves. I have supported CORE because I dislike mob rule and I dislike double standards. It is a deep dis-appointment to me now to see CORE move in the direction of condoning, or seeming to condone, such things.

You say police brutality is daily reality in many northern ghettoes. I'm sure you are right, but I'm equally sure you are wrong to place all the causation on the police. It is a mutual thing -- the citizens can brutalize the police, as much as the other way around. When you adopt a philosophy that requires the police to be blameless paragons and excuses those who require policing you are postponing a solution of the problem.

Sincerely,

Mason Gaffney

I am replying to your September 9 letter to Mr. Farmer. I do not know of any instances where we encourage or defend anyone--white or Negro--for attacking or knifing a policeman. In the Gilligan case in New York City, for example, we certainly strongly protest the murder of a fifteen year old boy by a policeman twice his size. P

Dear Mr. Farmer -

When a negro is denied the ballot, and you defend him, I am with you.

But when a negro knifes a policeman, and you defend him, I wonder if you are not losing perspective?

I cannot blame you, nor cease to admire you for your past courage and achievements, but for a while at least I am cooling it.

If this makes me one of the phony parlor liberals, so be it. I think we must draw the line when the demand for equal rights becomes a demand for special license to act irresponsibly.

Sincerely.

GEORGE SCHIFFER

40 EAST 49TH STREET
NEW YORK 17, N. Y.
PLAZA 2-8060

November 13, 1964

Hon. Edward F. Cavanagh, Jr.
Deputy Mayor of the City of New York
City Hall
New York, New York 10007

Dear Deputy Mayor:

Some months ago Mayor Wagner publicly announced the establishment of a police brutality review procedure under your direction. Thereafter you advised me that this procedure would involve the review of findings of the Police Department's Civilian Complaint Bureau, including, if necessary, complete reinvestigation by attorneys of your staff.

This is, therefore, to request, on behalf of CORE, that you undertake an immediate review and reinvestigation of the Gilligan case.

Our own investigation of the Gilligan case indicated that the killing of the Powell boy occurred in questionable circumstances. We stressed, in our report, that the interpretation of applicable law advanced by Mr. Hogan was in our opinion erroneous and that Mr. Gilligan's behaviour could hardly be considered proper police practice. The killing in broad daylight, of a small 15 year old boy by a large, highly trained police officer cannot constitute good police work, whatever the applicable rule of law.

The action of the police review board shocked us because it virtually commended the killing. By concluding that no police rules had been violated, the Board has approved Gilligan's conduct. This is intolerable, as a decision on the facts of this case suit as a precedent.

The procedure of the Civilian Complaint Review investigation was secret and evasive. We were given no understanding that we would have an opportunity to present views and witnesses. This understanding was not honored. It appears that the Police Department investigation was carried out while I was in Europe and, although responsible officials of the Department well knew of my primary concern with the case, no effort was made to even contact my office. Neither was any effort made to contact any other civil officials. The Police Department findings are therefore prejudiced, suspect and entitled to no weight whatsoever since they result from an ex parte proceedings.

The issuance of the findings of the Department by Commissioner Murphy and the pressure on the Board of the Police Department's public relations man show further that these findings are so partisan as to be entitled only to disdain. Indeed, the entire handling of the Gilligan case by the Police Department shows such gross insensitivity and contempt for the public that the removal of those responsible is plainly indicated.

We further question the return of Gilligan to duty in which he is entitled to go armed. Without regard to any question of criminal responsibility, the man has killed. A killer ought not to be armed, especially with the Police Department's endorsement, so that he may feel free to kill again. Even if his conduct had been entirely proper, he ought not hereafter be put into a position where he might again have occasion to use a weapon.

In our view, the laws and the Police Department regulations regarding policemen's use of force, and particularly deadly weapons, require substantial revision. In reconsidering the Gilligan case, we urge you to give thought to the question, whether policemen are not under a special duty, because of their training, to use restraint and to avoid the us-of firearms. We urge you to examine the facts of this case from the viewpoint that a trained, large man ought not to use a gun on a boy, even if the boy has a knife.

If the procedure publicly announced by the Mayor has any validity whatsoever, then the public and Mrs. Powell are entitled to a frank, honest, complete and open disclosure of all the testimony in the Gilligan case and to an objective review of the Police Department handling of it.

Yours very truly,

GEORGE SCHIFFER

Dear Mr. Alves:

Thank you for your letter of November 23, addressed to Mr. Farmer, which has been referred to me.

We certainly agree with you that one of the major problems in the field of civil rights is that of police discrimination against Negroes, and including the whole area of equal justice.

Mr. Farmer appreciates your interest in the civil rights movement and CORE activities and was glad to have your comments.

I am enclosing 2 pamphlets about CORE which might of interest to you.

Editorial in Herald Trib says "... the records are full of cases in which the police have shot at fleeing figures, often with unintentionally fatal results. And often when something a good deal less than dangerous criminals turned out to have been involved. There is a possibility that the police have been getting a little too free and easy with their firearms, and the latest case is one that should cause the whole subject to be looked at frankly. Self-defense is one thing, so is protecting the public. But where nothing indicates more than a minor offense or disturbance of the peace, there is surely some way of apprehending the suspect besides a resort to the bullets than can miscarry with such dire results...

Mr. James Farmer. dear Sir: I am a Negro senior citizen retired and in my 70th year old I have read a lot about you and I wish I was able to come to New York City and shake your hand I just note in the New York Times paper they are putting that Policeman back to work who killed the 15 year old Negro boy July 16th 1964 between the hour of 9 Oclock A.M. and 10 Oclock A.M. he been off all this time drawing the tax payers money why in he should been tried for Murder you see ce kept uk with the case from the 16th July 1964 until the grand jury white washed the case. ce note you peopl have a Districk Attorney. Frank S.

Hogan there in New York. like we have here in Detroit Michigan
Sam Olsen. our Prosecuting Atty
a white boy stabed a Negro boy to death in a park here in Detroit and he Sam Olsen would not issue a warrant for the white boy. had all white jury and they turned him loose. and last year two white Policemen in scout car shot a Negro woman in Back two times. and one time in the stomach she was coming down the street with a Negro man at 2.30 Oclock A.M. Killed her. he said she had knife after him so he had to shoot her in the back two times and one time in the stomach his life was in danger he told and all they did with him they taken him off the scout car and put him to work in main office of Police Dept from 11 Oclock P.M. until 7 Oclock A.M. the Negros ask the Police Commissioner to supend the Policeman and he would not do it and then they ask the Mayor to suspend him and the Mayor would not do it. same thing like in your city. and a white Policeman here in Detroit he had a Negro and he was Manager of him to be a prize fighter like John Roxbough was Mgr for Joe Lewis. so the White Policeman shot and killed the Negro and put him in trunk of his car going to put him in lake and he got caught up with and he went to court and said the Negro had knife and they turned him loose & could go on telling you case after case and this is in Detroit Mich. not down South & note in paper that Mayor Wagner he going to run for re-election next year for Mayor Again & would say if the Negros and Puerto Rican get together they could defeat the Mayor next year 1965. but it would do to put it in the News papers just talk it between them selves. & say he no good when it comes to the Negros & never could figure out why he Mayor Wagner sent for Rev. Martin L. King and when King came to New York why he did go and talk with those 7 Negro leaders. and then go to Gracie Manson and talk with the Mayor he did have to carry you 7 Negro along with go by him self they talked hours and it never did come out in the papers what the talk was about. and ce note on Aug 15th 1964 they appointed a Negro name Capt. Sealy. precinct commander in Harlem. Capt Sealy 47 years old been Policeman for 21 years and New York City with 7½ million People he had to put him in Harlem he the Mayor wanted to make the Negros feel good by appointing Capt. Sealy and that Something. The 15 year old Negro dead. and to ce checked the paper and this James Powell is the second Negro boy this Policeman have killed now Mr. Farmer ce want you to know ce dont condone crime of no kind white-Negro but ce would like to see stop to that killing of the Negro and they come along and say he had knife and they never do a thing to them when it a negro. just to show you here in Detroit a white deputy sheriff beat a 16 year old white boy and they fried him note he did not kill him just beat him. you see Mr. Farmer my wife died July 18th 1957 and we were not blessed with no

4 Policemen Attacked in Bronx; Fairgoer Is Slain Over a Nickel

Suspects Attack Policemen

By THEODORE JONES

An attempt to arrest a young burglary suspect led to the stabbing of a Puerto Rican grocer and injuries to four policemen Friday night and early yesterday morning in two related incidents in the Bronx.

According to the police, the grocer, Enrique Negron, 56 years old, was stabbed in the back as he went to the aid of a white patrolman being menaced by an angry crowd of 200 persons late Friday night at Bathgate Avenue and 174th Street.

The patrolman, Philip Siegel, 43, who was punched and kicked by the mob, had been attempting to arrest a Negro youth as a suspect in a store break-in when the crowd gathered. During the ensuing melee, the youth escaped. A follow-up

Two Boys Arrested at Fair

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY

A 20-year-old Bronx dental technician was fatally stabbed early yesterday morning at the World's Fair in an argument over a nickel.

The stabbing took place on the Avenue of the States, between the golden tepee of Wisconsin and New Jersey's cluster of tents, about 70 minutes before the 2 A.M. closing. It was chilly and most visitors had left for home.

Two teen-aged boys, who were in a group of Brooklyn youngsters that sneaked onto the grounds in the back of a delivery truck, were charged with juvenile delinquency - homicide. Their names were not released. One is 14 and the other 15.

Also booked at the 110th Precinct in Elmhurst, Queens,

Dear Sir:

I am enclosing another example of police brutality. How dare a white policeman attempt to apprehend a negro criminal! My hat is off to those 200 good citizens who rioted, and especially to the one who stabbed that Puerto Rican man who came to the aid of the policeman.

For every isolated, rare case of police brutality, there are at least 10 cases of police being hindered in their jobs of ridding the city of hoodlums.

You are very vocal in demanding punishment for police, vocal enough to cause riots and make the gullible believe that brutality is really an issue and is a policy of a department that is handling negro hoodlums with kid gloves.

When 50 girls beat up 2 detectives; when hundreds prevent a policeman from making an arrest, when another hundred do the same just two days later, where are you?

Nobody can hold CORE responsible, or can they?

You create hatred for police and when people react in the manner described in the enclosed article, you remain absolutely silent.

One can only conclude that you approve of such action.

Why don't you come out and say you are in favor of: hindering the police. Obeying. Just accuse Patrolman Liegel of brutality.

Yours truly,

Jerry Tennenbaum

Dear Mr. Moerdler?

Thank you very much for sending us a copy of the New York Young Republican Club's report, "The Police and the Public".

The proposals, as far as they go, are good. Their implementation would be a step forward.

There are a number of additional steps which I believe would also be desirable. There should be established a civilian review board comprised entirely of civilians and including minority group representation. There is needed for better recruitment procedures for applicants, and better training procedures for recruits as well as for officers. Further, there should be psychological screening for applicants and present officers.

We need an end to "No-Knock" laws and others which infringe upon the citizen's possessive rights. In addition, we need to work with the Vera Foundation and others to improve bail procedures.

In order to insure the just settlement of suits involving police malfeasance, there ought to be a waiver of the "sovereign immunity" of the State (see Hargrove v. Town of Cocoa Beach, 96 S. 2d 130 (Fla. 1957) and Molitor v. Kaneland Community Unit District No. 302, 163 N.E. 2d 89 (Ill. 1959)).

"THE PUBLIC AND THE POLICE"

A Report and Proposals by

The Committee on Civil Rights and Civil Liberties of

THE NEW YORK YOUNG REPUBLICAN CLUB

Introduction. Some 13 years ago, J. Edgar Hoover, Director of The Federal Bureau of Investigation, wrote:

> ". . . Law enforcement is a protective arm of civil liberties. Civil liberties cannot exist without law enforcement; law enforcement without civil liberties is a hollow mockery. They are parts of the same whole--one without the other becomes a dead letter."*

Though few will disagree with Mr. Hoover's observation, there has raged during the past several years a many-faceted controversy between law enforcement authorities and civil libertarians over proposals which both sides view as essential to the preservation of their cause. At issue, as viewed by law enforcement authorities, has been not merely their integrity but, more importantly, their ability effectively to combat crime. As viewed by civil libertarians, the issue has been their attempt to secure compliance with the requirements of the Bill of Rights as well as various statutory provisions, and also their effort to reverse the tide of mistrust of law enforcement authorities by some segments of the public (particularly among minority groups). In New York, the clash has manifested itself in the controversy surrounding such measures as the "No-Knock", "No-Sock", and "Stop and Frisk" laws, among others.

Quite apart from the statutory and constitutional problems implicit in this controversy, it is perfectly apparent that the widespread and frequently heated distrust of the police on the part of some minority groups within the City has been exacerbated and inflamed by the suspicion that the police themselves were failing to abide by the law. The resolution of the important civil liberties issues involved in police conduct cannot fail to go a long way toward the relaxation of the racial tensions which have beset this city.

The proposals here made in an effort to help solve a few of the basic problems in this controversy are the outgrowth of conversations with leaders of community civil rights organizations, policemen and others. It is doubtful that these proposals will have uniform support. They are offered nonetheless in the belief that a major step forward can be achieved in extinguishing the fires of discontent, in improved law enforcement and in the protection of civil liberties by the adoption of these proposals.

Conclusions and Recommendations

I

We urge that legislation be enacted forthwith to require (1) that the moment a person is arrested, or taken into custody he immediately be advised by the arresting officer or detaining authority (a) that he need not make any statement and that any statement which he might make may be taken down and used in evidence against him, (b) that he has the right to communicate with counsel and (c) that if he does not have or cannot afford counsel, a lawyer will be appointed by the Court for him without charge, and (2) that he be given the opportunity to consult with an attorney forthwith.

II

We urge that pending enactment of the legislation discussed above, the rules and regulations of the Police Department of the City of New York and the pertinent governing rules and regulations of law enforcement agencies throughout the State be amended forthwith to adopt the requirement proposed above and that steps be taken by the appropriate authorities (such as the Police Commissioner or local Superintendent of Police) to assure that there is compliance with those regulations.

III

Section 165 of the New York Code of Criminal Procedure provides that "The defendant must in all cases be taken before the magistrate without unnecessary delay . . ." and Sections 188, 189, etc. of the Code require that defendant then be advised of his rights, including the right to counsel. Our research efforts indicate that law enforcement authorities, including both the police and the district attorneys' offices, have frequently failed to comply with those laws and that arraignments before the courts have frequently been delayed for hours or days to facilitate interrogation of witnesses in the absence of counsel--in spite of the fact that § 1844 of the N. Y. Penal Law makes it a crime to delay in bringing a defendant before a magistrate.

We demand that the Judicial Conference of the State of New York, the District Attorneys and the Commissioners of Police take such steps as may be necessary to compel adherence to these provisions of law. As pointed out by the late Justice Brandeis: "If the government becomes a law breaker, it breeds contempt for law; it invites every man to become a law unto himself; it invites anarchy. To declare that in the administration of the criminal law the end justifies the means--to declare that the government may commit crimes in order to secure the conviction of a particular criminal--would bring terrible retribution."

IV

We urge that there be established, on an experimental basis at least, and financed by funds available under the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, a "neighborhood law office" or "local office of public counsel" stationed on an around-the-clock basis in the several so-called "trouble" police precinct station houses in this City, to furnish free legal assistance, civil as well as criminal, to the needy who are unable to pay a fee. The primary purpose of this recommendation is to help remove the specter which now hovers over police stations and, hopefully, make them more closely approach their intended purpose--a place where help is always available. Making the police precinct station house the place to go for advice and aid in times of need will, we think, aid in improving the fast deteriorating relations between some segments of the public and the police. It will also assure ready access to legal assistance by those in the areas and at the times of greatest need.

V

We urge that there be established forthwith a Police Advisory Council to which would be appointed representatives of all major civil rights groups, established minority groups and the like, leaders of the religious and civic communities and representatives of police-line organizations (such as the PBA). The council would be charged with the function and responsibility of formulating definitive plans looking toward the improvement of relations between the public and law enforcement authorities, serving as a convenient advisory vehicle to which disputes can be referred for analysis and recommendation and serving as an agency designed to do whatever may be necessary to create the requisite aura of good will under which law enforcement will become more effective and civil liberties and civil rights will become meaningful. Ample precedents exist for the creation of such an agency.*

I. The Individual's Right to be Fully Apprised of His Rights. We have referred previously to the controversy now raging between law enforcement authorities and civil rights and civil liberties groups respecting various proposals such as the "No-Knock", "Stop and Frisk", "No-Sock" and other measures. At issue, on the one hand, has been the furnishing of an additional weapon to aid law enforcement authorities in the struggle to prevent our Cities from becoming jungles. Civil libertarians, however, have viewed these measures as improper incursions upon constitutional guarantees of precious liberties.

One aspect of the controversy has thus far received comparatively little public attention, although it has raged in the courts for some years. It centers on the rights of the individual from the moment he enters the custody of the police to the time of his arraignment in court. Simply stated, it concerns the rights of individuals to be fully apprised of their rights under the law and the State and Federal Constitutions. As thus phrased the problem appears to be a simple one. In practice, however, it proves complex. Several practical illustrations seem appropriate to facilitate grasp of the dimensions of the problem.

Not long ago in an upstate New York community, two police officers placed a fifteen year old boy in custody and took him from his home to police headquarters where he was questioned for a considerable period of time in connection with the forcible taking of a purse from an elderly lady who had been seriously injured in the robbery. The lad then was taken to a detention home and held for four days during which time a confession was obtained. He then was held for a week without being permitted to see or speak to his mother, a lawyer or any adult friend. Section 724 of the New York State Family Court Act mandating immediate notification of the boy's mother, as well as several other statutory provisions enacted to safeguard the rights of minors, thus were plainly violated. Nonetheless the boy was adjudicated a delinquent for having committed an offense which, if he were an adult, would have been robbery in the first degree and he was committed to Elmira Reformatory for a term not to exceed 3 years. Upon appeal, however, the Appellate Division reversed and ordered a new hearing, holding that the lad had been denied his constitutional rights to due process by reason of the detention without the right to see or consult parent or counsel. As for the confession, it was ruled invalidly obtained upon the same grounds.*

One can readily appreciate from this relatively one-sided case the basic outlines of the problem here posed. Law enforcement authorities were convinced that the lad had committed a crime; he apparently had an "unsavory record"; was on probation at the time of the incident; and the police wanted a confession and the swift disposition of a case they viewed to be clear-cut. However, as observed by the Appellate Court: "No explanation can justify unreasonable detention for the period involved here . . . the failure to permit him to see his parents, a lawyer or other friendly adult, said the [United States] Supreme Court, was a violation of due process guaranteed under the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution." With the reversal of the holding, the efforts of the police had, to some extent at least, been in vain and they were forced to start anew. The lad's right to be fully apprised of his rights under the law had been denied and the actions taken against him thus were invalid.

Perhaps a somewhat closer case will facilitate the reader's consideration of the problem.

In People v. Stewart*, the California Supreme Court was faced with an appeal by a man accused of murder and of perpetrating a rash of violent robberies in Los Angeles. The defendant was identified as the alleged assailant as the result of the cashing of checks stolen in one of the many robberies. On January 31, 1965, the Los Angeles police went to defendant's home and asked for and were given permission by defendant to search his home. They unearthed several items belonging to victims of the robberies. Defendant was arrested. During the days of interrogation that followed defendant repeatedly denied guilt of any crime. However, on February 5, 1965--five days following his arrest--defendant confessed commission of the robbery in which the fatality had occurred, expressed sorrow and repeated his admission during a recorded interrogation. He then was taken before a magistrate for arraignment. At trial he was convicted. On appeal, the California Supreme Court reversed, excluding the confession on the grounds that at the time of defendant's arrest the investigation had passed the general investigatory stage, had reached the accusatory stage and, accordingly, defendant was entitled to be advised of his right to counsel and to remain silent. Stated otherwise, the general investigation had been completed and suspicion had now firmly focused on the defendant. The defendant was then entitled to be tried in an adversary (i.e., non-inquisitorial) proceeding and to defend himself, with the aid of a lawyer at that trial, and could not be required to assist the prosecution. The failure to apprise defendant of his rights,thereby to permit him intelligently to appraise the course he should follow,required exclusion of the confession and, with such exclusion, reversal of the conviction.

One other recent case seems worthy of brief discussion. At 11:15 p.m. on March 15, 1961, a policeman was murdered during the attempted commission of a Newark tavern robbery. Shortly after the crime, defendant Russo was seized a few blocks from the tavern. He was arrested, taken back to the tavern and identified as one of the culprits. He then was taken to a hospital for treatment of a bullet wound in his arm, allegedly sustained in the crime. In the early morning of March 16, Russo was admitted to the hospital. After emergency treatment, he was questioned briefly but denied complicity in the crime. He also refused permission to operate for removal of the bullet. However, the pain became excruciating and, on March 17, he submitted to an operation. He was accompanied to the operating room by a police officer. Upon return to his hospital bed, Russo, under police questioning, for the first time admitted his participation in the attempted hold-up. Russo was detained at the hospital until March 24 when he was released in police custody and taken directly to police headquarters and again interrogated. After some two hours oral questioning, he confessed. He then was detained for an additional three hours to permit the reduction into writing of his statement, which he then signed. On March 28, Russo was finally taken before a magistrate. At trial evidence was given that Russo was in "the lower reaches of the average range of intelligence".

In late May of this year, the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit reversed Russo's conviction, holding that the conviction was based upon an illegally obtained confession and could not stand. The confession, the Court held, was inadmissible because at the time it was obtained the focus of the investigation had here shifted "from inquiries of a general nature to the acts of a particular suspect" and, accordingly, "counsel for the individual subject to the interrogation must be present unless counsel be intelligently waived by the suspect." Here the record showed that Russo had not been apprised of his right to counsel, or to remain silent, and, hence, he could not have intelligently appraised his rights or waived them.*

The treatment afforded defendants in the cases discussed above is in marked contrast to the circumstances attending arrest of the typical "white collar" criminal (such as persons charged with tax evasion, embezzlement or fraud). There, the suspect is usually aware of the police investigation long prior to his arrest, comes to the police station with his lawyer and is promptly released on bail without interrogation. Certainly, he is afforded every opportunity to consult with counsel and can generally afford to do so. Similarly, the professional criminal generally is fully aware of his rights and is often met at the police station by a battery of attorneys dedicated to preserving those rights. Thus, the failure to give the cautions and the opportunity to seek assistance along the lines we propose would seem to disadvantage primarily the poor, the ignorant, the unsophisticated. A system of justice dedicated to granting equal protection of the law to all citizens cannot justify such marked disparity of treatment affecting fundamental rights.

* U.S. Ex Rel Anthony Russo v. The State of New Jersey, et al., unpublished opinion of Chief Judge Biggs, filed May 20, 1965, in Docket Nos. 14833 and 14869.

The cases previously discussed are, of course, some of the more recent and dramatic holdings that when the police have passed beyond a general investigation of an unsolved crime and are attempting to get a confession from a suspect who is in custody and who has not been advised of or knowingly and intelligently waived his right to counsel and to remain silent, any confession obtained will be inadmissible at trial and any conviction following a trial at which such a confession was admitted into evidence will be reversed. There are other cases in a variety of jurisdictions which arrive at the same conclusion*, many which go but partially down that road by holding that if a lawyer notifies the police that he wishes to see a client then in police custody, though the latter is unaware of that request, any statement which defendant makes in the absence of counsel and after such notification is invalid, and still other cases (notably in New York) which seem flatly to refuse to concur with the holdings previously discussed and find instead that a defendant in police custody need not be cautioned as to his rights to counsel or to remain silent and any confession otherwise validly obtained will not be excluded at trial.*

 E.g., People v. Sanchez, Law Report News 5/6/65 (N.Y. Court of Appeals, April 22, 1965); People v. Gunner, 14 N.Y.2d 178 (1965); People v. Donovan, 13 N.Y.2d 148 (1963).

Thus, the battle continues in the Courts. One Court holds the caution to be necessary, and another disagrees. For example, in the 3rd U.S. Appellate Circuit, which includes New Jersey, the Federal Courts hold that an obligation exists to advise an accused of his rights to counsel. However, the Chief Justice of New Jersey is reported/ recently to have directed that New Jersey's state courts disregard the ruling of the Federal Appellate Court, pending action of the U. S. Supreme Court.

 U.S.A. ex rel Russo v. The State of New Jersey, supra.

/ New York Times, June 9, 1965, p. 1, col. 1.

With respect specifically to the right to remain silent, there is express authority in the Constitution of the State of New York to the effect that ". . . No person shall . . . be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself . . . .". While it has never been specifically held that the protection of Section 6 applies to police interrogations, one New York Appellate Court has stated that:

> ". . . the constitutional provision has been construed as meaning not only that a person should not be compelled to be a witness against himself in a criminal proceeding, but that its object was to insure a person from being compelled to give testimony as a witness in any investigation which might tend to show that he had committed a crime . . .".*

Additionally, Section 10 of the New York Code of Criminal Procedure provides:

> "No person can be compelled in a criminal action to be a witness against himself, nor can a person charged with crime be subjected, before conviction, to any more restraint than is necessary for his detention to answer the charge."

The New York courts have not as yet construed the phrase "criminal action" to include the period of detention before arraignment so as to extend the privilege to that time.* Several states have, however, confirmed such privilege by legislation. For example, Section 103-2(a) of the Illinois Code of Criminal Procedure, provides:

> "(a) On being taken into custody every person shall have the right to remain silent."

In New York, there is pertinent statutory law with respect to the right to counsel. Section 165 of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides that: "The defendant must in all cases be taken before the magistrate without unnecessary delay . . ." and Sections 188 and 189 require that defendant then be advised of his right to counsel and be

* Police department regulations require that an arrested suspect be booked without unnecessary delay and that he then be afforded an opportunity to make three phone calls. We are, however, advised that the regulation is quite frequently ignored, particularly by detectives. It is our information that detective personnel who bring a suspect into a police precinct station house quite frequently fail first to bring him to the desk officer so that he may be booked. Instead, we are told, they take him directly to an interrogation room where questioning proceeds for varying periods of time. Detective personnel are, we are told, not under the immediate supervisory jurisdiction of the uniformed desk officers but are under the jurisdiction of separate detective supervisory personnel. Accordingly, although a police department desk officer--usually a lieutenant--may desire to comply with the police department regulations respecting prompt booking, he will hesitate to involve himself in a dispute over the actions of men for whom he is not directly responsible. The detectives maintain that the suspect has not been formally arrested (although he is in custody for all practical purposes) and, hence, need not be put through the "booking" procedures.

A shocking example of the problems encountered in this area occurred recently in the case of George Whitmore, Jr., accused of the slaying of Janice Wylie and Emily Hoffert. Whitmore had been indicted for the murders on the basis of a confession which he later repudiated. While awaiting trial, further investigation of the crimes pointed to Whitmore's innocence. In dropping the indictment, an Assistant District Attorney was quoted in the January 28, 1965, edition of the New York Times, on page 1, as having said: "I am positive that the police prepared the confession for Whitmore as his lawyers charged a few days ago." The following description of the manner in which the police operate appeared in the same edition of the New York Times on page 17:

> "How does law enforcement begin operating when a homicide occurs in Manhattan? When there is a killing the first person on the scene, usually, is a uniformed patrolman. He notifies the detective squad attached to his precinct. The detective squad then calls in representatives from the homicide squad.
> "The homicide squad is made up of so-called experts and investigates nothing but slayings. It conducts its investigations along with the precinct detectives.
> "Under normal procedure, an assistant district attorney, who is on homicide call in New York County 24 hours a day, is called to talk to a suspect only after the suspect has made a statement to the detectives in which he has admitted the crime.
> "Occasionally the detectives will call the assistant district attorney and say something like: 'He hasn't broken yet, and it's been two hours.'
>
> "Quite often the prosecutor will reply: 'Call me again in an hour. Keep working.'
>
> "Occasionally also--and this is at the discretion of the prosecutor on duty--he will proceed to where the suspect is being questioned before the suspect has made any admissions.
> "This visit is to discuss the case with the detectives and possibly guide them to other facets of their inquiry. Normally, however, an assistant district attorney responds only when he is told a suspect has made a confession.

confessions, which District Attorney's office prefers to call statements."

Obviously, this kind of a situation is one which gives rise to serious questions and should not be permitted to exist.

* 360 U.S. 315, 325-26. Stated otherwise:

"As case after case reached our appellate courts, the exact point at which even non-coercive questioning of a suspect by the police must cease became more authoritatively established. At first, post-indictment questioning and confessions were held inadmissible; then post-arraignment confessions; then confessions obtained after the appearance of counsel prior to arraignment and after arrest. It has become increasingly clear that to give full effect to the constitutional guarantee the moment of arrest should be the maximum limit of constitutional questioning in the absence of counsel. People v. Parisi, 42 Misc. 2d 607, 611, 249 N.Y.S.2d 493, 498 (Oneida City Ct., 1964)."

Thirty-two years ago the New York Court of Appeals--the highest Court of this State--expressed its grave concern at the failure of the police to observe the plain requirements of the previously discussed statutes respecting prompt arraignment. Thus, stated the high Court, "We feel it a solemn duty to remind the officers of the law that the suspicion now attaching to them has been fostered by their own conduct."* The Court went on:

> "The police are guilty of oppression and neglect of duty when they willfully detain a prisoner without arraigning him before a magistrate within a reasonable time. (Code Crim. Pro. § 165.) The conclusion is inescapable that they do this for the purpose of subjecting him to an inquisition impossible thereafter."

The Court placed its hope for remedy upon the professional responsibility of the District Attorneys:

> "The willful violation by the police of the statute which calls for prompt arraignment is a crime (Penal Law, § 1841.) An officer who holds a prisoner in custody instead of taking him to the nearest magistrate without unreasonable delay should be disciplined by his superiors and prosecuted by the District Attorney like any other malefactor. A District Attorney who willfully neglects to initiate such a prosecution after knowledge of the offense may be guilty of a crime himself."

* People v. Mummiami, 258 N.Y. 394, 399 (1932).

 258 N.Y. 394, 400.

Three decades after the Court of Appeals of this State thus spoke in Mummiami, not a single case against a police officer under Penal Law § 1841 (or §1844) is reported. The hope that District Attorneys would restrain over-zealous police from unlawful conduct--unreasonable delays in arraignment thereby to permit questioning which may yield confessions or corroborative evidence--has proven unwarranted. The District Attorney's office, quite as much as the police, regard the hours or days before a suspect is arraigned in court as a precious opportunity for obtaining his assistance not only in solving the crime but also in supplying the evidence which makes a conviction inevitable.*

*While, from the law enforcement viewpoint, the approach thus taken by the District Attorneys is readily understandable, it should be noted that quite apart from questions of constitutional dimension, the District Attorney's practice of conducting such interrogations of uncautioned and unrepresented potential defendants would seem to violate Canon 9 of the American Bar Association's Canon of Professional Ethics. Cf. ABA OPINIONS, No. 95 (1933); Broeder, Wong Sun v. United States: A Study in Faith and Hope, 42 Neb. L. Rev. 483, 602 (1962).

We believe that several points quite clearly emerge from the foregoing discussion. First, that there is a tendency on the part of the courts to require that the moment a person in police custody becomes suspect of having committed a crime--as contrasted with merely being questioned in connection therewith--a duty exists on the part of law enforcement authorities to advise him of his right to counsel and his right to remain silent. There are, as we have pointed out, those who urge that such a caution would be most injurious to effective law enforcement. The argument they make, and it is not without force, is that once a person is thus cautioned by the police he will thereafter remain silent either on his own or upon the advice of counsel and valuable evidence and leads will not be obtained. They suggest that the ever-spiraling incidents of crime in the City of New York mandate that every possible weapon be made available to law enforcement authorities and that the cautionary approach would deprive the police of a weapon in their battle to preserve law and order.

We have previously discussed one fallacy in the approach outlined above--namely that, as pointed out by the U.S. Supreme Court in Escobedo v. Illinois:

> "We have also learned the . . . lesson of history that no system of criminal justice can, or should, survive if it comes to depend for its continued effectiveness on the citizens' abdication through unawareness of their constitutional rights. No system worth preserving should have to fear that if an accused is permitted to consult with a lawyer, he will become aware of, and exercise, these rights. If the exercise of constitutional rights will thwart the effectiveness of a system of law enforcement, then there is something very wrong with that system."*

There are other fallacies in the argument. It is not necessarily true that cautionary advice along the lines which we advocate will serve to impossibly burden law enforcement authorities. Indeed, since 1952, agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation have been under instruction to give the cautions we urge. Thus, as stated by Mr. Hoover:

> "Agents are taught that any suspect or arrested person, at the outset of an interview, must be advised that he is not required to make a statement and that any statement given can be used against him in court. Moreover, the individual must be informed that, if he desires, he may obtain the services of an attorney of his own choice. . . ."

Similarly, the Uniform Code of Military Justice provides that no suspect may be interrogated without first being warned of his right not to make a statement and that any statement he might make might be used against him. 10 U.S.C. § 831(b).

Anyone who watches television is, of course, perfectly familiar with the caution traditionally employed by the police in Great Britain--that the suspect need not make any statement and that any statement which he might make might be taken down and used in evidence against him. We are advised that the New York State Police at one point published a bulletin stating, in substance, that upon arresting a person the arresting officer should advise him of his right to remain silent, his right to consult with counsel and of the fact that anything he might say might be used against him. Additionally, a significant number of states have enacted statutes requiring the posting, in jails, station houses or other places where a person may be detained, of certain sections of the Penal Law concerning right to counsel.* Similarly, the Illinois Code of Criminal Procedure provides that there shall be posted in a conspicuous place in jails, police stations and the like a sign calling to the attention of prisoners the specific language of statutory provisions which permit such prisoners to remain silent, advise them of their right to communicate with counsel and advise them of their right to consult in private with their attorney. In New Orleans, the state criminal code does not require the posting of any such notice. Nonetheless, the Criminal Court Bar Association of New Orleans prepared a poster (Exhibit 1 hereto) which sets forth substantially the same matter referred to above and such posters have for some time been placed in police stations in plain view of all persons being booked.*

Despite the cautions thus given by the F.B.I., the military police authorities, the British police and others, they have quite obviously not found any over-burdening difficulty in obtaining convictions or even confessions. If they can achieve that result, and at the same time honor the civil liberties of the individual, we submit that the Police Department of the City of New York can do no less.

The question which next follows is at what point in time should the caution be given. As previously pointed out, it must by law be given at the time of arraignment in court and that arraignment is by law required to be as promptly as possible following arrest. Police Department regulations evidence an understanding that some caution is necessary at the moment a suspect is brought into the police station and is booked--for the regulations require that he then be advised of his right to make three telephone calls. The cases discussed above indicate that the caution should be given at the moment that the questioning turns from the investigatory stage to the accusatory stage--that is when suspicion focuses firmly upon the arrested person as the culprit. We believe the latter standard is unworkably vague. We also believe that practice has demonstrated that the appropriate moment should be far sooner than that presently contemplated by the statutory framework in New York as it is now enforced or (more accurately) not enforced.

* We are, however, advised that efforts over a period of several years on the part of the Legal Aid Committee of The Association of the Bar of the City of New York to obtain a similar cautionary poster have proven wholly unavailing. Apparently, law enforcement authorities in New Orleans, Louisiana, are less afraid of advising a person of his rights than are the New York City Police.

Accordingly, we recommend that the moment a person is arrested or is otherwise deprived of his liberty by forceable detention the caution should then be given by the police officer or detaining authority. We focus upon that period of time because it is clear that at that point in time the focus of the policeman's questioning necessarily turns away from general investigation to specific suspicion. That conclusion necessarily follows from the statutory provisions that an arrest may be made without a formal warrant when the crime is committed in the presence of the police officer, following the commission of a felony or when reasonable cause exists for believing that the person arrested committed the crime, etc. Cf., Penal Law § 177. In other words, a person cannot be arrested unless some basis exists for the officer reasonably to believe that the person arrested has in fact committed the crime. Certainly, at that point we have reached the accusatory stage rather than the mere investigatory stage. Hence, that would appear to be the most propitious point in time--immediately following the arrest--for the caution to be given.

However, our recommendation should not be viewed as detracting from the present requirement of law that an arrested person be arraigned "without unnecessary delay" before the appropriate judicial authority. Many other rights are called to the attention of the prisoner at the time of such arraignment--such as the right to post bail and thereby leave the custody of law enforcement authorities--and other consequences flow from such arraignment--such as the right to a statement of the charges against the suspect. We believe that the time has long since passed when law enforcement authorities can themselves disregard the law in their pursuit of justice. It is trite but true that the law is there for all to obey.

Accordingly, we recommend that the judicial conference and the Police Commissioner of the City of New York take such steps as may be necessary finally to compel adherence by law enforcement authorities to the provisions of law respecting prompt arraignment.*

* That official lawlessness must be met with condemnation and swift corrective action because of its corrosive effect upon society, is plain from the following observation of the late Mr. Justice Brandeis:

> "Decency, security and liberty alike demand that government officials shall be subjected to the same rules of conduct that are commands to the citizen. In a government of laws, existence of the government will be imperiled if it fails to observe the law scrupulously. Our government is the potent, the omnipresent teacher. For good or for ill, it teaches the whole people by its example. Crime is contagious. If the government becomes a lawbreaker, it breeds contempt for law; it invites every man to become a law unto himself; it invites anarchy. To declare that in the administration of the criminal law the end justifies the means--to declare that the government may commit crimes in order to secure the conviction of a private criminal--would bring terrible retribution." Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438, 485 (1928) (dissenting opinion).

One final observation appears appropriate. There doubtless are those who do not agree with the proposals here made and who will urge that reforms in this area be delayed at least until the Courts force such action. The full answer to that approach is that law enforcement will suffer a major setback if it delays reforms until finally forced to adopt them. Aside from the obvious moral and public relations drawbacks to such dilatory tactics, a serious "tactical" disadvantage exists. It is not at all unusual for the Courts to make their decisions retroactive in areas such as this and this has the effect of freeing many, many prisoners whose guilt could probably have been established without resort to illegal practices and inadmissible evidence, who could have been properly tried, convicted and their convictions sustained upon appeal if their rights had only been protected, or who could even have been retried and reconvicted if prompt action were taken before witnesses died, disappeared, etc. However, lengthy delays in instituting reforms or in facing up to hard decisions makes such actions frequently impossible and guilty persons are set free on "technicalities". Stated otherwise:

> ". . . I am convinced that for too long we have ignored the tremendous potential utility of state legislation in the administration of criminal and constitutional justice. Suppose, for example, that the bar throughout the nation had successfully pressed for legislation--or even, if it was believed necessary, a constitutional amendment--requiring the states to supply counsel to all indigent criminal defendants. I venture to say that if there had been a legislative solution before the Supreme Court felt impelled to overrule a > prior holding and intervene in Gideon v. Wainwright, in order to lead because the states had lagged behind, many of the problems posed by the retroactive application of that decision might have been avoided. In such a case, it might not have been necessary for the federal courts to upset all the thousands of convictions obtained in every state of the nation because defendants were denied the basic moral and legal right to be represented by a lawyer. The defendant who 5, 10 or 20 years ago may have been offered counsel although that can no longer be proven, the accused who--although denied counsel years ago--could readily have been convicted at the time even with the most astute advocate, but who is now effectively guaranteed release by the disappearance of evidence with the passage of decades--these and others like them may now claim the benefits of Gideon and seek release. I wonder if we would face a similar picture if action in the first instance had been by legislation or even state court fiat rather than by federal court decrees made necessary because of the states' abdication in this area.*

The author of that statement, United States Court of Appeals Judge Irving R. Kaufman, recently commented upon the problems here discussed and the basic proposals here made, stating:

> ". . . The legitimate concern with coercive or unfair police interrogation might best be served by legislation rather than the drastic cure of judicial decisions extending the right to counsel from the courtroom to the police station. . . . at the very least, the legislature has an obligation in the first instance to deal with these problems and not to adopt a hands-off policy, abdicating to the courts. . . ."

Judge Kaufman added,

> ". . . legislative action may remove the necessity for the courts to step into the breach with a hard-and-fast and indeed more drastic remedy in order to preserve the rights of a single defendant but admittedly potentially disruptive of the smooth working of our dedicated law-enforcement agencies."

We believe that the proposals here made thus will not only aid the public generally by securing the civil liberties of the individual but will also specifically aid law enforcement (a) by improving its relations with the public whose help is so desperately needed if the ever-spiraling crime rate is to be halted, and (b) by precluding the possibility that in the not too distant future thousands of convicted criminals will be released in one fell swoop because of law enforcement's refusals to heed the need for change.

II. PUBLIC COUNSEL IN POLICE PRECINCT STATIONS. We have recommended that, on an experimental basis at least and financed by funds available under the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, a lawyer or advanced law student be stationed on an around-the-clock basis in the several so-called "trouble" police precinct station houses around this City to furnish free legal assistance, civil as well as criminal, to the needy who are unable to pay a fee and also to police officers who may require on-the-spot legal advice (a situation which we are told occurs with some frequency). Two principles intermesh in this proposal.

For too long, precinct station houses have been viewed by some as symbols of oppression and thus to be avoided. To be sure, most people rarely find a need to enter a police station.

Our field research interviews in minority areas disclose that a substantial segment of the ghetto population views the police station as a place to be shunned. We hope by this proposal to reverse that approach and to give the public, particularly minorities, a better understanding of the fact that police officers are there to help and not harm. Making the police precinct station house the place to go for advice and aid in time of need will, we think, help remove the spectre which now hovers over police stations and, hopefully, make them more closely approach their intended purpose--a place where help is always available. In turn, this will, we think, improve the fast deteriorating relations between minorities and the police and make the task of law enforcement at least slightly easier.

A more basic question than the situs of such aid is the question of the need to be fulfilled. For some 89 years, the Legal Aid Society has met the legal needs of the indigent with excellence and dignity, but, until 1961, without support from public funds. In recent years, the need has risen for a variety of reasons, including the express assignment to Legal Aid of public defender activities. That the need for free legal assistance is vast was recognized by the City in the recent Proposal for Legal Services of the Anti-Poverty Operations Board, namely that some seven neighborhood law offices be established this year, two to be operated by Legal Aid.

We believe that the proposals here made thus will not only aid the public generally by securing the civil liberties of the individual but will also specifically aid law enforcement (a) by improving its relations with the public whose help is so desperately needed if the ever-spiraling crime rate is to be halted, and (b) by precluding the possibility that in the not too distant future thousands of convicted criminals will be released in one fell swoop because of law enforcement's refusals to heed the need for change.

That the need for free legal assistance is vast was recognized by the City in the recent Proposal for Legal Services of the Anti-Poverty Operations Board, namely that some seven neighborhood law offices be established this year, two to be operated by Legal Aid.

These offices would be in addition to the several offices which Legal Aid has operated for years and which have rendered legal assistance to thousands upon thousands of needy New Yorkers. Certainly, few can reasonably doubt that an increasing need exists. We propose it be met now and that the places where such need will be fulfilled be the police precinct station houses in the areas of greatest need. As we have previously pointed out, federal poverty funds may well be available for the purpose.

One further observation appears appropriate with respect to this proposal. The neighborhood law offices thus proposed to be housed in police stations would provide legal assistance to those unable to pay a fee but requiring aid in civil, criminal and Family Court matters, as well as problems before public agencies such as the Rent and Rehabilitation Administration. By their very presence on the premises, these lawyers and law students* would also help assure that prompt arraignment occurs and that criticism of station house brutality, if it in fact exists, is eliminated.* In other words, the police and public will be served by the "public

---

* Several participants in the preparation of this report have expressed grave reservations concerning our proposal for public counsel stationed in police stations. They believe that police officers would inevitably view the placing of such counsel in precinct stations as an indication that the public has lost all confidence in the willingness and ability of the police to enforce the law with impartiality and with proper respect for the rights of all individuals. Recent events, in particular the picketing of the Mayor's office in Newark, New Jersey, by policemen who had come all the way from New York City, as well as by local officers, both negro and white, and conversations had with individual police officers, indicate that policemen today share a widespread feeling that the public has already lost such confidence. Thus, those who express these reservations, strongly believe that we should not give those to whom we look to for the protection of our lives and safety any greater reason than they now have for this feeling of alienation and frustration. Moreover, there is the danger, they believe, that the presence of such counsel would unduly interfere with the proper execution of police duties for the reason that counsel is properly an advocate and, thus, a lawyer who is present when a prisoner is booked might well feel it his duty to go beyond merely insuring that his client is properly advised of his rights and promptly arraigned, but may also argue for his immediate release on improper grounds or begin building a defense by sowing pearls of reversal into the record. Additionally, they question whether prospective clients would have confidence in counsel housed in a police station with the City as the landlord.

III. THE POLICE ADVISORY COUNCIL. We have seen too often of late the eruption of demonstrations which might perhaps have been averted if persons of good will on both sides could have taken the time and trouble to sit down, reflect and then attempt to act to obviate the need for or to prevent demonstrations. For example, the circulation of petitions and demonstrations both for and against an independent Civilian Review Board might perhaps have been avoided if persons of good will were to have acted quietly and effectively over a period of years to improve existing police department procedures for the handling of complaints by the public. Similarly, instances of complaints against actions or procedures on the part of the police might be avoided or at least mitigated if an organized deliberative body were in existence that could formulate proposals for change.

The Advisory Council approach has long been utilized

* Supporting arguments for such public counsel, or at least for experimentation in the area, may be found in the recent article by Professor Frankel in the American Bar Association Journal. Frankel, Experiments in Serving the Indigent, 51 A.B.A. Journal 460 (May 1965).

 The proposal here made for the creation of a Police Advisory Council is not intended as an alternative to a Civilian Review Board along the lines proposed by Congressman John V. Lindsay.

by federal, state and local agencies. It exists now under the 1964 Civil Rights Act; it has existed for years with respect to various federal agencies and has generally proven to be effective. The Advisory Council approach has also proven effective with respect to a variety of state agencies such as the New York State Council on Youth; the Workmen's Compensation Advisory Committee; the Disability Benefits Advisory Committee; the Advisory Committee for Self-Insurance; etc. In New York City, the Mayor's Advisory Committee on Operation Bowery has worked diligently and not without a good purpose. In other words, advisory committees can serve a useful purpose if properly constituted, if a sufficiently defined role is provided for them and if persons of stature and good will are appointed to such a council. We do not mean to suggest that all such committees serve a useful purpose--for we have seen all too frequently in this City that committee upon committee has been appointed and it has served no useful purpose. Nonetheless, we submit that a useful purpose would be served if a bona fide effort were made to provide for the appointment of a Police Advisory Council of stature and with a sufficiently broad role.

We recommend that there be established by law a Police Advisory Council to which would be appointed representatives of all of the major civil rights groups, established minority groups and the like and representatives of police-line organizations (such as the PBA), and charged with the function and responsibility of formulating definitive plans looking toward the improvement of relations between the public and law enforcement authorities, serving as a convenient vehicle to which disputes can be referred for analysis and recommendation and serving as an agency designed to do whatever may be necessary to create the requisite aura of good will under which law enforcement will become more effective and civil liberties and civil rights will become meaningful. As the title implies, the Council would be a purely advisory one in nature but any police commissioner with an ounce of good sense can readily see that the Council will prove only as effective as he permits it to be useful and it will be useful only if persons of recognized stature are appointed to it, and this includes the appointment of representatives of all parts of our community, regardless of their political or religious beliefs. For example, there are those who may violently disagree with the position taken by various civil rights groups. Yet, those groups and their leaders represent the views held by a sizeable segment of the ghetto community. Their appointment to the Council would serve to enhance the possibility that it will serve a useful purpose. Similarly, the Council will present an unnecessarily one-sided viewpoint and be denied the full range of experience and knowledge unless it also includes law enforcement representatives. The Council should be a working (and not political) body. It can be, if handled properly.

Hon. Nelson A. Rockefeller
Governor, State of New York
22 East 55 Street
New York City, N. Y.

Re: Petition, Pursuant to
Sec. 63, Executive Law:
Superseding of District
Attorney of Kings County

Dear Mr. Governor:

As a citizen of this State, and a resident of New York City, I address to you the within Petition, pursuant to Section 63, subdivision 2, Executive Law, to request after due forthwith study that you make a direction requiring the Attorney General to supersede Aaron Koota, the District Attorney in and for Kings County in the matter of The People Vs. Sheldon Liebowitz, involving charges of murdering Nelson Erby on July 15, 1965.

I do hereby lay the charge before you that District Attorney Koota has committed the tortious acts of willful misconduct in proceedings heretofore had in the above mentioned criminal matter, to the end of intentionally and wrongfully prejudicing the right of The People to try and punish Sheldon Liebowitz for the crime.

Many citizens of this State were witnesses to the murder, and saw the events wherein Sheldon Liebowitz, a police officer employed by the municipal corporation of New York City, caused a pistol to be handed to him, and thereon proceeded to aim and discharge four bullets into the body of Nelson Erby as Erby lay a distance away from him prostrate upon a public sidewalk. The witnesses observed that Liebowitz committed the crime upon Erby in anger, and conclusively established a complete case of murder in the first degree.

The foregoing evidences were made available to the District Attorney. Thereon, Mr. Koota pursued an utterly illegal course before the Grand Jury, and persuaded the Grand Jury to follow him along such course, to the end purpose of publishing a claim that Sheldon Liebowitz was exonerated of the crime by the Grand Jury.

Concurrently, Mr. Koota further persuaded the Grand Jury to issue an alleged "finding", not in the nature of an indictment, which posthumously criminally accused the decedent Erby of the offense of attempted Felonious assault, as a supposed basis for exoneration of Liebowitz.

I charge that District Attorney Koota willfully, wrongfully and intentionally violated his oath of office, and the laws of this State to effect a de jure and de facto "whitewash" of the criminal charges available against Liebowitz, in the special interest of according New York City police unequal privileges under the law, upon the following grounds:

One. In violation of Section 700, County Law, Mr. Koota willfully, wrongfully and intentionally refused to prosecute the criminal charges available against Sheldon Liebowitz. Mr. Koota went before the July Regular Grand Jury in Kings County in the Liebowitz Erby matter, and there explicitly stated to the assembled Grand Jurors that he was not alleging bona fidily that Sheldon Liebowitz was guilty of the Crime. He refused to lay a charge bona fied of crime before the Grand Jury against Liebowitz.

Two. In violation of Section 245, Code of Criminal Procedure (C.C.P.), Mr. Koota willfully, wrongfully and intentionally falsely advised the Grand Jury to go on a "fishing expedition" respecting the Liebowitz-Erby matter, under his advice that he did not believe a crime had been committed by Liebowitz respecting the deceased.

Three. In violation of Section 251, C.C.P., Mr. Koota willfully, wrongfully and intentionally falsely advised the Grand Jury that its function was to consider whether it ought to "exonerate" Liebowitz of the Crime as a result of discrediting legally credible prosecution witness evidence, the same as if it were a Petit Jury and Trial Court.

Fourth. In violation of Section 250, C.C.P., Mr. Koota willfully, wongfully and intentionally, on his own motion, produced Sheldon Liebowitz before the Grand Jury assembled, and further sua sponte produced six or seven other persons whom he knew, or was reliably informed would solely allege matters in defense of the interest of Sheldon Liebowitz respecting the murder charge, and caused Liebowitz and the six or seven defense case witnesses to be asked leading and purposive questions to elicit from him and them matters contradicting the complete charge against Liebowitz, and by his acts compelled the Grand Jury to hear all such contradictory evidence against the merit of a prosecution case.

Five. In further violation of Sec. 251, C.C.P., Mr. Koota caused arguments, under guise of explanation of the law, to be alleged before the Grand Jury, so as to willfully, wrongfully mislead the Grand Jury members into falsely believing the contradictory matters they had heard from Liebowitz and the six or seven witnesses making a defense case, were merely "explaining away" of the murder charge against Liebowitz. By these acts, Mr. Koota willfully, wrongfully and intentionally invaded the exclusive private opinion making province of the Grand Jury, to the end of effectually tampering with their judgments.

Six: In violation of Section 253-a, C.C.P., Mr. Koota persuaded and willfully, wrongfully, intentionally caused the Grand Jurors to violate Section 1783, Penal Law, by publishing a report, not in the nature of an indictment, accusing Nelson Erby posthumously of the crime of attempted felonious assault upon Liebowitz, at the time of decedent's DEATH AT THE Hands of Liebowitz, by alleging that at such time Nelson Erby was seeking to accomplish a "design to do Sheldon Liebowitz great personal injury."

Seven: In violation of the same laws, Mr. Koota presently is preparing, by one Mr. Golden, a paer, which he intends to submit to the Grand Jury, and persuade them to approve, which is to allege a summary of evidence adduced in the course of the said proceedings before the Grand Jury, to prove that Nelson Erby had committed said crime upon Liebowitz.

I present the following summary review of the laws of this State applicable to the aforementioned matters.

One. The District Attorney is bound, by Section 700, County Law, to solely conduct "prosecutions" in the name of the People of this State. Mr. Koota, in fact and in law, solely appeared before the July Regular Grand Jury, Kings County, in the Liebowitz-Erby matter in his representative capacity as the District Attorney of the County. At all times he, or his agents or servants there, participated in the Grand Jury proceedings, they solely claimed and represented themselves to that Grand Jury as being there in their representative capacities. As such they were at all times bound by the scope of their offices, in the extent of acts they could there perform. They were bound solely to act as attorneys, and as attorneys for the People conducting a prosecution case, and he and his servants or agents had no authority to be there for any other purpose or cause. They could not act as "non prosecutors", or as advocates for a cause of defense against the crime involved.

Two. The Grand Jury of this State solely possesses power -- jurisdction to act in matters as a Grand Jury -- where a bona fide charge exists before them. "Crimes committed and triable in the county" are not "non crimes" or speculative or possible charges.

> "In order for the Grand Jury to exercise their power it must (emphasis supplied) be made to appear by complaint, or information, or knowledge acquired that there is reason to believe that a crime has been committed. They have no power to institute or prosecute an inquiry on chance or speculation that some crime may be discovered. Such an inquisition based on supsicion would be odious and oppressive and would not be tolerated by our laws. They must be reason to believe that a crime of specific character has been committed by a particular person whose name may be either known or unknown to the Grand Jury."
> Mr. Justice Goff, Gen. Sessions, N. Y. County, in MATTER OF MORSE, 42 MISC 664, 665, 87 N.Y.S. 721

It was utterly improper for the Grand Jury to assume it might, without a bona fide charge laid by some person before it, or by one its members also bona fide on personal knowledge, enter upon inquiry in Liebowitz-Erby. When District Attorney Koota told the Grand Jury he did not believe Liebowitz had committed a crime, and apologized that he wanted the Grand Jury to investigation upon his speculation, which he even equivocated, he invited inquiry without lawful jurisdiction, contrary to law. See HALE V. HENKLE, 201 U.S. 43, 64, where the U.S. Supreme Court notes the law of New York prohibits Grand Jury "fishing expeditions".

Three. Sec. 249, C.C.P., expressly prohibits any Grand Jury inquiry without bona charge or claim laid, by its prohibition against any but legal evidence being presented before a Grand Jury. Since "evidence" is "proof of a charge" it is self-evident you can't have "evidence" without a charge, for if there is no "charge" there can't be "proof of a charge" nonexistant. See SPECTOR V. ALLEN, 281 N.Y. 251, which prescribes mandatory procedure under which the court out of which a Grand Jury runs being obliged to test the "relevancy" of evidence sought to elicited, upon the standard of the "charge".

Four. District Attorney Koota wrongfully and unethically acted before the Grand Jury when, on his own motion, he produced Liebo-wits, but also the six or seven other witnesses whom he knew would allege matters to defeat or impeach a prosecution case. He wrongfully acted "in conflict of interest" to his bounden duty as State prosecutor by willfully, knowingly bringing in witnesses to contradict a prosecution case. His ethical duty to inform the Court of matters he knew of which might "explain away" the charge, did not extend to impeaching his own case before the Grand Jury as a matter of law.

> "The privilege of permitting an accused person to appear before the Grand Jury should be accorded sparingly and when accorded should be surrounded with the utmost caution and care. If that not be done and indictment found is liable to BE SET ASIDE BY THE COURT. (emphasis supplied.)
> Mr. J. Goff, Supra, at p. 665

See PEOPLE V. FLECKENSTEIN, 27 MISC 2d 728, where Mr. J. Dickens, at General Sessions, New York County, set aside an indictment as a matter of law because Hogan's office, before the Grand Jury, adduced evidence by his witness showing the property allegedly stolen had not been for three days prior to the date of the alleged theft in the place in which it was allegedly stolen.

When Mr. Koota made Mr. Liebowitz, and six or seven defense case witnesses into the prosecutor's own witnesses before the Grand Jury, by producing them, he necessarily equivocated and defeated the charge against Liebowitz as a matter of law. Mr. Koota's acts of bringing known defense witnesses before the Grand Jury as his own witnesses inherently invalidated any possible indictment, and was "whitewash" as a matter of law.

Five. Mr. Koota had knowledge or credible information, secured by interrogations conducted by members of his staff, that the said defense witnesses would present the evidence contradicting the facts evidenced by prosecution witnesses. In the course of the inquiry under Mr. Koota's direction, these witnesses were led through a prepared questioning to elicit the contradictory defense evidences.

Let us compare the solicitude accorded Mr. Liebowitz withthat accorded to George Whitmore, for example. How many times has Mr. Koota gone out to round up defense witnesses so he might produce them before a Grand Jury to sympathetically question them to contradict a prosecution case.? Both the State and Federal constitutions, to which Mr. Koota holds oath, binds him to accord equal treatment to all persons. Is it true that some are more equal than others? The facts demonstrate that Mr. Koota willfully, intentionally and prejudicially is according persons employed by the New York City police department, and other policing agencies, specialized treatment not accorded persons similarly accused of crime, of seeking to impeach the evidence available for prosecution by his own acts.

Six. Mr. Koota willfully, knowingly and wrongfully persuaded the Grand Jury to believe that they are an ad hoc Star Chamber court, empowered with the full trial and acquittal powers of a petit jury and court. On Thursday, July 16, 1965, Mr. Koota stated: "If he (Liebowitz, is found by the Grand Jury) to have acted as a reasonable and prudent person, he will be exonerated (by the Grand Jury)". From the beginning, even before he went before the Grand Jury, Mr. Koota publicized he would have the Grand Jury take on the power to make fact-credibility judgments between prosecution and defense witnesses he would produce before them, and to have the Grand Jury in secret act as a complete and final petit jury and court.

"A Grand Jury is the grand inquest between the government and the citizens". Mr. Justice Story, in United States v. Coolidge, 2 Gall 367.

"The Grand Jury is a constitutent part of the Court, and is under its general supervision and control. The Court "inquires" by the Grand Jury, and "tries and determines" with the petit jury. 1 Bishop, on Crim. Procedure, Sec. 142, 733." IN RE GARDINER, 31 MISC. 364, 36

"It will be bornerin mind that (a Grand Jury legality) inquiry is not a question of the guilt or innocence of the defendant. It is purely and simply one of law - was there sufficient evidence presented before the Grand Jury to warrant the finding of the indictment." PEOPLE V. MCGAHAN, 155 MISC 707

"(A Grand Jury) has the bread power to listen to evidence offered by one side of a controversy only." PEOPLE V. MC CABE, 148 MISC 330, 333.

"It is the function of a grand jury in its proceedings to ascertain whether prima facie grounds for a criminal prosecution have been made out, sufficient to warrant a trial by a petit jury." 33 CORPUS JURIS SECUDNDUM, 1. 1035, hdnt. 84, and many cases cited.

The Grand Jury "do not try issues. They determine whether a crime has been committed, and simply accuse the defendant if there is sufficient evidence to show a crime has been committed, and if unexplained it point to the guilt of defendant and would warrant a conviction by a trial jury, then the Grand Jury ought to find an indictment." PEOPLE V. BOOTH, 52 MISC 340, 343.

"The Grand Jury inquiry is in the nature of a preliminary examination, and should not be converted or subverted into a regular trial, like, for instance, a public trial at law or chancery, implying the right to adduce (conflicting) testimony resulting in a judicial determination. . . Their (the Grand Jury's) plain duty is to bring to trial in a proper court persons whose identity is established prima facie in the proof of commission of a crime and furnish reasonable protection against malicious and unfounded (emphasis supplied) prosecution on the other hand." PEOPLE V. BLAIR, 33 N. Y. S. 2d 185, 191

Instead of coming in good faith, as an advocate for the State of New York, and laying out the many evidence of the 21 prosecution witnesses supllied him through the Brooklyn branches of the NAACP and CORE, whose testimonies showed the premeditated and malicious murder of Erby by Liebowitz, Mr. Koota intentionally and wrongfully adduced, beyond these prosecution witnesses, the seven or eight persons supplied by fellow policemen of Liebo tiz, and proceeded by intentional leading questions to have these police witnesses contradict the prosecution facts, and the, he further advised the Grand Jury it could discredit the prosecution evidences, and choose to adopt any account, defense or prosecution, as they saw fit.

Mr. Koota willfully, intentionally, wrongfully converted and subverted the Grand Jury in a special, secret-trying, Court of Star Chamber, orchestrated into a decision by the modes of questioning and "explanations" of law that Koota paraded before them. It is safe to expect the propositions of law, Koota advanced respecting the law of the murder case, had as much illegality and one-sidedness to them as the propositions of law he advanced to induce the Grand Jury to illegal act in the whole matter.

Seven. Mr. Koota caused the drafting of the following non-indictment special "finding" of fact by the Regular Grand Jury:

"We find that Sheldon Liebowitz, an officer in the police department of the City of New York, in taking the life of Nelson Erby acted in a lawful and justifiable manner in defense of himself at a time when he had reasonable grounds to apprehend a design on the part of said Nelson Erby to do the said Sheldon Liebowitz great personal injury and that there was imminent danger of such design being accomplished."

The language of the "findig" prima facie evidences the work of a person of legalistic bent, and is some evidence of the argument of defense matter there by Koota before the Grand Jury.

Mr. Koota has announced that, upon a paper prepared by his assistent, Mr. Golden, a further "findig", consisting of a summary of "evidence" "found" by the Grand Jury is to be issued in justification of the proclaimed Grand Jury exoneration of Liebowitz.

The acts of the District Attorney in drafting Grand Jury findings, are the acts of the District Attorney tampering with the exclusive opinion-making processes of the Grand Jury. The "presentment" to be made, notwithstanding alleged Grand Jury endorsement of it, will be the handiwork of the opinionformulation of the District Attorney, and not solely the creature of the Grand Jury. This is clearly an illegal act of tampering with exclusive jury province, as declared in U. S. V. KILPATRICK, where it is noted that the "finding of a Grand Jury must be their own, uninfluenced by the promptings, or suggestions of others, or the opportunity thereof." The two weeks of intense scrutiny by the District Attorney into matters encompassed in this "presentment" are shocking evidences of the extent to which the District Attorney is leading the Grand Jury into making a rationalia. That two weeks are needed to draft this "finding", show the legal promptings by the District Attorney is the essence of the verdict allegedly found by the Grand Jury.

Eight. Mr. Koota's acts of causing the Grand Jury to posthumously condemn Nelson Erby for crime, when he is unable to defend himself against the charge, is unconscionable misconduct. Apparently the dead Negro must suffer a kind of discrimination which, were a white man involved, there would be some pangs of consciences felt against the indecency. Must we malign the dead, for the sake of public order? Is there no decency within us about the dead?

On August 2, 1965, Mr. Koota wrote to me as follows:

"As you stated, a further report by the Grand Jury will be submitted shortly. Your observation that the "law prohibits any kind of (non-indictment) presentments on criminal matters" expresses the law as it existed prior to July 1964. However, the law effective July 1964, Section 253-a of the Code of Criminal Procedure, expressly authorized submission of Grand Jury reports.

"If you can spare the time, I should like to discuss this matter with you personally."

I am shocked that after having the issue broach to him of the indecency of posthumously further condemning a dead man, Mr. Koota has no reaction but to cursorily and falsely allege as matter of law things which are not so, in declaration of further bad intent to malign the defenseless dead man further.

Section 253-a did not, in the slightest, change the law of this State in the subjected matter concerned. The Grand Jury is still utterly powerless to issue any kind of "Presentments" on non-indictment matters accusing anyone of criminal wrongdoing. Sec. 253-a expresses authorizes solely, and authrotizes solely in respect to persons who are public employees, and authorizes solely in respect to public employees who are charged solely with torts, ie., or civil wrongs, and not criminal wrongs, that a report may be issued (a) presenting the tortious, civilly wrongful acts that done by any of them, or a simple, bare statement that the Grand Jury has investigated a claim of a public employee's civil or tortious wrongfulness, and found the evidence did not sustain the charge. The bare conclusory statement of civil wrongdoing alone was allowable, and no "exoneration" of criminal charge was provided. Section 253-a does not in the slightest allow the kind of indecency Koota led the Grand Jury into doing, of criminally accusing a dead man whom they could not allow to have a fair hearing, a fair hearing in open court by a jury of his peers or equals.

I next wish to specify the course of conduct which I Petition the Governer to take.

One. That an order be made superseding the Kings County prosecutor in the Liebowitz Erby matter.

Two. That the Attorney General be empowered to proceed de nov in the matter for prosecution in regular court.

Three. That the Attorney General be instructed to furthwith, without any unnecessary dealy, to apply to the Supreme Court, Kings County, for an order impanelling a Special Grand Jury to hear the prosecution case available for indictment of Patrolman Sheldon Liebowitz for murder in first degree of Nelson Erby, and duly proceed with such prosecution as ordered.

I move thewe matters in the interests of justice, law and order. No expediency can justify the resort to the oppressive way of Star Chamber proceedings, founded upon pretense of powdr to go on "fishing expeditions". If a District Attorney is suffered to "whitewash" one type of case, who can say where this mischief will lead us.

Sincerely yours,

/s/ JOHN M. LAWRENCE

Police brutal? ERBY

CORE CHALLENGES GRAND JURY FINDING

New York, N.Y., August 30, 1965 -- The finding of the Grand Jury investigation into the death of Nelson Erby, shot by Patrolman Sheldon Liebowitz, was challenged by CORE in an amicus curiae brief filed before the state Supreme Court, (Kings County). CORE counsel George Schiffer contended that since Erby did not commit disorderly conduct, Patrolman Liebowitz's actions were unjustified. Further, that as the arrest for disorderly conduct was unlawful, Erby had by law a right to resist it with reasonable force, and that even if Erby had been guilty of disorderly conduct, Liebowitz was not justified in the killing.

Because of its belief that the Grand Jury's report was not supported by the weight of the evidence, CORE has urged the Court not to accept the report. CORE counsel Schiffer has requested that the Court either return the matter to the Grand Jury for further investigation, or have the report sealed and not be granted the dignity and status of a public record.

Rather than supporting the exoneration of Liebowitz, the CORE brief states that the evidence presented before the Grand Jury warranted an indictment of Liebowitz. In filing the brief, Schiffer issued the following statement:

> "1. The Grand Jury based its finding of a lawful arrest on a "disorderly conduct" charge against Nelson Erby for which there was no basis in law whatsoever. There was no finding of a breach of the peace without which there could not be disorderly conduct. Erby was kneeling and either praying or "acting strangely." The few observers were casual. Since there was no disorderly conduct, the arrest was wrongful.
> "2. Since the arrest was wrongful, Erby had a right to resist. A citizen has a right to use reasonable force to resist a wrongful arrest. Hence, the shooting was an aggravation of the attempted unlawful arrest.

MORE

"3. In any case, the Grand Jury's finding that Liebowitz was in imminent danger of grievous bodily harm was against the weight of the evidence which showed that Liebowitz had three assistants, at least one of whom had a club. Further, the Grand Jury's comments on the medical evidence showed that the Grand Jury was wholey confused as to its significance.

"The Grand Jury definitely stated that Erby was not prone; that is lying face downward, when the fatal shots were fired. Yet the uncontradicted medical evidence shows that one of the fatal bullets travelled upwards through his body, indicating that he was supine, that is lying on his back. CORE contends that it makes no legal difference whether he was prone or supine. The crucial point is that Erby was down, and the policeman was standing when at least one of the fatal shots was fired.

"Because Liebowitz had assistance, there was no reasonable basis for fearing imminent danger from the supine Nelson Erby, who, as the uncontradicted testimony shows, was unarmed at that point. That it was not fear of imminent danger which impelled Liebowitz to fire is indicated also by the fact that he fired after Erby as Erby was running away. The Grand Jury recognized that there was a wound in Erby's thigh which entered from the rear. They do not hypothecate another time at which the bullet could have been fired, and in fact, there was no other reasonable explanation. The Grand Jury failed to recognize the complete inconsistency of the motives which it attributed to Liebowitz, on the one hand, that he shot in self-defense, and on the other hand, that he shot to apprehend an escaping felon."

"On the basis of the above, we find that the Grand Jury's report was against the weight of the credible and legally admissible evidence, and that its conclusions were based on a totally incorrect statement of the law. Further, the Grand Jury arrogated to itself the functions of a trial jury, depriving both Liebowitz and the public of the normal process of a public trial. Therefore, the Court should refuse to accept the report and should refer the matter back to the Grand Jury for new findings or, alternately, order that the report be sealed and not made a public record.

"Indeed, we believe that sufficient evidence was presented to the Grand Jury, which it found credible, to warrant the conviction of Patrolman Liebowitz by a petit jury, that being the legal standard for an indictment.

"The most shocking aspect of this case is that even if the Grand Jury were entirely correct, it would be placing its seal of approval on the killing of a man for the offense of disorderly conduct, normally punished by a small fine. We believe that there is serious legal question, whether this type of conduct, as distinguished from misdemeanors or felonies, supports the use of deadly force under any conditions. More important, as a moral and social question, we believe that no person should be killed for committing an alleged minor offense.

"Further, we have been greatly disturbed by the procedural aspects of this case. We believe that a police officer, who kills someone, should be treated like any other citizen in similar circumstances; that is, he should be arrested and charged. He should also be suspended. We also believe that the case should not be investigated by fellow police officers, even police officers nominally transfered to the District Attorney's office, but by independent, qualified civilian investigators. The presentation to the Grand Jury should be objective and comparable to the presentation in other cases, with defense witnesses reserved to the trial. We believe that the public disposition of cases involving killings by policemen is essential to public confidence in its police department. Since the Erby killing, there have been at least seven additional killings by policemen of civilians, none of which, in our opinion, have received adequate investigation.

"The New York City Police Department has an abominable record in everything except the injury rate of its men. It is time that New York's public and New York's officials took an objective look at its so-called "finest" to find out whether we do not have too many of the wrong kind of police to do the job which the public deserves. We also know that it is time for a thorough house-cleaning of New York's District Attorney's office in Brooklyn and Manhattan where the bulk of the killings and the bulk of the forced confessions occur. We know of no punitive action which has been instituted against any policeman or any assistant district attorney who has participated in such a killing or forced confession. At the same time, we know that these District Attorney's offices have been completely remiss in enforcing the laws against racial discrimination and the laws against slumlords which directly affect at least 1½ million New York citizens. We are completely committed to law and order. We think that law and order must begin with officials sworn to uphold law and order."

Gilligan v. King

Dear Mr. Farmer:

I am forwarding to you herewith by hand the original of each of the two affidavits we discussed. Please read and then execute each on the last page and have them notarized and then return both to my messenger. I will then conform copies of the affidavits and send you a set, along with the other motion papers, for your files.

If you feel that the affidavits do not satisfactorily state your philosophy or beliefs in those portions devoted to expressions of opinion, please do not hesitate to change them and I will have the affidavits retyped.

Should it not be possible for you to sign the affidavits when my messenger delivers them, just ask him to return at a more convenient time. I would, however, appreciate their return sometime today.

Sincerely yours,

DEMONSTRATIONS OR POLICE BRUTALITY?

A STATEMENT BY THE COUNCIL OF ORGANIZATIONS FOR CIVIL RIGHTS

22 HANCOCK STREET, Springfield. 734-0545 (phone)

THE PEOPLE OF SPRINGFIELD ARE NOT BEING GIVEN THE TRUTH CONCERNING POLICE BRUTALITY IN OUR COMMUNITY. THIS IS WHAT REALLY HAPPENED SINCE JULY 17th.

JULY 17th. At the Octagon Lounge 18 persons were brutally beaten, abused, mistreated, and arrested. 17 of the 18 persons who were arrested were Negroes; the other was a white girl who was called a "nigger-lover" by the arresting officers.

JULY 19th. The Council or Organizations for Civil Rights (COCR) met with Mayor Ryan with the following demands of an outraged and aroused black community.

(1) Suspend or reassign the identified officers who were responsible for the brutalities committed at Octagon Lounge.

(2) Six months training in Human Relations for all members of the Springfield Police Department.

(3) Reassignment of Negro officers to emphasize that they were being used in all branches of the Department.

(4) Name plates to be worn by all members of the Department at all times with their badges -- so that officers may easily be identified.

(5) A Civilian Review Board -- to be appointed by the Springfield Human Relations Commission -- to hear and review all complaints concerning police brutality.

Simultaneously with the presentation of these demands to Mayor Ryan, demonstrations under the leadership of COCR began.

JULY 22nd — In response to the demonstrations on the steps of City Hall, which began the night before, Mayor Ryan promosed to reassign officers (demand #1) and also to recommend to the Police Commission action on all other demands. On the basis of Mayor Ryan's promise, demonstrations were halted.

JULY 26th — Mayor Ryan broke his promise, and thus, INSULTED THE LEADERSHIP OF THE BLACK COMMUNITY!!

AUG. 9th — COCR requested a meeting with Mayor Ryan and the Police Commission. The meeting was refused.

AUG. 10th — COCR began a continuous vigil at City Hall until the Mayor meets the demands.

AUG. 13th — After a continuous peaceful demonstration-vigil for four days (with the approval of the Police Dept.) 24 people were arrested, beaten, and hurt. AGAIN The same police brutality as was witnessed at the Octagon was repeated.

AUG. 14th — 600 aroused citizens met at a mass meeting at Winchester Square to protest the horrible brutalities of the previous day. 200 people peacefully marched down to Court square to demonstrate their witness to this continuous inhuman treatment. At the Square the people who were assembled were intimadated and harassed by policemen -- many of whom were not wearing badges.

At 2:00 A. M., Sunday morning -- after many demonstrators had gone home and after all reporters had withdrawn -- the 44 remaining people were set upon like dogs. They had been given no notification by the Police that they were violating any law . They were clubbed, kicked, hit with fists, and packed like animals into two police vans.

THE MOST INHUMAN AND BARBARIC ACT OF THE POLICE CONCERNS BETTY BELTON.

Miss Belton is a physically handicapped woman. Police officers grabbed her and threw her cane away. She was then pulled, twisted, and dragged; and then thrown into a police van. The Van door

AMERICAN FRIENDS SERVICE COMMITTEE
New York Metropolitan Region
Room 220, 2 West 20th Street, New York, 10011
PHONE: OR 5 - 4200
July 23, 1964

RELEASED BY: Dr. George Rubin, Chairman
Executive Committee of the American Friends
Service Committee's New York Metropolitan Region

STATEMENT Regarding New York City Riots

At its Executive Committee meeting today the American Friends Service Committee, a Quaker organization, supported an independent civilian review board to investigate citizens' complaints of police excesses, encouraged a policy of open occupancy in housing practices and supported President Johnson's anti-poverty program. The current riots and civil unrest, it stated, were symptoms of the problems of racial discrimination and poverty, inadequate education, poor jobs or no jobs, and poor housing.

The Statement follows:

The American Friends Service Committee, a Quaker organization, is dedicated to helping create the conditions under which social problems can be resolved by peaceful rather than violent means.

It recognizes that the recent riots and civil unrest in New York City are symptoms of deeper problems that have afflicted the city for many years. They are problems of racial discrimination and poverty, inadequate education, poor jobs or no jobs, and poor housing.

M O R E

All citizens are to blame for a century of inhuman treatment which white America has visited upon the Negro. Every employer who has rejected a job applicant because of his race or religion; every landlord who has tolerated overcrowding and excessive rent; every landowner or real estate operator who has ever denied the Negro an equal opportunity to buy or rent a house in the city or suburb; every person who has called for violence as a solution; and every citizen who has remained silent in the face of these injustices -- all have helped to create the riots in New York.

The Committee recognizes the general high quality of the police department. But it knows from its experience in East Harlem that many residents feel that police use excessive force. As an important step in easing tension, the Committee favors the appointment of an independent civilian review board to investigate citizen complaints.

Civil rights, fair housing and fair employment laws have been passed. Their enforcement depends not only on their vigorous support by officials, but on voluntary compliance by each citizen of the letter and spirit of the law. The Committee's experience in the fair housing field shows the need to make substantial progress in achieving an open occupancy pattern of living on a metropolitan wide basis.

It s experience with the poor in East Harlem over the past seven years leads it to support greater community-wide efforts to deal with the problems of education, jobs and housing. The Committee approves efforts such as Mobilization for Youth and HARYOU-ACT. A member of a National Board of the AFSC recently testified in support of the President's anti-poverty program - The Economic Opportunity Act of 1964.

M O R E

The Committee's goal is to work toward a truly free and integrated society where the individual has the widest option, where differences, individual and group, are welcomed, and where all these freedoms are undergirded by a sound basis of equal rights and opportunity.

Dear Mr. Farmer:

I am enclosing a copy of a letter which I sent today to Mayor Wagner, on the subject of the need for a civilian review board to investigated cases of alleged police brutality.

I send this because I want CORE to know that there are still some members of the white middle class community who feel the way I do.

Hon. Robert Wagner
Office of the Mayor
City Hall
New York, N.Y.

Dear Mayor Wagner:

The purpose of this letter is to add one more voice to the growing group of citizens of the city who believe that an independent civilian review board should be set up immediately to investigate cases of alleged police brutality.

The events of this past week have reinforced my belief, based on personal experience as well as testimony of many persons, that the police do indeed give differential treatment to Negroes and Puerto Ricans. Anyone who knows the city at all well knows that this is so, and denials on the part of police and other city officials must be widely recognized as either sadly uninformed or deliberately dishonest.

I have worked with New York City police and I respect them for the fact that they face danger daily to protect us from crime and violence. I know that police are no more nor less honest, no more nor less subject to racial prejudiced attitudes, than the rest of us. I do not intend to criticize individual policemen when I write that racial attitudes against Negroes influence their treatment of them. It does seem to me to be your responsibility to see that these attitudes are controlled and improved, so that no New Yorker will have any real reason to fear the police because of his race or membership in any lawful group.

The board should be composed of persons expert in law enforcement and civil rights, who have no connection with the police. One such name which comes to my mind is Mr. Shad Polier. Another suggestion is Mr. Charles King, executive director of the Wiltwyck School for Boys and an outstanding Negro authority in the field of delinquency. There are literally hundreds of other qualified and interested citizens whose honesty would be beyond question.

I cannot agree with the argument that such a board would be bad for police morale. It seems to me that morale in any organization is high when there is group pressure for high standards of performance. A civilian review board would mean to the average policeman that the city authorities expect him to do his job well. On the other hand, when the top echelons of the police department oppose the establishment of such a review board, this means to the average policeman that the top authorities recognize and condone his deviations from good quality work. Nothing could be worse for morale.

I also cannot agree that the establishment of a review board would appear to be weakness on the part of the city administration in giving in to the demands of the mob. Hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers know, from having personally observed, that the riots of last week represented not only a loss of control by the Negro community, but a loss of control by the police as well. While the establishment of adequate police services in Negro sections of the city is essential to protect the citizens of these neighborhoods from loss of control by some of their number, the establishment of controls over police behavior is equally essential, and seems to be a completely rational response to the events of last week.

Thank you for your courtesy in reading this letter.

Very truly yours,

(signed) James Finkelstein M.D.

Dear Mr. Farmer,

To paraphrase a recent statement—
The lack of law enforcement has been the Negro's worst friend.

Need I enumerate:

1. Various Payoffs
2. Gambling & Bootlegging
3. Prostitution
4. Narcotics (which the N.Y. Police Commissioner says is unsolvable)

In many of our Negro communities the respect for law and order is negated in the above. Maybe it is time that we get to the heart of the biggest problem.

Ask any police where he would prefer to do duty in any city USA — you'll find that it is in the Negro Community where the "living is good!"

Dear Mr. Farmer:

The staff of the Lenox Hill Neighborhood Association, a Settlement House serving the Yorkville community, wish to go on record as follows:

We recommend the immediate establishment of a permanent, independent Civilian Review Board to review all civil complaints relating to improper police action.

We believe the present racial tensions are a result of social conditions which have existed, and still exist, in New York City. We are deeply concerned and deplore these conditions which, if steps are not immediately taken to begin to correct them, can only lead to future incidents of this nature.

Dear Mr. Rintala:

CORE does not have any great body of information regrading civilian review boards of police activity. Such boards are operative in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania and in Rochester, New York. Boston, Massachusetts has also begun a similar review board quite recently.

Our general impression is that these boards have not made any great changes in police practices, but that they have been helpful. I suppose the fact that theypolice so violently oppose them is indicative that they must serve a purpose.

Even with our limited experience we strongly endorse civilian review of charges against the police and have made such demands here in New York City as well as elsewhere. We know of no case where these boards have inhibited effective police action, not withstanding the recent FBI reports to the contrary. Most minority group members in the ghetto regard the policeman as the enemy. We believe that the review board along with more adequate training of police personnel could be effective in alleviating this problem.

Dear Sir:

The Berkeley-Albany Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union of Northern California, of which I am a member, is presently investigating the general problem of police-minority group relations. We hope to find areas in which an organization with our kind of expertise can make a contribution. As a part of our preliminary research, I have been directed to gather some information on the use of civilian review boards for evaluating charges of misconduct leveled at police officers. It has occurred to me that such boards might be one way of approaching the widespread and troublesome problem of more stringent enforcement of the law against members of minority groups.

Your regional office suggested that I contact you. I thought that the events this summer in New York, in particular, might have caused you to give the matter of civilian review boards some thought. Any information which you have available or any comments you would care to make would be greatly appreciated.

Thank you very much for your assistance.

CORE SETS UP UNOFFICIAL REVIEW BOARD ON POLICE BRUTALITY

New York, N.Y., May 28--Pending the outcome of a campaign by CORE and other civil rights groups for legislative establishment of a civilian board to review police brutality charges, CORE has set up an unofficial committee of ten prominent citizens for this purpose. Members of the committee include Roger Baldwin, veteran civil libertarian, former Judge Hubert Delaney and Rev. Donald Harrington.

"For months we have called upon the mayor and the police commissioner to deal effectively with this problem," said CORE National Director James Farmer on May 22nd in announcing formation of the unofficial committee. "I have talked to the mayor. I have talked to the commissioner, without tangible results. The time for talking is now past."

At its initial meeting on June 4th, the committee will hold hearings on four recent cases of police brutality involving Jesse Roberts, James Yates, Rosalee Brown and Kenneth Massey. Police precincts where brutality has occurred also will be picketed by CORE groups in the New York area.

Police Commissioner Michael Murphy and the policemen involved in the four incidents were invited to testify but Murphy, who has strongly opposed creation of a civilian review board, said" "No policemen will appear. We do not believe in kangaroo courts or public lynchings." A bill to establish a civilian review board will be introduced soon in the city council.

Protests Across The Country

Campaigns against police brutality are being conducted in an increasing number of cities by CORE groups across the country

More-More-More

A drive for the resignation of Police Chief William Parker of Los Angeles has received considerable publicity in the southern California press. The campaign, indorsed by 12 CORE groups in the area, will climax with street demonstrations. Incidents of brutality against Negroes and Mexicans are increasing under Parker's command, the CORE groups charge.

In Syracuse, New York, protesting police brutality has been the local CORE's main project in recent months. Several members of the group have been arrested for protest actions at police headquarters.

In Denver, Colorado, CORE recently reaffirmed its support of a city-wide campaign by civil rights groups against police brutality. In Ann Arbor, Michigan, CORE recently aired the issue in testimony before the City Council.

DON'T BE FOOLED

BY THE ANTI-SEMITIC AND RACIST ULTRA-RIGHT

THE CIVILIAN COMPLAINT REVIEW BOARD SERVES ALL NEW YORKERS

THE POLICEMEN'S BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION, supported by the ULTRA-RIGHT, claims that the Civilian Complaint Review Board was set up to intimidate the police and prevents them from protecting YOU against criminals.

THE DAILY FORWARD, a Yiddish daily newspaper, published an article by one of their writers, Mr. A. Menes, attacking the Review Board as a gimmick set up under pressure of "liberals" who want to "appease" the Negro and Puerto Rican population of our city.

THE TRUTH

THE REVIEW BOARD'S OCTOBER REPORT on its work since July, when it was established, showed that more complaints were received against police misconduct from middle-class, middle-income areas than from residents of Harlem and Bedford Stuyvesant.

Of the first 307 complaints filed, 140 came from whites; 113 from Negroes; 38 from Spanish speaking; 16 whose background was unindentified.

THE ANTI-SEMITIC, RACIST BIRCH SOCIETY claims 500 members in the New York police force. And the record shows that repeated physical attacks upon Jews on the East Side and in other neighborhoods, vandal attacks upon Jewish institutions and swastika smears, have rarely been followed up by police, to find the criminals.

THE DANGER

The double-edged danger of the law proposed by the PBA, listed as QUESTION NO. 1 on the ballot is: 1) A VICTORY FOR THE ULTRA-RIGHT not only in New York, but all over the country; 2) A "SLEEPER CLAUSE", NOT PUBLICIZED but included in the PBA law (Question No. 1 on the ballot), would place our city under the rule of policemen.

THE BAR ASSOCIATION says the PBA's proposal "could reduce the present powers of the Mayor, the City Council, the Commissioner of Investigation and the Commission on Human Rights to investigate civilian complaints against the police in areas ranging from lax enforcement of traffic regulations to bribery, graft and corruption."

THE REVIEW BOARD was set up to eliminate misconduct by policemen whose brutal actions add to the already unbearable conditions of life in the Negro and Puerto Rican ghettos. Thanks to the Negro freedom movement, we now have a Civilian Complaint Review Board that takes up the grievances of all New Yorkers who feel they have been mistreated by a policeman.

INTRODUCTION

The City Affairs Committee of the New York Young Democratic Club has completed an extensive study of the system of handling complaints by civilians alleging police brutality. The committee discussed this problem with numerous interested groups and individuals including Councilman Theodore Weiss, the sponsor of a bill to set up an independent civilian complaint review board, Leonard E. Reisman, the newly designated chairman of the present police review board, representatives of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Congress of Racial Equality and the National Association for the Protection of Puerto Rican Civil Rights, and the American Civil Liberties Union. Persistent efforts to arrange a meeting with representatives of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association were not successful. Deputy Mayor Cavanaugh informed the committee that he was not authorized at this time to discuss the operations of his temporary review committee. Members of the committee have attended panel discussions on this problem and have studied various articles in magazines and law reviews, the annual reports of the Police Advisory Board of the City of Philadelphia and the recent report of the New York County Lawyers Association.

I. Present Internal Police Department System for Handling Complaints by Civilians

A. Background of present system

Prior to 1953 there was no well-defined system for the handling of complaints by citizens alleging police brutality. These charges were usually investigated and determined by the precinct captain to which the accused police officer was assigned.

In 1953 the Police Department established certain rules to govern the handling of complaints. These rules proved ineffectual and in 1955 the Police Department set up a board called the "Civilian Complaint Review Board." The word "civilian" in the title of the board refers to the person who makes the complaint and not to the status of the person reviewing it. To avoid confusion with the proposed independent civilian complaint review board the present board will be referred to in this report as the "present internal review board". Under the present internal review board the complaint is received, investigated and reviewed by members of the Police Department. The rules and regulations governing the present method are contained in the Rules and Procedures of the New York City Police Department, Chapter 21.

B. Receipt and Processing of Complaint

Under the present system the internal review board has jurisdiction to hear complaints concerning "abuse of authority" or "unnecessary use of force" by a police officer. Other charges of police misconduct, e.g., graft, corruption, are handled through the office of the Chief Inspector of the Police Department. The Chief Inspector apparently also handles cases of abusive language and other "minor" offenses which may be an area of great concern to civilians. The procedures discussed in this report are unrelated to possible civil damage actions by the alleged victim of police brutality against a police officer. Also unrelated and not discussed are criminal charges, i.e. grand jury indictment, against a policeman.

A complaint of "abuse of authority" or "unnecessary use of force" may be made by the aggrieved person himself, his relatives or representatives or any interested person or organization. The complaint may be initiated in person, by telephone or by letter and may be made at any local precinct, Police Headquarters at 240 Centre Street, Manhattan, or the offices of the present internal board which are physically located in the Police Department headquarters. After the complaint is received by a member of the Police Department copies of the complaint are sent to the investigating officer, to the offices of the present internal board, to the Chief Inspector, to the Bureau of Disciplinary Records and to the commanding officer of the Police Department in the reported borough.

C. Investigation of Complaint

The complaint is investigated by the Commanding Officer of the next higher command from that of the accused police officer. This ordinarily means that the Commanding Officer of a Division Command investigates a complaint against a member of a precinct under his jurisdiction. The investigating officer is required to file a report on his investigation within ten days, subject to extensions of time. The report of the investigating officer must contain findings of fact concerning the incident, recommendations and a summary of further action contemplated by the investigating officer. This report is then sent to the Civilian Complaint Supervisor, a post now occupied by Inspector Arthur Savatt.

D. Hearing

There is no requirement under the present system that a hearing be held. It is within the complete discretion of the investigating officer or the chairman of the internal review board as to whether a hearing should be held. A citizen's complaint can therefore be dismissed without a hearing.

In the event a hearing is held the investigating officer and the Civilian Complaint Supervisor conduct the hearing. The accused police officer and the complainant and their respective attorneys may be present. Both the complainant and the accused officer and any witnesses to the incident are questioned by the investigating officer and the Civilian Complaint Supervisor. Witnesses, however, cannot be compelled to attend the hearing since the present board does not have subpoena power. There is no absolute right of cross-examination by the complainant, the accused officer or their lawyers. The investigating officer, however, is authorized to adopt suggested questions, "if pertinent", from the participants or their lawyers.

There is no requirement that this hearing be public and, in practice only the complainant, the accused officer, their attorneys and witnesses to the incident are permitted to attend.

E. Initial Decisions by Investigating Officer and Civilian Complaint Supervisor

If a hearing is held the investigating officer will send a transcript of the hearing and his final report together with his recommendations to the members of the review board. If the investigating officer believes that departmental charges should be preferred against the police officer he will send a specification of these charges with his report to the board.

Under ¶ 11.3 of Chapter 21 of the Rules and Procedures of the Police Department the Civilian Complaint Supervisor is required to review the report of the investigating officer, make his own recommendations concerning the incident and send both reports to the chairman of the review board. Despite this apparent requirement a recent Police Department handout on this procedure states that the Civilian Complaint Supervisor "spot checks" cases before submitting his recommendations. This would appear to be in contravention of ¶ 11.3 which states that the Civilian Complaint Supervisor "shall review" the report of the investigating officer in every case.

F. Review of Initial Decisions by Present Review Board

The present three man internal review board is composed of Leonard E. Reisman, Deputy Commissioner in charge of legal matters and newly appointed chairman of the review board, Edward J. McCabe, a Deputy Commissioner in the Police Department of Licenses and Joseph Martin, newly appointed Deputy Commissioner for Community Relations. The review board operates under the general jurisdiction of the Department of Community Relations headed by Mr. Martin. All three of these persons are Deputy Commissioners in the Police Department.

The rule and procedures of the present internal review board have no specific requirements as to the nature of the "review" by the board of the reports of the investigating officer and the Civilian Complaint Supervisor. In practice, each of the three board members individually reviews the written reports of the investigating officer and the Civilian Complaint Supervisor. Ordinarily, the three-man board does not meet as a group to discuss and evaluate the reports in order to arrive at their decision.

If the report of the investigating officer and the Civilian Complaint Supervisor have recommended a dismissal of the complaint against the police officer, and the board affirms that decision, the matter is closed. If the investigating officer and the Civilian Complaint Supervisor recommend the filing of charges against the police officer and the board affirms these decisions (or if the board overrules the investigating officer and the Civilian Complaint Supervisor and decides that charges should be preferred) the board orders the investigating officer to prefer charges.

The Police Department claims that the present review board acts as a "grand jury in deciding whether an 'indictment' should be returned." This statement is inaccurate in several respects. The departmental trial is merely a disciplinary proceeding and is not a criminal prosecution. In addition, it should be pointed out that the present review board, unlike a grand jury, does not hear and observe testimony of witnesses nor can it cross-examine these witnesses. The present board relies solely on the written material transmitted to them. Furthermore, one of the underlying purposes of the grand jury is that it is composed of private citizens.

G. Departmental Trial and Decision of the Police Commissioner

At this point the responsibilities of the review board are concluded. If the board determines that the complaint is not justified it is "filed". There is no requirement that the complainant be notified of this decision. If departmental charges are preferred against the police officer the case is prosecuted by the Police Department trial counsel before the Deputy Police Commissioner in charge of trials. In the public departmental trial the accused police officer is entitled to counsel and has the right to cross-examine witnesses.

The decision of the trial examiner, and any recommendations he may make, are then forwarded to the Police Commissioner. After receipt of the Trial

Examiner's report the Police Commissioner renders his final decision on the guilt or innocence of the accused police officer and imposes punishment. The punishment may involve a reprimand, loss of pay, demotion, dismissal from the Department or other disciplinary action. As stated above, no criminal penalties can be imposed.

H. Statistics of Internal Board Operations

The present internal review board does not publish reports concerning their activities. The board, however, has recently released the following figures concerning the ten year history of the board:

YEAR	TOTAL	CHARGES PREFERRED	CONVICTIONS	ACQUITTALS	CHARGES PENDING
1955	196	21	12	9	-
1956	166	22	9	11	(1 resigned) (1 retired)
1957	142	6	4	2	-
1958	126	9	7	2	-
1959	106	8	6	1	(1 resigned)
1960	186	20	8	8	(2 resigned) (2 retired)
1961	198	12	10	2	-
1962	209	13	9	4	-
1963	171*	9	5	3	1
1964	147	5	1	-	4

* Includes 1 Pending investigation.
 Includes 87 Pending investigations.

This ten year comparison indicates that an average of 165 complaints have been filed annually; 12 of these cases result in departmental charges preferred against the police officer; 7 of these trials result in convictions.

II. Evaluation of the Present Internal Review System

A. Completely Internal System

Under the present procedure, complaints by citizens are handled completely within the Police Department. Under the regulations the complainant must initiate the complaint at the Police Department, either at the local precinct or headquarters. It is probable that many civilians are reluctant to file complaints at the local station house (See, "I Don't Think The Cop Is My Friend," The New York Times Magazine, March 29, 1964, at page 30). The civilian can also file his complaint at Police Headquarters. A recent report by the Committee on Civil Rights of the New York County Lawyers Association, commenting on the filing of complaints at Police Headquarters stated (page 14):

> "Even the most courageous of civilians can be awed by the hurdles involved in getting inside this establishment. A uniformed officer demands proper identification and a statement of one's business from every visitor entering the building before it is even possible to reach the office door."

It is quite natural for police officers not to encourage the filing of complaints by citizens. For example, it has been reported by the Washington, D.C. chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union that police officers there have warned prospective complainants that they may be subject to prosecution for filing a "false report" if the complaint against the police officer is dismissed. The Washington ACLU reports an "abnormally high" percentage of subsequent prosecutions of such complainants for filing "false reports." (Washington Post, 4/1/65, p. A1; Report of the Subcommittee of Due Process Committee).

It is, of course, difficult to measure the degree of unreported citizen complaints. On July 27, 1964 the New York Times published the results of a survey taken among minority groups in New York City to determine the prevalence of police brutality. The survey reported that 12% of those interviewed thought that there was a "lot" of police brutality.

Thus, based on a population of these minority groups of 1,000,000, there were about 120,000 persons in New York in 1964 who thought there was a "lot" of police brutality. If only 1% of these persons felt that they had been the direct victims of police brutality there should have been 1,200 citizen complaints filed with Police Department. Yet, in 1964 there were only 147 such complaints filed with the present internal board.

The reluctance of citizens to file complaints against a police officer with his fellow officers is substantiated by the experience of the present independent review board in Philadelphia. In a letter dated March 11, 1964 from the board to the Mayor of Philadelphia it is stated that "the basis for the existence of the Board is the belief that many potential complaints might not be filed in a strictly internal or departmental review system."

The Philadelphia Board also stated in this report that it has been effective as a "safety valve" in Philadelphia:

> "The Board has indeed acted as a safety valve in the community. No longer is it necessary for a citizen, who has felt himself wronged by police actions, to harbor resentment within himself, or to spread his hostile feelings throughout the community."

Although the Police Department claims that publicity has been given to the present system, there is some evidence to the contrary. For example, during the operations of this Young Democratic Club inquiry one of the members of the Committee went to the offices of the Civilian Complaint Review Board at Police Headquarters. He stated that the purpose of his visit was to obtain a copy of the rules and regulations governing the review board. He was told, however, that these rules and regulations were for "internal department use only." If that kind of cooperation is given at the highest level of the police unit reviewing these complaints it is not hard to imagine the kind of cooperation and information that is meted out at the precinct level.

The investigation of the present internal review procedures by the New York County Lawyers Association led them to the same conclusion about the lack of public information:

> "Because of the inadequacy of public information on the processing of individual complaints, it is impossible to assess the effectiveness or lack of effectiveness of present procedures in investigating and acting upon particular complaints. It is possible, however, to see that the over-all procedure for handling civilian complaints has failed to earn full public confidence, and that the result is damaging to the effectiveness of the Police Department and its work."

But the heart of the problem with respect to the present internal review system — all racial minority group leaders agree — is the intimidation of the complainant. This factor, say those leaders whom the Committee has interviewed, prevents many prospective complainants from reporting an incident of excessive force or abuse of authority. The intimidation is caused by the apprehension of what the police investigative staff and other policemen might do to the complainant. Will a uniformed police officer make repeated visits to the complainant's home at late hours? Will there be questions asked of employers of both complainants and witnesses? Will there be calls to the complainant's home suggesting that he "think the matter over?" Will there be unusual surveilance of the complainant's home with the notion of pressing charges for some suspected wrongdoing?

These occurrences, say the civil rights leaders, are the major problem presented by a completely internal review system. The fear that these harassing tactics might take place, however infrequently, is the intimidation that has kept potential complainants away from the precinct house.

The fear of harassment, the complete absence of any element of independent civilian representation, the lack of any public hearings prior to the rare departmental trial, the absence of any requirement for the holding of even a non-public hearing, the lack of a right to cross-examine witnesses (in the event the Police Department representatives decide in their discretion to hold a non-public hearing), are some of the factors which prevent the fair and impartial handling of civilian complaints. A civilian complaint system dominated from beginning to end by members of the Police Department, regardless of the efforts of these persons to be unbiased while receiving, processing, investigating and deciding complaints against members of the department, has serious shortcomings which must be corrected.

B. Lack of Public Confidence in the Present System

One of the stated functions of the present internal review boards is "to assure the public of quick and effective action against policemen who abuse their authority or use unnecessary force." This function was paraphrased at a forum held on March 16, 1965 at the Association of the Bar of the City of

New York, where it was agreed by all participants, including Leonard E. Reisman, present chairman of the internal review board, and Vincent Broderick, newly appointed Police Commissioner, that a procedure for handling civilian complaints must not only "be fair" but also "seem fair."

It is clear that the present internal review board has not fulfilled the function of "seeming" fair to a sizeable percentage of the people of New York City. The leaders of the Negro and Puerto Rican communities, representing more than 1,750,000 residents, are unanimous in their demands for an independent civilian review board. The opposition of this large group of citizens cannot be summarily dismissed as merely a "small and vocal segment of the community" as claimed by the Police Department.

It should also be emphasized that it is not the Negro and Puerto Rican communities alone which advocate changes in the present board. Councilman Weiss has listed some of the groups which have supported the principle of civilian review:

> Committee on Civil Rights of The New York County Lawyers Association; City Club of New York; New York Civil Liberties Union; American Jewish Council; the Catholic Interracial Council; Episcopal Diocese of New York; the Citizens Union; and the Executive Committee of the New York County Democratic Organization.

The recent unanimous action of the subcommittee of the City Affairs Committee of the City Council recommending some sort of civilian group to check on the activities of the present internal board appears to support the apparent lack of public confidence in the operations of the present internal review board. It is, therefore, our opinion that improvements in the present method of handling civilian complaints should be made in order to improve public confidence in the right of every citizen to obtain fair and impartial consideration of a complaint against a police officer.

C. Maintenance of an Effective Police Department

It is essential that any procedure of reviewing civilian complaints does not decrease the effectiveness of the Police Department. When the present internal board was established to correct existing abuses it was predicted that the internal board would have the effect of decreasing the efficiency of the Police Department and lowering the morale of the individual policeman. These predictions have not proved accurate during the ten years of the internal board's existence.

In order to evaluate the effect of a civilian review board, the Young Democratic Club sought answers to several specific questions with regard to the experience of Philadelphia, a city which has had a completely independent civilian review board since 1958. We wrote to the Police Advisory Board (the independent civilian board), the Philadelphia Chief of Police and the Fraternal Order of Police of Philadelphia asking the following questions:

> 1. Has there been a lowering of the morale of policemen as a result of the establishment of the civilian review board?
> 2. Has there been a lessening of the discipline and authority exercised by the Police Commissioner over policemen as a result of the establishment and operation of the civilian review board?
> 3. Has there been any reluctance on the part of policemen to engage in bodily contact in furtherance of their duties as a result of the establishment and operation of the civilian review board?

The Police Advisory Board's response to question 1 (concurred in by the Police Chief and former Mayor Dilworth in articles and statements) was that there was no "evidence whatsoever of a lowering of morale." The President of the Fraternal Order of Police stated, however, that "it has done more to hurt the morale of the policemen than anything else in my 25 years as a policeman."

Both the Board and the F.O.P. agreed, however, that there had not been any lessening in the discipline and authority exercised by the Police Commissioner over members of the department. It would appear that agreement on this question is highly significant in view of the fact that the independent civilian review board has been severely criticized for its possible adverse effect on department discipline.

Both the Board and the F.O.P. also agreed on question "3". Each cited the summer riots in Philadelphia as evidence of an increased amount of caution used by policemen. They disagreed, however, on the effects of this more cautious police attitude. The F.O.P. claimed that the Board has "handcuffed the policemen" and "is one of the reasons for the crime increase in Philadelphia." On the other hand the Acting Chairman of the civilian advisory board was pleased with the increased caution of policemen:

> "I view this as a healthy sign, and I do not think that there is any evidence that it has decreased the effectiveness of the police. On the contrary, I think that it has enhanced the respect which the public holds for policemen."

The New York Young Democratic Club believes that the privilege of public employment is subject to reasonable terms established by proper authorities. We believe that the excessive criticism and opposition of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association to any form of civilian participation in the review process to be unjustified, particularly in view of the Philadelphia experience.

It might also be noted that a bill pending before the New York State legislature may have some effect on this problem. This bill, commonly known as the "no sock" bill, would amend the New York State Code of Criminal Procedure to prohibit the use of force by a private citizen in resisting an illegal arrest by a policeman. Under the present law a citizen has a right to resist an arrest by a police officer if he believes that arrest to be unlawful. Under the proposed change the citizen cannot resist the policeman even if the arrest is unlawful. Regardless of the merits of this proposal, which is strongly supported by all police and law enforcement agencies, it clearly eliminates one avenue of instinctive civilian protest to the unlawful actions of a policeman and further demonstrates the need for fair and impartial grievance machinery for the processing of civilian complaints.

It is also important to examine the problem of civilian grievances against public officials from a larger viewpoint. Cities and nations all over the world are becoming more aware of the importance of protecting the rights of their citizens in their constant contact with governmental representatives. In Sweden, for example, there exists a system known as the "Ombudsman" which is charged with the responsibility of investigating civilian grievances against the actions of government officials. This system has worked successfully for over 150 years in Sweden and has been introduced in other countries.

It is interesting to note that England, a country with which we share many common traditions particularly with regard to our legal system, has been increasingly concerned with this problem. A report was recently issued on this problem in England entitled "The Citizen and the Administration- The Redress of Grievances." In a preface to this report Lord Shawcross stated the problem of citizen grievances very clearly:

> ".... with the existence of a great bureaucracy there are inevitably occasions, not insignificant in number, when through error or indifference, injustice is done-or appears to be done. The man of substance can deal with these situations. He is near to the establishment; he enjoys the status or posseses the influence which will ensure him the ear of those in authority. He can afford to pursue such legal remedies as may be available. He knows his way around. But too often the little man, the ordinary humble citizen,is incapable of asserting himself.... The little man has become too used to being pushed around: it rarely occurs to him that there is any appeal from what "they" have decided. And as this Report shows, too often in fact there is not." (emphasis added)

III. Pending Proposals for Civilian Participation in the Police Review Process

A. The Weiss Bill- Independent Civilian Complaint Review Board

1. Background of the Weiss Bill

In April, 1964 Councilman Theodore Weiss submitted a bill to the City Council to establish an independent Civilian Review Board modeled generally on the Philadelphia Advisory Board. Thereafter, a subcommittee of the City Affairs Committee of the City Council was appointed to study and report on this proposal. The subcommittee held public hearings and visited several cities, including Philadelphia and Rochester, to study the effectiveness of their procedures.

On May 18, 1965 the subcommittee unanimously recommended that some changes should be made in the present internal review board. The majority report of the subcommittee, headed by Councilman Corso, however, rejected the Weiss Bill as unnecessary. Councilman Richard Aldrich, a member of the subcommittee, proposed his own bill on May 13, 1965 that would set up as a permanent institution the present special review board headed by Deputy Mayor Cavanaugh. This group, composed of five attorneys from the office of the Corporation Counsel, is studying selected cases reviewed by the present internal review board. Both the Corso proposal and the Aldrich bill will be discussed later in this report.

2. Powers of Independent Review Board

Under the Weiss Bill the independent civilian complaint review board would have jurisdiction of "charges of alleged excessive or unnecessary physical force against private citizens" by police officers. The Board would be authorized to consult with and advise the mayor and Police Commissioner concerning "ways and means of developing effective city policy against police brutality" and to seek sufficient publicity to increase citizen awareness of the Board's work. The powers of the Board are limited to those of "an investigative and advisory nature."

3. Composition of the Review Board

The proposed review board would be composed of nine unpaid members appointed by the Mayor each serving a term of three years. Active law enforcement officers are not permitted to serve as members. The board will also have on its staff a full time salaried Executive Director who will administer the operations of the board. In Philadelphia it has been reported that the Executive Director of the civilian review board amicably settles three-fourths of the citizen complaints before a hearing is held.

4. Receipt and Processing of Complaint

The complaint, under the Weiss Bill, must be made to the office of the independent civilian board within ninety days of the date of the incident. Apparently complaints cannot be made at any office of the Police Department as under the present procedure.

5. Investigation of Complaint

After the complaint is received by the Board, the executive director of the Board forwards the complaint to the Police Commissioner who is responsible for the investigation. This is similar to the present internal review procedure.

Unlike the present proceeding, however, the Board would have the power and right to undertake "whatever additional investigation it may deem proper or necessary to resolve or clarify the issues involved." Thus, if the Board were not satisfied by the scope of the investigation performed by Police Department personnel, it could supplement that investigation through an investigation by members of its own staff. It would appear, however, that in order to make this investigative provision effective adequate funds would have to be provided for a staff of investigators. The lack of an adequate staff is one of the major operating problems faced by the Philadelphia Police Advisory Board.

6. Hearing

After the Police Commissioner forwards the report of the investigating officer to the Board, the Board reviews this report to determine whether the complaint "justifies a public hearing." If there is not sufficient justification the Board notifies both the complainant and the police officer involved. Both the complainant and the police officer, if either of them so desires, have an absolute right to a public hearing despite a determination by the Board that a public hearing is not justified.

At the hearing both parties may be represented by counsel and have the right to cross-examine without first submitting questions to the Board members or members holding the hearing. The hearing is conducted by a member or members of the Board rather than by the investigating police officer. The board may compel the attendance of witnesses by the issuance of subpoenas.

7. Decision of Independent Civilian Board

The member or members of the Board conducting the hearings then submit findings of fact to the full nine man Board (or three-member panels thereof). The full board (or a three member panel thereof) reviews the findings of fact of the single hearing member or members before submitting recommendations to the mayor and the police commissioner. A majority vote of the Board or panel thereof is necessary to approve these recommendations.

The powers and duties of the independent board include the power to issue findings or recommendations to the Mayor and Police Commissioner that the complaint was unjustified or finding that the complaint was justified and advising loss of pay, departmental reprimands, suspensions with loss of pay or letter of apology written by the department for the officer involved to the aggrieved complainant.

8. Recommendations Sent to Police Commissioner

Since the function of the Board is purely advisory the police commissioner would be under no obligation to accept the Board's advice as to guilt or innocence and punishment in a particular case. Imposition of disciplinary penalties would be within the sole discretion of the Police Commissioner.

B. Corso Report

Councilman Dominick Corso, joined by Councilmen Boyers and Fastenberg of the Subcommittee of the City Affairs Committee of the City Council, has rejected the Weiss Bill. The Corso Report is devoted primarily to a review and analysis of the extent of reported police brutality in New York City. It devotes substantial space to the riots which occurred last summer in New York and other northeastern cities. It points out that riots occurred in Philadelphia and Rochester despite the existence of independent civilian complaint review boards. The Corso Report unfortunately does not devote an adequate amount of discussion to the main problem — the analysis of the existing and proposed review systems.

The Corso Report nevertheless recommends certain changes in the present procedures of the internal review board. These recommended changes are:

(a) Every complainant will be given a numbered receipt of his complaint when he lodges it at the local precinct house or police headquarters;

(b) Complaints will not be accepted over the telephone and police officers must advise persons that they must appear at a police precinct or headquarters in person to file a complaint;

(c) If an investigative hearing is held, attorneys for the complainant and the police officer will have the right of cross-examination;

(d) Stenographic minutes of the investigative hearings will be taken (a present requirement) and made available to the parties at the sole expense of each party.

(e) Legislation "should be" introduced permitting subpoenas to be issued by both parties to compel the attendance of witnesses at a hearing;

The Corso report also urges the establishment of a Permanent Committee on Police Affairs of the City Council, composed of City Councilmen. This group will "spot check" the activities of the present internal police review board. The Permanent Committee is authorized to spot check to determine whether complaints are being recorded, processed and "equitably disposed of." The Corso Report recommends that data processing equipment should be used in the process of deciding on what cases to "spot check."

The Permanent Committee on Police Affairs will also be authorized to "review Police Department administrative findings in respect to allegations of brutality" upon the request of a complainant or a police officer or or on its own initiative. The committee is authorized to conduct investigations and hearings. The Corso report raises more questions than it answers regarding the operation of this review "committee." Apparently the committee will act more or less as an appellate court from the machinery of the present internal board. Councilman Weiss has written a strong dissenting report from the Corso Report and continues to advocate the passage of his bill.

C. Aldrich Bill

Under the proposal of Councilman Richard Aldrich the existing temporary special review committee, headed by Deputy Mayor Edward Cavanaugh, would be made a permanent body. This special review committee, set up recently to analyze selected decisions of the internal police review board, is presently composed of five attorneys from the office of the Corporation Counsel of New York City. The Aldrich bill apparently would not make any changes in the present internal police review system. It would, however, enlarge the jurisdiction of this review board beyond police brutality to include other cases of police impropriety.

IV. Proposals of the New York Young Democratic Club

A. Minimum Standards of Review Procedure

The New York Young Democratic Club strongly believes that the present method of handling civilian complaints of police brutality must be revised. It further believes that the following minimum standards are essential to the protection of the rights of citizens and policemen in any civilian review board:

1. Adequate publicity should be undertaken so that citizens are made aware of their right to file complaints against members of the Police Department for alleged police brutality.

2. Additional locations, physically unconnected in any way with the Police Department, must be established for the receipt of complaints. For example, each Borough President's office could be authorized to accept written complaints.

3. Regardless of the location of the filing of the complaint, the citizen should be given a copy of his written complaint containing an identifying number which can be referred to in future inquiries.

4. The complainant must be kept informed as to the status and disposition of his complaint.

5. All hearings in which the complainant appears should be held in a hearing room not physically located in a Police Department facility.

6. All hearings with regard to a complaint must be open to the public.

7. Right to counsel must be guaranteed at all stages of any proceeding.

8. Full rights of cross-examination must be afforded in any hearing.

9. Power to subpoena witnesses must be granted to all parties.

10. There must be some element of effective civilian participation in any review system.

11. This civilian participation should not be by any publicly elected official.

12. To insure a completely impartial investigation and remove any possibility of intimidation, the civilian review board should have its own investigative staff to conduct all investigations. As an absolute minimum, any civilian board must have the power to request that the Police Commissioner reinvestigate complaints or conduct additional investigations of its own, if necessary. All investigations, by whomever made, must be free of intimidations of complainants and witnesses.

13. The powers of any civilian board must be limited to those of an advisory and investigative nature so that the authority and discipline of the Police Commissioner over members of the Department is not diluted.

14. The civilian board should not have power to recommend specific punishment of a police officer in a given case. Their report and recommendations to the Police Commissioner should be limited to that of finding the complaint justified or unjustified and characterizing a justified complaint as to the degree of seriousness, such as "grave", "serious" or "minor". If the Police Commissioner concurs in the judgment of the civilian board he will then be responsible for the imposition of the proper penalty.

15. The final report and decision of any civiliar complaint review board should be placed on file accessible to the public.

16. The civilian review board should be authorized to analyze complaints received to determine what policies can be established to reduce the possibility of the recurrence of such incidents.

17. Adequate funds must be appropriated to carry out the functions of any review board.

B. Establishment of Independent Civilian Complaint Review Board

Based on the minimum standards listed above, the New York Young Democratic Club recommends the establishment of an independent Civilian Review Board similar to that now operating in the City of Philadelphia and as proposed by the Weiss Bill. We believe that the safeguards contained in the Weiss Bill, with minor modifications, will protect the rights of both the citizen and the policeman. It will restore the confidence of the public that they can obtain a fair and impartial hearing of any complaint made against a police officer. The activities of the independent Board, together with other efforts by the Police Department and city administration, will also help to increase mutual understanding between the individual policeman and the citizen. An increase in public confidence in the activities of this independent Board should result in the further benefit of increased respect by the public of the Police Department generally.

The office of the Executive Director of the independent Board will, of course, as in Philadelphia, be an important factor in the successful operation of any independent Board. The New York Young Democratic Club therefore recommends that adequate funds be made available for this position so that a person of outstanding qualifications can be secured. Most of the civilian complaints made to the independent Civilian Board in the City of Philadelphia in its six years of operations have been settled informally by the Executive Director. For this reason, it is essential that an Executive Director of outstanding qualifications, who commands the respect of both the Police Department and the public, be selected.

We reject the proposal in the Corso report for a review board composed of City Councilmen. Any elected public official is, by the very nature of his activities, subjected to constant political pressures from various groups. Any civilian board must be permitted to function as an independent group free from political pressures that can be brought to bear on an elected public official. In addition, as pointed out by Councilman Aldrich, City Councilmen serve only on a part time basis. They already bear a heavy burden of time consuming committee assignments which would not permit adequate attention to be given to a civilian complaint system.

Furthermore, the New York Young Democratic Club believes that the presence of civilian participation in any review procedure must be exerted at an early point in the complaint system. The appellate type proposal recommended by the Corso report is therefore objectionable on this ground. As previously indicated the receipt and investigation of the complaint present serious problems of potential intimidation.

The Aldrich proposal, while making the constructive suggestion of expanding the jurisdiction of any board to include other acts of police impropriety less than complaints of "brutality", does not meet the minimum standards established by the New York Young Democratic Club. Due to the complete lack of information as to the functioning of the Cavanaugh committee it is difficult to determine whether this proposal should be explored. It is clear, however, that the Aldrich proposal fails to set up any effective machinery to alleviate the problem of complete domination by the Police Department of the review procedure.

C. "Beyond" the Review Board

It is obvious that the establishment of a civilian review board, whatever the form, will not solve all the problems of the relationship of citizens and policemen in New York City. Hopefully such a board will reduce the possibility of the build-up of tensions, particularly among minority groups, who now feel they cannot obtain a fair hearing of a complaint they may have against a police officer. It would be unrealistic to assume, however, that even the existence of a civilian review board will eliminate the smoldering resentment of many members of minority groups or eliminate the possibility of sporadic flare-ups such as was experienced in several northeastern cities in the summer of 1964. It is the opinion of the New York Young Democratic Club, however, that the establishment of an independent civilian review board will serve the purpose of channeling some of these frustrations and resentments into fair and impartial grievance machinery. In addition to the establishment of the independent civilian review board, New York City must expand its efforts in the fields of housing, education and employment to insure that the roots of the problem of citizen unrest can be alleviated. Only by conquering these problems can New York City meet the permanent needs of all its citizens.

In addition, the New York Young Democratic Club believes that the past efforts of the city administration and the police department to improve the efficiency of the members of the department should be continued. In that connection, the activities of the Police Academy should be expanded in order to insure adequate training for all police officers. This training must not cease on graduation from the police academy and entrance on the force. This continual training becomes particularly important in view of the rapid changes in the law with regard to confessions, searches and seizures, the admissability of illegally seized evidence and the right to counsel. In view of several recently publicized involuntary confessions e.g. the Whitmore "confession", it is clear that substantial improvements must be made in this field.

FOUNDED 1915

The enclosed Report and Recommendations on the establishment of an independent Civilian Complaint Review Board to review complaints by citizens of alleged police brutality was prepared by our City Affairs Committee and represents the position of The New York Young Democratic Club.

We strongly support the establishment of an independent Civilian Complaint Review Board as proposed by Councilman Theodore Weiss in a bill introduced by him in the City Council and presently pending before the Council. We believe that such an independent review board will result in improved handling of citizen complaints and will restore the confidence of the public in the complaint procedure without impairing the effectiveness of the Police Department.

The New York Young Democratic Club believes that the present system of handling complaints has serious flaws which must be corrected. The present system in which a complaint by a citizen against a police officer is received, processed, investigated and decided by police officers does not lend itself to a disinterested treatment of these complaints. The potentialities for abuse in this internal system are substantial, particularly at the lower levels of receipt, processing, and investigation of the complaint.

This report should not be construed in any way as a personal criticism of the members of the present internal review board, the Police Department itself or any members of the Department. The Committee studying this problem has not assumed that there is an extensive amount of police "brutality" existing in New York City. All persons, however, including the Police Department itself, concede that in a police force of over 26,000 men there is bound to be some police "brutality". This report, therefore, deals solely with an analysis of the present and proposed systems for the handling of citizen complaints.

Finally, The New York Young Democratic Club urges that full and complete public discussion and consideration be given to all the proposals for changing the present system.

Very truly yours,

John S. Samuels

REMARKS BY A. PHILIP RANDOLPH CONFERENCE ON POLICE BRUTALITY

Wednesday, May 26, 1965

Brotherhood-In-Action Building

The opposition expressed by people in the police department to a Civilian Review Board, underscores the need for such a Board. For this opposition can only arise out of a miseducation of the police, who have not fully understood that they must be subordinate to civilian authority, that they are servants of the people. They are not -- and, in a democracy, never can be -- an autonomous, self-enclosed and self-regulating agency. If rank-and-file policemen are mis-educated on this fundamental point, dangerous conseque nces will ensue. There can be neither justice nor safety in the street.

The assertion of community control over police authority is thus essential in clarifying the function of police power. And this, I am convinced, will lead in the long run to an improvement of police morale. More specifically, a Review Board would not be one-sided in its benefits. It would clear the names of policemen unjustly accused of brutality or discriminatory behavior. Under the current rules, for example, if a policefan is accused of brutality and suspended frcm the force, he receives a permanent mark on his record. Once suspended he is permanently guilty and does not have the right to a hearing or appeal. The notation remains on his record even if he is cleared later on.

Therefore, I am in favor of an Independent Civilian Review Board for two reasons:

(1) It is a protection for citizens who may be mistreated.

(2) It would provide an impartial hearing for policemen accused of brutality.

i i

To be effective, a Civilian Review Board would, I believe, have to be based on several principles:

First, it must be representative of the total New York community, including minority groups. Without such representation the Board could not hope to win the respect and confidence of those who most depply feel the need for redress of improper police behavior.

Secondly, such a Board must be impartial. It cannot be controlled by any organized pressure group. And, I want to emphasize, it must be independent of the city administration. This means, among other things, that its members should serve without pay.

Thirdly, in order to guarantee the representative and democratic character of the Board, its members sould be appointed by the Mayor in consultation with broad segments of the community -- ethnic, religious, labor, business, civic, and civil rights groups. As a corollalry to this principle, the Board should be required to issue full, frequent, and regular reports, not only to the Mayor and the police department,. but to the general public. Only in this way can the performance of the Board be kept open to public scrutiny and evaluation.

i i i

In suggesting these guiding principles, I am not so naive as to contend that the establishdment of a Civilian Review Board will immediately eliminate all the tensions that have existed betweend the police and the community. For we do not argue that these tensions result merely from the absence of a review board. They are rooted in fundamental social and economic problems which beset our city and other cities around the country. They are rooted in the mushrooming of slums and ghettos, unemployment and the deterioration of urban life. So long as these problems persit, it is doubtful that any civilian review board will be totally successful, as the experience of several other cities indicates.

But we do not seem to making very great progress toward solvi ng these fundamental social and economic problems. In the absence of such progress, we cannot ask outraged and injured citizens to wait indefinitely, to forego the minimal protections of the rights that a review board might afford. In short, my friends, we are not proposing alternate solutions. We propose a step toward greater justice.

REPLY OF JAMES FARMER, NATIONAL DIRECTOR OF CORE TO STATEMENT OF POLICE COMMISSIONER BRODERICK

"COMMISIONER BRODERICK'S UNFORTUNATE REPLY TO MY REQUEST THIS MORNING THAT POLICE PICKETS NOT CARRY THEIR SERVICE REVOLVER, REFLECTS VIRTUALLY NO UNDERSTANDING OF THE QUESTIONS RAISED IN MY TELEGRAM. WE REQUESTED ONLY THAT THOSE OFF-DUTY POLICEMEN PARTICIPATING IN A DEMONSTRATION BE DISARMED DURING THAT DEMONSTRATION. IT IS OBVIOUS THAT THERE WILL BE SUFFICIENTLY ARMED POLICEMEN ON DUTY TO PROTECT DEMONSTRATORS-WITHOUT THE ADDITIONAL PROVOCATION OF ARMED PICKETS. IT IS, IN MY JUDGEMENT, BEYOND REASON TO ALLOW PICKETING DEMONSTRATORS TO CARRY GUNS. CORE'S BASICALLY BELIEES THAT ARMED OFF-DUTY POLICEMEN ARE A TOTAL MISTAKE. BUT THIS MORNING'S REQUEST INCLUDED NO SUCH DEMAND. THE PRINCIPLE OF PEACEFUL DEMONSTRATIONS ARE BEINGS FLAGRANTLY VIOLATED BY THE POLICEMEN THEMSELVES. ~~[illegible]~~ ~~[illegible]~~ believe that CORE pickets according to CORE rules for non-violent action and will not provoke or participate in any violence."

Commissioner Brodericks plan in no way deals effectively or sensitively with the problems of police behavior and public trust. The Broderik plan is no more than a beefed-up internal police review and misses the essential element of outside adjudication of police behavior by civilians. No military organization in this nation is allowed to function without civilian review -- Why then in the NY Police Force, a paramilitary organization of 27,000 armed men exempt from this procedure so essential to a democratic society.

Dear Mr. Shirley:

Your letter of June 28th, addressed to Mr. Farmer, has been referred to me for reply.

We were, of course, glad to hear that you are sympathetic to the work that CORE and other civil rights organizations are doing, but we do regret that you feel that the civiliam review board is not necessary. Even if racial prejudice and discrimination were eliminated tomorrow, we feel that there would still be a need for an independent civilan police review board. The New York City Police Force consists of 28,000 armed men who last year killed 95 people. This "army" of men is the only army in our country that is not ultimately disciplined by civiliam control.

An independent civilian review board would not only be protection for citizens who may be mistreated, it would also provide an impartial hearing for policemen accused of brutality.

At the same time that we are working to get a review board, we are also working to eliminate the conditions that cause the high crime rate; unemployment, slum housing, segregated housing, and all forms of racial discrimination.

Sincerely yours,

Nancy Mutarelli

Mr Farmer-

In that I am a "Negro" (so called) you might know I am entirely sympathetic with our Civil Rights crusade. My sympathy has been implemented by contributions to a number of organizations so oriented and also on a personal basis as regards my conduct in the four states in which I've lived.

You of course know of the tremendous ground swells generated by the action of our top organizations - Core among them. Continue with steady hand and tactics calculated to maintain public opinion in support of our fight.

Now for a look at the other side of the picture.

That element among us which cares nothing about civil rights - human dignity et cetera, discredits all of us who do care.

Your public exhortation directed to them would mean nothing - so lets not hamper our police with review boards and cries of brutality.

Continuous police saturation of indicated troublesome neighborhoods cannot be maintained so I suggest we take the handcuffs off our police.

Once the word was given - within thirty days you would see a decided change. Insist on our courts backing them in their fight against the vicious element among us who disgrace us.

This from one of thirty-seven years residence in New York and father of six children - no delinquents.

Yours - for continued progress,

Sir:

I protest your action in the shooting of Nelson Erby, alias Nelson Brown, by Patrolman Sheldon Leibowitz.

I am a parent living in Harlem with my wife and four children. I take a certain amount of pride in being a New Yorker and a Harlemite. I have worked, and will continue to work, for all in my community in spite of the fact that your actions of late are hindering rather than helping us.

I am not at all surprised that there are so few Negro CORE members and supporters. You know that you do not really speak for all of us.

I have worked with the police in our community for some years and know that very often your charges are unfair, unjust and, far worse, harmful.

Very sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Eliezer:

I am in receipt of your letter of July 19th and am grateful for the kind things you said, but most concerned with your analysis of the Brooklyn killing. I am aware that most of the information that you have has been necessarily garnered from the newspaper acoounts, many of which were totally inaccurate.

In point of fact, the original police reports about the shooting were totally erroneous, suggesting that there had been a robbery taking place and that there was an exchange of gunfire; neither is in fact the case. I enclose a copy of a UPI dispatch released at 12:34 P.M., about an hour and a half after the killing, which contains a completely erroneous set of facts.

To date we have taken the depositions of eleven witnesses to the killing and all eleven, to a man, disagree with the current police version in two important respects: 1) all eleven say that the gun was in Patrolman Liebowitz' hand when it discharged accidentally, shooting him in the left forearm, and 2) there was no knife involved at all. The only questions I have raised publicly have been the suggestion of the possibility of police culpability and a demand for a thorough investigation. I am satisfied that an investigation, both by the Brooklyn District Attorney and by our own staff is going forward, and that a proper adjudication will be achieved.

I would like to comment on one further point that you mentioned, and that is in regard to Nelson Erby's police record and "despicable character". I do not think that these factors are relevant, if indeed it proves true that Erby was shot and killed unnecessarily by an inexperienced young patrolman. I totally agree with your feeling that facts in all of these cases should be placed in an objective perspective. This is the theoretical basis for an objective, independent civilian police review board.

I hope that this letter will mitigate your fears in some degree, and would appreciate a further response.

Sincerely yours,

James Farmer

Mr. J. Farmer, CORE

Dear Mr. Farmer:

Reference is made to the shooting of a Negro man by a policeman in Brooklyn a few days ago and your reaction to it.

As a supporter and contributor to your movement may I say that I have been highly gratified by your intellectual capabilities and moral courage since this is the only kind of Negro leadership that will crown the movement with success. It therefore came as a rude jolt, and one that gave me second thoughts about the caliber of this leadership, to read that you considered the incident one of police brutality. If this kind of attitude is dictated to you by the necessity of winning automatic Negro support you surely cannot be oblivious to the certainty of losing even more influential, politically, economically, and socially white adherents so that the final balance may indeed be negative.

For Mr. Farmer, the central fact of the case, the one that overshadows, overpowers, effectively cancels all others is simply the sequence of events. The shooting of the policeman by his own gun, PRECEEDED that of the despicable character. (It is my contention that anyone who shoots at a policeman is such) What made America great, and incidentally Mr. M.L. King too, was the realization that disputes should not besettled by guns because the winner can get shot too as indeed happened in Brooklyn. The poor policeman's life was saved only by initially poor aim and subsequently a brave bystander. Come now Mr. Farmer, have you the moral courage to admit (may be just to yourself) what would you have done in the policeman's place?

If you don't see things that way then I am sure that I will be just one of many persons with whom your movement could no longer communicate, to its own detriment, until it places facts in their proper perspective.

Yours truly,
Jack Eliezer

Mr. James Farmer, Director
C.O.R.E.
38 Park Row
New York 38, N.Y.

Dear Mr. Farmer:

Thank you for your kind and patient letter answering my analysis of the recent Brooklyn killing. It has largely restoredmy confidence in your political integrity .

I readily condede the press being my only source of information but, let me add, aware of its limitations I carefully scanned many papers whose versions conformed but for inconsequential details. I thought it unlikely that all of them were incorrect as it now appears. The UPI dispatch that you sent me was new to me and it shook my confidence in its hasty, unverified way of reporting. Perhaps the UPI ought to engrave above its door: "Uninformed is better than misinformed" lest it forget it.

The fundamental question in my mind is still whether the policeman was shot at. If the 11 depositions are trustworthy(and I hope they include that of the intervening one) then I am ready to apologize, reinforced by your assurance that you did not automatically call "Police brutality" but merely demanded an investigation into an eventual police culpability.

I beg to disagree that I raised a point about the man's record. Past wrong is no indication of future guilt and I am always ready to assume that a man has reformed or will do so given a chance. But I still maintain that anyone shooting at a policeman, the last vestige of law and order, is less than despicable and should be shot at in turn. It is my conviction that if the citizenry did not shoot at its law officers the latter will reciprocate the courtesy as indeed gunless London Bobbies do.

If the hapless policeman shot himself and in his anger (understandable but not excusable) shot Erby in turn then there is little doubt to dispute his culpability. But I am still not convinced that a Review Board, considering the negative impact it will have on police morale, is justifiable now in view of the rising crime rate and the indisputable fact that 57 policemen were killed last year. I have seen your impeccable deportment in your encounters with the police and I am sure you do not fear their brutality anymore that they fear yours. The point is, if all citizens were like you (and we know they are not) the police might as well close all departments but the traffick one.

Yours as before,

Jack Eliezer

What Do We Want from Our Policemen?

The public wants to be protected not only from criminal actions but from abuses by police. Where should our courts draw the line? Fourth article in a continuing series on Crime in America. By Samuel Grafton

The fight against crime has often been called a war. It is not a war in the ordinary sense of the word. In a war, few holds are barred. You move in with shot and shell and blast the enemy where you find him. But in our country a man has certain inalienable rights, even though he may also have a switchblade in his pocket. The police are not allowed to move against him as one moves against a wartime enemy. They may not even stop him and search him unless they are arresting him. They may not look through his house without a warrant describing in advance what they expect to find in it. They may not listen in on his telephone and repeat what he says to a jury. If they do arrest him, they have to see to it he has a lawyer, not only at his trial but even (according to recent court decisions) as soon as serious questioning sets in at the station house.

There is room here for pride. Though crime is growing five times as fast as our population, we have not yet panicked into giving up our privacy or our liberties. Almost incredibly, in this period of pressure, we have actually been extending them. The Supreme Court requirement that a suspected person is entitled to the help of a lawyer, even during questioning at the time of his first arrest, wipes out the lengthy private interrogation in the back room of the station house that was one of the oldest of police privileges, as cherished as the blue suit and the chrome badge. About all a policeman can do nowadays with a confession obtained from a prisoner without the presence of a lawyer is to light his pipe with it; it is highly unlikely it would survive a trip through the courts.

Another favored police practice has long been to plant a stool pigeon with a suspect, either in a cell or at large, to see what information can be picked up from him under conditions of confidence and intimacy. This, too, seems dead. In a case decided by the Supreme Court last year, a merchant seaman, under indictment on a charge of smuggling dope, sat one day in a parked car with a friend, also under indictment. Unknown to the seaman, his friend was helping the government; there was a hidden microphone in the car. But the court ruled that the seaman's statements, though incriminating, could not be used in evidence, since they had been obtained in the absence of a lawyer. The seaman's conviction was reversed.

Police have in the past been known to stop people on the street carrying suspicious-looking packages, especially late at night, in order to do a bit of investigating. They do less of it these days; the courts take a poor view of the practice, as an invasion of privacy.

Such concern for individual rights is admirable. But we do have a crime problem. A good many Americans are afraid to go out on the streets at night. The police have the frustrated feeling that they are fighting crime with their hands tied, at a time when the public and its newspapers are screaming at them to go in and clean up the criminals. Says Virgil W. Peterson, an ex-FBI agent who is now operating director of the Chicago Crime Commission: "The constant rise in crime goes right along with the increasing rights given to persons accused of crime. Logic tells you that you can't continue to pick up criminals and turn them loose on technicalities without getting an increase in crime."

At a round-table conference on the problem, arranged by McCALL'S with staff officers of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, in Washington, even harsher words were heard. "I can't think of anything in the history of legal procedure in the last ten years that has benefited law enforcement" was the verdict of Emmet L. Jones, supervisor of the International Association's police training unit. "When a case is thrown out on a technicality," he added, "it makes a terrific impression on a young officer who knows the man's guilty and knows somebody suffered from his crime." The idea that the public needs protection against the police was bitterly resented. "Police are human and make errors," conceded Col. David D. Pomerleau, a police management consultant for the association. "But repressive techniques are not widely used. The police as symbols of authority are merely being used as the whipping boys for social change."

Similar complaints from police officials were heard all over the country. Many were particularly vexed by court decisions that prevent interrogation of a prisoner without the presence of his lawyer. "This deprives the investigator of the help of the one who knows most about the crime —the one who did it," said Captain R. F. Rock, spokesman for the Los Angeles Police Department.

But this kind of "help," if it means anything, can only mean a confession made without legal advice. On this point, both pro-civil-liberties lawyers and the courts have strong feelings. In throwing out one confession last year, because it had been made in the absence of the prisoner's lawyer, the Supreme Court remarked: "We have learned the lesson of history, ancient and modern, that a system of criminal law enforcement which comes to depend on the 'confession' will, in the long run, be less reliable and more subject to abuses than a system which depends on extrinsic evidence independently secured through skillful investigation." What, the court wondered, is the police objection to having the defense lawyer present? Is it fear that the defendant will be told of his rights? "No system of criminal justice can, or should, survive," said the court, "if it comes to depend for its continued effectiveness on the citizens' abdication through unawareness of their constitutional rights."

A prominent Chicago lawyer commented: "The police try to make confessions take the place of thorough investigation. If these practices of questioning people in secret were wiped out, the police would be forced to develop better means of investigation. Trying to get confessions by threats or other means is a shortcut. Maybe it does get more convictions, but it still is unfair. You'd get even more convictions if you didn't let people have lawyers in court, either, as well as during interrogations. But you'd send a lot of innocent people to jail, too. I don't see how anyone can have confidence in the police if they are allowed to question people in private. In effect, they're conducting a secret trial."

Both sides have "favorite" cases, readily cited. Among policemen, there is frequent mention of the Killough case, in which a defendant who had confessed three times to strangling his wife and had led police to her buried body, walked out of United States District Court in Washington, D.C., a free man, because he had been questioned by the police in private and at length (27 hours) instead of being taken promptly before a U. S. Commissioner, as federal rules require. After being taken before a commissioner, he twice repeated his confession, but without seeing a lawyer and without knowing that the first confession was invalid. The court threw out all three confessions.

Against this could be set the Whitmore case, in New York City. George Whitmore, Jr., a 20-year-old drifter, confessed to the murder of two girls—after being questioned in private by the police. He obligingly signed his name to six pages of intimate detail about the crime. No policeman could ask for more "help" than that. Only it turned out later, when another man was charged with the same murders, that Whitmore apparently knew nothing about the affair, and a scandalized New York began an investigation into the so-called confession.

Big-city reporters have the feeling that prisoners of no fixed addresses and low orders of mentality sometimes confess whole strings of crimes, in order to please the police and induce them to go easy on them. "The suspects know it makes the cops happy to get so many crimes off the books at once," says a Midwestern newspaperman. So long as police can question suspects in private, the public can never know whether such charges are justified—another of the evils of the system, since it creates doubt about police rectitude.

The police insist that the public outcry against crime tempts them to try shortcuts but that the same public, through its courts, sharply limits what policemen can do. There is little effort on the part of either side to understand the other. A typical recent comment (by an assistant United States attorney) on Supreme Court decisions limiting the right of the police to question suspects in private was: "Like it or not, the fact is recent opinions have set the scene for the perfect crime."

Only occasionally is there the touch of understanding. "I agree that avoiding unconstitutional shortcuts is harder work for the police," says John de J. Pemberton, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union, which has played a major role in fighting for the new rulings. "But there are reasons for not taking the shortcuts. The whole question turns on how important you consider your constitutional guarantees to be." Pemberton points out that there is nothing new in the prohibition of unreasonable search and seizure; that is in the Fourth Amendment, which goes back to 1791 and was based on memories of how British soldiers used to take whatever they found in a colonial's house. It was always law; all that is new is that the courts have begun to enforce it. The same is true of the right to "the assistance of counsel," which is in the Sixth Amendment and always has been.

But why have the courts begun to enforce these venerable clauses as vigorously as they have; and why have they gone so far in interpreting them? In looking for the answer to those questions, one comes to realize it is not only a few court decisions that have changed the conditions under which the policeman works. Actually, his entire world has been profoundly altered in recent years.

A comparatively short time ago, the policeman spent his days sauntering through a world that was pleasantly familiar to him, where people understood him and approved of what he was doing. The criminals he sought to arrest were marginal people, second-story men and occasional pickpockets, outcasts of one kind or another. When he laid his hand on the shoulder of one of these, all society approved and backed him up.

Today, in most of our big cities and many small ones, the policeman walks through neighborhoods filled with people who have moved in since the war and to whom he is a stranger, regarded with indifference or even with hostility. Many belong to the minority groups; they are Negroes, Puerto Ricans, Mexican-Americans, or rural whites—who have crowded into such Midwest cities as Chicago and Saint Louis. The policeman finds himself dealing not with the occasional outcast, but with entire segments of the population—school dropouts, drug addicts, the unemployed, the discontented, and the bitter. "It has become a wholly new situation for the police," says Dean Joseph H. Lohman, of the University of California's School of Criminology. "It is one part of society against another. The police are really being called on to handle social problems that they can't handle."

In this setting, questions of civil liberties cease to be academic. They become life-and-death matters, about which disorders, fights, and riots can revolve. For generations, the policeman used to stop the nighttime pedestrian with the suspicious package; now, suddenly, the same gesture has racial overtones. A police lieutenant in New York fires at and kills a Negro boy. He pleads self-defense; but riots break out in Harlem, in Rochester, Philadelphia, and other cities.

For many years, in many cities, at least some policemen have habitually used rough tactics, with implied public consent. The beating up of "bad actors" on the way to the station and the use of the third degree in the station have been far from uncommon. The police have traditionally been allowed to take actions which are constitutionally unacceptable, but which, in a simpler social climate, may have been tolerable—such as dragging a drunk off the street, tossing him into a cell to dry out, then releasing him again, without the formality of arrest or hearing. The use of search warrants before entering a house was, until recently, a rarity in many jurisdictions: A Minneapolis newspaper, conducting an investigation in 1961, could find records of only two search warrants issued in that city since 1929—though the Bill of Rights has always required them! A New York police officer, when examined during a trial a few years ago, testified that he had "never" used a search warrant and had, in fact, never seen one, though he had raided many buildings.

Even police manners were different in the old, easy days that are now ended. "Police are apt to be discourteous, sarcastic, and rude when arresting persons of lower social-economic classes, but courteous and lenient when dealing with persons of high social status," say Professor Edwin H. Sutherland and Professor Donald R. Cressey in their standard work, Principles of Criminology (Lippincott, sixth edition, 1960). The authors go on to remark that "courtesy was first emphasized in police departments" when the police began to come into contact with automobile drivers—"who were not ordinarily of the lower classes"!

These older police methods have collided with history. The police now have to deal with conflict among cultural groups. Three of these are defined by Dean Lohman as "the Negro against the white," the "poor against the comfortable," and "youth against maturity." In the slums or on the edges of them, these conflicts form the sullen atmosphere in which the policeman today must work, among people who are sometimes ready to throw bricks at him from tenement roofs, to attack him and take his prisoners away from him, and to claim violations of their rights. It is partly because of these pressures that the courts have been attempting to draw the line where police authority and civilian rights meet.

Another effort to draw such a line takes the form of the creation of "civilian police review boards." These are boards of laymen, empowered to hear complaints from the public about mistreatment by the police, to hold hearings, and to order punishment of policemen found to have gone too far. Such boards now function in Philadelphia and in Rochester, N.Y., and there are strong local campaigns to set up the system in Washington, New York, and other cities.

The idea behind such boards is to ease tensions between police and the public by giving public protests against specific police misconduct an arena in which to be heard. (Some police officials consider that a certain amount of steam has been taken out of the pressure for civilian review boards by the fact that riots occurred last summer in Negro areas of Philadelphia and Rochester, which have civilian review boards, as well as in New York, which does not.) Basically, the thought is that the public itself has to judge police conduct—that it is not enough to have policemen judging other policemen. The argument is that this is something like civilian control over the military.

Nothing makes policemen angrier than the civilian-review-board idea. They view such proposals as attacks on their "professionalism." Doctors and lawyers, they point out, establish and enforce their own standards of conduct in their own fields; why not policemen? Why should "outsiders," they ask, come in and judge them?

But by raising this question of "professionalism," police spokesmen open a large area for controversy. What, precisely, does professionalism consist of—at a time when we hear policemen angrily demand the right to search people's possessions without specific warrants or to question them for long periods in the back rooms of station houses without informing them of their rights or letting them see their lawyers? "It is frightening," says John de J. Pemberton, "to hear the police say they can't solve crimes unless they can take a prisoner into a closed room and interrogate him for an indefinite period." A Washington civil-liberties worker adds: "Most of us have a healthy respect for the police. But I think it could be demonstrated that they are capable of carrying out the work of detection at a much higher efficiency than they themselves claim." The police hurt their own claim to professionalism by demanding the right to be relatively rough, rather than concentrating on improving their technical skill.

"In most cities, professional police work is barely tolerated or nonexistent," says Dean Lohman. "The value of what training officers do get is dubious. Mostly it consists of sleep-inducing lectures on ordinances or the mechanics of routine procedures. Then each recruit is assigned to a veteran to be 'broken in.' Customarily, the old-timer says, 'Forget what they told you in school, boy. I'll show you how it works.' " Often, Dean Lohman adds, a young policeman is advised to get himself an influential politician as a protector.

There are glimmers of an emerging professionalism, on a higher level, at least in some cities. San Francisco police won praise last year for showing special skill in handling civil-rights demonstrations, with many arrests but practically no injuries. The city's police receive in-service training in civil rights and racial problems; perhaps not all officers are influenced, but many are. Milwaukee's police have developed an extraordinarily cooperative atmosphere with the people of the city. "People aren't afraid to come in and give us information about crimes," says a local police official. "They don't regard themselves as finks but as citizens doing their duty." More work by police along these lines could give substance to claims of professionalism.

Meanwhile, there is much to be done, along such lines as these:

1. An effort should be made to cool off the current debate and reduce its heat. Nothing is gained when police officers picture judges as men who have lost their minds or who are in league with criminals. This is nonsense, just as it is nonsense to picture the majority of policemen as anything but sensible, worried men, trying to do a hard job. Both the bench and the police are caught up in social change. Most of the new restrictions will remain—to send police into the poorer districts of our cities today without curbs on their actions would be to ask for social disorder on a gigantic scale. Perhaps when the debate cools off, it will then become possible to see whether any of the recent rulings go too far. Perhaps, as both sides begin to respect each other's motives (and problems), finer lines can be drawn between what is allowable and what is not.

2. The police job at the moment is probably too big to be handled. The man on the beat finds himself trying to deal with problems that are really economic (unemployment and its results) or medical (dope addiction); he feels swamped. Any program that reduces the policeman's load of work, such as a sound medical plan for treating drug addicts, will make it less necessary for him to look for shortcuts in crime solving.

3. The average citizen should, at this juncture, ask himself a few questions, some of which may be embarrassing. Does he habitually report to the police any signs of lawbreaking he comes across? Does he pass along information about organized gambling, vice, bribery? If police powers against the citizens are to be restricted, then maximum cooperation between citizens and police will be necessary to get the job done.

4. We need better policemen, better paid and better trained. We need men who can use skill instead of muscle in solving crimes, science instead of pressure. This will cost money. Are we prepared to spend it? The new court decisions really call for a new approach to police work, the outlines of which we can only begin to see.

5. Most important would be for the police themselves to become our leading experts on civil liberties, prepared to tell any man what his rights are. The Los Angeles police have made efforts in this direction. And though there is deep antagonism in that city's police force to the new court rulings, a spokesman for the department concedes: "It takes more work, but we are getting the same proportion of convictions." Along this road lies the building of that true professionalism which, in the end, may persuade the public that it can safely leave significant areas of action to its policemen.

Dear Mr. Bassin:

I am concerned that you were troubled by my statements in regard to the shhoting of Nelson Erby. Let me make clear my position. Of course CORE does not believe that anyone, black or white, is exempt from the law, and of course we do believe that everyone, black or white, is entitled to fair and decent treatment from the officers of the law.

The initial reports on the Erby case were contradictory and, in fact, the present police position is at odds with these initial reports. It is also the case that the first depositions of the eye witnesses (at least eleven) disagree with the final police version in two important respects: 1) all say that the gun was in Patrolman Liebowitz' hand when it discharged accidentally, shooting him in the left forearm, and 2) there was no knife involved at all. The only questions that I raised publicly were the suggestion of the possibility of police culpability and the demand for a thorough investigation.

Mr. Farmer

I am sitting here in Naples reading the July 17 issue of the N.Y. Herald Tribune article about the slaying of a Negro offender by a New York Policeman. Can so much misunderstanding and misguided attitude toward the situation that I have put up with so long interrupted my vacation to let you know so —

I am not a bigot. I belong to several Negro movement groups but I have not what you attitude. Here a man was attacked and the law duly defended himself - you are calling for investigation.

I sense you are saying that

Negroes can ignore violate the laws & say I'm Negro - This is what you want, to get One for white & one for black? You are doing more harm than good for the Negro Freedom Movement. Not only white but Negroes also feel your militant attitude is not justified as all Negroes must be made a part of a community - here you wish to set them aside by saying that laws do not apply to them. Gray - wrong - white, black & yellow. Protest & Defendy law & order against disobeying & ignoring the structure of our society. Dear Mrs. Hammersten:

Thank you for your concerned letter of July 30th. CORE believes that all persons, black or white, rich or poor, are entitled to fair and decent treatment from the police. The fact that a person has a previous record (a fact, of course, which is usually unknown to the police officer at the time of the incident) should not affect his right to such decent treatment from the police.

I am aware that most of the information that you have on the killing has necessarily been garnered from the newspaper accounts, many of which were totally inaccurate. In point of fact, the original police reports about the shooting were totally erroneous, suggesting that there had been a robbery taking place and that there was an exchange of gunfire; neither is in fact the case. It is the case, however, that the first depositions of the eye witnesses disagree with the final police version in two important respects: 1) all say that the gun was in Patrolman Liebowitz' hand when it discharged accidentally, shooting him in the left forearm, and 2) there was no knife involved at all. The only questions that I raised publicly were the suggestion of the possibility of police culpability and the demand for a thorough investigation.

I agree with you that the areas of housing and schools require concentrated and immediate attention. But at the same time we must not fail to assure that public officials, including the police, treat all citizens fairly.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Farmer;

I suppose you have heard this before many times but "I Am Not Prejudiced" However, I felt I must write and comment on recent events in New York. In coffee gatherings etc. it has been brought up that CORE is hurting the Negro cause in their strong stands whenever a White policeman is in a scuffle with a Negro whether he is a hoodlum or not. In the most recent case, I am sure that had the races been reversed CORE would not have jumped in. The policeman had a right to defend himself no matter what race the attacker was. The Negro had a record, he was resisting arrest, he did Grab the officer's gun and Shoot the officer with it. It does nothing for your cause to picket and make rash statements when it is simply a case of self-defense! We do so little for our policemen, at least they should be able to defend themselves without being subjected to pickets etc. just because there was a negro involved.

My husband and I are for Civil Rights, we feel housing should be the first step. Better homes and better schools lead to people who are qualified to hold any job they seek. We feel that is often the real problem in many areas. Negroes who are not qualified for the jobs they seek through poor schools and so on. Please believe me, We are not the kind of people who say "We are not prejudice, we just think they should stay in their place." We are for you! and we do have friends who are welcome in our home at any time. I could give you names and addresses if you wish. Maybe this will help convince you, I am sincere! I was recently asked what would I do if my daughter came home with a Negro husband and a baby. My answer was only "she is my daughter no matter what and the baby would be my grandbaby" I think intermarriage is hard on the children but that is the way I would feel if one of my girls married a Negro. My girls are only 6-8-9 so it is awhile yet. The errors come from the five children running in and out. I did want you to know though that these unfair stands are probably doing more harm than good.

Very truly yours,
Frances L. Hammersten

The Suspect Confesses— But Who Believes Him?

By SIDNEY E. ZION

AT 7:30 A.M. on April 24, 1964, George Whitmore Jr., a slow-witted 19-year-old Negro drifter with no previous arrest record, was ushered into the back room of a Brooklyn police station. Within 22 hours, he had confessed to one attempted rape and three murders—that of Mrs. Minnie Edmonds, a Brooklyn charwoman, and the double killing of career girls Janice Wylie and Emily Hoffert, New York's most sensational crime in recent years.

Now, after two trials, a reversed conviction (in the attempted-rape case), a hung jury (in the Edmonds murder) and, most recently, a dismissed indictment (in the Wylie-Hoffert case), the Whitmore affair has become a cause célèbre.

Already it has seriously undermined the credibility of the New York Police Department and stained the reputations of the Manhattan and Brooklyn District Attorneys' offices. And for the future it promises to have an important impact on the revolution in criminal law now being forged by the Supreme Court of the United States.

That revolution reached its present high point last June--two months after Whitmore's arrest—when the Court issued a devastating, if limited, attack on the use of the confession, which has been the backbone of law enforcement in the United States.

SIDNEY E. ZION, formerly an Assistant U. S. Attorney for the State of New Jersey, is a staff reporter for The Times specializing in legal news.

The Justices were concerned with a Chicagoan named Danny Escobedo, who had been convicted in 1960 of murdering his brother-in-law. They reversed the conviction on the grounds that his confession, while voluntary, had been made after he had been denied permission to see his lawyer.

The ruling sent shock waves through the nation's prosecutors. From public platforms and in private interviews, they charged that the Court was "coddling the criminal element" and "swinging the pendulum too far" in favor of defendants' rights as against the public's safety. And then George Whitmore Jr. came along and rained on their parade.

In a long harangue directed at a reporter, one of the top assistants of Manhattan District Attorney Frank S. Hogan explained the connection between the Escobedo and Whitmore cases. "Let me give you the perfect example of the importance of confessions in law enforcement," he said, leaning across his desk. "This, more than anything else, will prove how unrealistic and naive the Court is."

His finger punched the air. "Whitmore! The Whitmore case. Do you know that we had every top detective in town working on the Wylie-Hoffert murders and they couldn't find a clue. Not a clue!

"I tell you, if that kid hadn't confessed, we never would have caught the killer!"

Yet, last January, six months after this passionate statement, District Attorney Hogan dropped the charges against Whitmore for the Wylie-Hoffert murders (though the indictment was not quashed until May). In an affidavit filed in State Supreme Court he declared that Whitmore's confession had, upon investigation, been discredited. Shortly thereafter, another man, a drug addict named Richard Robles, was indicted for the murders. It will be a long time before the public can accept a confession without thinking of George Whitmore Jr.

THE Whitmore case began shortly after midnight on April 23, 1964. Frank Isola, a young patrolman, was walking his beat in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn, a neighborhood with a long history of criminal activity, when he heard a scream from an alleyway. The beam of his flashlight picked out a Negro who appeared to be molesting a heavy-set Spanish woman. He fired a shot, and the man ran.

After a fruitless four-block chase, Isola returned to interview the victim, Mrs. Elba Borrero. Isola has sworn that she gave him a detailed description of her assailant at that time.

Six hours later, Isola saw George Whitmore Jr. standing in the doorway of a laundromat. Whitmore asked what the shooting earlier had been about.

"Why?" asked Isola. "What do you know about it?"

"I heard the shots and then I saw a guy running down the street. He almost ran into me and he told me the cops were after him and could I hide him," Whitmore said.

"© 1965 by The New York Times Company. Reprinted by permission."

Isola took Whitmore's name and walked away.

Twenty-four hours later, Patrolman Isola and Detective Richard Aidala found Whitmore in front of the same laundromat, where he was in the habit of meeting his brother before going to look for work. Whitmore was unemployed at the time. The officers asked him to accompany them to headquarters "to answer a few questions" as a possible witness in the case.

Whitmore agreed. "I figured I had to go if they asked me," he said. But when they got to the station house there were no questions. Instead, Whitmore was searched and placed behind a peep-hole door, and Mrs. Borrero was brought in to identify him, which she did.

Here the first note of mystery enters. Isola testified in court that by the time he first saw Whitmore, six hours after the attack, he had obtained from Mrs. Borrero a detailed description of the assailant: a 5-foot 9-inch, 165-pound Negro with pock-marked face, wearing a tan raincoat with the lapel button missing (Mrs. Borrero had pulled it off), black pants and a green hat.

Patrolman Isola said that when he talked to Whitmore that night he noticed that he had a pock-marked face, was wearing a tan raincoat with the lapel button missing and had on a green hat and black pants. Then why did he not arrest Whitmore at the time?

Because, he said, "I didn't think he was the man."

There are three possible explanations for this. First, Isola may have been put off because Whitmore is shorter (5 feet 5 inches) and thinner (140 pounds) than the description. But the officer did not offer this explanation, perhaps because the prosecution was not anxious to stress the height and weight discrepancies.

Second, Isola may not have had the description he said he had. This seems most probable, since his own notes and the police reports do not reflect the details he testified to.

Finally, the patrolman may have been just incredibly negligent. This is the most logical explanation if we assume his testimony was truthful.

Regardless of which explanation one chooses to accept—with the possible exception of the last one—the fact that the arrest was not made the first night buttresses the defense contention that Whitmore was the victim of a frame-up.

IN any event, soon after Whitmore was identified by Mrs. Borrero—and it should be noted here that a peep-hole identification is notoriously suspect—he confessed, and in November, 1964, he was convicted of attempted rape. The evidence against him was powerful: his confession and the button that Mrs. Borrero had ripped from the coat of her attacker.

In his summation, Brooklyn Assistant District Attorney Sidney A. Lichtman thrust the button and Whitmore's coat before the jury and said: "We have nailed George Whitmore on the button, so to speak."

What Mr. Lichtman did not say was that he had an F.B.I. laboratory report which in no way connected the button to the coat Whitmore was wearing when arrested. While the report did not negate the possibility that the button could have come from the coat, it said that the remaining buttons were "different in size, design and construction" from the one Mrs. Borrero had pulled off the coat of her assailant. Moreover, Whitmore had maintained throughout that on the night Mrs. Borrero was attacked he was wearing his brother's raincoat, and not the one that he wore on the morning of his arrest.

Last February, the conviction was reversed with the consent of Brooklyn District Attorney Aaron E. Koota. In granting a new trial, the judge ruled that the prosecution had suppressed the F.B.I. report and that the jury was prejudiced. One juror testified that ugly racial slurs were made during deliberations and many jurors told the court that they had read about Whitmore's confessions to the three murders.

THE story of those confessions begins back at the Brooklyn police station on April 24, 1964, the day of Whitmore's arrest. By 10:30 that morning, he had confessed to the Borrero rape attempt. By noon, he had admitted the April 14 knife-slaying of Mrs. Edmonds. Then, at dusk, all the top brass of the New York City Police Department began to file into the 73rd Precinct in Brooklyn. The word > had gone out: In this station house sat the perpetrator of one of the city's most sensational killings, the double murder of career-girls Janice Wylie and Emily Hoffert.

> That brutal crime had stunned a town thought to be shockproof. On the morning of Aug. 28, 1963, Janice Wylie, the 23-year-old daughter of advertising executive Max Wylie and niece of author Philip Wylie, and her schoolteacher-roommate, Emily Hoffert, were found slashed to death in their East 88th Street apartment in Manhattan. Parents whose daughters were living on their own in the city were abruptly reminded that no neighborhood, however fashionable, was immune to violence, and the case touched off an unusual, if understandable, amount of hysteria.

Now, after eight months in which police had questioned 1,000 people, George Whitmore Jr. had confessed to the murders. At 4 A.M. on April 25, Chief of Detectives (now Chief Inspector) Lawrence J. McKearney announced to the press: "We've got the right guy; no question about it."

But Philip Wylie, far off in Honolulu, said skeptically: "It sounds to me like a guy who got scared into a confession. . . ."

And at his arraignment, Whitmore recanted all three confessions and charged that they had resulted from police brutality.

"That's ridiculous!" said a deputy inspector. But it is a story that Whitmore has clung to ever since.

ACCORDING to Whitmore's account, as soon as Mrs. Borrero identified him as her attacker, Detective Aidala and Patrolman Isola took him into a room and beat him "until I told 'em anything to get 'em off my back." He claims that everything he said after the beating—which he says was not repeated—resulted from the beating and from the fear of further beatings.

Aidala and Isola have denied the brutality charge. No one will ever know the truth. Policemen never admit to beating a man. To do so would mean instant expulsion from the department. Yet on many occasions appeals courts have thrown out confessions on the ground that they resulted from physical brutality. (For reasons they alone know, trial judges seldom rule out confessions.)

Whether or not Whitmore was beaten, the detectives who questioned him fit the tradition of interrogators to a fare-thee-well. The cliché calls for a "heavy" and a "buddy." The heavy fills the suspect with fear and the buddy puts him at ease—indeed, "saves" him from the heavy.

Detective Aidala is a big, burly man with hamlike hands and a tendency to lose his temper, as he occasionally did on the witness stand. Detective Joseph DiPrima, who entered the case at 8 A.M. on April 24, or, according to Whitmore, immediately after he was beaten, is calm, soft-spoken, fatherly. It was DiPrima who developed a "rapport" with Whitmore—and took all three confessions.

"The boy told me," DiPrima said during a hearing into the voluntariness of Whitmore's confession to the Edmonds murder, "that I was nicer to him than his father ever was." Detective Aidala never made that claim.

FROM the point of view of district attorneys in general, the Whitmore case could not have come at a worse time—hard on the heels of the Escobedo decision. Although the Supreme Court was careful to limit its ruling to the particular circumstances—Escobedo's lawyer was actually at the police station, asking to see him, at the time of his confession — Justice Arthur J. Goldberg, writing for a five-man majority, went on to launch a blistering attack against confessions in general.

"A law-enforcement system that depends on the confession," he wrote, "is in the long run less reliable and more subject to abuses than a system which depends on extrinsic evidence independently secured through skillful investigation."

Does this mean that in the future the Court may rule that all suspects have a right to see a lawyer before the police can talk to them, whether they request counsel or not, and whether they can afford one or not? No one can be sure but the question itself is enough to turn district attorneys gray. If that should ever happen, most lawyers agree, confessions would disappear, because any lawyer worth his salt would advise his client to remain silent.

"No system worth preserving," answered Justice Goldberg, "should have to fear that if an accused is permitted to consult with a lawyer he will become aware of, and exercise, his constitutional rights."

But, contend the prosecutors, 75 to 80 per cent of all crimes are solved because of confessions. In murder cases the percentage is even higher, they claim, because there are seldom any witnesses to murder. One district attorney told a reporter recently that if the Escobedo case is extended to provide counsel for all suspects, "we may as well close up our homicide bureau." Others have echoed this view.

But prosecutors have cried wolf so often in the past few years that it is sometimes difficult to take them seriously. In 1961, for example, when the Supreme Court ruled that all evidence seized illegally would be inadmissible in state court trials, district attorneys, almost to a man, predicted they would have to shut down their narcotics and gambling bureaus. At last glance, they were still doing business—in some cases more than ever.

The fact is that district attorneys have no statistics to back up their claim that most murderers and rapists would walk out of the police stations, thumb to nose, if confessions were banned. And while it is true that a great many cases today are based on confessions, this does not prove that convictions could not be obtained without them.

Recently, a New York State Supreme Court justice, who was a prosecutor for many years before ascending the bench and is not known for being "soft" on defendants, told a reporter that cases in which the only evidence is a confession and a dead body are "extraordinarily rare." In most cases, he said (and New York Police Department statistics for 1964 bear him out), murder occurs after an altercation between people who know each other. Such cases can usually be put together through good police work even if there are no eyewitnesses.

Whatever the validity of the prosecutors' contentions, the fact is that they panicked over the implications of the Escobedo decision and launched a counterattack to swing public opinion against it. Then, in the midst of their campaign, at the height of the rhetoric, came the case of George Whitmore Jr.

"HOW could it happen to Frank?"

There were 300 prosecutors at the recent meeting of the National District Attorneys' Association in Houston. Most of them asked this question, in one form or another, whenever the Whitmore case was mentioned—and the Whitmore case was mentioned as often as the Escobedo case, which means every five minutes.

To other district attorneys, Frank Hogan is a little like Pope Paul to a parish priest. He runs the showcase office in the country, full of career people, many of whom have been there all their professional lives. They are very competent.

There are, to be sure, a few embarrassments, such as overzealous aides (one former assistant apparently considered it his mission to save the city from Lenny Bruce; another top aide, still with Hogan, has been the scourge of local gypsies), but embarrassments can happen in any good family. The office is clearly above politics and is generally considered one of the best. As far as many district attorneys are concerned, the proof of Hogan's superiority lies in the fact that he has been in office since 1942. No one ever runs against him.

But now one of Frank Hogan's assistants had taken a 61-page confession—61 pages, which is really unheard-of—full of incredible details, intricate drawings and amazing nuances, and this confession, in one of the biggest cases to hit New York in years, had turned out to be a phony.

"Here we are, with Goldberg teeing off on us on Escobedo, saying that confessions are untrustworthy — here we are trying our best to fight what we know in our hearts is a rear-guard action," said one district attorney, "and then Hogan — of all people, Hogan, the best of all of us—has to come up with a stink bomb like this.

"Do you know what it's like? It's like you're defending Stalingrad and they take away the snow."

"The prosecutor thrust the coat and button before the jury and said: 'We have nailed George Whitmore on the button, so to speak.'"

WELL then, how did it happen to Frank? How could one of his experienced assistants take a confession for more than two hours and not realize that it had been spoonfed?

One of Mr. Hogan's former assistants cast some light on the mystery recently:

"You have to understand the way the system works," he said. "As far as I know, it works the same way in every borough in New York City. There's an assistant district attorney on duty 24 hours a day in the Homicide Bureau. When a murder suspect is picked up by the police, the assistant is notified. But he isn't asked to come into the station house until the police are 'ready' for him.

"Translated, this means he doesn't enter the picture until the accused has given a statement to the detectives — or worse, as in Whitmore's case, until the detectives have given a statement to him.

"In short, it's 'see no evil, hear no evil.' Which not only puts the suspect at the mercy of the police but inevitably puts the district attorney there with him. And so, on occasion, you must expect a Whitmore case.

"Now I don't know why the assistant who took Whitmore's Q. and A. didn't smell a rat. [A Q. and A. is the stenographic record of a suspect's answers to questions posed by the district attorney.] But look at it his way. The Wylie-Hoffert case is the hottest thing in years. All the police brass are involved. Everybody is looking for glory. Their ship is in. Under these conditions not many assistant district attorneys are going to look for trouble. They themselves want to believe it's true.

"And then again it is possible that the detectives had the kid so primed that you just couldn't know there was something wrong.

"But the point is that this policy of not moving in early lends itself to innuendo and heartache."

IT should be noted that many district attorneys do not move in at all during the interrogation stages. The first time they see a defendant is in court at the arraignment. At the other extreme, the Philadelphia District Attorney has a representative at the police station as soon as possible after a murder suspect is apprehended.

"It works very well," an assistant from that office said recently. "With us there, the cops don't dare mess a guy up. As a result, we have very few defendants attack a confession on the grounds of duress."

But if Mr. Hogan must share the blame with the police for the Wylie-Hoffert debacle, he deserves praise for running down and finally exposing the flaws in Whitmore's confession. It is rare for a prosecutor to investigate his own case once a confession has been obtained.

BUT this fine gesture was not without imperfections. When Mr. Hogan, last January, discredited the confession and charged another man with the Wylie-Hoffert murders, he did not at the same time move to dismiss the indictment against Whitmore. Instead, Whitmore was merely "discharged on his own recognizance."

This technicality was carefully exploited in Whitmore's trial in Brooklyn earlier this month for the Edmonds murder, when the prosecutor pointed out to the jury that Whitmore could still be tried for the Wylie-Hoffert slayings. One result was to confuse the jurors. After 34 hours of deliberation, they reported themselves deadlocked and the judge ordered a mistrial.

Three days later, the Wylie-Hoffert indictment against Whitmore was dismissed with the consent of Mr. Hogan's office. Why had it not been dismissed before the Edmonds trial? The New York Civil Liberties Union charged that Mr. Hogan had delayed the dismissal in order to help his Brooklyn colleague win a conviction.

Mr. Hogan's office denied the charge and said Whitmore could have had the dismissal earlier if he had requested it. Whitmore's chief counsel, Stanley J. Reiben, in turn, implied that the Hogan office had told him it would oppose a dismissal motion before the Edmonds trial—and the publicity surrounding such opposition could only have damaged Whitmore's cause.

It is a mystery that will probably never be solved, but a minor one compared to some others: Did Whitmore commit any crime? Was he intentionally framed in the Wylie-Hoffert case?

Someday a jury will likely answer the first. Whitmore may be tried again for the Edmonds murder and will surely be retried on the Borrero charge. Whatever the verdict, doubts will remain in many minds. In fact, the police officers who took the Wylie-Hoffert confession still believe, almost to a man, that Whitmore is guilty, as do many people in the Brooklyn District Attorney's office.

In a way, this answers the second question. How can anyone say there was an intentional frame-up when those involved believe they have done no wrong? That, more than anything else in this strange case, is what puts a chill in the bones.

Re: People v. Liebowitz
(Erby)

Dear Sir:

From what now appears, it seems certain that C.O.R.E.'s venture into the case of the murder of Halsem Erby, by policeman Liebowitz, shall be rested as one more grand fiasco. You mentioned the financial difficulties of your chapter. The Natl. C.O.R.E. seems also to have the same problem. I judge that these matters occur because nothing fails like failure, as, likewise, nothing succeeds like success.

I have noted before the disastrous consequence to the local movement for civil rights, in the wake of the disaster of Brooklyn C.O.R.E.'s "Stall In" venture of 1964. The inept manner in which C.O.R.E. has proceeded in the Erby murder shall have a similar disastrous effect on the campaign to root out police oppression.

In my own case, I detached myself from C.O.R.E. shortly after the "Stall In" fiasco, not because of the mere failure, but because of the reasons for that failure. These are the vain dilletantishness of those who are key officers of C.O.R.E., and the belligerent ignorance of Attorneys that C.O.R.E. relies on, to slipshodly handle legal aspects of matters undertaken. I find C.O.R.E., as a membership group, to have all the defects of the ordinary "civic society"; an internal politicking organization of conceited "do-gooders", who thrive on their feelings of self-nobility for prating high sounding general principles, but who know little of hard work, skilled research and planning, and selfless subordination of pride to the task. It is an organization of ready chiefs and generals, and damn few privates or footmen. I have been glad I disassisted myself from C.O.R.E. as I saw it decide to change from being a "Cause movement" into a "political club", for by that leap it sold its heart to the principle of expediency and accomodationism. As for the lawyers, they run helter skelter to find "case on point" for causes that have never been favorably decided. I have yet to see one of the C.O.R.E. lawyer crew locally that shows awareness of need of sustained research. Unlike Hayden Covington, who brought so much civil rights reform during his tenure as counsel for the Jehovah's Witnesses, by putting his back for literally thousands of hours into the law books, until he mastered every fine point of every issue encountered, so that he was able to swing the Supreme Court in case after case into accepting the Egalitarian application of the law, the C.O.R.E. lawyers are a motley crew of soothsayers and illiterate know-it-alls, who primary aim is conserve hegenemy over C.O.R.E. activities by calculated politicking.

One thing I've observed about C.O.R.E. and its lawyers. Both agree that the lawyers must say what the law is. Now, you are in a Civil Rights organization. And saying this it is clear you don't even understand what you are saying.

What is meant by "civil rights"? What is a "right"? Obviously, the "civil" rights are those rights which exist in the civilian population. They are rights broader than those of mere the "citizen". But what is a "right"?

A "right" is a "thing" that a person "possesses"; it is something one is "entitled to"; that is, it is "some thing" that the "law of the land" specifies is his. But what is a "right". We speak of the "right of freedom of speech" or "right of petition", or "right to life", or "right to property". Obviously, then it is none of these specifics, such as "freedom of speech" or power to "petition" or "life" or a piece of "property" per se, nor even a person's actual possession of his life, property, or any other such thing, or his ability to speak or to petition. A "right" is something else. If we're going to talk about "rights" we ought to know what the hell we're talking about, or shut up about them.

Having noted what a "right" is not, let me then state what it it is. A "right" is a "demand ticket" upon the government whose laws acknowledge or declare the "right" in the possessor, to compel government officers to protect the possessor in his doing of certain things he is by his own powers able to do, against the interference of other persons. As Judge Holmes badly phrased it, "A legal right is nothing but a permission to exercise (one's) natural powers, and upon certain conditions to obtain protection restitution or compensation by the aid of public force," or again, a right exists whereby the government shall "constrain (one's neighbors".

It may seem to you that this exegesis is tortuous, but I have labored the point, because if this is a "civil rights" movement, it inherently must be an movement of people asserting demands the government "must do" this or that because citizens, or inhabitants of the realm show they are being interfered with by other persons in doing things they naturally can do. Thus, a "civil rights" movement inherently must be a "law claiming" body. When it relegates to the lawyers a suzerainty over knowledge of the law, then it abandon knowledge on the heart of its own program. It admits "we speak for things wherefor we are in ignorance".

You noted to me that C.O.R.E. is poor, and it is difficult to obtain lawyers to help. If this be so, and you cannot get legal assistance, and you admit legal knowledge is in the lawyers, then you people really ought to quit, and go out of business -- unless your just a political movement, and not really a "civil rights" movement. If you think your task is to politic for non-existent "rights", then to call yourselves a "civil rights" movement, to say you are demanding "your rights" is a farce.

I have said these things by way of attempting to show the fundamental reason of the ineptness of C.O.R.E. work. It boils down to this: its members are overwhelmingly a self-indulgent group, who delight in voicing high and noble ends, but who neglect acquiring the "know how" indispensable to effecting them. And this state of affairs will exist as long as you and other C.O.R.E. people stay on your "politics" kick, instead of going on a proper journey into learning the law, and developing means to enforce "rights" (already existent.)

As an organization C.O.R.E. abjectly avoids the due course of being a conscientious, hard-working group of students, learning what your "rights" are, and how to collect on them. As long as C.O.R.E. theorizes and believes that "only the lawyers" can know the niceties of law, and collect for people on their "rights", then you neighbor know what you are entitled to, nor shall have means to secure them. And forever, with the high cost of legal work by lawyers, you will never raise ample funds to "secure these rights."

What shows is that C.O.R.E. membership is not a dedicated "working" group, but a "tea party" of "civic socialites". Your meetings are not devoted to the standard of attainment of precise and comprehensive knowledge on particular subjects, but to rag-tag palaver of illiterate or half-baked opinions. Not one single business in this nation could survive under such a modus operandi. The members don't come to C.O.R.E. meetings in humility, and willingness to roll up their shirt sleeves, and muck through facts, to form hard theories, but to sponge off their notions, and arrive at a consensus of opinion dominated by the median mob ignorance. Most people come to these meetings ill-informed, prejudiced and attuned to solve problems according to more passions or emotions. Is it any wonder failure is on the way.

A good example is the kind of planning on the "Stall In". Here, an organization was going in to challenge a Billion-Dollar venture, with a tough general at the head who could command a battalion of high-powered lawyers, and the engines of the government. When O'Connor came down with his Injunction, for days thereafter, no one, lawyers of C.O.R.E. seem alike in the leadership, had the slightest inkling of checking into the validity of the Injunction. The C.O.R.E. lawyers preached to the C.O.R.E. to "run and hide" from the service of the Injunction. It was a cheesy and a sleazy kind of advice, for an alleged "Gandian Gideon's Army".

Equally, is the conduct in the Raby case. Was the entry of C.O.R.E. more impromptu? If so, what kind of an organization goes into battle against the Police Department of New York City, knowing its long practice of throwing the army of City Lawyers! to aid its own, without taking into account the need for counterbalancing action. Gallender could go about blithely threatening the Police "if they don't change their story", but he only had more hot air like that to beak up the threat. Then, in this game, the C.O.R.E. lawyers, apparently enamored of the new found prestige accorded them by Keeta in his office, go on to put full trust in the regular "cooperater" with the police. And now, they wait for Judge Barshay to overrule himself, and do things their way!

All of this shows abysmal nonsense. And it is the kind of thing that will continue as long as C.O.R.E. operates as it does operate.

If you are a "civil rights" organization, then you must point your labor to developing the means for the enforcement of "rights". As the history of the Reconstruction era shows, you can pass all the laws creating all the specific "rights", but unless there is legal power created to walk through the judicial machinery, you cannot secure the rights. I have little sympathy for those in "civil rights" organizations who want to be adulated for bungling effort. I sense that they hoodwink the people; by pretending to seek for them things that they fail to develop means for them to be obtained.

I have watched hundreds of clients come to lawyers, with matters of "contract" or ordinary "torts", and learn their specific rights, and spend hundred of hours going through the proceedings, a great expenses to secure these rights. But you, who hold yourself out to the Negro peoples as persons on an endeavor to secure them their rights, never take the arduous tasks of learning what are these specific rights, and doing the tasks of securing them. You shout rights to the peoples, and claim about specific wrongs done, but never master the facts of cases, nor develop the legal machinery wherewithal to secure the rights. On the fly you engage some slipshod lawyers for the titanic cases, whose work would be a farcical amount for an order piece of private litigation.

In the Erby case, I noticed the sloppy fact approach used. Erby was a "moron", you said. But, according to whom? the police, or a bystander who knew him casually. Certainly, not from his family, or those who knew him well. So ready were you people to run into newsprint, that you had little time to work to check and dig out hard facts. Right away, the need was for a "march" to the police building. For what? I guess it was so that Callendar's threat could be shored up. What were you doing? Hoping for a mob to intimidate? Was this in pursuance of "rights"?

Your theory, then, would have to be that rights are obtainable when mass power is demonstrated. It is much like your theory that if the right people are elected, then the Negro peoples will get their rights. This kind of theory is just bunkum. The determination of "rights" is in the courtroom, where almost no press reporting is meaningful. What is essential, to secure rights, is to develop engines to supply the legal power inside the courtroom in the myriad of cases. This requires two sets of conditions. (1) Clients (or suiters) who can dredge out the facts essential to demonstrate the applicability of the rights, and (2) advocates, whether the client himself, or some lawyer, to allege the fact claims, and legal propositions in a court proceeding for the vindication of the rights. Thus, eduction of the mass is essential in the specifics of rights, so they can know what facts they must show, and develop resources to amass the facts, and education of the mass and lawyers into understanding the typicals of cases.

I see no reason why, when one takes into account the prevalency of popular education activities of churches, schools, trade organizations, clubs and the rest, why it is impossible for genuine civil rights education to come about. Of course, it cannot come about as long as people are misled into thinking so-called "civil rights" groups are what they claim to be. It seems to me that in the long run a "civil rights" organization that imposes study demands on its members, that requires its members to discipline themselves, and to take on hard work, is more likely to succeed and grow than one that sells a cheap "gab fest" approach. If one buys cheap in this world, he has only a cheap thing to show for it, and nobody is really proud of what he thus haves.

I said to you, in ending our conversation, as you noted your "rent payment" problem, that "maybe there's a reason for it." This is what I meant. As long as C.O.R.E. goes off half-cocked and unprepared on "big" projects, in which it must fail, because it has a cheap idea of "politicking" its way to victory, then it will not only specifically fail, but lose public interest.

On the other hand, if its program is a hard one; its members are required to acquire specialized knowledge or know-how, it will not only not quixotically embark on ventures, but when it does venture it shall succeed.

The task of "securing civil rights" is one of developing machinery to accomplish litigation. C.O.R.E. does not do this. It is not, honestly, a "civil rights" organization. The chagrin of its members and un-enrolled supporters, at defeats is inevitable as long as it engages in its false posing. The N.A.A.C.P. Legal Defense Fund shall continue, as at present, the only prestigious "civil rights" organization, because it alone is doing that necessary, in part, to secure rights.

Having said the foregoing, it is apparent to me that C.O.R.E. has no business, at present, in posturing in the Kirby matter. As long as C.O.R.E. maintains its present assessment of its functions, it shall frivolously tryst with this case, and only to the end of burlesquing the death of this boy at the hands of a murderer. The tragedy in this is that the hopes of another were raised.

I do not subscribe to the thesis that because C.O.R.E. tried, it ought be commended. History shows to well that ineptness is just as strong a mobilizer of injustice progressive as outright corruption. As the old saying goes, one may protect himself from his enemies but not his friends. A review of recent movements in the civil rights field shows that this country is steadily abandoning the precepts of Magna Charta and the Bill of Rights. I might cite the "Stop and Frisk" and "No Knock" laws, the "Criminal Solicitation" law, the 48-hour police interrogation rule pushed in the District of Columbia by Katzenbach, and in Congress, as evidences of this growing police-state thing. The present "civil rights" movement is not so much for "rights" as for "welfare"; for "intergregation" and not individual independence. Perhaps this is why politics so much appeals to its leaders, since the goal of the organization is status in a hierarchy or establishment of things.

The sum of this is that I do hope C.O.R.E. discontinues its activities in the Kirby matter. I see no indication that it shall ever come anywhere near to grips with the nature of the problem. And I do hope it stays out of future grandstand plays in affairs of police murders. For by its ineptness it only heightens tensions without developing any means for relief.

Sincerely yours,

John M. Lawrence

Norman Frank, President
Policemen's Benevolent Association
New York, NY

Dear Mr. Frank,

I listened to the panel discussion you were on last Friday night with a great deal of sincere interest and concern. You are to be commended for doing a wonderful job of defending your department. Your fast judgements and evaluations and your clear, concise to-the-point- statements could be the envy of any lawyer. However, may I implore you to extend your sympathy and loyalty to include all men?

Although I agree with you that a civilian review board would not be a practical answer, I think you owe it to your conscience as well as to the bereaved members of the families of martyred victims to acknowledge the fact of the injustices which brought about their misfortunes. Then, I think you should go a step further and encourage those policemen who harbor bigotry to do some soul searching and cleanse themselves of this disease. Such action, taken voluntarily would go a long way in improving the present image of the police. Greater confidence would be gained if the effort was made to detect attitudes and delusions before they become malignant symptoms and lead to bizarre behaviour.

One of these symptoms is projection. During the slave period it was the white men who were raping the Negro women because the Negro women were giving birth to light-skinned babies; white women were certainly not giving birth to dark-skinned babies. Yet, the Negro was always being labeled as the rapist threat. Statistics show that today, white men rape white women and Negro men rape Negro women - rapists appear to be segregationists yet, the misconception still hangs on that the Negro man is a threat to the chastity of the white woman. As a matter of fact, most sane and sober Negro men are reluctant to speak to white women -in the south because they do not want to be lynched and in the north because they want to keep their jobs if they have any worth keeping.

It is unfortunate that the whole police force should be held responsible for the errant actions of a few, when there are thousands of wonderful and conscientious policemen keeping our city one of the safest. Many children become prejudiced against policemen because of one unfortunate experience. Once, while sketching a scene in Central Park, I noticed that a policeman walking through the park took it upon himself to chase some little Puerto Rican boys out of the park for no reason at all. Then, he beamed at me proudly as though he expected my approval and said, "I know how to keep them in their place". The children ran out of the park frightened, bewildered and embittered. Will they eve believe that a policeman can be their friend after that?

Bigotry is a danger to all of us because it nurtures adverse mental attitudes which can lead to delusions and errant actions. When a person becomes prejudiced against a group of people he takes the attitude that thye are less than human and therefore he feels justified in taking a punitive attitude. He feels that he is "on God's side" and becomes very bold because of his identification with omnipotence. I remember vividly an experience I had in 1943. A little blonde haired boy asked me why I looked so sad. I said I was sad because of all the people that Hitler was killing. He paused for as second. Then, with a satisfied smile that lit his face, he reassured me, "You shouldn't feel sad". He is not really killing people - only Jews."

This example illustrates well what has been brought out by scientific investigation; that people do not think of those that they are prejudiced against as people but as some sort of animal and therefore they do not feel any more guilt in killing them than if they were to kill a dog or a cow. This is where the danger lies. Bigotry breeds arrogance, arrogance breeds violence and violence breeds revenge which in turn breeds more violence. You may remember that the Harlem riots of 1964 were triggered off by a provocative incident in Yorkville.

The cost of preserving the obsolete boundary lines between peoples of different colors and beliefs is becoming more and more exhorbitant. We must heed the message of Pee Paul VI now or we will be faced with annihilation. We cann ot deplete the cream of our youth in an effort to police the world nor should we derange their mentalities throughthe act of needless murder. To live with the memory of having killed is harder to take than to be killed.- witness the book, "Burning Conscience" written by the pilot who dropped the atom bomb on Hiroshima.

The concept of white supremacy interferes with international good will. An example of the type of insult it produces is a statement I heard on a pharmaceutically sponsored film to the effect that, "Although this tranquilizer, (dried roots of Rauwolfia Serpentina) has been used in India for centuries for the treatment of mental illnesses it has only recently become known to the medical world." It seems the whoever wrote that script was under the impression that in order to qualify for membership in the "medical world" you must have white skin and a degree from Columbia University. (Hippocrates learned about surgery from a visit to India.)

The world has shrunk to the size of one house. To set fire to one side is to burn the whole house down. To inflict depersonalization and dehumanization onto one people is to become, in time, a victim of the same. The junkyards by the roadsides symbolize well our state of justice in Haynesville, Alabama. Let us not leave our children with a legacy of shame - instead, let us leave them with a legacy of a new vision of the universality of the architecture of the soul of man- to guide them towards the dissolution of the unnatural boundaries which have plagued man's progress towards the achievement of Christian brotherhood.

Sincerely yours,

Joan Cavrell

GUIDELINE TO POLITICAL ACTION

Prepared By:
James T. McCain
Assistant To National Director
In Political Action

Distrubted By:
CONGRESS OF RACIAL EQUILITY

One area of the new thrust by CORE adopted by the 1965 National CORE Convention, was that of political action and voter education. We are urging all chapters to make a concerted effort in this direction, and start immediately in trying to implement this thrust.

It has long been recognized that one of our basic responsibilities has been to educate ourselves and of fellow citizens about political issues which affect our lives and our welfare... To meet this challenge, effective political activity has of necessity become a vital part of each community, state and Nation. The job of good citizenship and political education must be done in each community.

There is no one perfect way to, carry on a voter registration campaign, but there are certain basic rules that should be followed. These should be divided into three catigories; namely, ORGANIZATION, REGISTRATION AND EDUCATION.

1. ORGANIZATION
   a. Select a political action committee in your chapter
   b. Find out the facts on voting and requirements on voting in your community
   c. Inform your chapter and member of the community of the facts that pertain to political activity.
   d. Keep in touch with other organizations who have a similar interest in political activity in your community.
   e. Appoint a registration Director for your chapter
   f. Use your local chapter office as headquarters if possible for registration drive.
   g. Recruit volunteers to carry out varied assignments if possible (Church groups, etc.)
   h. Have definite work schedule for all workers
   i. Get voting list if possible
   j. Street index, telephone and city directory
   k. Maps of wards and precincts of the Negro areas
   l. Transportation
   m. Plan for a financial drive by forming committee for same
   n. Careful planning is essential, Don't rush: pick the right time
   o. Try to get local registration officials to extend time for registration

REGISTRATION
   a. Get information out though the news media and other channels on the time, place and hour of registration
   b. Use the door-to-door method of canvassing for new voters
   c. Contact churches, civic leaders to encourage non voters to register
   d. Neighborhood registration days
   e. Window displays in business on registration
   f. Use the telephones
   g. Use all literature on registration you can get
   h. Get names of those who register so they may be contacted later
   i. Use high school and college students to help with canvassing
   j. Ask other organizations to assist in helping you with your registration drive
   k. Urge registration boards to open on evenings and Saturdays to aid working people.
   l. Know the precinct you are working
   m. Keep up-to-date card file on each resident.
   n. Keep in touch with precinct leaders
   o. Registration is a job for 365 days a year
   p. Canvassers should know the election laws

q. Have meeting with your block leaders before canvassing
r. Don't take on more than you can handle.
s. Have your registration file with you. Check it before you approach a house to, be sure the right persons lives there
t. Always identify yourself and state your purpose
u. Be prepared to answer questions
v. Always leave literature if available
w. Don't ever argue with people
z. Don't get angry with anyone
y. Don't ask people right off about their political convictions

EDUCATION

a. Hold precinct meetings for this purpose
b. Acquaint people with the voting procedure in your community
c. Use sample ballots for experimentation if ballots are used.
d. If voting machines are used, try and borrow one to train people in the use of it
e. Call your percinct meeting to discuss the candidates and their platform
f. Invite candidates to speak to the voters. Have question and answer period
g. Let people know that one of the best ways of helping themselves is through taking an active role in political activity in their community, state and nation
h. Teach voters to, vote their own convictions, rather than being told who to or not to vote for
i. Educate Negroes to run and vote for their own candidates (~~those~~ who are qualified)

HE HAS HALF THE DEED DONE, WHO HAS MADE A BEGINNING. "Horace, Roman poet, 65-8B.C..

1. How to get started
   a. A year Round Job
   b. First Get a Small Group Together
   c. The function Of CORE: To get people registered and teach them the value
   d. of the vote
   d. Voter registration: Finding the facts on the requirements of registration, how many people vote in the community, etc.
   e. Informing members and the community of these facts
   f. Keep in touch with others; Organizations and politicians, etc. (farmers)
   g. Family participation

   TO SUM UP
   1. Register people so that they can vote
   2. Learn the facts about local and national issue which affect the welfare of those in the community and their families
   3. Inform the people about vital issues so that they can vote wisely
   4. Get out the vote on election day
   5. Raise funds for CORE activities
   6. Keep in close and continuing touch with public officials and like-minded groups
   7. Secure the co-operation of other interested families
   8. All these jobs require skill and good leadership

2. HOW TO PLAN YOUR MEETINGS:

   a. Careful planning is essential. Don't rush::Pick the right time

b. Know your audience
c. Pick the right place
d. How to get people to come (good publicity, personal invitation, personal letter, etc.
e. Ways to tell your story: Speaker or speakers; film and filmstrips etc.
f. Tell them what to do; make assignments; appoint chairmans, etc.
g. Entertain them: coffee hour, etc.
h. Mass meetings

3. HOW TO CONDUCT A FINANCIAL DRIVE:

DO'S AND DON'TS OF YOUR FINANCIAL DRIVE *****

a. Do plan all steps of your drive carefully in advance
Don't get started before you have appointed collectors in every section of your community with all information, literature, etc.

b. Do train your collectors so that they are prepared to answer all questions about the campaign and CORE Don't embarass your collectors and lose contributions because he isn't quite sure how the money will be used

c. Do approach people positively, appealing simply and directly to them as good citizens Don't give people an easy way out by asking them half-heartedly or by annoying them with high pressure sales tactics

d. Do continue your drive until you are satisfied every member is well informed about CORE and the drive and has been personally asked for his contribution

Don't announce the end of the drive before your collectors and your publicity committee has a chance to do their very best

e. Do time your drive so it doesn't compete with other appeals for funds

Don't launch your fund drive on the heels of another drain on the pocketbooks of your members

f. Don't just send off your collectors with a peptalk and then leave them to shift for themselves

4. HOW TO KNOW AND BE ACTIVE IN YOUR COMMUNITY: Know the Law

a. Learn how your local government works; (visit city hall; sit in on your city or community council, etc.

b. Where to get your community's vital statistics; (get a map, mark off precincts, where to get the facts, State capitol or Washington)

c. Political party organization: (Precinct meetings, where delegates are elected to the County Convention to the State Convention to the ational Convention

5. HOW TO ORGANIZE A PRECINCT:

a. A precint is a small district or portion of a city or county

b. Organize your membership file (information, as age, death, those who have moved in or out. File membership cards

c. Start with some personal visits: get a handful of people; talk registration appeal to the womanpower in the community, etc.

d. Tips for Blockworkers:
   1. Be cheerful and friendly
   2. Time your blockwork in the precinct for the same days or days
   3. Have a meeting of all blockworkers before canvassing
   4. Go out in teams of two. Man a wife or man and a women
   5. Don't take on more than you can handled
   6. Plan your work ahead of time
   7. Be neatly dressed
   8. Go out when you are most likely to meet the whole family
   9. Take a flashlight
   10. Before you approach a door take out your file and be sure the right person lives there
   11. Always identify yourself
   12. Alway state your purpose
   13. Be perpared to answer questions
   14. Always leave literature if available
   15. Don't ever, ever argue with people
   16. Don't get angry with anyone
   17. Don't ask people right off about their political convictions

e. What to mark on cards:
   1. Names of all persons of voting age; registered or not
   2. Telephone number
   3. Attitude
   4. Help needed to register or vote (babysitter; transportation, etc.)
   5. Don't talk over business of a cup or tea, etc.

6. HOW TO REGISTER VOTERS:
   a. Every Vote Counts
   b. Get the Registration Facts (County Courthouse)
   c. Use your precinct organization
   d. Use your filing cards
   e. Ring doorbells
   f. Radio and T.V.
   g. Newspapers and weeklies
   h. Business, advertising agencies
   i. Put out Posters
   j. Theaters
   k. Clergy (church)
   l. Organizations
   m. Handbills
   n. Buttons
   o. Porch light campaign
   p. Door Knob Hangers
   q. Sound truck
   r. Sample Ballots
   s. Bumper tags and stickers

7. AN INTERVIEW WITH A POTENTIAL REGISTRANT:WITH A SMILE

a. "Good evening, Mrs. Stucky
"Yes
"Mrs. Stucky, my name is James McCain of CORE registration team in this community working on voter registration"
"Oh, I'm already registered".
"Yes, I know you are, Mrs. Stucky. Your name is on the precinct record, so is Mr. Stucky. I was wondering if there might be anyone in your household eligible to register.
"Eligible
"I mean twenty-one years of age or older, a citizen, etc.
"Oh, I nearly forgot--my son or daughter just turned twenty-one. They can vote now, can't they?
"They certainly can--that is, if they register. Do you know where to go down town.

This gives you an opportunity to give explicit information and offer other services that you and your group can give.

POLITICAL ACTION ON THE COMMUNITY LEVEL: Part 1

CORE - Congress of Racial Equality
38 Park Row, New York, N.Y. 10038

Community Relations Department

This paper is to serve for discussion purposes and as an initial guide for chapter use. Your chapter may already be experienced in political action, but this is to serve those chapters who would like some concrete ideas before going into their community. Of course, there are variables but most locales will find the following applies to them. This paper should be used in conjunction with other material which the National Office has regarding community organization.

Why political action? An organized community is the most effective pressure group that can be created at the local level; it can form a lobby for legislation, can break a corrupt political machine, can improve community conditions through political pressure and through self-help programs, and can set up cooperative community projects.

What is political action? The definition of political that would fit our context would be "of or pertaining to the organization or action of individuals, parties, or interests that seek to control the appointment or action of those who manage the affairs of a state." Therefore, when a CORE chapter pickets to seek redress and change, it is taking political action. When we ask that laws be changed or existing laws be enforced, we are taking political action.

As your community organization program develops, there are some things which always must be kept in mind. CORE is working to develop leadership within the community. This means that whenever you go to the Traffic Commissioner to negotiate for a stoplight on an intersection, you should be accompanied by mothers who will stress the need for their children'safety and tell the commissioner about the accidents which have occurred due to the lack of a traffic light. When you go to the mayor or housing commissioner to negotiate demands for better housing, you should be accompanied by the leaders of tenants councils which you have helped to organize. You should not attempt to negotiate on such a level until you have organized the tenants councils. Always try to let the members of the communitydo the talking. You will benefit by an acting out of the situation before the appointment with members of CORE acting as the civil authorities and the members of the community acting as the negotiators. Then discuss weaknesses in the negotiation before going to your meeting. You will have to speak at some points in the discussion to point up or underline pertinent issues. Never underestimate the power of this method of negotiation. When officials see CORE with community leadership behind the organization, they are more likely to be impressed than with CORE negotiating alone.

When choosing your first targets, pick areas of prime vulnerability. Choose those areas that indicate obvious discriminatory practice. When you go to the Sanitation Commissioner to protest that areas of your community do not have garbage collected from one to two weeks at a time, have the figures that show the white community gets garbage collection more often. The street lighting may be better in the white neighborhoods, etc. If you receive no satisfaction in negotiations and finally have to go into direct action, the issue will be a clear one when you present it to the press. Also, if the community is involved in your demonstration, the issue will be pointed up even more. It is often better to stage your demonstration directly in the community, where you have a chance for greater numbers, more unity and authenticity, rather than inside your city hall. This, of course, depends on your local conditions.

We also must never make the mistake of using the community to back up demands which are largely our own. We are there to back up the community. There will be national projects where we will present the case to the community for their support and CORE will provide the direction for other projects, but we need the community just as much as the community needs us. In fact, we have more to lose without it--a ghetto area has nothing to lose, so they will be skeptical and large portions of it will be unmoving at your first attempts. Only by thorough and repeated follow-up will you begin to gain their confidence. Don't expect the name of CORE to make vast inroads...you'll have a head start and they'll open doors for you that they wouldn't for others, but it won't be easy.

When working with the community, sooner or later appeals and demands must be addressed directly to legislators and the chapter then becomes involved in the legislative process. The widening of the scope of CORE's voter registration programs has necessarily brought involvement in political education. Voter registration must be directed towards an end. CORE's end has been the full involvement of the Negro community in the structure which governs; only through this involvement can our goals be achieved.

The "how to's" of any chapter's program will vary with the locale of the chapter: urban, suburban, rural, North, South, etc. A few basics to follow as you begin your program are:

A. Study of local election laws: Members of the chapter should be educated in these laws; workshops could be conducted and inquiries made as to how members of CORE might serve as poll-watchers at registration and elections. Those long lines, which usually occur in the minority communities, are almost always due to stalling on the part of those working the election boards to support an incumbent machine or inefficiency and lack of knowledge concerning procedures or both. The Board of Elections is chosen through patronage of the machine in power, so a hostile beauracracy is faced when attempting a breakthrough. A little patience has to be exercised when dealing with situations which result when beauracracy proves most frustrating, but if you know your facts, you can usually spot errors and abuses. When your group is confident of what it's doing, alert the press. Report all abuses and inaccuracies to the Board of Elections, the police officers at your polling place (get badge number) and report the results of your investigation and complaints to the press (and to the Department of Justice where appropriate). Always have copies of the local election and registration procedures with you and check for slip-ups before making your complaint. (Simplified copies of these procedures are given to members of most local boards before they serve and they should be available at your Municipal Board of Elections.) If you can, get assistance from reputable attorneys.

Corrupt political machines always benefit by low registration and a low percentage of voting. Higher percentages mean the community is becoming informed and wants change and action.

B. Study the precincts in the minority community. See which precincts the state senators and representatives come from. Find out which precincts the U. S. Senators and Representatives come from. (Each precinct will be dependent on the other for support and endorsement, etc.) Do those holding office represent the community's needs? How does the system of patronage work in the community? Who controls the patronage? In the courts? In the housing boards, etc.? What is the racial make-up of the precincts? Which areas are the most depressed?

C. Study the local political clubs. Often you will find two clubs of one party in the same precinct---one white and one Negro. Or you will find that Negroes are discouraged from joining the club---annual membership is prohibitive, etc. Does the club have a constitution? Is it a good one? Does the community ever use the club? The local political club is supposed to serve the community in which it's situated.

In the process of finding out some of the things listed above, you will find that many ideas will occur to you. Some of them will be unprintable and some you could go to jail for, but remain non-violent. You may be discouraged and remain steadfast in your belief that "all politicians are alike." But they aren't. Every now and then, you'll find a man of principle trying to keep his head above water. It's very difficult for him to do so without support, which brings up our next point...

D. Study legislation in municipal and state bodies that fall in line with your chapter's program and then discuss the relevant legislation with knowledgeable members of your community---perhaps in a forum. The discussion will raise new ideas and from all of the above, you will find those members of the community who will evidence capabilities of potential leadership. Find the authors of the legislation that fall in line with your chapter's program---after investigating their past records, you can determine if this is the type of representative that you can contact in the future for assistance. You will also probably want to contact him to support other legislation which will benefit the needs of the community. In the process, you can learn further details of the political situation in your locale from a reliable source.

Some chapters have already become involved in local elections; some have supported candidates for office. But if your chapter ventures into this area, some basics must be kept in mind. The most important is that the candidate you support must stay clear of ties with the leadership of corrupt political machines...the problem of political patronage has too many pitfalls. Many "reform" movements have come full circle back to the old corrupt practices in such rapid order, that a few local political clubs in the major cities have found it necessary that all those in leadership positions take pledges of accepting no patronage positions whatsoever while serving in office, due to the conflict which arises.

Chapters should not run candidates until their programs have been underway for some time and are smoothly functioning--this does not mean that you can't support a candidate if a top-notch one comes along. But there should be full discussion within the chapter before doing so.

The problem of patronage is an area of politics filled with quicksand; the novice can go under because he is not aware of what he's getting into. Patronage is defined as "the right or control of nomination to political office;" also "the offices, contracts, honors, etc. which an official may bestow by favor."

One type of patronage is commonly called "no-show" jobs. This is the type of job whereby a politician will put someone on his payroll, but the person doesn't have to report for work. A corrupt machine will use this method to buy loyalty.

Another type of patronage is that which is that which is legitimate appointment to a public office. The problem which arises in this area is that when a good leaders, who is principled, is appointed to public office conflicts will arise if he continues to serve on his post in the local club or local organization. Perhaps the organization doesn't support a city program or will want alterations to be made on the city program, and the leader of the group is in conflict---if he represents his group's position, he is subject to pressure from the city administration. It might be necessary for him to resign his post in the local group when taking the city job so that he can represent an independent viewpoint and the group can function more independently.

Under the system of "no-show" jobs, the public is bilked of money. Our answer should be found in our programming, which demands public work projects to take up the slack in employment. This can even be carried on in the community, such as rehabilitation of housing. We are there to serve community needs, and the community is not served by getting jobs for one or two individuals while others could be served by the building of more and better schools, public housing, playgrounds and recreation centers. We should press for these postive measures along with an effective and responsive police department, a meaningful helth program including nutrition and family planning.

If your chapter has no strong community organization program going on very steady legs, messing in the local political set-up will produce major setbacks, trouble and sometimes, disaster. Just approach with caution, examine thoroughly before you act, and your chapter can become a vital force in the community.

OPEN LETTER TO JAMES FARMER

[redacted] 9 1965

Dear Mr. Farmer:

Nobody doubts that a drive for increased registration of Negro voters is a good thing, or that it is as necessary here in New York as in Alabama. But just getting Negroes to vote is not enough. Their votes must count for something. And they don't. Even another 100,000 Negro votes in New York City would not be worth a tinker's damn - and for two very good reasons. First, the organization of the city government is stacked against them. Second, they have never used their power to vote decisively by voting as a solid group on a crucial issue.

The organization of the municipal government is extremely important. One of the biggest reasons the city authorities are so unresponsive to Negro needs and problems is that there are not enough Negroes in elective office to make themselves heard and seen. Most of the few who are there owe their political lives to the white man. And nobody takes Adam Clayton Powell seriously - for good reason. But let's let the numbers speak for themselves. For years there was only one Negro on the City Council - one vote out of 25. Now there are two - BUT with the addition of the councilmen-at-large it is only two votes out of 35. Not much better. A Negro Borough President has only two votes on the Board of Estimate out of 22. This leaves Negroes in New York City with a total legislative voice of 4 votes out of 57 - just 7% and well buried. But with the return of the municipal government to a truly democratic legislative system, Negroes and Puerto Ricans would have a representation roughly equal to their proportion of the population, or about 14 out of 57 (9 Negro and 5 Puerto Rican). This is the legislative voice that is so badly needed if they are to make any kind of satisfactory progress.

The cause of this evil is, oddly enough, La Guardia and his reformers. In his pell mell haste to get rid of the corrupt old Board of Aldermen, Mayor La Guardia put in its place a strongly centralized system which, in the hands of the political bosses, is the most effective weapon against reform that this city has ever seen.

To launch any kind of reform now takes an entire citywide campaign. It is extremely difficult to get any neighborhood reform group off the ground because it is next to impossible for them to knock over a whole 3-assembly-district set up. And even so, the council has almost no power and the mayor and his two top men control the Board of Estimate. You could have 5 Negro Borough Presidents and still be voted down. But if the Board of Estimate were thrown out and the Council made into a truly democratic legislative body - perhaps based on assembly districts - Negroes, Puerto Ricans, and Reform Democrats could elect enough men to raise holy hell about slum housing, Gilliganism, schools, etc. And by the establishment of a full-time Council (one afternoon a week to administer a city of 8 million and a budget of billions is incredible!) our city legislators would have the time to study our city's problems, and the proposed solutions, with a great deal more care.

The fact that Negroes have never used their votes as a solid group is also of great importance. Their voting power is much talked about - but never taken too seriously. It is like a gun which is said to be loaded and dangerous, but which has never been fired. Soon people begin to wonder if it really is loaded, and eventually they pay it no mind at all. But once you fire that gun - use it to blow some high and mighty cracker right out of office - then and only then will white politicians begin to take you seriously. And this year is your chance. Are you really going to let Wagner get away with the Gilligan killing and then slapping you right in the face by putting Gilligan back on the force? Are you really going to accept that cheap political hack - that white man's errand boy, Ray Jones - in exchange for the life of James Powell? If you do, then you deserve whatever treatment they give you. But if you remember that a vote for Wagner is a vote for Gilligan the cop - and use that loaded gun to blow him right out of office - then things will start to move for you in this town.

I strongly advise you to adopt this change of emphasis, By these two moves you can help to solve most of the minority problems in this city. First, demand a fair reorganization of the city legislature, and second, spread the word far and wide that a vote for Wagner is a vote for Gilligan the cop. And you couldn't start too soon.

Very truly yours,

New York City

Dear Sir.

We would appreciate your interest on the proposed plan of the N.Y.C. Transit System to promote Approximaley 300 men from the title of Gang Fore to Foreman without a Civil Service Test (See enclosure) we think this very unfair, all of us studying for promotion; this plan will eliminate any test for the title for the next ten years. Civil Service being the only area we can compete on equal ground this opportunity too is being denied to Negroes

Please look into this . You will understand no name I work there and there could be adverse reaction

Transit Plans To Consolidate Foreman Titles

300 Gang Foremen To Be Made Foremen Without Exam

By MARVIN BOGNER

If all goes as planned, close to 300 employees with the New York City Transit Authority will be promoted to a higher title and salary without having to compete in a promotion examination. The Authority has requested that all Gang Foremen be elevated to Foremen and it is expected that the City Civil Service Commission will conduct a public hearing on the proposal within the next few weeks, THE CHIEF has learned.

It is understood that such action would be administratively more feasible since all employees in a specific field would be working in one title. This is what the Transit Authority hopes to accomplish by eliminating the Gang Foreman title. The Gang Foremen are employed in the Authority's Maintenance of Way Department and the cost to the Authority to advance them to Foremen would run close to $400,000. Gang Foreman salary is $7,336 to $7,547 and Foremen receive $7,499 to $8,319.

It is felt that such a mass upgrading would not have any adverse affect on any employee. Such upgradings have been administered in the past with the consent of the Civil Service Commission. In fact it would mean, in certain instances, that employees in lower titles than the title to be upgraded would only have to compete in one promotion test to get to a higher level instead of taking two tests. No jobs would be lost by such upgradings. Two titles merely will become one.

The text of the telegram follows:

Considerable controversy has been generated in recent weeks both in New York and in Washington over the character of the community action program of the national attack on poverty. In New York, local groups in Bedford-Stuyvesant, the Lower East Side, East Harlem, Central Harlem and the South Bronx are disturbed over the city's proposals for governmentally run community progress centers. But the city's position is not completely clear. Though there have been public statements by you and Mr. Paul Screvane, the city's detailed proposals reportedly submitted to Washington weeks ago, have never been made public. It has come to our attention that many bona fide group representatives have been denied the right to see the proposal. This despite the fact that federal requirements indicate: "Applicants for community action program grants shall make a copy of their application available for public inspection at reasonable times."

In the face of this official secrecy the general public is confused over what the issues are. What should be a major community effort involving all segments of the community is being hampered by the lack of facts and understanding of what the government of the city of New York proposes to do.

We, therefore, suggest the following two steps:

1. The city's application to Washington, even if a draft proposal, should be made public promptly in sufficient copies so that all interested parties will have an opportunity to review and study it.

2. Within two to three weeks after it is made publicly available you should hold a public hearing at City Hall at which individuals and groups will have an opportunity to react to your preliminary proposals and make suggestions.

In this way the community as a whole, including the poor and the disadvantaged, can have an opportunity to participate in shaping the city's poverty program.

In reply to your letter of May 30th, CORE has been actively concerned with the political situation in New York City. However, at this time we are taking no position in the endorsement of a candidate.

The CORE chapters are considering what steps to be taken but, until the situation in the Democratic Party is clarified, our position will be for no endorsement.

Dear Mr. Farmer:

You have spoken out for political actions as well as for demonstrations to further the cause of equall rights, equal opportunity and more equitable distribution of wealth, resources and goods.

Could you consider and suggest to your organization to discuss the nomination of Bill Ryan, Congressman, for Mayor of New York City? I understand that the Liberal Party (apparently without thought of democratic process) has already shown signs of jumping on the Lindsey bandwagon.

How many times must we liberals or progressives or radicals be taken in by golden-tongued men like Stevenson, Humphrey, Rockefeller, who represent the "establishment" but champion a new era before being elected. All say that Bill Ryan has no chance as he has no money and no backing of the machine, but these very shortcomings may lay the basis for a splendid and salutary campaign.

This letter does not represent the committee below which I name only to identify myself.

As a political organization long involved in the Civil Rights fight, we are extremely happy to have a Civil Rights organization become involved in politics.

We are fighting for minority representation, improved housing conditions, quality education, improved police protection, a civilian review board, equal employment opportunities, abolition of the literacy test, etc. Hence our aims aren't very different from yours,

However, it is our contention that one of the main methods of achieving equality is through thoughtful and constant demonstrations at the ballot box. In a city where there are so few bars to voting, the degree of voter apathy is appalling. There is a pressing need for the Negro to become aware of his potential political power and I feel that an organization like CORE will be extremely influential in helping us eradicate this apathy.

We welcome you to the political arena and hope that our organizations can be of mutual assistance.

Dera Mr. Farmer,

In view of Core 's decision to make political action its new concentration, I urge you to accept the place for City Controller on the Peoples Progress Party independent line which is supporting Congressman John V. Lindsay for Mayor.

The failure of both major parties and the Liberal Party to nominate a Negro for one of the 3 top City positions is just another insensitive insult to the legitimate demands of the Negro people of this City-the kind of insult which in other circumstances leads to riots and violence.

We in the PPP believe that the candidacy of a Negro of your calibre for one of the top 3 offices in New York will galvanize constructive political action on the part of Negro people throughout the country.

Statement by Hon. Constance Baker Motley, Borough President of Manhattan, on Proposal before the Board of Estimate for an Industrial Park on the Brooklyn Flatlands Site. September 24, 1965.

The time has come for the City of New York to fullfill its ten year old commitment to implement the spirit of the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court in the School Desegregation Cases of 1954. A decade of procrastination, conferences, resolutions, promises and school boycotts appears to have come to an end. The educational advancement of our city demands it; the social tranquility of our community requires it.

One of the most pressing needs of our city has been to undo the psychological and educational harm resulting to our children from an increasingly segregated school system. The Board of Education cannot get on with the business of providing quality integrated education to which we are all committed if, year by year, the proportion of non-white and Puerto Rican children in our public school system increases. The flight of the Negro and white middle class public school population to the suburbs and to private and parochial schools will continue unabated unless affirmative action by government is now taken to reverse this trend.

At present, the public school population of New York City is approximately 50% non-white and Puerto Rican. A City Planning Commission projection shows that in 10 years, in the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, the non-white and Puerto Rican ratio may be as high as 75%. In Manhattan it is already 73% in elementary schools and in 10 years may be higher than 80%.

There is little doubt in my mind that a high proportion of the white and Negro middle class has fled our school system because of the high proportion of non-white and Puerto Rican children in some schools and an accompanying decline in the quality and quantity of education afforded therein.

The hard question before us therefore is how to change this overwhelming fact of life. It has been suggested in the Allen report and other proposals that this devastating fact may be altered by the development of educational parks in carefully selected areas. The Board of Education has notified this body that it is willing to try this proposal for achieving integration on the Brooklyn Flatlands Site which is now before us for approval as a site for an industrial park.

Short of complete integration in housing, there currently appears to be no other promising alternative. I am unalterably committed to integrated public education. Because of this commitment, I find myself willing to try any reasonable proposal. The Board of Education has decided that "the concept of an educational park is worthy of experimentation." The Board has asked us to consider the Flatlands site as a location for this experimentation in considering today the resolution that the site be devoted to industrial development. Of several other proposed sites, the Flatlands site is the most desirable for an educational park because of its size. It would afford not only an opportunity for integrated schools but an exceptional opportunity for assembling in one educational complex the best available educational tools.

The next generation must be fully equipped to secure the jobs which are available. The decline in manufacturing jobs in New York City and the corresponding increase in service and commercial employment would seem to require, at this juncture, a reexamination of the question of the desirability of developing industrial parks within this increasingly commercial and service oriented City in the next decade.

The needs of factories in New York deserve consideration. But so do the needs of children. I cannot approve the allocation of this entire site, a vast bloc of the city's most precious resource - open land - without any provision for meeting the equally important problem of how to provide quality integrated education.

To the thousands of boys and girls in the ghettoes of Bedford Stuyvesant and Brownsville, the plan for an industrial park offers nothing. To a number of adults, who may commute from their suburban homes in segregated areas, this plan offers city-subsidized jobs.

I do not oppose jobs, but when a plan is proposed to provide these jobs that would also permanently preclude the breaking of racial barriers that divide children, that price is too high to pay.

It will not be my vote on the Board of Estimate which locks the door to the ghetto and throws away the key. I vote no.

New York, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Farmer:

I send you for your information copies of an address I made on September 29th before the first Borough President's Conference of Community Leaders.

The program embodied in this statement for the revitalization of Harlem and East Harlem was unanimously approved by approximately 100 Community Planning Board members, elected officials, clergymen and others who previously had demonstrated their interest in the physical rehabilitation of both communities.

All city-wide candidates have been asked for a pre-election commitment that the new city administration will implement this program.

I will be glad to discuss this program with you if you so desire. Meanwhile, I respectfully request your sympathetic consideration and support.

Sincerely,

Constance Baker Motley

CONSTANCE BAKER MOTLEY

Enc.

Address by Manhattan Borough President
Constance Baker Motley at First Borough
President's Conference of Community Leaders, Sept. 29, 1965 at City Hall.

I am delighted to greet this distinguished group attending the first Borough President's Conference of Community Leaders.

The fact that so many of you arranged your schedules so that you could attend, on relatively short notice, is a mark of your deep interest in the revitalization of Harlem and East Harlem so that they become, once again, integrated neighborhoods fully in the mainstream of the Borough of Manhattan. I welcome your attendance and I cherish your interest.

The purpose of this conference is to bring together those persons who previously have demonstrated, by concrete proposals, concern for upgrading the Harlem and East Harlem communities in order that there may be developed, for adoption by the new City administration, broad-based foundation prerequisites which will serve to support all proposals for the physical improvement of Harlem and East Harlem in the next decade.

I have been deeply impressed by the number and the effectiveness of public spirited citizens who are dedicating their minds, their hearts and their energies to the resurrection of Harlem and East Harlem. Their imagination, their thinking, their appearances before public agencies and their molding of public opinion are absolute antecedents for action. They constitute as fine an example of citizenship in action for the benefit of Harlem, East Harlem and the Borough of Manhattan that I know.

But the task of rehabilitating Harlem and East Harlem is so formidable that private efforts alone, skillful though they are, can not advance these dreams to the brick and mortar stage.

Consequently, I asked you to come here to listen to proposals designed to bring the fullest governmental assistance to bear on the task of making these dreams a reality in our time, so that we will not bequeath to our children and our children's children the ghetto Harlem and East Harlem that plague our generation.

I appeal to you for your whole-hearted support for these framework proposals which I am about to make. I appeal to you for your support for these shelter proposals even though we may not see eye to eye on all the details necessarily associated with the rejuvenation of Harlem and East Harlem. I appeal to you for this basic unanimity of thought for the sole purpose of giving effect to the aspirations of the 500,000 residents of Harlem and East Harlem for a most elementary benefit.....a decent community in which to live and to rear our children.

I make this appeal knowing full well the present city administration during its tenure in office has built in Harlem and East Harlem 26 new schools seating 24,000 pupils at a cost of $51,000,000; that public housing with apartments for an estimated 84,000 persons.....have been built or are under construction in East Harlem and Harlem at a cost of $333,000,000; that 10,305 units of middle income housing are in being or under planning or construction; that the $50,000,000 Harlem Hospital will be one of the most modern institutions of its kind in the world; and that many other specific projects are in process of development.

I agree that these efforts are commendable. But I say that these programs represent mere spinning of wheels without forward traction. And I say that, with the present rate of progress, Harlem and East Harlem will remain, for many decades, slum ghettos, with blocks of rat-ridden fire trap tenements, with a dearth of community facilities. Without the concensus we now seek, Harlem and East Harlem will remain for many years drab islands of decay which, in effect, are walled off from the rest of Manhattan.

You know and I know that what the people of Harlem and East Harlem want are communities that are open to the winds of change and progress and hope which are now blowing across the country as President Johnson leads the way to the Great Society. The people of Harlem and East Harlem want communities where people live by choice not by compulsion. Freedom of residence has now been established in law. It must now be secured in fact. Not only must the people of Harlem and East Harlem be free to exercise their right to freedom of residence outside of Harlem and East Harlem, but they must now be free to live in Harlem and East Harlem because they have been given a meaningful compulsion free choice in a community equal in status and dignity to any other Manhattan community.

To achieve this goal, I say we need a sharp break with the status quo. We must dispense with business as usual methods. We must employ imagination and vision, and embark on an exploration of new horizons in search of the goal that unites us today.

Much of this imagination and vision has been demonstrated by the old as well as the newly emerging community leaders and their respective associates. By hours of toil and brainwork which I can not begin to calculate, they have helped articulate the desires of hundreds of thousands of our citizens for a better Harlem and East Harlem. And I must not forget Community Planning Boards 9, 10, and 11, the efforts of which have done so much already to educate and develop a broad community consensus about the future of Harlem and East Harlem.

I say that all these efforts represent a treasure of planning in behalf of the city. I feel the city should meet this remarkable demonstration of citizen cooperation with government halfway. Therefore, I place before you a program designed to bring about a broad attack on a problem that will not yield to piece meal approach.

Under this program, the new city administrations would do these things:

1. Commence the immediate development of a master plan for the revitalization of the Harlem and East Harlem Community (110th Street to 155th Street, river to river) taking cognizance of those improvements already underway, and develop to the maximum the residential, recreational, cultural and economic potential of the area.

2. Immediately assign the necessary full-time personnel under the supervision of the City Planning Commission for the development of this master plan in consultation with community representatives.

3. Actively support legislation for a special appropriation of money by the Congress to carry out the development of such a master plan on a demonstration basis

4. Locate new public buildings in Harlem and East Harlem on a scale sufficient to stimulate redevelopment in the vicinity of such new buildings.

5. Construct new housing in Manhattan over highways, roadways, railroad tracks and new low rise public buildings in which families can be relocated until new housing is provided in their former locations which will permit them, if they wish to return to their former communities.

6. Ensure that maximum opportunity will be provided under the master plan to enable local residents to invest in new businesses, new housing, and new facilities resulting from the plan.

7. Expedite the processing of all current proposals for improving the physical environment of the Harlem community.

I realize that once these proposals have been adopted by this representative body, securing advance commitments from all of the city-wide candidates represents bold new political action for some of you. But in my judgment any other approach would be naive. The future must be committed to a specific course of action today if there is to be any hope for tomorrow in the Harlem and East Harlem we know. Therefore, out of this meeting today must come proposals for securing the necessary commitments. My proposal would be to address a letter to each city wide candidate setting forth the foregoing proposals for action by the new city administration and requesting a reply to the chairman of each of the three Community Planning Boards involved, i.e Community Planning Boards 9, 10, and 11 so that the Harlem and East Harlem Communities will know in advance of the election what to expect of the future.

I realize that once the master plan is drawn, vast resources will be required to implement it. All available tools must be marshalled to make the plan effective. You will recall that I described this meeting as the first Borough President's Conference of Community Leaders. Other such conferences will be called to cope with new problems as they arise. We cannot today discuss the specifics of any proposals for new housing or other facilities. Our primary responsibility is to provide an umbrella for all proposals, to provide traction for the spinning wheels now.

Dear Mr. Chin-Shong:

Thank you for your letter of October 1st, addressed to Mr. Farmer, that has been referred to me for reply.

As you probably now know, Mr. Farmer has announced his preference for Lindsay over Beame in the mayoralty race. Altough Mr. Farmer has given Mr. Lindsay his personal support, CORE as an organization voted not to endorse any candidate.

I am enclosing a news release regarding Mr. Farmer's participation in a rally for Lindsay on October 29th.

Many thanks for your interest and for taking the time to write to us on this matter.

Sincerely yours,

Nancy Stedmann

Mr James Farmer,

I am a student of sociology and political science, and only recently have been free enough from studies to become involved in other activities. I have just joined New York Core on 125th st. I have been thinking about the coming mayoralty election and trying to come to some conclusion. Doubtless you may already have considered what I am about to say, but I feel I should write anyway.

The outcome of the election teeters in the balance. It is up to the Negro voter to act in a way that will do him the most good. At present, Lindsay is less secure, and likely to be more willing to bargain for support.

At this moment, it seems to me that a crucial need of the Negro community is enforcement of the fair employment laws. And which candidate is more likely to press for this?

The entrenched unions supporting the democratic party are the ones who are most resistant to enforcement of the laws. Beame is dependent on the democratic party, and a policy of enforcement puts him squarelyin a position of conflict of interest. This is an issue on which he is bound to hedge.

Lindsay on the other hand, has long ago made his pile; and his social position is secure. His independence is shown in his willingness to go against the very party of which he is a member. It seems clear to me that his major motivations are pride and self-esteem, and the material rewards of office are hardly his aim.

It seems clear to me that Lindsay is more amenable to appeals of humanity and justice, which the fair employment laws represent. Lindsay owes the unions nothing, and it would be even to his republican interest to unsettle them and destroy their unity. Lindsay has nothing to lose, and all to gain by enforcing the law.

It strikes me that Core can do a tremendous lot for the employed and the unemployed Negro if, in exchange for the support of the Negro community, Lindsay will appoint persons, whom Core has chosen, to fill key posts in control of law enforcement and government contracts.

In any case, Core cannot back Beame on the chance that he might win. Core represents reform, and that would be to sell out all that Core stands for. Beame represents the old Board of Estimates, conservative spending, and hardly anything that benefits human equality and public welfare.

If the Negro community is unified, it carries the crucial vote in this election. In the history of New York City since 1900, three mayors have had the independence to buck the Board of Estimates and to do a worthwhile job in the public interest. These were Low, Mitchel and La Guardia. All were Republicans, elected on a Fusion ticket with liberal and reform support. These people could do it because they were free of the ties which a democratic mayor would have to the party machine. Lindsay now occupies this same potentially strategic position.

Sincerely Yours.

Edwin Chin-Shong.

MEMO

To: Executives of Agencies and Presidents of Boards

From: James W. Fogarty, Executive Director

Please find attached a transcript of the Lindsay-Beame discussion of health and welfare issues at Town Hall on Oct. 21st, and our 40th Anniversary program folder which contains the Town Hall program.

You will note in the transcript a number of commitments by the candidates to achieve certain goals of interest to our field.

Additional copies of this transcript and the 40th Anniversary program folder may be requested. We would particularly like to draw this to the attention of board members of agencies..

May I also draw your attention to the fact that on Friday, Oct. 22nd, Mr. David Sher sent a communication to candidates for all public offices on the Nov. 2 ballot, in all five boroughs (except for judgeships), enclosing to them 35 questions on health and welfare issues including those raised on the floor at Town Hall, those posed by the panel to the candidates and other questions suggested by agencies for which there wasn't enough time. Mr. Sher invited all the candidates to state their positions on these issues at forums, radio and TV and other meetings in the remaining days of the campaign.

You will be interested to know that the Town Hall meeting was covered by all the major TV stations in New York, by four camera crews. From three to eight minutes of filmed news reports were made on Channels 2, 4, 5, 7 and 9 during the news periods on the evening of Oct. 21st, and some were carried also on Friday morning. With one or two exceptions, news reports on the meeting were broadcast by all the radio stations in New York. The Herald-Tribune featured the meeting on its front page, and the New York Times referred to it in its lead article on the Mayoralty campaign.

We were pleased with this attention to our concerns and trust that this will have a salutary effect on the next administration in all of its relations with the voluntary agencies and the Community Council.

Lindsay-Beame Debate on Health and Welfare Issues at Town Hall
Thursday, October 21, 1965 - 3 PM

Note: This transcript was taken from the tape produced by WNYC. It includes all except the last question posed by Mrs. Orr regarding representation of the poor in anti-poverty programs and the replies of the two candidates, which were unfortunately not broadcast.

Mr. David Sher

John Lindsay, Abraham Beame, we welcome you. You honor us by coming. Its no secret to either of you that one of you two is very likely to be the next Mayor of New York. But what you may not know is that one of you (and it will be the same man) will also be Honorary President of the Community Council of Greater New York, under whose auspices this debate is being held. I won't use the cliche about some one not needing any introduction, but I am going to say that it is a source of real satisfaction for me to turn over the gavel to our Moderator, and to introduce to this audience, Ben Grauer of NBC. (applause)

Mr. Ben Grauer

Thank you, Mr. Sher. Since we are fortunate to have both candidates with us before this audience of experts assembled by the Community Council I will waste as little time as possible and proceed directly to the discussion, which we are eager to have.

The ground rules are very simple. I must repeat them: there will be an opening statement; (there was a toss under the simplest of circumstances and Mr. Beame's headquarters won); then, the first question will be directed to Mr. Beame and thus the questions will be alternated - first to Mr. Beame and then to Mr. Lindsay by our panel, whom you have met. But I am happy to re-introduce them:

Mr. James Fogarty, executive director of the Community Council; Miss Barbara Yuncker, science writer of the New York Post; Mr. Woody Klein, reporter and columnist of the New York World-Telegram & Sun; Mr. Alfonso Narvaez, staff reporter of the New York Herald-Tribune and Mrs. Dorothy Orr, executive director of Bedford-Stuyvesant Youth in Action.

With your permission I will serve also as time keeper. Each of the candidates will have two minutes to respond to the questions and at the end of our hour, there will be two minutes for a closing statement and in the closing statement, again determined by toss of coin, Mr. Beame will speak first and Mr. Lindsay will have the closing word. These are the conditions and now I'm going to immediately call on Mr. Beame to make his opening statement. I'm happy to introduce Mr. Abraham Beame. (applause)

Mr. Beame

Thank you, thank you Mr. Grauer. I'm gratified to be given this opportunity to appear before you today. This meeting of the Community Council of Greater New York is evidence of the direct involvement of our citizens in the problems that affect the millions of their fellow citizens. Government must play a major role in the areas of health, welfare, and recreation, of course, but without community involvement, success cannot be achieved. New York has traditionally up-held its role as a city of opportunity and will continue to do so.

It has maintained the policy of open-doors to the oppressed and for those who are seeking a better and more productive way of life. That has been, and will continue to be, the strength of New York City.

Its problems are huge, but the successes it has achieved in helping our millions of citizens join hands in building for the future have also been huge. New York spends more than a billion dollars a year for health and welfare services. The budget for these vital services has been crippled over the past 15 years, and for a good reason. New York is proud of the way it is shaping the future by lending a helping hand to the poor and the underprivileged. History has proven that this is the right way, the moral way, and the only way.

Many of those who were poor and underprivileged in the past have now become citizens of the future and they are solid citizens and, thus, our continuing cycle of helping and building and making New York an even better place than it has been.

Health, welfare and recreation are national problems. We cannot close our eyes and hope that they will disappear. We don't want to because that is the democratic way of life and that is the reason for our strength today. And that is the reason I want New York to shine as a place of opportunity for all, regardless of past deprivance. This I am determined to achieve. Thank you. (applause)

Mr. Grauer

And now, Mr. Lindsay --- John Lindsay. (applause)

Mr. Lindsay

Mr. Grauer, Controller Beame, members of the panel, Board members and members of the Community Council of Greater New York. I'm delighted to have this chance to take on just one of my opponents at a time, and I'm delighted to talk about this problem in our city.

There is no area of greater concern, I think, to all of our people than the work in which you are engaged -- and your representative constituencies are engaged -- than has to do with social services, because we're talking about the health, education and welfare and very lives of our people. And I don't think that there is any area that has been more badly nit-picked to death over the past four to 20 years than this particular area, nor any area that has suffered so because of bad planning. In fact, the government in New York City hasn't even understood the importance of program planning.

It does little good to divide things up into cubby holes between departments and agencies if there's no conception of what the overall goal is.(applause) And unless we get started on a program -- until we get started on a program of long-range planning on programs which may cut across the whole multitude of agencies and sub-agencies and departments -- we won't get the job done, anymore than we can get it done unless we make selections of persons to run these, and guide them, and program them purely on the basis of qualification, talent and skill and not on the basis of Party... (applause)

I have issued a number of papers that I hope members of this organization will look at -- all the way from social services and hospitals and parks and recreation, and so on -- each of which is detailed in scope. On welfare and poverty, most particularly, I would urge you to examine these papers and in the remaining time I assume we'll get into some of those programs in some detail.

The main thing is to get on with the job. Thank you. (applause).

Mr. Grauer

And now Mr. Beame. The first question will be addressed to Mr. Beame.

Mr. Fogarty

Mr. Beame, there has been considerable concern about the administration and operation of the Anti-Poverty program in NYC. What do you propose to do to strengthen the structure and operation of this program?

Mr. Beame

I have, during the course of the primary campaign, suggested that the poverty program has to be reorganized in order that we get an administration which is properly coordinated. I have suggested that the various activities -- the three areas now, the Anti-Poverty Board, the Council Against Poverty, as well as the Committee of 100 -- be brought together as a unit.

The Poverty program expends 75 million dollars or thereabouts, which is about the eighth largest expenditure in the City, and it seems incomprehensible to me that there would not be one unit, an agency or a department -- under the overall supervision of the Mayor and not under the overall supervision of any other elected official. And I would bring them together, headed by a qualified and highly experienced person in that area operating directly under the guidance of the Mayor.

Now, this does not mean that it is going to be put under the operation of City Hall anymore than it was before. Before, it was under the Council President where it does not belong. It's inconceivable that you would have, for example, two Boards of Education, one handling City funds and another handling Federal funds. The administration, in my judgment, must be brought together so that we can see where the money is going, what it's going for, and whether the programs are therefore being properly coordinated. And this does not in any way do away with the Committee of 100 which should continue to be in a statutory relationship to the head of the agency. (applause).

Mr. Grauer

Mr. Lindsay.

Mr. Lindsay

Ever since the poverty program came into being, (and came too late, because of the absence of real aggressive action in applying for Federal funds and knowing how to program it), it has been largely unrepresentative. I don't think that the City administration has any conception of what was intended by Congress when it enacted the poverty program. It intended that the program be completely separated, in all respects, from political control. This means that the power of decision and the burden of the administration and responsibility has to be on the shoulders of those people whom it is intended to benefit. That is the essence of self-help. I would abolish the NYC Economic Opportunity Committee. I would transfer its functions to the NYC Council Against Poverty, broaden the representation of the poor, make certain that there is cooperation and coordination between private agencies and public agencies -- which is not now the case -- make sure that there is proper evaluation -- which is not there now -- bringing in and using organizations, such as this organization right here, universities and other groups and institutions that have no axes to grind, put an end to the secrecy, and get the program moving forward. (applause).

Mr. Grauer

That first question was from Mr. Fogarty. The next question is directed to Mr. Lindsay by Miss Barbara Yuncker.

Miss Barbara Yuncker

I'll direct my first health question into the area of poverty, which we've just been hearing your views on. It's conceded that there is high cost of illness in the poor and poverty sections of the City. One of the greater problems is the lack of contraceptive information, of making it readily available. Would you, as Mayor, favor the active dissemination by the Welfare and Hospital Departments of birth control information to all persons who wish to avail themselves of it, married or not, and if not, what would your policy be?

Mr. Lindsay

I'm so glad you asked that question. (laughter)

Mr. Grauer

We will count that comment as non-responsive and not in your time limit, Mr. Lindsay. Go ahead.

Mr. Lindsay

You're going to keep me ,as Mayor, and my staff very busy indeed, in this City. I want to say to you that I take the same position that the U.S. Government -- of which I've been a part for 9 years -- takes, and which took it under the leadership of President Kennedy, when it was decided by the government that in any area of Federal involvement where this question pertained, particularly in overseas work, the foreign aid program but also domestically, that the U.S. would not stand in the way and that when technical assistance was asked for under various U.S. programs abroad, particularly in countries like India, technical assistance and advice and guidance was asked for on a voluntary basis, the U.S. would be glad to cooperate. And I take the same view with respect to the City of N.Y. It seems to me that when family guidance services are requested, or medical assistance is asked, in these areas where the City of N.Y. has a direct involvement and the responsibility for the welfare of the people, that the City ought to respond. And it seems to me that this is also consistent with the best teachings of advanced thought on this subject today, and that's my thinking also. (applause)

Mr. Grauer

Mr. Beame.

Mr. Beame

I endorse the position which the City has established through the Dept. of Hospitals in the past, of giving this assistance when asked for.

Mr. Grauer

I'd like to remind our candidates that if there is available time, it can be used for rebuttal elsewhere. Mr. Klein has the next question which he will direct to Mr. Beame.

Mr. Klein

Mr. Beame, New York City taxpayers today contribute more than half a billion dollars for welfare programs in NYC, and yet as Welfare Commissioner Dumpson--who is in our audience today -- has said many times, these allotments to welfare clients are below the poverty line, which is about $3,000 a year. The question is, do you think that the welfare allotments ought to be increased, and if so, would this mean a greater load on the taxpayers, or would you consider putting some welfare clients to work?

Mr. Beame

I would agree to the first part, that it should be increased and I think these additional funds will be available come January 1 in the amendment of the social security law which will make more money available to the City for these cases and that this money should be used to increase the allotments to the welfare clients. I believe the -- I'm not sure of the figure but it might be about $3 a month per case or a week per case, I forget what it is -- but whatever the funds are, it should be used for that purpose. (applause)

Mr. Grauer

Mr. Lindsay

Mr. Lindsay

I believe very strongly that income levels have to be adequate for decent living, and the cost of living ought to be one of the chief factors that one takes into account in discovering what those income levels ought to be. I believe that there are other aspects of this, however, which directly relate to the question that's asked. The means test for the simple amenities of life seems to me utterly ridiculous and degrading and ought to be (applause) reformed and reorganized completely. There are other aspects too of means where cut-offs apply which act as, I think, as a counter-productive force in reducing incentive. There are other aspects that have to be examined too in respect of families where there is a husband but he is not living with the family or with the wife. That aspect will have to be reexamined also. So, it seems to me that we have to be more realistic than we are about welfare, about its use, about the means test, and about the income level. (applause)

Mr. Grauer

Our next question comes from Mr. Narvaez and it is directed to Mr. Lindsay.

Mr. Narvaez

One of the basic issues -- well one of the basic problems -- in NY is the shortage of low and middle income housing. How do you propose to cope with this and how will you finance it if Proposition #2 is turned down by the voters?

Mr. Lindsay

Well, my program and the goal is, in a four year period, to erect 100,000 low income units and 60,000 middle income houses. That would be three times the number of low and middle income units that have been built in this City in the best 4 year period of the last 12 years. Within the first six months, I will direct the Housing Authority to submit plans for 50,000 new low-rent apartments over a 4 year period. I will utilize all the provisions of the new powers granted by the U.S. Government, particularly this year, in the new Housing and Urban Redevelopment Act; urge that NY be declared a pilot project in Washington for a new rehabilitation program on housing, establish a City mortgage guarantee fund to enable the private sector to get going in this area and to aid slum areas in particular. Now between all three of these areas, properly backed up mortgage systems for the private sector, new

State aid--and I support the Propositions on the ballot this year for constitutional changes for bond issues--and full energy on the use of new Federal funds to which we have not been directing our attention over the past 10 years, we will be able to finance 160,000 new units in that space of time - four years. (applause)

Mr. Beame

I certainly don't share anybody's pessimism that the Propositions on the ballot will not be adopted. I'm confident that they will be, and the funds will be available. I also have stated in my position papers, during the last several months, that I would call for a change in the law so that the four billion -- or that portion of it permissable -- City housing funds can be used with much greater flexibility to aid housing, and rehabilitation of housing. I would also urge that the Mitchell Lama funds be expanded, and also be able to cover rehabilitation loans, as well as new construction loans.

I would encourage much more of vest pocket projects throughout the City and with the revision -- I would press for -- of the building code, I would anticipate that the attraction to private builders would be greater because of the lesser cost of construction by using less expensive, but just as good, material and that this would then also reflect in the rentals.

I do want to make one observation -- since I had a little time on the other questions -- about Mr. Lindsay's observations about the means test. For years, I've been taking the State, and the Governor of this State, to task for having in the Kerr-Mills bill the means test which requires families of the aged to swear to a poverty role in order to be able to get this help. I have asked that it be taken off the books, because instead of getting about 40,000 people whom they expected to get on the roll, looking for the same help, only about a thousand have taken advantage because they did not want their children and grandchildren to be held financially responsible. At no time, have I heard him voice any opposition to that means test which was, by the way, incorporated in federal legislation, which he probably voted for. But at any rate, it certainly was something which never had been, as I can recall, expressed by my opponent in opposition to the action of the State. (applause)

Before we go to our next question -- and this would be a good time for the briefest interruption -- I want to make it clear that the time is not to be banked if not used on a question to be later used. Otherwise, it would put a distressing arithmetic problem on this table, which we couldn't handle. And also friends, your applause is taken away from the speakers' time, not between the comments, but during the comments. Very well, shall we continue then and the next question is from Mrs. Orr. This fifth question is presented to Mr. Beame.

Mrs. Dorothy Orr

Mr. Beame, the entirety of New York City is concerned about the question of school integration. Would you tell us your thinking and give us some idea as to what your plans for leadership will be to expedite this process?

Mr. Abraham Beame

Of course, I think everybody would agree and all parents would agree that City Hall should not control educational policies. On the other hand, I think it is correct that City Hall should speak up when necessary in connection with any educational policies. I would very strongly do everything in my power to see, whether it's through financial aid or through any influence I might be able to exert in terms of public expression, that the major provisions of the Allen Report are implemented. And although I believe that some of this has already begun with the Donovan report, or the Donovan action, I think that there must be a stepped-up activity to have it put into effect more quickly than what it appears from the present plans.

I think there should be a much more current and consistent and continuous zoning or rezoning activity in terms of our school districts. And, of course, in terms of having the best kind of education which normally would lead to voluntary integration of our schools, parents normally would not be reticent about sending their children there, to any of them. I would urge very strongly that the better type teachers -- the more experienced teachers -- be sent in to the disadvantaged areas where new teachers find it very difficult to cope with the problem. I think this can be worked out satisfactorily with both the teacher groups and the Board of Education. (applause)

Mr. Lindsay, on that same question -

Mr. John Lindsay

Well, the goal is integrated and quality education and that ultimately must be the course of action that is pursued by the Board of Education. The Mayor's got to start, for once in this City, by taking a leadership role on the question. I recognize the independence of the Board, but the Mayor also has specific powers; he's got budgetary powers; he's got site selection powers; and he's got powers of appointment of the Board of Education itself and of removal. So, the Mayor had better get out in front on this question and when the Board is doing the right thing, he'd better not keep silent, as has the current administration, of which Mr. Beame is part and parcel, but better start talking and use radio and television to boot. (applause)

I think we ought to start building some majestic school parks and complexes right away. It doesn't do any good to continue to chase the population around the way the Board of Education has sought to do. It's done so quite courageously and it's tried to change zoning laws and all the rest of it and zoning lines between high schools in order to create a necessary balance between races and between economic groupings. But it's been virtually impossible in many areas and they're frought with frustration. This is the best argument that I know of for creating good school parks and complexes in key areas of the City, using the edges of the ghetto areas most especially, and outside, as the sites for the selection of these areas.

It seems to me terribly important that the Commission on Human Rights here has got to cut across the Board and be upgraded and have powers and have staff.

It seems to me that the Planning Commission has to come into this and most importantly on housing and on the correction of housing evils in this town and on jobs. It all ties into the problem of education in schools and I believe that in the future our housing plans and programs must be done with a view and a guide towards education, as well as a balance of geographical factor in creating integration, economically and racially, in this, our town.

On the question of Medicare that Mr. Beame raised a moment ago, I voted for Medicare. I was one of the first to introduce the Social Security Medicare approach in the Congress. And I was one who received a pen from the President. But I did not see Mr. Beame in Washington once, or even a letter from him, urging Medicare in this country. (applause)

Mr. Ben Grauer

Now Mr. Lindsay, the next question is directed to you from Mr. Fogarty.

Mr. James W. Fogarty

Mr. Lindsay, what do you propose to do about attracting and holding competent professional staff in the City departments as recommended in the Brookings Institute Report, and especially social workers in the Department of Welfare, Health and Hospitals?

Mr. John Lindsay

Well, the Brookings Institute study with which I'm familiar -- and it was a good study -- remains stuck in somebody's bureau draw in this town. I think that this is one of the key problems that we have in the future. There is no guarantee at all, if the opposition comes in -- that is, the machine opposition comes in -- that we won't have this City staffed from top to bottom with district leaders and political clubhouse people who have no qualifications to run this city.

I continue to ask Mr. Beame to answer the question as to whether or not it is not a flat conflict of interest for any person who's a district leader in the political machinery of this town to hold public office in the City at the same time. There's a built-in conflict there and I say that any person who is a district leader has got to get out of that job, one or the other. (applause)

This City must attract to it people with qualification and skills and talent and it must do it on the basis of non-partisanship. There can be no party labels and I will not ask the question ever as to what party a person belongs to. The only question is, is he the most qualified person for the job and is that commitment to get the City moving forward again, in each of these areas of social services, a full time commitment. In all of these areas there can be no connection with the political machinery of this City. (applause)

Mr. Ben Grauer

And now, Mr. Beame.

Mr. Abraham Beame

After that political speech, I don't know what I should say. First, I'm going to take a moment to say that Mr. Lindsay still didn't answer my question on why he didn't speak out against the State's provision for the inclusion of a means test. He has a habit of always not answering the question by moving off to something else. And this is what he's done with this question.

The question, as I gather, is what are we going to do to try to carry out the provisions of the recommendations of the Brookings Institute report? I have, over the years, been very close to this question of salaries, benefits and keeping wages in line with State, Federal and other areas of employment, including of course, the business area. I have already agreed that we must up-date the career and pay plan so that the salaries there are realistic; that we must provide the proper conditions and the equal conditions of employment and pay for simllar work -- not only qualifications, but work. We do have, for example, certain types of qualifications required in jobs; yet they're paid different salaries because of the fact -- rather, paid the same, but the work in one may be more difficult than the other, and that has to be taken into account. So, I would adhere very strongly to keeping our pay scale and our conditions current. I have said this so many times, it's no point repeating it, because it's self-serving: I will appoint only on merit and qualification. (applause)

Mr. Grauer

Miss Yuncker, your question is directed to Mr. Beame.

Miss Barbara Yuncker

It's actually directed both to Mr. Beame and Mr. Lindsay because there are points Mr. Lindsay has been attacking about our hospital system quite strongly.

We spend nearly $400 million a year on health and hospitals. We have admittedly had about as classy and top-flight a commissioner as can be found in the country. And yet we have an obsolete plant, inadequate supplies and a paltry number of nurses. I know when Mr. Beame was budget director and had to find the money, he was very reluctant to put in some of the reforms because he didn't know where he was going to get the dough. I'd like to know from him if he thinks he's going to have to retrench? And I would like to know from Mr. Lindsay how he thinks he can get better leadership than we've had? (applause)

Mr. Grauer

Mr. Beame first.

Mr. Beame

It would be a wonderful thing if for all our services we could give everything that the departments ask. Apparently, I've been criticized, by my opponent, because I haven't given the Hospital Department everything asked for. And if we have to give all of the city agencies everything requested, a printing press wouldn't be enough, and you taxpayers would, of course, feel it. So, we have to use some kind of measure of balance.

In the years that I've been budget director and Controller, the appropriations to the Department of Hospitals has increased from $36 million to $269 million. I started the recommendations for affiliation back when I was budget director. We have continued to the point where we now have most all of our hospitals affiliated with medical schools and with voluntary institutions to get the best kind of medical services at a cost of about $56 million.

We are continuously improving our physical plant. We know about the $85 million Bellevue hospital construction, the $50 million Harlem hospital and others. We are going to continue to improve the services, not only in our hospitals, but in all the other vital areas of our City. (applause)

What I can't understand is how Mr. Lindsay is going to cut $300 million from the budget. And just for his information, there are only eight areas that carry 90¢ of every dollar. And if he wants to cut another $300 million, he's going to have to cut out 69 departments, including the office of Mayor he's running for, Controller -- 69 departments, because for all other services but these eight, for all others, we spend only $293M and he wants to cut $300M. (applause)

Mr. Grauer

Mr. Lindsay -

Mr. Lindsay

Mr. Beame, if you cut out the jobs of the district leaders who have tough jobs, in the City administration, (at the present time of which you're a part,) you'll save a million dollars right there -- (applause) because that's what the figure is! And I'm waiting for an answer on that question.

Second, the Commissioner of Hospitals, and other people in this City, didn't ask you, Mr. Beame, for everything that they wanted for hospitals. They asked for just enough to cut out the cockroaches, to cut out the rats and the mice, to supply some towels, to supply some bandages -- so the nurses could have some gauze bandages to use -- and so those patients who were not being taken care of at all at night would have some mosquito netting around them, and so that just ordinary decency and dignity, as a minimum, would be provided in our hospitals. (applause)

Commissioner Trussell asked you for $9 million, and you refused to give it to him for minimum supplies. Even Mayor Wagner came to the rescue two or three times. He had to veto you and your office, in order to provide just the most basic minimum services. There are 21 City hospitals and 50% of them are a disgrace to the City and the nation. I say that if you're asking for a promotion now from where you've been, this is equivalent to the treasurer of the company, which has brought the company to bankruptcy, asking to be made chairman of the board. That's why I argue it's time for a change. (applause)

Now these hospitals have to be upgraded and they've got to be upgraded fast. They've got to be cleaned-up, swept out, and nurses have to be provided. The nurses won't come now because they don't dare go to the hospitals because there's no security and simple protection for them.

And we must decentralize some of these hospitals so they're community centers in the neighborhood. You're costing the taxpayers money by having 75% of the people come into emergency wards who wouldn't have to come into emergency wards if there were a local facility in their own neighborhoods where they could have their problem taken care of. We don't even have a telephone service that will tell a person in our town where to find a doctor and there are 154,000 doctors and most people don't know where to find one. (applause)

Mr. Grauer

And now a question from Woody Klein which is directed to Mr. Lindsay.

Mr. Woody Klein

Mr. Lindsay, violence in the streets of New York is on everybody's mind these days. The crime rate in our city has gone up steadily. What would you do, if elected Mayor, to make New York a safer place?

Mr. Lindsay

You're right, it has gone up 15% over the last year alone, 30% in the last ten years -- major crime has gone up. The double padlock is the symbol in New York City! People have pulled the shades down and gone into isolation. While the rest of the country moves forward, New York retreats.

Chicago had one of the major increasing crime rates in the country and Chicago reversed it in the space of three to four years simply by modernizing. I know, because we've sent teams there and we've brought people here in this campaign to tell us how they did it -- and from other cities too. They do it by modernizing-- by electronic equipment. They have a computerized center and each neighborhood has a series of patrol cars, usually with one driver instead of two, patrolling the area, and by push-button signals. From any citizen in the community a lightening flash comes, and in less than two minutes there's a patrol car response. The goal is to achieve such a feeling of police presence on the block continually-- bring the police force up-to-date, by adding 2,500 foot patrolmen, equip them with walkie talkies -- which other cities have done at night so the patrolman has a communication with the patrolman down the block. Experiment, as Miami has done, with the use of the telephone system to put in a red button in hallways, in corridors and on the corner of the street where the phone booth is. You push a button and the signal is flashed and the police come.

Relieve the police of paper work. Chicago saved $190,000 by consolidating one form alone. New York City police have 2,500 forms that they have to fuss with -- in quadruplicate -- and this problem of our police, being the least modern police in major cities, is utterly ridiculous, because we have the finest policemen in the country; they're the best. But let them be free to be modern. I suggest also that you might do something about advancing our police according to merit. Let's make sure that if a policeman is given an advance in promotion for giving blood to the Red Cross, that's good, but why not for getting some education and going to school, which they do not. I think training is needed and most of all I think we need the involvement of our people. If our people will stop turning their backs on their neighbors, that might help too. (applause)

Mr. Grauer

Mr. Beame

Mr. Beame

If I were going to talk only about the police part of this I would have to rest my case on Mr. Lindsay's statement, because it was a take-off on a statement I had issued the month before. And so I am sorry that I cannot elaborate on it. I made this statement, by the way, when Mr. Lindsay came out with his report exactly one month after I did, at a press conference, I said this. And you will find everything, everything he said, in there.

Now let me, however, talk about one thing which is not necessarily the Police Department alone and that is the cause of half our crime: narcotics addiction. I don't think we can lick crime in this City without licking narcotics addiction. (applause) I think we've got to develop a realistic plan for treating this. I think we have treated it wrongly; we've treated these narcotics as criminals, instead of as sick persons. (applause) I think the pushers have to be punished mandatorily by the courts. I think, too, that in treating these narcotics as sick people, we must administer the drug to them at specified places, under the proper medical care, with proper psychiatric care and guidance so as to bring to bear all the forces that can help -- so that we'll take the profit motive, the sinister one, out of it -- so that he doesn't have to go out and commit a crime in order to get the money to buy it. And so that this withdrawal will help reduce his desire for it.

When we have raids by the Federal Government, all it does is make drugs less and less available so the price is higher and it means the addicts have to commit not one crime, but two crimes. And so only by taking this profit motive out, can we do that. And I would also establish a Department of Narcotics, give it equal status with any other department and get the top man in the business to head it. I think these steps will help us to attack that problem. (applause)

Mr. Grauer

Mr. Narvaez has a question now for Mr. Beame.

Mr. Alphonso Narvaez

Both you and Mr. Lindsay have advocated Town Hall Centers in neighborhoods -- offices of the Mayor in various areas of the City. Just exactly how many would you place, where would you place them, and what services would these offices give, and what sort of problems will they handle?

Mr. Beame

I would set up local advisory -- community advisory -- councils in each of the twenty-five councilmanic districts. I would expect that the councilmen would sit as a member. The method of choice of the members would be determined later, whether it be by election or another type of selection. These councils would deal with all the problems in the neighborhood -- of the community -- services as well as physical facilities. The doors of our City departments would be open to them to solve most at the local level. Then the chairman of each of these I would expect to meet with the Mayor periodically -- at stated intervals -- monthly or more or less frequently, so that the Mayor could get at these problems before they become crises.

This, in my judgment, has been one of the problems of the administration in the last several years. It has been too far removed from the people. We've got to get a closer involvement with the people. The only way this can be done, is by having the Mayor sit with the representative of each of these communities in the city-wide audition and, in that way, I think that many of the priorities concerning these various communities would be made known quickly to the administration and action could be taken. Only by this method of involvement, can we really have responsive government on a Town Hall basis. (applause)

Note: (A tenth question about involvement of the poor from Mrs. Orr was not included in the WNYC transmission tape.)

Mr. Grauer

Now gentlemen, we've come to the time when we will call upon you both for your closing statements. We have allowed the same two minutes time we assigned in the opening and, by the toss of a coin, it is Mr. Beame who will make the first closing statement.

Mr. Beame

We have discussed many phases of the issues that are the deepest concern not only to the Community Council of Greater New York, but for all people. And I want, again, to tell you how grateful I am for the opportunity you've given me to express my views on the many areas of this concern.

I've tried to be specific in all my responses to your questions because I know we're in complete agreement that generalities, the context of so many political speeches and election-time programs, have never solved any problems.

With that in mind, I'd like to put before you certain specific measures which can be implemented without delay and which as Mayor, I will implement at the earliest possible moment. In the expansion of homemaking services, through the Welfare Department, I will call for increased aid to the elderly who, though their income is low, are not on the Welfare roll. This will be done through the purchase of homemaker services through established voluntary agencies.

I will see to it that increased federal aid is utilized to raise welfare grants to a higher level, as far above the poverty line as such funds will permit, and at the same time, the City will not reduce its share.

I will supplement federal funds earmarked for youth employment with City funds by expanding the Neighborhood Youth Corps. This is a wonderful program and should not have been cut off. (applause) To fulfill this program of training unemployed youth, I will call upon the services of the Community Council of Greater New York and other civic organizations.

I will enlist the aid of New York City's delegation in Congress and of Senator Kennedy to formulate legislation permitting the use of Medicare funds to finance the construction and modernization of hospitals outside of that limit. This will mean additional federal funds.

I will support action for a federal minimum wage at $1.75 an hour, which as we all know is a fundamental step toward strengthening family life because it will help men in our low income group again to become heads of their families.

These are my pledges, these are the steps, and there'll be many more as we go along for which I will be constantly seeking your help. Thank you. (applause)

Mr. Grauer

Mr. Lindsay

Mr. Lindsay

I close by saying that I'm running for Mayor because New York City needs a change and it needs a change from top to bottom. It needs independence, non-partisan and reformed government and it needs it badly. The alternative is more of the same.

Mr. Beame has been part and parcel of the administration which has been a lack-luster, do-nothing administration which has not moved forward while the rest of the country has moved forward. Over the last four years, out of 15,316 votes cast in the Board fo Estimate, Mr. Beame has voted against Mr. Wagner four times. Worse than that, the machine is now poised to take over -- there is no doubt about it. If you don't believe me, ask Mr. Beame to answer the question as to whether district leaders will take responsible roles in a new City government. If we have that kind of thing, we go back many years ago. We go back beyond the time when reform began to set into our City when Mr. Wagner began to fight for reform and for a separation of the political machinery of this town, from administration -- a cut-off of a do-nothing, reactionary, backward looking, inward-drawn, shades-down machinery.

Now, I say that New York City must call on the best talent and resources that it has. It's got to call on it from every part of the City -- and they're here -- and that power and that talent is ready to serve you if only they're asked and if only they are given the leadership to put them to work. Other cities have done it, why not New York? Other cities are moving forward in jobs, in education, in transportation and New York continues to lag behind.

The National Congress has been an action Congress. The Congress has created new tools and new instruments that we can use. Now it's time to put these tools to work in the streets of our City. If we don't put the tools to work in the streets of our City and call on the entire community with all of its power, resources and talent to do it, we will not be the new City of tomorrow, the Empire City that we deserve to be. Thank you. (applause)

Mr. Grauer

I'm sure I express the thanks of our audience to both Mr. Beame and to Mr. Lindsay for their fine participation today and for the very useful and informative discussion we've had. And now this is Ben Grauer, expressing my own personal pleasure in being part of this discussion and turning it over to your skilled and effective President, Mr. David Sher.

Mr. Sher

Thank you, Ben. Thank you John Lindsay and Abe Beame -- two good friends -- for a very stimulating debate. I'm sure that some of you feel informed, some provoked, some confused, some illuminated, some satisfied, but all happy that you were here. This is democracy with a small "d" at its best. Thank you.

CORE ANNOUNCES POSITION ON MAYORALTY RACE

CORE (the Congress of Racial Equality) today announced its position on the mayoralty race: it is supporting no candidate. In its official statement, CORE said it searched the candidates' platforms "in vain" for concern about issues affecting Negroes.

Such issues, in CORE's view, are improving slum housing, expanding job opportunities for Negroes, and implementing NORD's policy of non-discrimination. CORE also stated that no candidate had an evaluation of the hurricane Betsy recovery program.

"Even more ominous," in CORE's opinion, was the attitude of the city fathers on the racial bombings earlier this year. CORE charges that the incidents were waved aside as "typical adolescent exuberance." "Is the mayor-to-be," CORE asks, "just another such handwaver?"

The statement, released by CORE's southern regional office here in New Orleans, concludes by saying that the candidates are following a tradition of local politics, that of promising the Negro nothing. CORE says it is prepared to protest "point by point every instance of such exclusion [of Negro interests]" during the term of the next mayor.

END.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONGRESS OF RACIAL EQUALITY
CORE Southern Regional Office

New Orleans, La. 70113

CORE STATEMENT ON NEW ORLEANS MAYORALTY RACE

There has been ample time to review the platforms of the mayoralty candidates. CORE has done this in the hope of finding some clue to the attitudes of the candidates toward New Orleans' Negro population.

We did this review carefully. We have learned that there is political concern about mosquito control; about better facilities for yachts in the municipal harbor; about keeping trucks out of the French Quarter; about building a cultural center.

We searched those platforms in vain for promise of help in improving or removing slum housing. Some two years ago an exhaustive survey showed New Orleans was one of the worst cities in the country on substandard housing. At no time since then, nor at present, has either candidate given us any hope that he feels it important to improve or remove this dilapidation.

We searched these platforms for hope of expanding job opportunities for Negroes. The Mayor's office administers fifteen principal departments which provide some 7000 jobs. Except for a small number of policemen, Negroes are almost totally excluded from these jobs. Nothing in either platform points to any change of policy in this regard, although both men speak expansively of "hiring the best qualified for any job."

We looked unsuccessfully for some concern about the New Orleans Recreation Department, for some concern about its stated policy of non-discrimination. We looked for an evaluation of the operation ostensibly designed to help those who suffered great losses from Hurricane Betsy. But the candidates have nothing to say on these matters.

Beyond these omissions there are still more ominous undercurrents in this city. Months ago there was a series of bombings in New Orleans. Most of the victims were Negroes. One bomb--by no means incidentally--was tossed in front of the CORE southern office. Judging from the arrests of three teenagers which followed, our city fathers felt this violence could be waved aside as "typical adolescent exuberance." CORE would like to know if the mayor-to-be, whoever he may be, is just another such handwaver.

During the past three weeks, racial violence has again erupted. Several Negro people have been shot, others stoned, one knifed. In most cases the victims or witnesses stated the crime was committed by some group of white youths. More handwaving?

This much can be said. The present candidates are solidly, stolidly following the tradition of New Orleans politics: they promise the Negro nothing so it is no surprise when he gets nothing during the next four years. CORE's role is to protest. We protest the exclusion in the present campaign of serious consideration for the Negro and his needs. We are prepared to protest, point by point, every instance of such exclusion during the incumbency of whichever candidate wins this election. We invite--we urge--New Orleans Negroes to observe and complain and protest with us.

PRESS RELEASE

U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION AND LABOR
ADAM C. POWELL, N.Y., CHAIRMAN

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
Monday, November 8, 1965

STATEMENT BY REP. ADAM CLAYTON POWELL OF THE 18th CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT (HARLEM, N. Y.) ON THE NEW YORK CITY MAYORALTY RACE.

I wish to extend my warmest congratulations to Congressman John Lindsay on his victory this past Tuesday and wish him well in the challenging days ahead. It has been my pleasure during his four terms in Congress to know and serve with him. Although we served on opposite sides of the aisle, we voted on the same side of the fence many times. I pledge to him as Congressman from Harlem and as Chairman of the House Committee on Education and Labor my complete cooperation to solve the problems of our great city on a non-partisan and efficient basis.

-- The Negro Vote --

Secondly, I would wish to comment on the meaning of Tuesday's election. The Democrats lost the office of mayor. We lost not because Adam Powell failed to deliver the Negro vote or President Johnson, Vice President Humphrey, Senator Kennedy and the 17 other Democratic Congressmen of New York City failed to deliver the "white vote." To claim as did an irresponsible reporter wrote this week that I had promised to "deliver" the Negro vote is as vicious a canard as the post mortem absurdity that Abe Beame was unable to deliver the Jewish vote to himself.

Despite the fact that Republican Congressman Lindsay won election, the Negro vote nonetheless remained Democratic. What inroads he did make into the traditionally Democratic Negro vote were accomplished because he campaigned hard in Negro areas and convinced Negroes he really intended to do something about their shameful treatment in this city in employment, housing, education and hospital care.

We lost because we did not present a new and creative program to the people of New York City. The plain unhappy fact is that the Democratic Party here has become tired, lazy and fat from too much success. We need to go on a political diet of bold programs which can continue to capture the imagination and affection of all the people.

-- "Bossism" --

I wish I could lay claim to all of the extravagant power with which the press endowed me during and after this campaign. I was persistently labelled a "boss" -- that I was supposed to have guaranteed that I could "deliver" the Negro vote.

Let me state emphatically that nobody can deliver or promise the Negro vote. The only person who can deliver the Negro vote is that candidate who personally goes after it for himself and convinces black people that he will give them a square deal and lift them from the bottom of their wretched hopelessness.

I have never been a "boss" because the very concept is alien to my thinking. I have never built any political machine in Harlem, nor have I ever made any effort to keep votes in my hip pocket to be trotted out at some personal whim. When I endorsed Republican Eisenhower in 1956, the Negro vote remained in the Democratic column. When I endorsed Levitt for mayor in 1961, the Negro vote stayed with Bob Wagner.

Yet, last year, the Negroes of Harlem gave me 93,000 votes or 84.4 per cent of the total vote, the highest of my 21 years in Congress and the 7th highest of all contested Congressional elections. Pray tell, is that "bossism"? Where is my political machine? Am I a "boss" simply because black people vote for me?

It is an insult to Negroes to suggest to them that they have any boss whether he's black or white. Black people did not come through 100 years of oppression, degradation, tortures and murders from white bosses to suddenly trade in their freedom for black bosses.

And we will be free. We will be free to shift our votes -- as we should -- just as white people periodically shift their votes. And I hope that each time there is a major shift in political sentiment in this country, Negroes will go with the majority. In the past, unfortunately, this has not often happened. In 1932, a Democratic president, Roosevelt, swept the country. Negroes voted Republican. In 1952 and 1956, a Republican president, Eisenhower, swept the country. Negroes voted Democratic.

-- The Cleveland Election --

What happened in Cleveland last Tuesday should convince everybody that the Negro vote is no longer up for sale or can be purchased cheap with the siren songs of empty promises. The issue was clear in Cleveland -- a Negro believed his people had not been treated fairly by the current administration there, so he ran against it. He fought a clean and beautiful battle. As I wrote him earlier this week, Carl Stokes' so-called loss was in reality a great victory not only for Negroes, but for all Americans.

The Cleveland Call-Post should also be commended for its statesmanship in that campaign.

The Negro vote will not remain politically static out of any compulsive habit. And the Democratic Party must continue to earn the Negro's political fidelity. We have made our greatest economic and political achievements through the Democratic Party. I hope we are never taken for granted.

Dear Jim:

I want to thank CORE for endorsing me for re-election. It was a great victory, particularly in view of the fact that Parents + Citizens (Bronx affiliate of P.A.T.) singled me out for opposition and attack during my bitter primary campaign. (I must have been doing something right!)

Please continue to count on me - as in the past - to support the program and objectives of the Civil Rights Movement.

And, please, call on me whenever I can be of help.

Sincerely,

RESOLUTIONS OF NEW YORK PRE-WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE PLANNING GROUP

November 9, 1965

The committee that laid the groundwork for this planning meeting gave considerable thought to the matter of what might be the most feasible kind of resolution to come out of this meeting. For your consideration, and perhaps adoption, the following recommendations are presented as a statement of our resolve: that we go on public record affirming our

1.) appreciation to President Johnson for the very able leadership he has provided in the struggle for racial justice in America, and our hope that the much needed initiative he is providing in the form of a White House Conference on Civil Rights will not be weakened or distorted by the very agenda of that Conference. It is our position that the question of "family stability" be stricken entirely from that agenda and be approached through an economic and urban analysis of needs in the critical areas of jobs, housing and quality integrated education. The analysis should deal with the extent to which Federal funds are being used to maintain segregation and other forms of discrimination in violation of Federal laws, and consideration of means for the protection of individual civil rights.

2.) that the 1966 Spring White House Conference on Civil Rights be viewed from the very outset not as a terminal conference, but as one point in a process, the high point of which will be a Conference in the Spring of 1967 which might be called a follow-up White House Conference. Expansion of the time-dimension in this way would allow sufficient scope within which to organize citizen participation, at all levels, in the process in local communities across the nation.

3.) that the major efforts in this whole process, bench-marked by the White House Conference, be devoted to the preparation of "An Economic Development Budget for Equal Rights in America;" one that establishes priority expenditures for jobs and job-training programs, housing, and slum rehabilitation, health and welfare facilities and institutional needs for creating quality integrated education. We resolve to take the lead by preparing such a budget for Metropolitan New York. Our minimum estimate of the public budget required annually to accomplish this task is 32 billion dollars.

NEW YORK CIVIL RIGHTS LEADERS CALL FOR $32 BILLION ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

An economic development program for equal rights, costing the nation annually an estimated $32 billion, was declared "the essential next stage of the American movement for civil rights" by approximately 100 leaders of New York City civic, religious and civil rights organizations at a meeting today (Tuesday) regarding the 1966 White House Conference on Civil Rights.

A resolution adopted at the meeting said "that the major efforts in this whole process, bench-marked by the White House Conference, be devoted to the preparation of "An Economic Development Budget for Equal Rights in America;" one that establishes priority expenditures for jobs and job-training programs, housing and slun rehabilitation, health and welfare facilities and institutional needs for creating quality integrated education."

The meeting was convened by the Office of Church and Race of The Protestant Council in cooperation with the Commission on Religion and Race of the National Council of Churches. Dr. Benjamin F. Payton of the Protestant Council office served as coordinator; Dr. J. Oscar Lee of the National Council of Churches was Chairman.

Adopted at the meeting also was a resolution to strengthen the agenda of the White House Conference. "It is our position," said the resolution, "that the question of 'family stability' be stricken entirely from that agenda and be approached through an economic and urban analysis of needs in the critical areas of jobs, housing and quality integrated education. The analysis should deal with the extent to which Federal funds are being used to maintain segregation and other forms of discrimination in violation of Federal laws."

A third resolution called for another White House Conference in 1967 as a follow-up to the one now being planned for June 1966.

The meeting, held at the Brotherhood in Action Building, had plans for a metropolitan New York pre-White House Conference on Civil Rights scheduled for April or

-- M O R E --

May, 1966, by appointing the following coordinating committee for this spring conference: the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Daniel Berrigan, Jesuit Fathers; Professor Albert Blaustein, School of Law, Rutgers University; Dr. Robert Browne, Professor of Economics, Fairleigh Dickinson University; Dr. Henry Clark, Union Theological Seminary; the Rev. Dr. Henri M. Deas, Pastor, Newman Memorial Methodist Church, Brooklyn; Dr. Dan Dodson, Professor of Sociology, New York University; the Rev. Dr. W. E. Gardner, President, Baptist Conference of Greater N. Y. and Vicinity; Dr. Anna Arnold Hedgeman. Commission on Religion and Race, National Council of Churches; the Rev. Dr. H. R. Hughes, Pastor, Bethel AME Church; Rabbi Edward Klein, The Free Synagogue; Dr. Charles Lawrence, Professor of Sociology, Brooklyn College; Dr. Charles Leber, Director of Urban Missions, Presbytery of New York; Dr. J. Oscar Lee, National Council of Churches; Dr. Seymour Melman, Professor of Industrial Engineering, Columbia University; Dr. Benjamin F. Payton, The Protestant Council.

Dr. Seymour Melman, Professor of Industrial Engineering of Columbia University, in a prepared address, spoke in support of the resolution calling for "An Economic Development Budget for Equal Rights in America." He explained the $32 billion figure was his estimate and that this budget "must include: job training for the under-trained and underemployed, with industrial cooperation for training and placement; general improvement of the entire educational system; new dwellings for 9 million American families; medical facilities upgraded and expanded."

Also addressing the meeting were Dr. Robert Spike, Executive Director, Commission on Religion and Race, National Council of Churches; William Ryan, Ph.D., Mental Health Consultant, Massachusetts Committee on Children and Youth, Boston, Massachursetts and Dr. Payton.

The Moynihan Report, "The Negro Family: A Case for National Action," has been sharply criticized by Dr. Payton and others in the New York area. Dr. Payton, in a paper analysing this report, asserted that it "is flawed by the simplistic logic which holds it together, the inadequate empirical evidence it utilizes, and the erroneous premises upon which it is based. Although it has not even been made public yet, the report has already had an impact upon the civil rights movement and upon more general American politics that is quite deadening and utterly misleading." The White House Study group planning the 1966 conference is alleged to have been influenced considerably by this report. A delegation from New York will convey the thinking of New York leaders regarding the agenda for the White House Conference at a planning session scheduled for November 17 - 19 in Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

I have just read that you suggested to Mayor-elect Lindsay that a negro should be appointed to the office of Police Commissioner. I believe this is an excellent idea and you should definitely follow up on it. It is common knowledge with people that are familiar with this matter that negroes and other minority groups are the first ones to be mistreated and abused by "New Yorks Finest", while the present Comm. in many cases sits idly by and covers up for his men, instead of weeding out the rotten apples... Lots of luck and keep up the good work..

SANE NEWS RELEASE

New York Council for a SANE Nuclear Policy • Public Information Committee • 17 East 45th Street; NYC 10017 • TN 7-6140

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: INFORMATION: Tudja Crowder

NEW YORK SANE BACKS ROBERT J. SCHWARTZ FOR LINDSAY SEAT IN CONGRESS

NEW YORK... The New York Council for a Sane Nuclear Policy at a meeting held last night (Thurs. Dec. 2) voted unanimously to endorse and support Robert J. Schwartz, a member of the Executive Committee of the Village Independent Democrats, in his bid to win Democratic nomination for the Congressional seat to be vacated by Mayor-elect John V. Lindsay.

This is the first time that SANE's New York Council has given its endorsement to a candidate for any political office. In a separate resolution, the Council also voted unanimously to urge its more than 15,000 members and friends in the metropolitan area to support the Schwartz campaign.

SANE Council Vice Chairman Stanley J. Romaine, who chaired the meeting, announced that his group would retain someone to give full-time to the Schwartz candidacy.

"SANE's programs for peace have always included writing letters and speaking to members of Congress. But we have an ultimate objective: to elect to Congress men and women who will work effectively for world peace, and right now for peace in Vietnam. In Bob Schwartz, we have found such a candidate. He is qualified across the board for a seat in Congress and we hope he will be the first of many we can help send to Washington," Mr. Romaine said.

Mr. Schwartz is a banker and former New York state chairman of the Americans for Democratic Action. He is also a member of the National Board of the Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy. He was a Marine Captain in World War II and saw service in the Okinawa campaign. He announced his candidacy on November 30.

In appearing before the Sane Council meeting here, Mr Schwartz said that his opposition to the government's program in Vietnam was one of the reasons for his candidacy.

"Our problem in Vietnam is political, not military. Escalation will make the war harder than ever to end honorably and clearly threatens a world holocaust. I am convinced there are solid grounds for negotiations in spite of the fact there has been reluctance on the part of Hanoi to negotiate at this time. Our government should take the following peaceful initiatives: (1) an end to the bombing of North Vietnam, (2) an agreement to negotiate with all parties concerned, including the political arm of the Vietcong, the National Liberation Front of South Vietnam, and (3) a willingness to participate in a conference based on the Geneva Agreement of 1954, including all parties to that agreement.

"I believe that our willingness to advance these three proposals could lead to a de facto cease fire and later to negotiations without sacrifice or compromise of principles affecting American national interest in Southeast Asia.

"Since 1957, I have been writing background papers which more and more seem to be vindicated by developments in Southeast Asia. I am convinced that the war in Vietnam can and must be ended now as the war in Korea was brought to an end. I agree with the statement made by President Eisenhower in Feb. 1954 when he said he could 'conceive of no greater tragedy than for the United States to become involved in an all out war in Indo-China.'

"The alternative to peace in Vietnam is almost unspeakable. All that Americans have built up by their hard work will be in danger of being lost. The prospect of a rewarding, creative life that is now coming within reach of all Americans cannot be achieved unless the helpless drift to war is stopped. The war in Vietnam is now a compelling issue in the 17th Congressional District, as it is in every other district in the nation. We cannot have the Great Society and fight a great war at the same time. A bigger military budget would mean sooner or later more taxation, reduced Federal spending on programs of education, health and welfare, job opportunity and training and other programs we have all been looking forward to.

" I am more concerned at this time with saving the soul of our country than with saving its face. And I believe we are big enough and powerful enough to call for a cease-fire on the terms I have stated. I want and need your support."

Public response to his candidacy has been highly encouraging and gratifying, Mr. Schwartz said, adding that messages of support and funds have been pouring into his campaign headquarters.

COMMITTEE TO ELECT ROBERT J. SCHWARTZ TO CONGRESS

TEMPORARY HEADQUARTERS: 30 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK, N. Y. 10011

ROBERT H. LOUNSBURY CAMPAIGN CHAIRMAN

STUART N. SOSLER
CAMPAIGN MANAGER

December 4, 1965

Dear Member of the County Committee:

The undersigned are writing to you as friends and, in many instances, long time associates of Robert J. Schwartz, one of the candidates for the nomination by the Democratic Party to fill the Congressional vacancy in the 17th District. All of us, even those who are not voters in the District, are concerned, as you must be, with obtaining the most effective representation in Congress. We believe that Bob Schwartz is an outstanding candidate and ask that you give the most serious consideration and support to his nomination and then to his election.

Bob spent thirteen years as a government economist and administrator in Washington and abroad. Both as an official and as a private citizen he has labored in behalf of human welfare not only in New York City but in areas ranging from Paris to Issaquenna County, Mississipi.

He has in the past year alone, for example, sponsored and spoken at a major meeting in Madison Square Garden, protesting our Government's policy in Vietnam. He helped organize the November 27 march on Washington. Since 1957 he has continually sought honorable means to terminate the fighting in Vietnam. He is against unilateral withdrawal and for a political not a military settlement now.

This past summer he spent his vacation working in Mississipi for the Medical Committee on Human Rights;the Mississipi Freedom Democratic Party; and Operation Head Start. He has been Co-Chairman of the Banking Committee of the Interracial Council for Business Opportunity and a member of its Board. In 1953 he was Democratic County Committeeman from Nassau County, he was a member of the Board of Governors of the Democratic Club of Great Neck and engaged actively in county and state Democratic Party activities. He was an active sponsor of Stevenson in 1956 and 1960 and worked closely with him, including being a member of the group that went to Los Angeles from New York on his behalf. In 1958 he was a floor manager at the Buffalo convention for Tom Finletter who was seeking the New York State nomination for Senator.

Presently Bob is a member of the Executive Committee of Village Independent Democrats and a member of the FDR-Woodrow Wilson Democratic Club. He was Paul O'Dwyer's campaign manager when he was elected Councilman-at-large for Manhattan. Additionally, he is Vice President of the Morningside Community Center and has devoted many volunteer hours to strengthening its financial base.

He is a member of the National Boards of The Committee for Sane Nuclear Policy and Americans for Democratic Action, and is a member of the latter's Foreign Policy Commission. He is a former New York State Chairman of ADA and a vice-chairman at present.

Bob, a former captain in the Marine Corps, who holds a Ph.D in Economics, has done all this while serving as a bank vice president and as a lecturer in finance at City College. Thus, his record of voluntary contribution reveals a real personal dedication. We know he would be an equally dedicated Congressman.

Although a number of outstanding Democrats are seeking this nomination, we know Robert Schwartz would represent us most effectively in Congress. We feel that his long experience as a Government official and his dedication to liberal causes will add another effective voice to the emerging new leadership of the Democratic Party. We ask that you not only vote for him, but that you urge your fellow Committeemen to support him as well.

TO ELECT ROBERT J. SCHWARTZ

NEW YORK, NEW YORK

NEWS

INFORMATION: DR. PAUL MILVY
TR 4-7724

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

NEW YORK..... A meeting of more than 100 scientists, physicians, university professors and allied professionals from the Universities Committee in the New York area has endorsed the candidacy of Robert J. Schwartz for the Democratic nomination to the Congressional seat to be vacated by Mayor-elect John V. Lindsay in the 17th Congressional District.

At an ad hoc meeting Friday night (December 3rd) in the Piccolo Mondo Restaurant, it was also decided to form a committee from the academic community in support of Mr. Schwartz.

Mr. Schwartz addressed the meeting. He said that earlier in the day a reporter had telephoned him, saying that Orin Lehman had withdrawn his signature from a statement circulated by Freedom House which called on the American public to support the Government's program in Vietnam.

"I hope this report is true," Mr. Schwartz stated. "I welcome it. I've known Orin for sometime. I think of him as a friend of mine. I'm happy that he may be at last reaching a position I have supported consistently since 1957.

"Now I challenge Orin Lehman to join me in bringing about a constructive dialogue in our district and in our country over our Government's position in Vietnam.

"Our problem in Vietnam is political, not military. The interests of the United States require an end to the bombing of North Vietnam, and willingness to meet with all the parties in the fighting, including the Vietcong, and to the Geneva Agreement of 1954. These are conditions that could lead to a cease fire and to negotations that would end the war.

"I call upon Orin Lehman to do more than withdraw his name from the Freedom House statement. I ask him now to resign as a member of the Board of Trustees of Freedom House or to state publicly his opposition to their statements on the war in Southeast Asia.

"Now I would like to ask Orin Lehman for his stand on our intervention in the Dominican Republic. What position does he take on the question of proliferation of nuclear weapons? How does he view the proposal for a multi-lateral nuclear force? Does he believe Communist China should be seated in the United Nations? He should make public his views on all the problems of vital importance to voters, and I would like a full and frank exchange of views with him before the voters in the 17th Congressional District."

Mr. Schwartz said that he was particularly disturbed by a statement published by Freedom House on July 21, 1965, which carried Mr. Lehman's name.

That statement said some persons who signed an advertisement opposing the governments's position in Vietnam were "avowed Communists" while other signers who were not Communists had "allowed themselves to become parties to an insidious propaganda campaign."

Referring to this statement, Mr. Schwartz said:

"I resent smear tactics of this kind, and I reject the claim that liberals like Orin Lehman have to associate themselves with the tactics that should have been buried with Senator Joe McCarthy.

"As recently as November 17th, at the Ansonia Democractic Club where Orin Lehman and I appeared together on the same platform, he did not give me the impression he had changed his thinking on Vietnam. At that meeting, I announced that I supported the November 27th demonstration for peace to take place in Washington. I recall that Mr. Lehman said when asked whether or not he favored that meeting, 'I really haven't given it much thought.'"

Mr. Schwartz said that George Field, Freedom House executive director, recently made an incorrect attack on the peace movement in the United States.

"The press quoted Mr. Field as saying that those who marched in Washington on November 27 were the same sort who cheered loudest when Neville Chamberlin brought home his peace pact with the Nazis. The same press account noted that Mr. Field amended this statement later. He now wanted to say that those who were in Washington that day were still the same sort of people but were also 'decent.'"

Mr. Schwartz said that Mr. Field's statement was insulting,contemptible and in direct opposition to the facts. He said: " I was in college at the time of the Munich pact. I was opposed to it and to the rise of fascism. Today, those demanding escalation of military action in Asia include not only Barry Goldwater and Richard Nixon but some of the same radical right that organized the American First Committee in the late 1930's. And those leading the cause for peace today are the same who opposed Chamberlin and the rise of fascism in Europe. I ask Orin Lehman to repudiate these remarks made by Mr. Field.

"If Orin Lehman has indeed dissociated himself from the latest Freedom House ad, I heartily welcome him as a newcomer to the ranks of those who have been opposed to military escalations these many years. The more who see the light the better. That includes other Democracts who are declared candidates for Mr. Lindsay's seat in the 17th Congressional District.

"Mr. Paul Rao, Jr., for example, has expressed complete support for Government foreign policy. According to his stated concept of the role of a Congressman, Mr. Rao would go to Washington to sign blank checks for the President. I replied to him in a statement made on December 1st. As for the other announced candidate, Mr. Stanley H. Nason, he too has indicated full accord with current foreign policy. In a letter to members of the Democractic county committee in the 17th District, of which I am one, Mr. Nason asked members to familiarize themselves with his views ' as well as those of the other candidates.' I am attempting to make my views clear and well known, and I will be glad to debate with any and all of the candidates before the county committee members of my district."

The committee supporting Mr. Schwartz plans to recruit additional workers from the academic community and to campaign actively for his nomination and election. A temporary steering committee has been named, including:

Mr. James Farmer

New York, New York

Dear Mr. Farmer:

As you know, the draft capital budget issued by the City Planning Commission on December 7th did not include my request for $250,000 for each of the next five years to prepare a master plan for the revitalization of Harlem and East Harlem.

The enclosed copy of a letter I sent to Chairman Ballard includes some of the reasons why I feel that the Commission's failure to recognize the need for these planning funds is not in the best interests of the City of New York.

I am advised that many citizens who share my views will appear before the City Planning Commission at its budget hearing to urge that the requested planning funds be included in the proposed capital budget which will be issued by the Commission later this month.

A presentation by representative speakers in favor of making these minimal funds available is the most effective way of influencing the Commission's thinking.

Place of the Hearing: Board of Estimate Chamber, City Hall

Your cooperation would be appreciated.

Enclosure

December 7, 1965

Hon. William F. R. Ballard
Chairman
City Planning Commission
New York, N. Y.

My dear Mr. Ballard:

I am shocked to learn of the decision of the City Planning Commission which refuses to include in the Capital Construction Budget for 1966-67 and for each of the succeeding four years my request for minimal planning funds of $250,000.

I sought these funds for my office as a guarantee that money would be available as an initial commitment by the City of New York for the development of a master plan for the revitalization of the Harlem-East Harlem areas. With the City Planning Commission acting as my agent, the money would have secured the necessary professional personnel for the development of such a plan as proposed at the Borough President's Conference of Community Leaders on September 29, 1965.

The money also would have laid the basis for an appeal to the state and federal governments for additional planning funds, if needed and certainly to help put the overall plan into effect.

When New York City refuses to take the initial step, we can not reasonably expect Albany or Washington to lend a sympathetic ear.

Who can disagree that our Harlems ought to be reclaimed as integral parts of our city?

Can we, with justification, defer any longer government's decision to desegregate the inner city? Can we really sit by in comfort as the perimeters of our non-white ghettos within this city expand and form cities within the city? Can we postpone another day the decision to arrest the deterioration of our public school system resulting from the flight of our white population and our Negro middle class to the suburbs?

The Planning Commission's decision suggests that a major need of the City of New York is a City Planning Commission which recognizes the terrible urgency for beginning at long last the revitalization of the Harlem-East Harlem ghetto where 500,000 persons, or almost one out of three Manhattanites live.

This refusal to cope with reality, this indifference to our most urgent urban problem should shock all New Yorkers as it has shocked me. I ask the City Planning Commission to reconsider its decision and to weigh the effects of delay.

Sincerely,

CONSTANCE BAKER MOTLEY

SUMMARY

COMMITTEE TO ELECT

ROBERT SCHWARTZ TO

CONGRESS (17th District, N. Y.)

10 East 38th Street, N.Y., N.Y. 10016

YU 2-5999

(In a statement published December 9, Councilman Robert Low, Democratic candidate for the seat in Congress from the 17th CD presumably to be vacated by Mayor-elect John V. Lindsay on Dec. 31st, called on Mr. Lindsay to resign his seat immediately on the grounds that New York should not have one less representative in Congress than it is entitled to.)

The following statement was made today by Robert S. Schwartz, also a Democratic candidate for nomination to Mr. Lindsay's seat. Mr. Schwartz is a member of the executive committee of the Village Independent Democrats.

I am more concerned with the kind of representation we have in Congress than with the number. It is more important now to elect a Congressman from New York who has a record of achievement in the area of major concern to our country -- the dangerous escalation of military action in Southeast Asia.

In announcing his candidacy, Mr. Low made what appears to be the first public statement on foreign policy of his political career. He took a position on Vietnam which I consider no more than a hasty and ill-considered public relations response to the dialogue I initiated in the campaign for the nomination. He would use the United Nations without any recognition of the inherent difficulties in this suggestion, and yet he makes no reference whatsoever to the Geneva Agreements of 1954. This is shooting from the hip in genuine western style.

Orin Lehman has also been practicing the fast-draw on foreign policy. It was only on Nov. 17, when a group of Democrats asked him whether or not he supported the Nov, 27th demonstration for peace planned for Washington, that Mr. Lehman said, "I really haven't given it much thought." His lack of preparation on the subject of Vietnam is further demonstrated by his call for a unilateral ceasefire at the same time he says that the Geneva Agreements are "water under the dam." This is reckless and irresponsible at a time when we are now under the threat of a general war in Asia. The point is that the major vehicle for peace is the Geneva Agreements and a reconvening of the Geneva Conference nations.

I have been a member of the Foreign Policy Commission of ADA since its inception. I have been writing background papers on Southeast Asia since 1957. My position on foreign policy has been published frequently through advertisements I have signed and through statements released by the Committee for a SANE Nuclear Policy, on whose National Board I am an active member. The war in Vietnam and the threat to world peace it carries are matters too grave for politics-as-usual in New York City.

Let me make my own position on Vietnam clear. I submit that there are three basic proposals our Government should be willing to advance toward a ceasefire and negotiations that could end the war. These are: 1) An end to the bombing of North Vietnam. 2) An agreement to meet with all parties to the conflict, especially the National Liberation Front of South Vietnam, and 3) An agreement to sit down at a reconvened Geneva Conference with all parties including the NLF.

It is essential to note there is no evidence to show that the belligerents would not accept these proposals as a prelude to talks. In fact, Hanoi has announced again and again that the Geneva Agreements are the key to peace in Vietnam.

The bombing was supposed to drive North Vietnam into our arms. Instead, North Vietnam has taken a step toward China: The Chinese have begun rebuilding railroads destroyed by the bombing. That help may be the beginning of substantial assistance pretty fast. The Soviet-American détente cannot grow toward an entente while the war in Vietnam rages. The support the United States has been known to enjoy from the neutral nations of the world has virtually evaporated. Even our close allies are obviously restive.

I earnestly ask my fellow Democrats to pause, to think and to engage in a meaningful dialogue with me over Vietnam while there is time.

Dear Fellow-Committeemen:

Permit me to impose upon your time to set forth in some detail the developments of my campaign to obtain the Democratic nomination and then to be elected to the Congress. I also want to take this opportunity to present to you my views on a number of important matters. The ten minutes which have been allotted to each of the candidates to speak and the five minutes to answer questions at each of the regional meetings held to date appears insufficient to give you the opportunity to evaluate each of us. I therefore ask you to indulge in reading this letter. I know, from having spoken to many of you, that you feel a responsibility in choosing a candidate and are interested in obtaining sufficient factual material to enable you to make the wisest decision.

In the short time since I announced my candidacy on November 30, support for me from our district and across the country has exceeded all expectations. Most significantly, substantial support is rooted in my fellow-committeemen in greatly increasing numbers. This tremendous response has enabled me, within the first week, to create a strong campaign staff and a large, enthusiastic corps of volunteers. We have received substantial financial support and contributions of all our printing, mailing and headquarters for the campaign. My candidacy has also attracted nationwide interest and appeal. There has been comment in the press as far away as The Los Angeles Times and radio coverage across the country. Two members of the Congress have promptly endorsed me, George E. Brown, Jr. and Don Edwards. Other Congressional endorsements are forthcoming and many from the academic community, the professions and the arts. Some New York unions have offered their assistance.

Events since my announcement have not only reinforced my decision to run, but have had dramatic impact on my appeal for support. News of a more rapid build-up of our forces in Vietnam, the alarming hints of a general war in Asia, the magnificent appeal of the National Council of Churches, representing 40 million Protestants, and the resolution of The Ecumenical Council, have all intensified public concern with the war. I am proud to have brought the problem of Vietnam to the forefront as a campaign issue in the 17th District, and I am more than ever convinced that a September 1965 Gallup Poll was correct in reporting that 69% of the voters would prefer to elect a Congressman who would do more to bring peace to Southeast Asia. I urge you to give the greatest care and thought to the various approaches to the problem of Vietnam now being presented for your consideration. We dare not pick a man bent on signing blank checks for the President. More than that, there is no place in Congress for a Representative from this district who is not hard-headed and realistic enough to appreciate that the policy of military escalation in Vietnam must be opposed without reservation. Neither Robert Low nor Orin Lehman have shown they possess that essential understanding or familiarity with the complexities involved in foreign policy.

I am a maverick in politics, as John Lindsay is, and his political fortune is ample proof that the 17th District voters are discerning enough to support a candidate combining principle, common sense and the strength of his convictions. Let me restate my position on Vietnam.

The build-up of a trend toward sanity and sense in Washington's view of the world has been dissipated since President Kennedy's assassination. The Johnson Administration now relies on a policy of military intervention and escalation which is pushing us toward a senseless world war. We are in a full-scale ground war in Asia, in some ways already a bigger war than Korea, and without allies. This is a tragedy President Eisenhower warned against and President Kennedy carefully avoided. The no-compromise line just reiterated so strongly by Secretary of State Rusk will drag us from tragedy to holocaust. I believe, as Senator Fulbright has just stated, that settlement of the war in Vietnam requires concession and an intelligent compromise as a first step. The President must be urged to:

1. Halt the bombing of North Vietnam.
2. Meet in negotiations with all parties to the war, including the National Liberation Front of South Vietnam.
3. Call for a reconvening of the Geneva Conference to include the N.L.F. and state a willingness to abide by the decisions of such a Conference.
4. Utilize the U.N. wherever possible.

There is no evidence today that the belligerents would refuse to accept this four-point proposal.

Is there an alternative to nuclear war and can it be formed? The answer is emphatically "yes". In foreign policy, proceeding from this basic outlook, I would work, as your Congressman, to place increasingly greater reliance and dependence on the United Nations as a peace-mediating and peace-keeping forum. Toward that end, I would support admission of mainland China to the U.N. Toward our goal of general and complete disarmament, I would work through the U.N. to win a moratorium on underground testing; help to obtain an agreement based on the U.N. resolution of 1961, curbing the proliferation of nuclear weapons. As an early step, I would also advocate extension of the U.N. resolutions covering nuclear-free zones to as many areas of the world as possible. I would in addition seek to use the U.N. as a priority agency of choice in the handling of our programs of economic aid,trade and other forms of assistance.

I have a record of competence in foreign policy matters. I have been a member of the Foreign Policy Commission of A.D.A. since its inception and am on the National Board of the Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy. In addition, I was for eight years a senior civil servant in Government involved in foreign policy matters.

There is of course much vital unfinished and new business for a Democratic Congressman from the 17th District. I want to present here the highlights of my positions on key issues. The world is going through two kinds of revolutions: One has created new nations and new socio-economic systems. The other revolution has started in our country only in the form of technological breakthroughs which have produced the world's first affluent society and at the same time left major areas in the worst kind of poverty. I would work in Congress to bring the Great Society to every segment of our country. In anticipation of legislation I would support providing for a guaranteed annual wage, I would seek a Federal program of unemployment benefits lasting the length of involuntary unemployment and equal at minimum to two thirds of wages last earned. I would seek a minimum wage of $2.00 an hour and would adjust Social Security cash benefits to assure no less than socially acceptable subsistence requirements.

In the field of civil rights, I would seek to put teeth in the Voting Rights Act of 1965 and the Civil Rights Act of 1964. I favor Federal Registrars in every country where voters are now unlawfully disenfranchised. I would help in the efforts to unseat any Congressman elected through a segregated political structure; I would join those calling upon the Attorney General to accelerate school desegregation in compliance with the Supreme Court decision now eleven years old. I would introduce legislation in the Congress making it a Federal crime to injure or intimidate in order to deprive any person of his lawful rights to speak, assemble peacefully, demonstrate, or vote. I have done substantial voluntary work on these matters in Mississippi and in Harlem.

With respect to civil liberties, I favor the abolition of the House Un-American Activities Committee and support the repeal of existing legislation limiting the right to free speech, association and political expression and oppose efforts to legalize wiretapping in any form. I believe in a citizen's right to free and unrestricted travel throughout the world. The Supreme Court decisions of 1964 with regard to the principles of "one-man-one-vote" must be upheld.

In the field of health, education and welfare, I believe that all Americans are entitled to full, prepaid, universal health insurance, covering preventive, diagnostic and therapeutic care. Medicare represents an incomplete concept but is a good start.

What about the 17th District and the City of New York? I believe that a society, in order to be affluent, is obliged to develop entirely new concepts of economic planning, regional planning and Federal, State and Municipal relationships. It should be clear by now, with Megalopolis slowly strangling opportunities for the good life, that an entirely fresh approach to the problems confronting New York must be taken. As you know, I am a trained economist, a banker by profession, with long experience in Washington, and I have given considerable thought to this problem over the past several years. I have remained in close touch with friends in Washington operating at the highest levels of Government, and you have my assurance that I am aware of the gravity and the complexity of the problems facing our District and City.

I am acutely aware of the difficulties in the Reform movement between the East and the West sides. I believe that coming from a West side club and running in a district that I would represent which is predominately on the East side, I am in a unique position to bring harmony to the Committee for Democratic Voters. I have no special ties and no special interests except those which I consider best for our constituency. I have been involved in various phases of C.D.V. since its inception and have not participated in any internal political struggles but rather have focused on the issues involved.

It has been constantly said to me that "what we want is a winner" and that my name is not sufficiently known to be that winner. I have found during this brief campaign to date that one who stands firm on an intelligent position, is articulate and knowledgable, quickly achieves strong support. In conclusion, you may test, as I have, some of the voters and find, as I have, that I have substantial strength among those voters who selected John V. Lindsay as their Congressman.

I welcome the support of each and everyone of you and invite you to call or to visit my headqaurters.

Sincerely,

Robert J. Schwartz

PROPOSAL FOR A "PAC" (Political Action Committees) MOVEMENT

As far back as the November elections of 1965, a new political wind has been stirring in this city and across the country. People are more and more in motion, seeking new forms and directions for effective political action in behalf of their most urgent needs . . . for full civil rights and liberties for all Americans, for the security and dignity of labor, for truly equal opportunity for all youth without exception to enjoy rich and rewarding lives in a world of peace and plenty.

The last-minute sweep of Mayor Lindsay into office in a spontaneous popular rejection of political machinism and stand-pat-ism . . . the unprecedented near-victory (by 1%!) of a candidate who would have been the first Negro mayor of a major industrial city, Cleveland . . . the triumph for academic freedom in the sweeping Hughes victory in New Jersey (on the central Genovese issue) . . . the thumping defeat of the Ultra Right in many parts of the country, most notably in Detroit where it had concentrated its efforts--all these popular trends and mandates among others have indicated which way the rising wind would blow in '66.

Events have since borne out this promise. With historic marches and rallies in this city and across the land, Americans have been demonstrating as never before their massive will toward peace in Vietnam and throughout the world. Significant new political forms have emerged out of this popular will toward peace--from independent movements and candidates to the newly set up Foreign Policy Council, which is working for a just peace within the ranks of the President's own party.

On the Civil Rights front too, new actions and demands have grown apace, calling world attention to such inspired events as the recent heroic trek across Mississippi. This swelling outcry for a people's dignity and freedom, which as the true measure of democracy for all Americans, has likewise achieved a new maturity and taken on new political forms . . . the continuing active growth of the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party, for example, along with other local independent groups, and most significantly, the recently formed, brilliantly conceived National Conference for New Politics.

To harness this new wind at its maximum force for peace and progress is the immediate task before us. And time is of the essence here. We cannot wait until it has flagged or lost momentum. There is no better time to "take political fortunes at the flood" than in an election year.

However, new forms must be found to tap these growing resources. A bold new approach is needed to cut through the knots in which traditional party politics has tied us. Too long the old political parties have played a "shell game" with the American people, forcing them to make choices in an "either-or" situation over which they have had little or no control. Even the various independent and reform movements, for all that they have accomplished, have not effectively broken this stranglehold of the old two-party system on millions of Americans--and ironically, here in New York, particularly in the ghetto areas, where people's needs and readiness for independent action is greater than ever before.

For these many compelling reasons, it is proposed here that we who truly desire a "new politics" in this city and country, work together toward building an independent political action movement with an entirely new and fresh approach to this difficult problem, cutting through crippling entanglements with old party procedures and commitments by the simple and direct expedient of going straight to the people, the citizens and voters of our city, where they now are, in their own communities and community, labor, social, welfare and other organizations.

The basic nucleus of this movement would be the Political Action Committee set up within each separate organization. Its function primarily would be to promote discussion, information, education and activity among the membership around political issues, platforms and candidates, in behalf of their own urgent needs and demands.

In addition to this inner-organization work, these Political Action Committees would elect representatives to a regular, over-all Political Action Conference, held periodically as agreed, to act as a guiding and coordinating body for the Committees as a whole. This larger Conference of leaders and representatives of the affiliated organizations could discuss and adopt positions, stands, actions and plans, which could then be brought back via the PAC Committees to their respective groups for full membership discussion and decision.

How PAC Would Operate:

The basic nucleus of this movement would be the Political Action Committee, working primarily within its own organization. Its function would be to promote discussion and debate, education, information and activization of the general membership on and around political issues, campaigns and candidates, in behalf of their own urgent needs and demands. The Political Action Committees would also elect representatives to an over-all Political Action Conference covering all such groups on a district, community or city-wide basis, to be held regularly and periodically as decided.

This representative Political Action Conference would discuss the political situation in terms of this larger area, defining and adopting positions on various party planks, platforms and candidates--or adopting independent positions on these, as the need exists--and generally giving guidance and direction to the work of the Committees. The Committee representatives would then bring back to their respective organizations all these ideas, suggestions, plans, positions and actions taken by the larger Conference, for their decision and implementation.

Rules of procedure in this Political Action Conference would of course be adopted by its participants, subject to the approval of the membership at large in each participating group.

In this flexible yet effective way, people's groups and organizations reflecting a wide variety of needs, orientations, affiliations and opinions, would be enabled to inform and avail themselves of the great potential that lies in common united action for the common good--in any political situation both during elections and the year 'round . . . taking stands on platforms, planks and candidates not based on any rigid commitment to any political party but on the basis of the issues and those candidates who will stand committed on them.

During elections, the flexibly coordinated PAC Conference could, by its own decision, adopt a specific common platform of agreed-upon planks on such basic issues as an immediate end to the war in Vietnam, securing an effective world peace, full implementation of civil rights, aid and opportunity for all youth and really winning the war on poverty.

Such a common platform, once adopted and agreed upon by the membership organizations, could then be used as a test-basis for the support of candidates by the entire PAC movement, depending on their acceptance thereof.

This would pin down politicians running for public office squarely on the issues as never before--and enable the voters to make demands from a position of organized strength rather than merely appealing for the good will, pledges, and "promises" of candidates on these crucial issues--begging for crumbs from the political table, so to speak--as has been done heretofore.

Advantages of the PAC Movement:

The PAC Movement would have any number of advantages over previous independent political movements and actions, among which are the following:

1. PAC could tap the broad forces and leadership, the actual and potential strength of grassroots communities and organizations in our city, which have never been tapped before. Through its regular and well-publicized larger Conferences, it could reach wide sections of our citizenry who have never been politically educated or activated before.

2. PAC could establish a firm footing in the heart of New York's ghetto areas, which up till now have been in the pocket of machine politicians for want of an effective alternative. It could mobilize those forces who have long been justly outraged by official indifference, neglect and abuse--and channelize their energies away from periodic explosions of frustration into meaningful paths of forceful concerted action.

3. PAC would give the poor and deprived of our city that initiative and leadership in solving their problems which has been a major demand of all real fighters in the war against poverty.

4. PAC would link together those ever-enlarging sections of our population who are actively engaged on many fronts in the fight for peace, Civil Rights, labor's rights, youth's needs, care of the elderly and all other aspects of building a truly Great Society--on the solid foundations of effective political education and political action for the common good of all.

5. True to its name, the PAC movement would be in the best traditions of American organized labor at its highest level of political consciousness. Political Action Committees (which are already an indigenous part of the work of many trade unions), when coordinated in their activities with such a movement, linked in policy and action through its representative Conference of leaders, could supply that indispensible link with labor toward which the historic Civil Rights struggle has been moving--and on which the successful outcome of all movements toward a free, peaceful and prosperous America ultimately depend.

6. Finally, such a movement would be both practical and adaptable to new situations as they arise. With a minimal necessary outlay in expenditures, of time, money or personnel, without the formidable red tape that would be involved in launching a political party at this time--and without separating itself from or alienating those voters who are still aligned with the old political parties--it would have the added advantage of utilizing its forces where they can be most effective, in their own communities and within their own organizations.

Thus the PAC Movement could develop step by step on a year-round basis, over not one but many electica years, to raise the general level of popular political education and organization, and lay a solid groundwork for other and varied forms of independent political action as the need and readiness arise.

Dear Sir:

Over the years you have been involved in community action to advance the cause of equal justice for all people. Over the years I, too, have been involved in the fight to strengthen our democracy and protect the liberties of all peoples.

We are engaged now in a grave struggle to bring national representation to thousands of Negroes and Puerto Ricans who are not represented in the Congress of the United States.

Many political forecasters have said that Negroes are not ready for self-representation in Congress. This myth must be dispelled. Thousands of Negroes were killed and maimed in defense of our country while fighting in every war or conflict that America has fought -- and thousands of Negroes and Puerto Ricans are presently being slaughtered in Viet Nam in a war that has no clear purpose or course. The Negro people are ready for self-representation -- now.

If you feel as I and the mounting number of supporters do that the Negro people are as qualified as any people to represent themselves in the total political structure of Brooklyn, then it is a simple matter -- you must now put your body where your "mouth" is. Come to my headquarters at 317 Rockaway Avenue, near Eastern Parkway, at 7:00 p.m. any evening, (Saturday from 10:00 a.m. on), so that we might together prove true that Americans are equal to the task of democracy. We cannot wait for an indifferent white power structure to give us our rights.

IF YOU HAVE ALREADY MADE A FINANCIAL PLEDGE AND HAVE NOT SENT THE MONEY IN, DO SO IMMEDIATELY, AS FUNDS ARE URGENTLY NEEDED. IF YOU HAVE NOT MADE A PLEDGE BUT HAVE PRIDE IN SELF REPRESENTATION, PLEASE MAKE A FINANCIAL COMMITMENT IMMEDIATELY.

Make checks payable to:

FREEDOM DEMOCRATIC CLUBS (not N.Y.)

28 E. JACKSON BLVD. • CHICAGO, ILL. 60604 • PHONE 922-0186

FOURTH WARD REGISTRATION REPORT

The fourth ward has 63 precincts, 50 of which were chosen by the Freedom Democratic Clubs for canvassing. Intensive efforts were made in 32 of these 50. They were chosen because of their high density low income Negro population, which has been relatively neglected by the regular Democratic Organization, controlled there by Claude B. Holman. FDC members in the area joined with resident workers and FDC field workers from other areas in a house to house canvass program. They uncovered a total of 1,625 unregistered voters, or voters who needed to re-register.

The workers encountered immediate attempts at intimidation, resulting from the fear that a growing FDC might hold out the possibilities of political change. The FDC workers were able to overcome this intimidation attempt, and register 856 voters of the inital 1,200 found. The regular organization at this time began registration attempts also, and we believe the remaining 344 were registered by them. In addition to the new voters, 425 people were uncovered who needed change of address cards to be eligible to vote. 328 of these were successfully taken care of.

On October 6 a special four man force was assigned to locate and register those remaining 97 potential voters. On October 6 also, the entire FDC registration group made a most dramatic effort to get out the unregistered voters by visiting taverns, barber shops, pool rooms, and physically took people to the polls. The results of this day's effort are not included in our final totals, but it is estimated that we registered an additional 3,100 voters. (This figure could not be verified by FDC cards since time did not allow making separate FDC registration cards for these people.)

The final figures from the registration cards we do have is as follows:

856	eligible voters registered
328	address changes
87	address changes on Oct. 6
1,271	total on FDC cards

The results from the 4th ward on election day are most significant when compared to the '62 election, and certainly significant standing alone in contributing to the Goldwater defeat.

1962:	Yates	17,325	Dirksen	3,845	Total: 21,170
1964:	Johnson	26,714	Goldwater	1,685	Total: 28,399
	Kerner	23,921	Percy	3,452

We feel sure that you must be proud to have been instrumental in making this possible. We of the Freedom Democratic Clubs are grateful to you for your awareness of the serious situation faced, and for your willingness to help. We believe that by consistant efforts of this nature we, and you, can bring about the changes so necessary for true political representation, for ourselves, and for those who are least able to do this for themselves. We hope that with the release of these results you share our feeling of accomplishment, and renewed commitment to the necessity for constant civic involvement.

Enclosed is the receipt for your contribution to this effort. Without it, the above results might not have been possible. You have our most sincere thanks.

Respectfully yours,
Albert A. Raby. Chairman

EXPENSE REPORT

The expenses incurred in this registration drive were mainly in salaries. Five full time workers were paid as follows: 1 - $20. per week; 1 - $15. per week; 2 - $50. per week; and 1 - $45. per week. All paid workers came from unemployed families; volunteers who could afford to worked without any compensation. Full time volunteer workers received expenses of between $4. and $10. per week for items such as babysitters and transportation. Eight part time workers received $1. per meal plus bus fare. The total work force by the end of registration was: 70 workers, 22 of them paid, and the balance volunteer.

Expenses were also incurred for flyers and telephone. Homes were used as central offices, where coffee and donuts, and a telephone were available. FDC paid for the food, the use of the phone, and, when necessary, of a car to transport workers. When we ran out of funds allocated to the fourth ward four days before final registration, the entire force of full and part time workers stayed on to complete the job.

DRAFT STATEMENT ON THE NEED FOR STRENGTHENING THE NEW POLITICS

Beginning with the sit-ins of early 1960, American politics has displayed new energies, developed new forms, and moved in new directions. We now propose to make a major national effort to strengthen the "new politics," in the many localities, forms, and walks of life in which it has already appeared: to make its liberating energies available to Americans who have not yet begun to take part; and to bring its ideas and energy to bear on the national government in such a way as to revivify American democracy.

There have been many important elements in this new polities, and it has taken many different forms; but all of them share the most basic commitment to the notion that all men belong in the body politic. None can be excluded or ignored because of race, or poverty, or youth, or age, or lack of education or information, or even because they live in some "foreign" "enemy" country. The most fundamental thrust of the new politics has been to bring new people into politics--housewives into making foreign policy, Negroes into choosing sheriffs and writing laws, Vietnamese and Dominicans into deciding their own future instead of having the great powers decide it for them. One of the major elements in the new politics has been the emergence of a vigorous student movement deeply concerned by the persistence of, and absolutely determined to put an end to, racial inequality and economic injustice within the United States, and the arms race and outright war in the world at large. Another important factor has been the recent ferment and the search for new approaches and policies that have characterized many of the reform-minded and independent: liberals who originally organized in the late 1940's and the '50's in states like California, Texas, New York and Pennsylvania. Still another major element has been the involvement of large numbers of Negroes who had previously been and felt excluded from politics, in making important decisions about their own lives and futures and in acting on those decisions. A fourth has been the entrance of large numbers of clergymen and academics (and increasingly of some lawyers and doctors) who had previously defined their roles as narrowly professional, into social and political action concerned with civil rights and peace. Still another has been the greater militance of many locals in solidly established labor unions, and the greater activism of service workers, farm laborers, white collar workers and professionals such as teachers in demanding, through unions and professional organizations, that previously unorganized and helpless members of the work force be negotiated with and treated seriously.

Much of the flavor of this new political activity has been local, decentralized, communal, in "movement" style, rather than "organization" style. It has used unorthodox means: the sit-in, the teach-in, the rent strike, the Selma-to-Montgomery march, the "freedom ballot" and the fusion ticket, the illegal strike of public employees. It has focused on getting new people into politics and building new centers of energy around the country, rather than on changing the content of decisions made by national political institutions. The new people are coming into politics on their own terms, using their own political forms and formulating their own political dreams and demands--not on the terms "offered" them by those who were already within the political system.

But it has now become clear that those who are carrying on the "new politics" face two problems: first, that activation and organization of new energy, new constituencies, and new localities must be carried on with even more speed and vigor if it is to outrun those resistances that lead to riots at home and wars abroad; and secondly, that much of what those who are in motion in "the new politics" want can only be achieved if the national political institutions change the style, the content, and the quality of their own performance. And the crucial question that now faces Americans who are involved in and who support the new politics is whether it is possible to build a form of political action that can both reinforce efforts to release new political energies around the country and transform the performance of the national government.

Why do we say that the energizing of new constituencies is still necessary, when it is so clear that many more Americans are "in motion" than have been for at least a generation? Because even now, among the Negroes of the urban North, among the submerged poor of every race and religion, even on the campuses, and certainly among the urban and suburban middle classes, there have emerged only a handful of heroes who can win sporadic support for desperate protest--not solid, knowledgeable, long-run groups who can change their own neighborhoods or the national society. Because even where new energy and organization have appeared, its active practitioners have not yet built effective bridges to their counterparts elsewhere in the country, or even across the city--but have remained mostly isolated inside their own narrow constituencies and their own issues. So what the different partners in the "new politics" need to do is to get in touch with each other, locally and nationally, to trade ideas, money, energy, information, and power in such a way as to multiply themselves and their strength.

Why do we say that the style, the content, and the quality of national decision-making need to be transformed? For after all, on every side we hear praise of "the great consensus," and we hear the legislation passed by the 89th Congress called "the most far-reaching of the century."

On two counts.

First, in the theoretical but precious terms of democratic government. For the politics of "consensus" is not the politics of democracy. The quiet "management" of political decisions among institutionalized groups of leaders of various interest groups is the politics of Gaullism, not of free-swinging American democracy. American democratic institutions will not work, will not in fact survive, without the open conflicts of ideas and power that vivified our past. And those clashes of ideas and power must be expressed not only in every locality, but in that institution which should be the locus of conflict on the national scene--the Congress.

Secondly, and more concretely, there are deep needs that are not being met by "the great consensus." (Probably they are not being met precisely because it is the great consensus.) On the two most important issues of our civilization, the 89th Congress, good as it is by all the old measures, has failed to meet the new obligations of the last third of the twentieth century.

First of all, it has failed to meet the great crisis of metropolitan life in the only ways it could be met: by energizing those who live in the cities to join in making the cities decent, and by putting great sums of money behind their efforts. Instead, the rhetoric of the War on Poverty, by which the poor were to be involved in deciding their own futures, has been made barren in the practice of city after city, and the fetishes of the balanced budget, tax reduction, and the arms race have been permitted in their various ways to keep to a minimum the money available for transforming the cities.

Secondly, the Congress has utterly failed to meet the great crisis of international life in the only way it could be met: by moving away from war and the arms race and American military intervention, and toward the encouragement of disarmament, the great transformation of the hungry nations, and the building of a decent relationship between the United States and the Third World. Indeed, the failure here has been so deep that the prosecution of a politically absurd and morally corruptive war in Viet-Nam, of a politically absurd and morally corruptive intervention in the Dominican Republic, and of a politically absurd and morally corruptive cynicism toward the UN have gone almost unchallenged in the 89th Congress. And this despite the obvious dangers of the official foreign policy: (a) that an escalating war in Southeast Asia could at worst explode into holocaust now and at best block (until it is too late) the progress toward world-wide detente and disarmament that must occur if holocaust is to be prevented later; (b) that decency, liberty and progress in the underdeveloped world could be destroyed by our blind arrogance toward the forces of change there;(c) that liberalism at home could be strained and badly damaged by the pressures of patriotic conformity, the deliberate abandonment of moral sensitivity, the strengthening of military institutions (of the worst kind: "political" armies, as in France during the '50's), and the alienation and embitterment of decent opinion overseas; (d) that the simple cost of war will block the expansion of funds for social change at home that is absolutely necessary if the recent symbolic gestures in legislation are to be made into real change, and most important, (e) that no commitment to democratic social change at home can be made, or maintained, by the same society that carries on a morally corruptive war abroad, channeling its creativity and the attention of its public men into destruction. In the face of these dangers, the 89th Congress utterly failed.

And it failed for a reason. The theory behind the Great Consensus, the theory that the 89th Congress accepted, was that the cities must indeed be governed, and that the world must indeed be policed. That theory may seem a major advance over the old notion that the great metropolis is disgusting, ungovernable, and not to be governed but to be left to private rapacity; or over the old notion that the world is evil, totally hostile, and not to be governed but to be left to national rapacity. But it is not enough to say that the metropolis must be governed and that the world must be policed: it is necessary to say that the cities are to be governed democratically, by all the people who live in them; and the world must be policed or governed democratically, by all the people who live in it--and not by Americans, or Americans and Russians, or even Americans and Russians and Chinese. (And so too it is not enough to say that the Congress has advanced education for all, but we must ask whether that education is to be democratic--to include the will of the students. And it is not enough to say that civil rights legislation has been passed, but to ask whether decisions on when to enforce and not enforce it are made from the top in Washington, or democratically in the areas concerned by the people for whose presumed benefit the laws were passed. And so on.)

Such an outlook requires new ideas as well as new centers of political energy. How do we advance the control of a great metropolis by the people who live in it? How do we assure that the poor really do have control over the poverty program? How do we cope with the new definitions of work and leisure that automation is imposing on us? How do we assure that the voice of the wretched and the revolutionary of the world, as well as of the comfortable in the great powers, is heard in shaping the future of the earth? We do not know. Some ideas have begun to cook--decentralization of the cities, a guaranteed annual income, a sabbatical for all, new forms of international development aid and international peace-keeping. But we still do not know. We need social inventions, and many of them must be made by the people who are most concerned--because only they fully understand the political problems of their own condition.

As we see it, therefore, the great need is for the intensification of the new politics, all across the country, to the point at which it can reinvigorate the Congress with new men, not accidentally elected but representing real constituencies. These must be men who see the new necessities of ending poverty and racial inequality, rebuilding our cities and recreating our countryside, stirring a new sense of political involvement and activity in our localities and neighborhoods, taking the major steps that will actually create peace and world disarmament, and building a decent relationship between the United States and the underdeveloped world. They must be men who see that all this must be infused with the democratic motif: that the people must decide, not a few leaders in conference. They must be men who reject consensus and are prepared for, joyous in the prospect of conflict on behalf of democratic decision-making. And they must be men who are able to use the Congress as the place from which to mount a campaign for the national policies that will revivify democracy, even if such a campaign conflicts with Administration desires.

In order to accomplish these ends, we must (1) help activate new centers of local energy for the new politics and assist them in joining with existing centers to develop new programs and policies, and to find and support candidates who will stay committed to those programs; (2) build new national arrangements for supplying such local constituencies with the money, ideas, expertise and legitimacy they need to elect new men to Congress; and (3) support such men, once elected, with legislative research and information services capable of making them highly effective in their seats, in actually pursuing the policies of their constituents in the new politics.

In order to accomplish these three purposes, we believe that a new nation-wide organization is necessary.

We believe it is necessary now. Now, because the Viet-Nam war is going on now and is setting patterns for the future; because the "War on Poverty" is going on now and is setting patterns for the future; because the 1966 Congressional elections offer the first opportunity to show that new political energies in the country want to break and change those patterns. We do not know now--indeed, one of our first task must be to find out--in which districts a "new politics" campaign would be most fruitful. It may well be that in many districts the most useful action that could be taken now would be a campaign for sheriff, or city councilman, or state senator--a local campaign that can build a political base and political experience which would help in a Congressional campaign later; and where this is true, we intend to take part in such campaigns. But the focus of all our judgments will be how best to bring to fuller growth the local energies of the new politics in such a way as to break apart the national ssumptions of the Great Consensus.

There are several different structures that might be used by such an organization as we envision, and a few possibilities are sketched out below:

Possibility I

(A) A National Board, representing the whole array of newly energetic, forward-moving forces in American politics: the student movement, liberal reform clubs and organizations, neighborhood community action groups of poor people, and the new and newly militant labor unions, the civil rights movement, peace groups, academics, and clergymen who have moved into social action, etc. Such a board could sponsor a national fund-raising appeal based on the tithing principle (1% of income). It could distribute the money so raised in such a way as to stimulate local centers of the new politics and put them in touch with each other, building the connections that would make possible vigorous Congressional campaigns; and it could channel money to the most promising of such campaigns, wherever and however they develop--in primaries or general elections, in either party or in independent candidacies, etc., depending on the local situation and the channels that local practitioners of the new politics have found most useful.

(B) A body of local and regional "activators" who could help create and could stay in close touch with the emerging, forward-moving politics of local Congressional districts. These activators could bring together the various local elements of the new politics--campus teach-inners, Negro activists, labor insurgents, reform Democrats, members of community unions of the poor, liberal Republicans, peacenik housewives--in study/action groups where they could work out their differences of approach and emphasis, develop new policies and programs, develop potential Congressional candidates, and become the local nucleii of local political action. The local and regional activators could also organize local forums, debates, and other means of stimulating serious thought on new programs and issues among many segments of the general public; and could keep the National Board closely informed as to the progress of political action in their areas.

(C) A legislative research and information service for those Congressmen who had been elected with the help of the new politics locally or had been endorsed or approved by the National Board. This legislative service could be made up of two groups of people: in Washington, about five full-time experts in various legislative-issue areas who could develop new legislation, keep tabs on the progress of bills and amendments, and otherwise translate new ideas into effective Congressional legislation, investigation, publicity, etc.; and in each of the districts a continuing committee of people out of the new politics who could spot emerging social problems, discuss possible solutions, and propose appropriate legislation to their own Congressman. The legislative service could in effect provide additional legislative assistants to those Congressmen who represent the new politics.

Possibility II

(A) State Boards, in those states where the new politics has a substantial base, with the Boards made up of individuals essentially self-chosen and Board-chosen from various elements of the new politics; these Boards to be responsible for a body of local "activators" who could stay in close touch with the emerging politics of Congressional districts in their particular state and for a group of legislative specialists who would keep in close touch with that state's Congressmen, and to be responsible for sending delegates to a National Board.

(B) A National Board made up of state delegates and of additional valuable individuals without any particular base in a given state, to be chosen by the state delegates. The National Board to have major responsibility for activating the new politics in states where it did not exist, including responsibility for its own staff of regional activators; to be responsible for channeling money, ideas, and people into states or Congressional districts where the new politics was under way but needed help; and to manage a small Washington center for legislative research and information.

Possibility III

(A) A body of individuals across the country, essentially "members," whose membership would be defined by the amount of time and/or amount of money they gave to the new politics or to the national "organization."

(B) A National Board (and perhaps State Boards) to be elected by the members, perhaps with weighted voting according to amount of time and money invested by the members. These Boards to work either as in I or II above.

One final note: would the proposed organization duplicate or compete with existing organizations? We think not: because most groups that now try on a national basis to affect Congressional elections are not attuned to the new politics; because we envision not a paper-membership organization but one that is fluid, more nearly in the movement style, with all that means in terms of warm and continuous contact with the various local insurgencies; because the groups active in the new politics have for the most part focused on other forms of action than elective Congressional politics; because those few that have focused on Congress (like the Mississippi Freedom Democrats and Californians for Liberal Representation) need national connections and assistance of the kind we envision.

STATEMENT ON THE COMMUNIST ISSUE

Adopted by the Convention of the Congress of Racial Equality

June, 1948

1. At the present time in the United States one of the ominous signs that point toward a future war with Russia is the Red scare campaign. We are opposed to this campaign and to what it means in terms of a possible new war. We look with disfavor on the concrete evidences of this campaign as seen in the Taft-Hartley Bill, with its provisions for loyalty signatures of union officials; the Hollywood hearings by the Un-American Activities Committee; the deportation proceedings being taken against alien Communists; and other occurrences.

2. Many of us who have been active workers in CORE campaigns have at one time or another been tagged as Communists. We are given the Red epithet simply because we are, in carrying out a resistance campaign to Jim Crowism, bucking the main currents in our culture. In many newspapers and editorials in the South the Journey of Reconciliation, which we sponsored last spring, was called Communist-inspired. On an interracial picket line it is not unusual for an occasional passer-by to call a picketer a Communist. After a broadcast by a CORE official in Seattle, Washington, some months ago, a woman who had listened to an explanation of CORE principles called up directly after the program to ask if the speaker was a Communist. The uneasy temperament which thus easily suspects Communism is a sign of the times of tension in which we live.

3. In the light of the above two factors, however, our position in regard to Communism should be made clear. We are opposed to the undemocratic tactics which Communist and Communist-front groups use in order to attain their ends. The real aim of the Communist groups is to extol the Soviet Union and to have a like governmental system established in every country where they have the power to accomplish it. Ends justify the means, within the Communist ideology. Therefore any kind of tactics, including violence, trickery, political maneuvering without principle except the ultimate principle of the Soviet system, may be used.

The reason why there is confusion between Communist groups and non-Communist interracial groups is that Communists have used the reace issue as a means of winning support from minority groups. However, the basic principle for Communists is not to establish interracial brotherhood per se. This is illustrated by the fact that during the recent war Communist groups were opposed to the campaign against Jim Crow in the army. They opposed the Lynn Committee, which was set up for the purpose of challenging army Jim Crow. Thus, even the race problem is used as a tactic, not as an end principle. (This is not to say that Communists draw a color line.)

Almost inevitably, when the issue of Communism or Communist control arises in any group it becomes a divisive factor. Many groups working in the race field as well as, of course, numerous labor unions, have discovered this to their dismay. The energies of a group split on this question, instead of being given to a campaign against Jim Crow, ar dissipated in politicking either to gain or to maintain control within the group. Internal struggle militates against unified and effective action against the real problem of race segregation.

It should be made clear that we are fundamentally opposed to imperialism and to acts and policies of injustice, whether initiated by the Russians or by the government of the United States.

4. The positive principle upon which CORE is based finally differentiates our group from any Communist-controlled group, or any group organized along totalitarian lines. We are committed to the basic principle of nonviolence. This means that above all we believe that means and ends are a unity. We can not achieve the good end of racial brotherhood by a bad means of hatred, deceit, and violence. It would be destructive to our more central principles if there was any degree of Communist influence in our groups.

Although there is no fool-proof way of keeping Communists out of any group, the following suggestions if followed should be of real assistance.

1. Be sure that every person who joins the group agrees to the CORE Statement of Purpose and Action Discipline, and will, in good faith, abide by them as long as membership is maintained.

2. Be sure that persons elected to office and to executive committee positions have proven themselves to be conscientious CORE members, committed to nonviolence.

3. When calling on non-members for support in specific campaigns, do not call upon known Communist-front organizations for help. Any non-members should agree to the CORE Discipline before participating in a project.

4. Avoid joining united front activity unless it is fairly clear that non-Communists are in a position of leadership.

5. As CORE policy indicates, take an all out position for complete racial equality, without allowing political issues to cloud our central principles.

Civil Rights Strategy After the March

By Marvin Rich

Reprinted from NEW POLITICS
FALL, 1963

A FEW YEARS AGO, civil rights news was relegated to the maritime section of the New York Times where it occupied a few paragraphs. Today, page after page of the Times and some other papers are filled with civil rights news. Yet, civil rights is poorly, if extensively, reported. Some of this is simply the lag of reporters shifted from Cape Canaveral to Birmingham. The reporters don't know the players and they don't have a scorecard. It is only natural that they will overplay a suggestion for a Negro political party which has no serious backing and ignore for months the brutality and denial of due process in Americus, Georgia.

But the civil rights movement must also bear some of the responsibility. The reporters don't know because there has been too little examination by informed people in the movement. There has been far too little analytical material on Albany, on Birmingham, on civil disobedience, on the implications of boycotts and "preferential hiring." This has confused the general public and the press; more important, it has also left many of the activists looking for direction.

The lack of analysis has two principle sources. Many of those engaged in the sit-ins, the picket lines, the Freedom Rides and the marches want to "make history, not write it." This is, in part, a reaction against a sterile academic background and should be understood as such. In part, it is the natural reaction of those caught up in the middle of a revolution and relegating all demands not of the moment to second place.

A more important reason, however, is the increased competition for funds and prestige. The emergence of new civil rights groups is another reason for the silence and it is far more important. I think that August Meier (New Politics, Vol. II, No. 3) is quite right in emphasizing that the competition between the groups has stimulated all of them to more militant and more effective action. This competition has been on the whole positive. However, it runs in the face of the strong desire for unity. And it is this desire that makes organizational leaders hesitate to analyze lest criticism be mistaken for organizational in-fighting.

This has also tended to inhibit the publication of some of the self-criticism developed at staff meetings and seminars. These meetings thus affect only those present and a small circle of others but are soon lost as staffs grow and turnover. SNCC (Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee) has only one person now actively working for it who goes as far back as the sit-ins of 1960. Since 1960, the CORE professional staff has grown from 4 to 47.

The analysis that is most needed is not of the sort that pours from the university presses. It helps some to have statistical verification for the fact that Negroes as a group have not advanced relative to whites since the war. It helps to know how much the national economy is losing because we fail to use the skills of Negroes. But what we most need is an analysis of our own programs, of where we have succeeded and where we have failed, of what might happen if some of our proposals were actually put into practice, and of what problems we will face in a year and in a decade.

THE CIVIL RIGHTS MOVEMENT is in great flux today. Birmingham and the March on Washington have each symbolized currents in the struggle. Each has had a great impact on the civil rights community and upon the broader community.

The mass demonstrations in Birmingham this spring evoked a surge of thousands into the streets in scores of communities. In May, June and July there were over 12,500 arrests of civil rights demonstrators. The use of fire hoses and police dogs in Birmingham did not deter, but rather stimulated the protests. The use of cattle prods in Gadsden and Americus and of horses in Plaquemine had the same effect. The daily television and news reports of Birmingham helped to stimulate the mass marches in Greensboro and then in Durham, High Point, Goldsboro, Wilmington and Lexington, North Carolina. As many as 6,000 participated in a single CORE demonstration in Greensboro. At one point, 900 sat down in the street and blocked traffic. The mayor who had been hesitant finally called the recalcitrant owners into session and said in effect: "You have a right to make a private business decision to segregate, But how long do you expect the city to pay for the extra police needed to support that private decision? How long do you expect your fellow businessmen to suffer because of your private decision?" The owners integrated. The same kind of thing occurred in many of the cities of North Carolina and, on a smaller scale, elsewhere.

These demonstrations did bring about changes. The Department of Justice esitmates that in a three-month period, 275 of the 574 communities of 10,000 population or larger in the South desegregated some facility. Many communities have changed from "southern" to "northern" in a few weeks. This is a massive change and should be recognized as such. No other period in our history can show such quick changes. And yet, the North is not free of discrimination and discrimination persists everywhere. The restaurants and movies of Greensboro may be open, but what of the jobs and the schools and housing?

For most Negroes, there has been no substantial change in the way of life. Nor is there likely to be one. When 13 Negroes entered the public schools of Atlanta "without incident" the mass media hailed it as a major change. Perhaps it was. Three years later, less than 200 Negroes are enrolled in formerly white schools For the tens of thousands of Negro youngsters still enrolled in the same old Atlanta schools there is no greater educational opportunity.

Birmingham also symbolizes the mass involvement of Negroes from every walk of life in the current struggle. One of the beauties of non-violent direct action is that it permits the uneducated and the unskilled to join with the more highly trained and make a personal contribution. You don't have to be a doctor, or lawyer or minister to walk a picket line or to sit-in. For far too long civil rights activity has been the near monopoly of the educated and the skilled. Now, significant numbers of working class Negroes are participating in demonstrations and some are taking leadership positions. It is fascinating to watch white and Negro university of Syracuse faculty members taking orders from unemployed Negro picket captains in housing demonstrations.

This particular demonstration is interesting for another reason. It is probably the first major demonstration in the nation aimed at urban renewal rehousing policies. Use of civil disobedience has been widespread to halt, at least temporarily, demolition of slum housing until the Negro occupants could be decently rehoused in non-ghetto areas. The urban renewal act calls for this but it has being ignored all over the country. When the CORE demonstrators (some of whom are graduate school students at Maxwell School of Public Administration and who know the law far better than those who locally administer it) called for its enforcement they got nowhere in months of negotiations. When they took to the streets they were called "anarchists." Who are the anarchists? The demonstrators or the city officials who ignore laws they swore to uphold?

But the changing character of the civil rights movement has brought many problems which have not been analyzed. For the college professors and the intellectuals and the ministers who may have to take a back seat to others of lesser status in the general community, there are painful personal readjustments. It is frequently as difficult for the working class person to learn that his opinion is valued even if not expressed in perfect English.

For many, the civil rights movement is a struggle to achieve recognition of the intrinsic value of the individual as a human being. From that point of view, the direct action organizations have held that they must express this in the internal organization and actions of the local groups. The individual member who pickets, serves on a negotiating team, and makes strategy decisions, is also asserting his own self respect. He is acting to achieve his own freedom within him. In this sense, the nonviolent demonstrations are more than means of achieving specific demands. They are also ends in being. President Kennedy and others who often ask that the courts and administrative agencies act so that street demonstrations will stop seem to be unaware of this element. Yet, it has great importance in a complex society where there seems to be so little the individual can do about the great issues that affect him. For the Negro, who has been deprived for generations of all opportunity to master his fate and to assert his manliness and humanity, the demonstrations are especially important.

The involvement of thousands of Negroes has also tended to change the character of the civil rights organizations in other ways. For decades the NAACP has been a Negro-led group with many white members and supporters. The SCLC (Southern Christian Leadership Conference) has been, since its founding in 1957, a grouping of Negro churchmen, churches and religious organizations. CORE, on the other hand, has appealed primarily to a limited secular, intellectual and politicized group. This was primarily white though chapters have always been interracial. Now, most CORE chapters have Negro chairman and most members are Negroes, though substantial numbers of whites are involved (except in the deep South). In many ghetto communities of the North it would be practically impossible to elect a white person as chairman of a group though many serve as chairmen of important action and program committees.

The new membership also brings new problems. Everyone is in favor of mass membership, of closeness to the needs and problems of the community, and of true militancy. Everyone is also for responsibility and carefully thought out programs. These are not antithetical objectives but to make them compatible takes thought, time and energy and money. And there are far too few of all of these. Those who ask for responsibility without providing its prerequisites are themselves guilty of the most profound irresponsibility. The new members are attracted by the militancy and aggressiveness of CORE and SNCC. They are also brought to these organizations by the brutality or the hypocrisy of the white power structures. Each day the TV screens show new evidence of our shallow commitment to the American ideal. Those attracted in this way require a lot of training and discipline before they are truly ready to turn the other cheek.

There is a need to prepare simple instructional manuals that relate behavior to objectives. Too much of the material is of the "Do" and "Don't" variety and far too little emphasizes the "why." There is a need for a tremendous expansion of the number of membership workshops, leadership training conferences and staff seminars. These ought to be an essential part of the program and not just possible when the budget permits. Staff members ought to be forced to take vacations in order to have time to think. It is possible to direct and control demonstrations involving thousands of people. But these methods are not widely known. In a few months as mass demonstrations increase they will be essential.

The alliance between the civil rights movement and the labor and liberal movements will be under greater strain as we attract more and more previously unaffiliated people to the civil rights organizations. Often these are people with little previous background. They are not union members and their lives have been little touched by the liberal organizations or their philosophy. If the "natural alliances" are to be strengthened it will take much work at every level. Liberal organizations cannot place a few Negroes on their boards and rest content. Nor will resolutions of support be enough. Or even financial contributions. Rather it will take intensive day-to-day program support at the local level.

Present lobbying efforts for the civil rights bill have developed an impressive working coalition of civil rights, labor, church and liberal organizations in Washington. But there is still not much duplication of this in Des Moines, Milwaukee and San Francisco. Civil rights organizations cannot rest content with the knowledge that their cause is just and therefore expect others to rally to their support. It isn't reasonable to expect others to drop their main concerns and come rushing to our aid every time we blow the whistle. We have to know more about the operations of other groups, their concerns, their strengths, their weaknesses. Further, these alliances will not develop and flower in a few weeks. There has to be real action not only on ending school segregation but also on the quality of the entire educational system; not only on fair sharing of the available jobs but on greatly expanding the total number of jobs; not only ending discriminatory barriers in housing but also increasing the housing supply for all our people. There has to be enforcement of the housing codes against slumlords as well as new housing developments.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF THE CIVIL RIGHTS organizations to the Kennedy Adminstration is a curious one of interdependence, lack of understanding and disillusion.

The Administration has undoubtedly done far more than any previous administration. Yet, it has been Kennedy judicial appointees such as Harold Cox of Mississippi, E. Gordon West of Louisiana, and Robert Elliott of Georgia who have allowed some of the most flagrant abuses of constitutional rights by local officials. Their decisions have been overturned by the Circuit Court of Appeals but only after needless delay and expense to the movement. The effect upon morale has been incalculable.

The attitude of the Attorney General himself has been ambivalent. In the Freedom Rides and in Birmingham the Attorney General has said to us that he did not have the power to intervene on our behalf. Yet, he has discovered that he did have the power a few days later when public opinion had time to assert itself. The attitude of the Administration to the civil rights legislation has been equivocal. It was the Administration that opposed basing the public accommodations sertion of the 14th Amendment as well as the Interstate Commerce Clause. This simple procedural change was supported by the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights and would have gone far to meet some Republican objections. The attempt to water down the bill in the House Judiciary Committee can only be considered cynical. Before the Attorney General intervened there was a clear majority for the civil rights bill both in the full committee and in the rules committee.

It has been sadly true that the Administration has been counting votes while many of our members have been risking their lives. No amount of sophistication or understanding can explain to a Jerome Smith why it was that two agents of the F.B.I. watched while he was cruelly beaten by a mob.

How can you explain the failure of the Federal Government to intervene in Americus, Georgia where four young Americans have been imprisoned without bond since mid-August on an "insurrection" charge which carries a penalty of death in the electric chair? Why should anyone try to explain this failure of the American government to protect the rights of its citizens?

And yet the Administration has the power to help or cruelly hinder. It has done much and it will do more and so the cry of passion and outrage is muted.

THE MARCH ON WASHINGTON SEEMS ALREADY to have been expropriated. The 1,700 members of the working press present have given our country an impression of a huge gala with foot-dunking guys and strolling gals. The cause for which hundreds of thousands gave up a day's pay to demonstrate seems to have been lost in the self-congratulations of some that the whole thing was neat and orderly. Were Negroes really demonstrating that they were capable of organizing a mass action or that they could be orderly? A stereotype has been refuted but this was hardly the purpose of the March.

So the demands of the March for jobs and equal treatment have been pretty well lost in the shuffle. But other positive aspects of the March have made their point and been driven home. The success of the March as a major achievement of a united movement has intensified the demands for unity of action at the national and at the local levels. This has a basis in a very real and very strong desire in the Negro community itself. For too long the community has been divided by the efforts of some whites to develop and use "Uncle Toms" for their own advantage. Demands for unity also come from those individuals and organizations who want to support "civil rights" but don't want to take the time and energy to differentiate between the civil rights groups. There are also, of course, those who think that unity will be simpler and neater and reduce overlapping and confusion.

There is much to be said for all of these arguments. A united movement can be far more effective than one operating with the support of only a portion of the community. If civil rights legislation is achieved this year it will be because the civil rights, labor and religious groups were united in their lobbying efforts. We cannot really expect most individuals to make sober judgments as to the realistic contributions and claims for support of each of the four or five or six civil rights organizations. The facts are complex and not readily available and most people are busy and interested primarily in their own problems. So they wish to abdicate responsibility. And there are some examples of duplication of effort.

Yet, there is another side of the coin. And it is not simply that there are a lot of unity committees: Council for United Civil Rights Leadership, Joint Consultative Conference, Southern Interagency Conference, Leadership Council on Civil Rights, March On Washington Committee and Voter Education Project. Some of these have specialized functions and meet seldom but all require staff work. It sometimes seems that we spend more of our time coordinating than we do acting. A far more serious objection is the inevitable tendency for coordinated action to be on the basis of the least common denominator of the most acceptable and therefore the weakest action. When the March On Washington brought together the coalition of the groups that supported it it was inevitable that the demand for jobs was downplayed. When the list of demands was promulgated there was a proviso that the 10 sponsoring organizations were not necessarily committed to these demands. Thus, at the very beginning the demands were weakened. Further, since there was no real agreement it was impossible to press them on other occasions.

The same kind of thing operates at the community level. When three or four of the civil rights groups get together to present common demands they increase their political power. But they often have disagreements upon tactics arising out of basic differences in ultimate objectives, methods, and even personality types. These tactical differences can quickly devastate a project. Before they begin a project, groups have to make hard decisions as to whether the advantages of united support will outweigh the difficulties. There is no easy formula to determine this in advance.

There are other difficulties as well. In any unity group there is a tendency to work on the basis of past patterns and associations. Thus the newer groups tend to find they have less influence than those longer established who can claim experience and personal contact and friendship. It's not easy for those who have provided much of the drive for the new civil rights climate to sit back and be considered poor relations or, at best, junior partners.

Then, too, some of the organizations operate in essentially different ways. Some can move in a day or two. Others require far more clearance and consultation. Action thus becomes a function of moving with the slowest. This is terribly discouraging at a time when every moment seems decisive.

The Voter Education Project is one of the best administered of the joint efforts. Wiley Branton and his staff know what they are doing and after some initial growing pains the project is increasing its effectiveness. But even here there are real difficulties. Each of the five participating organizations has a system of reports and accounting devised to meet its own requirements. The VEP has added a sixth system which all the others must use. This is perfectly justified in terms of the VEP's needs but it does establish a new bureaucratic element. Further, there has not been a meeting of the five participating organizations within a year to evaluate the program. Nor has there been a written report of the first year of functioning.

THE CIVIL RIGHTS MOVEMENT IS CHANGING in terms of its perspectives. If Birmingham meant anything it meant that tokenism is no longer acceptable. Wendell Phillips said of the Emancipation Proclamation: "It freed the slaves and ignored the Negro." Much of the civil rights activity of the past has been subject to similar criticism. The "first" Negro in an executive position has often been the only Negro in such a position. The "first" is important as a symbolic achievement but all too often it did not mean any change for the Negro community as a whole. Less than 10% of the Negro school children of the South are in school systems which have formally desegregated. Far fewer are themselves enrolled in integrated schools.

A few years ago there was a rash of Fair Housing Committees in the suburban communities which ring our large cities. These committees carried on educational campaigns, distributed open occupancy pledges, supplied listings of available housing for Negroes. A large amount of effort was expended for discouragingly little result. A few Negro couples moved into a few suburban communities. Too often the housing which was available in this way was too high priced to interest significant numbers of Negroes. The existence of laws forbidding bias in housing has helped and President Kennedy's executive order on housing will also help. But it looks as if the ghetto will be with us for years. And now some of the civil rights groups are looking for ways to work within the ghetto—not in terms of accommodation to it but in terms of ultimately tearing it down.

Novel direct action methods have been devised to achieve this objective. One landlord had been convicted of more than 200 violations of the housing code. He was given a suspended sentence upon expressing contrition and promising to correct the situation. The situation has not been corrected. The CORE chapter entered into negotiations with the landlord, the city Department of Buildings and with the Sanitation Department. There was little to show. Then, the group rented a truck and shoveled some of the trash into it and dumped it near City Hall. Eight people were arrested. The two Puerto Rican residents of the slum (one was on welfare and the other had recently moved from another area) and the CORE chapter chairman were given 10 day sentences and five others received five days each. They were given a lecture about law and order by the judge as he sentenced them. If they had expressed contrition they would probably have received suspended sentences. If they had simply rented the truck and taken the trash to a rubbish heap they would probably have received the approbation of the community. But the problem of insufficient sanitation pick-ups would have remained. This is a simple example of the kind of work that will soon be going on to make our large cities more liveable.

The work of the Northern Student Movement in tutorials also points in one of the newer directions. The possibility of paternalism is obvious but so is the possibility of meeting a real need in a human non-bureaucratic way.

In employment there is increasing emphasis on ending discriminatory barriers for jobs where the skill level is low and where hundreds can secure jobs. Recently, CORE won a campaign at the White Castle Restaurant chain in the Bronx. Two months after the agreement was reached more than 50 Negroes were working at new jobs. By most standards they weren't "good" jobs but they beat unemployment compensation. Traditionally, Negroes have not been bellboys at the New York City hotels. The prestige of the jobs isn't high and neither is the skill level but the income is excellent. And under pressure Negroes will soon have some of these jobs. But here again there is need for some real examination. In industry after industry our negotiators are receiving the answer: "Yes, we have discriminated in the past and we'd like to change now but we're constantly reducing our workforce because of automation." Of course there are answers—in every industry some new employees are hired. But it would be better if we could know in advance what are the expanding industries and areas.

The increasing interest of the civil rights organization in police brutality is another indication of concern with the problems of the great majority of Negroes. Police brutality is not a problem for the middle class Negro nor is it exclusively a problem of Negroes. In the more traditional view it is therefore not a civil rights problem. But the evidence is clear that Negroes, whatever the reasons, face far more brutality by the law than do whites. And so the civil rights groups are working to establish citizen review boards and other techniques to alleviate a shocking condition. There have already been two sit-ins at police stations in New Orleans and Rochester to protest police action.

These last few paragraphs are not to suggest that the old concerns are wrong in themselves. After all, America is a middle class country and if we succeed at all more Negroes will become middle class. It is important that some Negroes move into the suburbs which are now a white noose around increasingly black cities. It is important that Negroes get jobs as engineers and as stock salesmen. However, the new direction will be in terms of increasing the level of aspirations and particularly by Negroes in all aspects of American life.

In the South, greater emphasis will be on basic literacy and training programs, use of the ARA (Area Redevelopment Administration) and the manpower training, but on a truly non-discriminatory basis. The Voter Education Project will increase in scope and effectiveness as well as demonstrations for equal access to places of public accommodations. In the North, there will be greater concern with the reality behind the pledges of "equal opportunity in jobs and housing." The pace of demonstrations will accelerate and the demonstrations will take new forms as the civil rights movement uses the energies of working class Negroes and whites.

tensely will it focus public attention upon a community injustice long in need of remedy? If public attention is so directed, is that likely to increase the pressure upon the lawmakers? Or might misunderstanding of the demonstrators and resentment of them do their cause more harm than good? And we want to know how fully and how carefully other means of effecting change have been attempted, and with what results. On the negative side of the question, we want to know how seriously, if at all, the disobedient act affects the legal order. Is the protest likely to result in riot or chaos? Does the demonstration really deteriorate the legal system, or the respect for law? Or may it perhaps improve that system and increase the general respect for it? How serious a blow to that legal order is the public infraction of it, and the public acceptance of penalty? All of these questions, and others like them, are relevant in deciding whether one is justified in protesting through deliberate disobedience of the law.

With these empirical considerations clearly in mind, and some reasonable set of moral evaluations at hand, one pattern of justification which may then be attempted is essentially utilitarian. Will deliberate disobedience, and its punishment under these circumstances, lead in the long run to a better or a juster society than would compliance with the ordinance in question? Some balancing process of this kind, more or less refined, is, I think, consciously or unconsciously employed by most of those who make a deliberate decision on whether or not to participate in protests of this nature. No man can know that his decision on such matters is infallible, but I do not know what more can be asked of him than that he make it as wisely as he can, after weighing as intelligently as he can all relevant considerations.

Methodists: Crisis of Conscience . . Ralph Lord Roy

America's 10 million Methodists are approaching a racial crisis. On April 26, delegates who gather in Pittsburgh to attend the denomination's quadrennial General Conference must face the fact that their church continues to be segregated. No doubt, every effort will be made to reach a compromise solution, one that gratifies few but preserves unity. Something of the sort was achieved at the last General Conference in 1960, but the revolution in race relations since then has had an enormous impact upon Methodists, as upon the whole nation.

The Methodist Church occupies a position in our country's religious life so indistinct as almost to defy generalization. It demands little or no theological conformity, and in its midst are fundamentalists, conservatives, neo-orthodox, existentialists, liberals, personalists, naturalists and a probable majority that is unconcerned with the finer points of faith. Its churches adopt forms that range from enthusiastic old-time "love feasts," identified with the frontier camp meeting, to a liturgy patterned after the Episcopal Book of Common Prayer.

The most widely recognized and oft-derided characteristic of Methodism over the years has been its encouragement of personal piety. The General Rules of the denomination contain a host of quaint provisions that forbid "the putting on of gold and costly apparel," "the using of many words in buying or selling" and "singing those songs or reading those books which do not tend to the knowledge and love of God." But many Methodists have abandoned the asceticism of their forefathers, and a survey in 1955 disclosed that only 15 per cent objected to dancing, 30 per cent to smoking, 33 per cent to Sunday golf and 40 per cent to bingo (as a means of raising church funds). Predictably, the older a Methodist is, the more traditional his views are likely to be. There is still strong sentiment against alcohol, a perennial target of Methodist ministers, but even here 40 per cent of those under forty-four could find nothing wrong with drinking.

Some see in this growing Methodist latitude ominous signs of spiraling profligacy; others consider it one of the factors that have spared the denomination all major schisms since 1844. The issue at that time was not far removed from the segregation issue of today. Methodism's founder, the Englishman John Wesley, described slavery as "the sum of all villainies," and the first General Conference in America in 1784 pledged itself to "extirpate this abomination from among us." With the invention of the cotton gin, however, slavery regained importance in the economy of the South and Methodist indignation cooled little by little until, by 1840, members of the church exhibited more animosity toward abolitionists than toward slaveholders. Then, with baffling speed, abolitionist fervor swept through Methodism in the North. Four years later, in 1844, a majority of the delegates to General Conference insisted upon a resolution deposing a Georgia bishop who had become an owner of slaves through marriage to his second wife, and who had not emancipated them. The denomination suddenly found itself sundered into Northern and Southern bodies, and the separation persisted for nearly a century.

The rupture was finally healed in 1939, but before that could occur an urgent question had to be answered. What was to be done with Negro Methodists who had affiliated with the Northern faction following the Civil War, but who were largely concentrated in the South? The overwhelming majority of American Negroes have ties with all-Negro denominations, but about 400,000 are members of The Methodist Church, and that is as many as belong to all other multiracial Protestant bodies combined. The compromise devised at the time of reunion twenty-five years ago was to establish the so-called Central Jurisdiction, a euphemism more honestly translated as the Negro Jurisdiction. The result is that nearly all of the 2,800 Negro congregations (there are a few exceptions, mainly in metropolitan areas outside the South) are grouped into segregated annual conferences under Negro bishops and Negro district superintendents.

This shocking situation humiliates many Methodists, and the Central Jurisdiction has been protested by most Negroes and by innumerable whites from the day it was first proposed. Yet, as in most such matters, it is easier to recognize the problem than to prescribe an altogether satisfactory solution. The principal apologists for the Central Jurisdiction emphasize that it has provided Negroes with broad opportunities for leadership. Perhaps this argument can best be illustrated by contrasting the approximate statistics of The Methodist Church with those of the Roman Catholic Church, the one multiracial religious body in the United States with more Negro members (see table below). The majority of Negro Roman Catholics, like Negro Methodists, still worship in all-Negro parishes, but the church has no separate ecclesiastical apparatus comparable to the Central Jurisdiction.

While Negroes comprise less than 4 per cent of the laity of The Methodist Church, the percentage of Negroes among the active bishops serving in the United States is more than 11.3 per cent. This kind of leadership bonus, which is also found to a somewhat lesser degree on many of the denomination's boards and agencies, has appealed to some Negroes and has helped both white and Negro Methodists to rationalize an essentially pernicious system. There are Negro pastors in Georgia, Alabama and elsewhere in the South who have little reason to expect equal opportunity or other fair treatment if submerged into predominantly white conferences. The choice some see is between a segregated structure in which the Negro dominates his own section, and an integrated structure in which their fate would be determined largely by Southern white leadership. Much as they dislike the present situation, they have had enough experience with the white man to be wary of the alternative.

Yet despite such anxiety, most Negroes, most Northern whites, and a number of Southern whites will arrive at General Conference committed to the abolition of the Central Jurisdiction. (Unlike the annual regional conferences, which are segregated, General Conference represents all segments of The Methodist Church throughout the nation.) How should abolition be achieved? There are surprisingly few blueprints for accomplishing this delicate task, and each assumes some degree of gradualism. Two plans are attracting the greatest attention.

The first is proposed by an official commission of the denomination, known as the Committee of Thirty-Six, which includes ministers and laymen of both races, all regions and many different viewpoints. When its "Plan of Action" is boiled down, the committee seems to be saying little more than that the Central Jurisdiction churches should be absorbed more rapidly into the predominately white conferences in which they are geographically located — a process which has been slowly under way since 1956. This report is under attack as being too sluggish, as placing too much emphasis on voluntarism, and as not differing substantially from steps taken at the last two General Conferences. The Southern white members of the committee give unanimous endorsement to the "Plan of Action," and for many that is proof of its timidity. However, it also has the support of all Negro committee members, although some signed with great reluctance. One of its several selling points for liberals is a provision calling for the assignment of Negro bishops to overwhelmingly white areas. This should not be a remarkable innovation, but such a situation has not existed within any American religious body in this century, with the qualified exception of John M. Burgess, who now serves as Suffragan ("assistant") Bishop in the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts.

A bolder proposal has been constructed mainly by Professor Philip Wogaman of the University of the Pacific, and it will come to Pittsburgh with the endorsement of the influential California-Nevada Conference. This plan would abolish the Central Jurisdiction forthwith and set in motion a procedure for rapid incorporation of Negro churches into white conferences. Special consideration would be given to safeguarding Negro positions of leadership. Professor Wogaman sets 1972 as the deadline for completing assimilation.

In 1960, the Central Jurisdiction established its own study group, known as the Committee of Five. Last month, it recommended some comprehensive proposals aimed at removing many vestiges of discrimination within the church. Its position on the Central Jurisdiction, however, has been less forceful. It does not take fundamental issue with the slow-paced procedure now in effect nor insist upon any deadline for action. This has disappointed many liberals within the denomination who had hoped that Central Jurisdiction delegates at General Conference would take a vigorous stand against voluntarism and excessive gradualism. The fact is that there is almost as much disagreement over methods of achieving structural desegregation among leaders of the Central Jurisdiction as within the church at large.

The principal stumbling block to all the plans, of course, is not the Negro Methodist, despite his misgivings and uncertainties. It is the white Methodist in the Deep South, where nearly a third of all Methodists live, where defensiveness has been increasing, and where inflammatory agitation is steadily rising against "radicals" in high Methodist circles. The possibility of a schism exists, and if the Methodist Church is sufficiently forthright on the matter of discrimination, there is certain to be a concerted effort in some Southern conferences to force secession from the denomination. The dilemma for Methodism is to move ahead briskly on the issue of race and still keep the denomination from splintering.

*Most Protestant denominations minister to about twice the number of their actual members. A national sample survey made by the Bureau of the Census in 1957 found that 14 per cent of the population identified itself as Methodist. Probably 20 million Americans, including children, are constituents of the Methodist Church. Another 5 million have ties with separate all-Negro Methodist denominations.

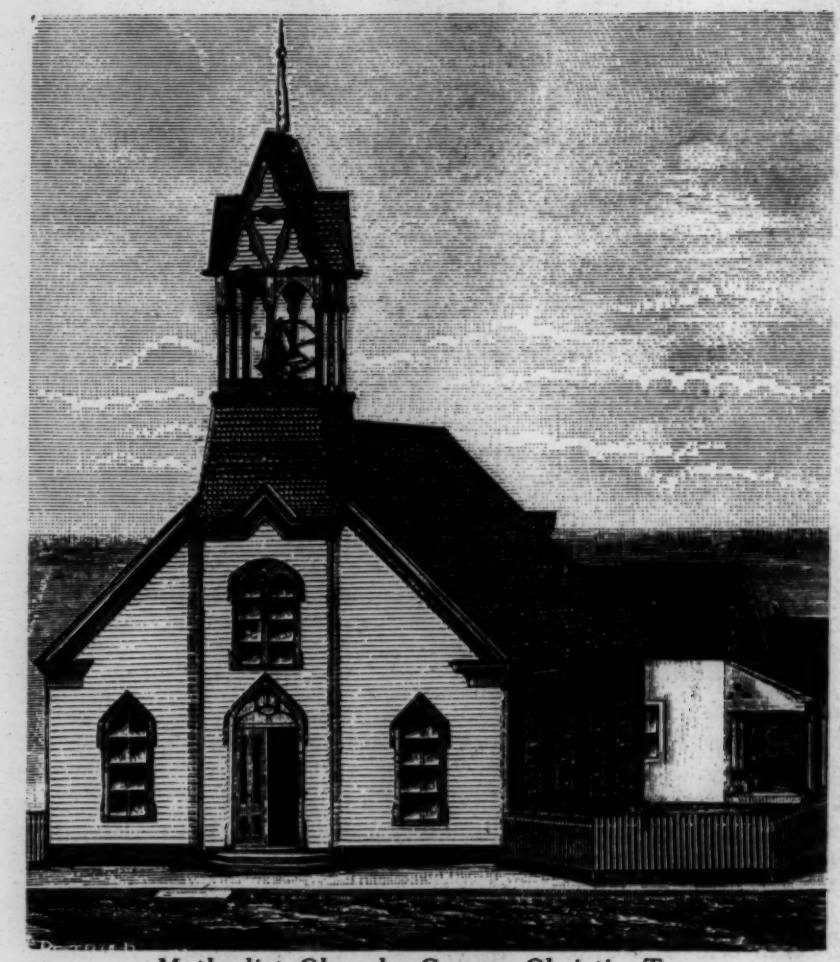
Abolition of the Central Jurisdiction is not the only important aspect of the race question that disturbs The Methodist Church today, and it may not be the most poignant issue at General Conference. Even if, by some magic formula, the Central Jurisdiction could be dissolved this spring, the problem of integration would still exist in the local parishes. Ministers and laymen of both races would sit together in the same annual conferences, and this would be an incentive to further interracial contact. But their congregations would remain about as segregated as before. Integration on the parish level is progressing well in some places, but in this area Methodism and all other religious groups in America still face a formidable challenge. What will the 1964 Conference say and do about churches that not only systematically exclude Negroes from membership but have them arrested when they arrive for a service of worship?

Such an incident occurred on October 6, 1963, when three girls, students at Tougaloo Southern Christian College, were charged with trespassing and disturbing divine worship when they attempted to attend the regular Sunday services at Capitol Street Methodist Church in Jackson, Miss. They were tried, found guilty, sentenced to a year in jail, and fined $1,000 each. Opponents of segregation within the church were scandalized, though they found some comfort in the fact that appeal bond was posted by the denomination's national Board of Christian Social Concerns and by its Woman's Division of Christian Service. Not unexpectedly, this gesture of support produced some loud cries of anguish, and the ladies of several Southern parishes informed Woman's Division headquarters in New York that they had voted to cut off their financial support of the national body.



Methodist Church; Corpus Christi, Tex.

Two of the convicted girls were from the Chicago area, and publicity in the Chicago press aroused Methodists there. Ministers and laymen from that city and then from Detroit, New York and elsewhere began to travel to Jackson for Sunday service. Many of them have ended up in prison and none has been able to worship in a desegregated manner. These costly weekend treks still continue and the legal battle goes on in the courts.

As news of the arrests reached more and more ministers and laymen, the feeling grew that some coordinated effort should be made to force the church to face up to this perversity in its ranks. On November 13, when the Council of Bishops was meeting in Detroit, pastors and seminarians from different areas arrived in that city with the intention of confronting the church fathers. They listened with mounting indignation as the Rev. E. Edwin King, white Methodist chaplain at Tougaloo and 1963 write-in candidate for Lieutenant Governor of Mississippi, reported on the influence of the White Citizens Councils upon Methodism in that state and told of the scores of clergymen of several denominations who were leaving the area rather than live in an atmosphere of intolerance and intimidation.

The assembled pastors then decided to congregate in the Statler-Hilton Hotel just outsides the Michigan Room where the Council of Bishops was in session. It is not customary for parish ministers to pressure their superiors in such an unabashed manner, and many bishops betrayed their irritation. Some of the ministers knew well enough that their action could jeopardize their future in the church, since Methodist bishops hold enormous power over the clergy.

After a two-hour wait, a statement came from the Michigan Room. Progressives in the Methodist Church complain that the bishops have offered scant leadership on social issues since the late Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam retired in 1960. Therefore, the resoluteness of the episcopal pronouncement of November 13 caught many by surprise. The ministers listened intently as Bishop Paul V. Galloway of Texas read it to them, and they then broke into spontaneous and sustained applause. The bishops condemned "the denial to any person of the right to worship in any Methodist Church," adding that "to move to arrest any persons attempting to worship is to us an outrage." They condemned all forms of segregation without qualification and defended "the legality and right of those minorities who are oppressed anywhere in the world" to protest, citing "the recent march in Washington" as a "spectacular and well-directed move of this kind."

After the initial enthusiasm, however, some ministers who took a closer look at the episcopal document concluded that it was not only too general but had carefully sidestepped several key issues. They sent a message to the council that expressed support of the statement, but went on to accuse the bishops of permitting "a leadership vacuum in The Methodist Church" which "has helped to produce the present crisis in which we find the precepts of Jesus flouted, the Church silent on crucial issues, and a situation in which we have expressed more concern for unity as an institution than for unity in Christ."

The ministers listed their demands: the bishops were to ask Jackson churches to "immediately open their doors to all who come," give full backing to all those who have sought without success to worship in Jackson, support the abolition of the Central Jurisdiction, and present to General Conference a many-sided program in support of human rights. This program should include the assignment of staff and funds to aid in voter registration, to support civil rights legal cases, and to assist "in direct action."

Before the ministers dispersed, they organized the Methodists for Church Renewal, which is now rallying support among ministers, laymen and students across the nation. Its objectives go well beyond the race issue, but for the moment this is where it is concentrating. The nucleus of the group has been drawn largely from the younger clergy. The Rev. James H. Laird, pastor of Central Methodist Church in the heart of Detroit, serves as chairman, and national headquarters is at his church. MCR will try to brief a number of General Conference delegates who otherwise would arrive in Pittsburgh without full knowledge of the issues. It also seeks to generate a flood of petitions to General Conference (known among Methodists as "memorials") demanding changes in the denomination's Discipline—roughly speaking, its canon law—that would help blot out segregation and discrimination within the church. One of the proposed memorials, for example, would specifically forbid any form of discrimination in any of the several hundred colleges, hospitals and other institutions affiliated with The Methodist Church. In instances where such a regulation was ignored, punitive action would be taken.

The most dramatic project planned by Methodists for Church Renewal is a "Pilgrimage to Pittsburgh." In concert with others, especially student groups, MCR plans to bring its insistence upon integration and racial justice directly to General Conference. Methodists from different parts of the nation, including busloads from such Southern battlefields as Jackson, Birmingham and Atlanta, will converge upon Pittsburgh Friday evening, May 1, to serve as a "living memorial." An all-night church gathering will move from a freedom rally into a prayer service and close Saturday morning with a solemn ritual of communion. This will be combined with a silent demonstration each day in front of the auditorium where delegates will be meeting. Methodists for Church Renewal, together with other churchmen, have resolved that the conscience of Methodism must be aroused, at the risk of discord and even of secession.

South West Africa

TIMETABLE FOR FREEDOM . . . Patrick Duncan

London

More and more, the tension between the rich, pale peoples of the North and the poor, dark Southerners dominates international politics. In South Africa, land of unashamed white supremacy, lies the principal irritant and focus of this tension. But in South Africa, white supremacy is being increasingly challenged, and an open clash, which could become the greatest issue of the sixties, approaches.

The prelude to the clash will probably be played in the dry, 318,000-square-mile mandated territory of South West Africa. And for this prelude there already exists an approximate timetable, allowing us the rare privilege of a reasonably accurate historical long-range forecast.

The timetable of the South West Africa crisis is the timetable of the International Court of Justice at The Hague. For Ethiopia and Liberia have taken the question of South West Africa there. On November 4, 1960, at the second conference of independent African states, the two African nations asked the Court to declare that the introduction of the apartheid policy into South West Africa was inconsistent with the terms of the mandate.

After all but intolerable delays, the Court gave the South African Government a four-month extension to enable it to file a tremendous counter-memorial of perhaps 2,000 pages, which was duly presented in January of this year. Ethiopia and Liberia now have an opportunity to reply in turn. This may take still another two or three months. Then South Africa will issue a reply, which if the Court understands the increasing urgency of the problem, may be limited to two or three months.

This brings us to mid-1964, when the matter should come to a hearing. If the hearing is expedited and judgment given promptly, a decision should be handed down by the

WHY WE MUST DEMONSTRATE

Special News Bulletin March 19, 1964

From:

Alabama Christian Movement For Human Rights

For Release: By Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, President

We have come again to the point where the Negro Community must engage in Non-Violent direct action against the evil system of segregation and discrimination in Birmingham. Despite the hopes and prayers of the nation and the world that meaingful racial progress would materialize here, the tragic facts are that the City has thus far presented to Negroes a blank wall, and most of the Merchants have neglected the most meaningful point in the May 1963 Agreement. We move today because we must. For while the rest of the world moves forward, Birmingham acts as if it has a mandate to erect barricades against Negro progress; thinking instead that progress comes only with new industry, new signs, and new slogans.

It cannot be said that Negroes have not been patient and waiting. We have waited while pleading in vain, and have been patient and loyal while untold suffering was heaped upon us, both by the oppressive arm of the law and the glaring inequities of the system imposed upon us. As a matter of atonement something tangible should have already been done for the Negro Community by the City of Birmingham. But what racial progress has come in Birmingham without a Federal Court order? Our Mayor testified recently in Federal Court in the Airport case, "Judge, there are no signs up, and we have no segregation anywhere in the City of Birmingham." Yet today toilets at City Hall, over which he presides, are locked with a few white people carrying the keys. In the absence of so-called "threats and pressure" for five months, and with announcement of the long awaited Police Report with its already known answers, City Hall has not hired Negroes, nor has called for any number to be trained in its Academy as it does whites.

While there has been much talk of "following the law," and "hiring qualified personnel," the facts are that to date no Negro serves as a policeman, fireman, clerk, or secretary in Birmingham. We hold that it does not take Negroes with Bachelor, Masters, or Ph. D Degrees to fill these positions, while white people - many with no degr ees, and some without High School education - can be hired by the hundreds. We do not believe in any law which discriminates against either white or Negro.

More than this, Negroes cannot allow Birmingham to forget the police brutality and killing of Negroes without Officers being brought to trial; nor the many humiliating bombings - especially the September Church blast which killed innocent children. Birmingham must be reminded of its system of injustice in which white men can obtain misdemeanor bonds for illegal possession of dynamite, and White youth can obtain probation in the murder of a Negro boy.

We have sought without success meetings with our officials who appear to think that mere discussions by an Advisory Group can take the place of positive action. Our officials will now blame their failure to act upon us who now must seek with our bodies and our souls the promises of our country. But let the record be clear as to why we demonstrate.

1 - To offset Demonstrations in September 1963, Senior Citizens Committee, led by Messers Sidney Smyer and David Vann, met with us and agreed

(a) To desegrate lunch counters and rest rooms at once
(b) To request the City Commissioners to drop criminal charges (accrued up to that time)
(c) To join with Negroes in a suit against the segregation ordinance
(d) To request City Commission to sit up a bi-racial commission; and if the city failed to act, to set up its own bi-racial committee.

Although we warned these gentlemen that demonstration would occur if the agreement was not kept, we heard nothing more from them and the Merchants who met with our Committee. Signs came down at two stores only to be put back up the next day. Not one promise made in good faith was fulfilled.

2. Although the Merchants broke their agreement, the Southern Christian Leader Ship Conference, headed by Dr. Martin Luther King,Jr., and the A.C.M.H.R. postponed demonstration three times between November 1962 and March 14, 1963 so that the referendum on Birmingham's Form of Government could be held free of racial tension. The Run-Off necessitated still another poseponement, and thus it was decided that demonstrations would begin the day after the election (April 3rd) no matter who won in the run-off.

3. The Demonstration reflected the disenchantment of the Negroes and their deep determination for change. They aroused the national conscience of America until Civil Rights became the most urgent and important business of the nation. The Civil Rights Bill, overshelmingly passed by the House, and now being debated in the Senate, is a direct result of the spontaneous protests all over America triggered by Birmingham. It is tragic that it took 3400 people in jail, widespread use of dogs and fire hoses, and many other indignities, for the Statesmen of Birmingham to pledge again in May the promises broken and unkept in September.

4. The negotiations were far from ideal. Our insistence upon face to face meetings was fruitful only in one or two instance with a few Merchants, with Messers Smyer and Vann discussing behind the scenes essential points with first one side and then the other. Representations of the Federal Government, zealous in their hopes for peace and quiet, must not have understood that these gentlemen were more concerned with stopping demonstrations than advancing the cause of Negroes.

5. The New City Government, uncertain of its legal status, was unofficially represented at all meetings on both sides. Honorable Ed Hamilton, now the Mayor's Executive Secretary, almost at the point of physical exhaustion, urged acceptance of the agreement; promising that the New Government would lead out in non discriminating hiring, and that a committee to deal with this would be set up within 30 days after the New Government took office.

   We were promised that they would "work with us on the criminal charges," either dropping them or holding them in abeyance.

6. The Points finally agreed upon May 10, 1963 by our Committee and the Merchants were:

   1. Fitting Rooms to be desegregated 3 days after cessation of Demonstrations
   2. Desegregation of Restrooms, washrooms, and drinking fountains, 30 days after New City Government was established by Court Order
   3. Desegregation of Lunchrooms; A program of Lunch Counter Desegregation within 60 days after establishment of City Government by Court Order
   4. Upgrading and fair Hiring Policy would be continued. That leaders of both races comprise a committee to mediate and watch progress. Hiring of Negroes as Clerks and Salesmen within 60 days. This includes at least One Negro in each of the five stores .

7. Failure of the Merchants to hire Negroes as Clerks and Salesmen resulted in another Boycott lasting from October 1963 to January 1964. About this time Kress, Woolworth, and Britts, employed one Negro each, and the campaign turned to Selective Buying which favors trade with those stores and others willing to be fair.

   Since Loveman's and Pizitz refused to hire-and still do at this time, Boycott action is now directed at them.

8. The Selective Buying Campaign will be enlarged to include the Business Community, with Negroes trading with Merchants who respect and appreciate their trade. We would simply ask Merchants and Bankers to include Negroes in their establishments in respectable positions. Monthly bulletins [illegible] be published by our Negotiation Committee showing desposition of Business to adjust or discriminate, and will be widely distributed in the Negro Community.

9. A.C.M.H.R. will continue acting in concert with S.C.L.C., of whose support and participation we are well assured, and with all other Civil Rights Organizations in Voter Registration projects and Protest actions anywhere. Together we shall secure not only jobs and equal opportunities, but also make real the "One man One Vote" concept of Democratic Government.

A. C. M. H. R. goals are the same as have often been stated: to work for an "open city" with every citizen enjoying the same rights, privileges, and opportunities. Equal and exact schooling, participation in government, both by ballot and job status, unfettered use of all public facilities, and the right to advance along beside and at the same time as others-these would hasten the day of the beloved community which we seek.

10. We finally pray that true statesmanship and Christian idealism would speedily come in the affairs of Birmingham and the State of Alabama. However, much this city and state gain in industrial development, its image will never be perfect nor its name magic, until its statesmanship is purified of treachery and perfidy. It happens that some who worked with us in May 1963 are opposing us now; and as it was of old, even so it is today that "They that persecute us demand of us mirth". But we shall overcome!

As for Negroes, the only place to go is forward. The way things now stand, and as laws are being administered, no Negro, whatever his character, has a chance to become his best. To continue standing still is to die forever; to move forward only is to live. We choose to sail the rugged seas to freedom rather than lie at anchor in a stagnant harbor.

We call upon all freedom loving citizens of this city and state to join us in prayer, and act constructively for the goals of decency, fairplay, and humanitarianism. Negroes will be Non-Violent in their actions, and forever adhere to the principle of love. We have faith in America, and still believe that Birmingham and Alabama will rise to height of glory in race relations. And we shall be true to our ideals as a Christian Nation.

The Congress of Racial Equality and Its Strategy

By Marvin Rich

Abstract: The idea for the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) was originated by James Farmer in a 1941 memorandum calling for personal nonviolent direct action to end discrimination, and by a group of University of Chicago students who staged the first successful United States sit-in in 1942. Early chapters of CORE were college-centered because of the demands on time involved in its training projects and in the sit-ins and picket-lines themselves. CORE's early demonstrations took place mainly in the North and were mostly aimed at increasing public accomodations for the Negro. In the 1950's CORE expanded rapidly, forming chapters throughout the South and widening its membership to include representatives of all social classes. It also widened its goals by working for improvement in Negro employment and housing conditions. By 1964, CORE had an income of $900,000 and a professional staff of 137, as well as a solid nucleus of CORE chapters throughout the country. The dramatic sit-ins and Freedom Rides organized by CORE have had visible results in civil rights legislation and in increased public accomodation for Negroes. Its future efforts will be concentrated on training its burgeoning numbers of new members and on working for the improvement of Negro living conditions, voter registration, and employment. To accomplish its new goals, however, it will continue to employ its characteristic nonviolent direct action methods—Ed.

Marvin Rich, A.B., New York City, is Community Relations Director of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE). He graduated from Washington University in St. Louis in 1950, and served as a research analyst, organizer, and administrator for trade unions on local, regional, and national levels from 1950 to 1956, in addition to acting as script chief in the only operational psychological warfare section in the United States. He was a founder of the St. Louis CORE in 1948, and since that time has been active in CORE groups in Washington, D.C. and New York City.

A FEW of us try harder. A few try not at all. Yet the story of CORE is the story of an effort—sustained and sustaining—to put ourselves out of business.

ORIGIN AND EARLY HISTORY

James Farmer started it all, in 1941, when he went home again to his native South. He walked up the steps to the "crow's nest" reserved for Negroes in the local movie theatre. Perhaps for the first time, he fully realized that though he believed "Jim Crow" was wrong, he and most of his friends were actually supporting it by their daily actions. He wrote a memo posing this dilemma and called for the formation of a dedicated group of individuals who would combine mind and body in an effort to take personal nonviolent direct action to end discrimination.

This memo was widely circulated among student and religious groups, liberals, pacifists, and socialists in the spring of 1942. One such group was composed primarily of University of Chicago students. One Sunday afternoon following a session, the group wandered too far from the campus and was refused coffee at a restaurant. They tried to negotiate with management, but were unsuccessful, in spite of the fact that Illinois law forbade discrimination. They then began the first race relations sit-in in America. They were successful in changing policy. The first CORE chapter was formed out of Farmer's memo and this incident. Ever since, CORE chapters have been adapting the techniques of nonviolent direct action to different sections of the country and to different forms of discrimination.

The first CORE chapters were college-centered. They included as members students, teachers, ministers, and trade unionists. They were small and elitist. Only a very few individuals were willing to make the sacrifices of time, energy, and reputation demanded of CORE members, for chapters usually met every other week, and committees met on the alternate weeks. There were negotiating sessions with management, training sessions for new members, and workshops before major actions. Then there was the radical nature of our action—picket lines and sit-ins—and the ever-present possibility of arrest. But if the chapters were small, they were also inclusive. It requires discipline and some training to sit-in and to respond to insults with good will. It does not require an advanced degree. CORE chapters have increasingly involved persons from every walk of life in their membership and in their leadership.

The first CORE chapters were located in the North and concentrated on public accommodations—yes, two decades ago throughout the North many restaurants, bowling alleys, skating rinks, and barber shops refused to serve Negroes. There were some experiments with interracial housing co-operatives and some successful efforts to open up job opportunities. But the main thrust was in public accommodations and in the North. It was in the late 1940's and early 1950's that CORE moved into the border states of Maryland, Missouri, and Oklahoma. It was only in the middle 1950's that the radical idea of direct action was able to secure a base in the South as a whole.

As time went on the emphasis in the North turned increasingly to jobs and to open-occupancy housing. The housing efforts included efforts to negotiate with realtors and to open tract housing in new suburbs to meet the needs of individual Negro families. This approach represented the largely middle-class base of these early CORE chapters. The effort to secure jobs, on the other hand was primarily centered on semiskilled occupations in consumer-oriented industries which were amenable to CORE-type pressure. Successes in this field inevitably drew in more Negroes with a working-class background and subtly changed the character of the middle-class and predominantly white Northern chapters. In the South, almost from the beginning there was a far higher percentage of black members, even though the first emphasis was upon public accommodations.

GROWTH AND EXPANSION

CORE had grown in the early 1940's. However, the groups were small. They had many student members who graduated and moved away. Further, many had been formed to combat a specific instance of discrimination and, once this was eliminated, they would often disappear. In the 1940's and early 1950's there was no paid staff, and CORE was entirely an organization of volunteers, but, by 1956, the organization began to develop a nucleus of solid chapters and a trained staff. In the late 1950's, CORE developed a series of summer training institutes for leaders of local groups. Those who participated in these institutes were to play important roles in the 1960 student sit-ins.

CORE staffers negotiated at the national level with the variety store chains involved in the 1960 sit-ins and provided workshops at the local level for the thousands of students. These efforts helped the organization to secure the allegiance of many in every section of the country and to secure firm roots in the upper South. The 1961 Freedom Rides, which were initiated, financed, and organized by CORE, brought CORE to the hard-core areas of the South. Today, CORE has a membership of over 80,000. It has approximately doubled in size and budget every year for the past five years. Thus, in the year ending May 31, 1959, CORE's income was $62,000. Five years later the income was $900,000. There are now 124 chapters affiliated in every section of the country. In 1959 there was a staff of seven. Today there is a professional staff of 137.

SOME RESULTS OF CORE ACTIVITY

The sit-ins and the Freedom Rides were dramatic, and they were successful. Within a year of the first sit-in in Greensboro, North Carolina, on February 1, 1960, more than 140 communities had desegregated at least some restaurant facilities. Most of these were of the chain variety and department stores and could thus be readily identified by the Negro shopper who wanted service without embarrassment. The Freedom Rides secured the Interstate Commerce Commission order which made possible effective enforcement of the Boynton decision. Further, CORE followed up with the Freedom Highways campaign, in the spring and summer of 1962, which opened the Howard Johnson and Holiday Inn chains, so that by 1962 it was possible for a Negro to travel from one end of the country to the other with dignity.

The successes of these campaigns brought into CORE thousands who wanted to share personally in bringing about the civil rights revolution. They have taken action individually which has brought about change. They negotiated with management, leafleted, picketed, and sat-in. And then, they have used the newly opened facilities. That first cup of coffee and that first hamburger have tasted better than any others for thousands. For these people, talk by columnists, politicians, and some civil rights leaders of returning the civil rights struggle to the courts and the legislative halls and out of "the streets" is a way of saying that they are not needed or wanted, that they are to be relegated to the status of dues-payers. This status they will no longer accept.

Direct action plays an important role for the country as well. The Emancipation Proclamation, the First, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Amendments have been the "law of the land" for some little time. Most Northern states have had civil rights laws for more than eighty years, and these laws have been strengthened since World War II. And, yet, these laws are as honored in the breach as in the observance. The nonviolent activists know that their demonstrations which caused people to say: "Aren't they going too far, now?" also brought about the Civil Rights Act of 1964. They know that Act is as strong as it is only because of their pressure in the streets of Birmingham, Greensboro, and Jackson. When they went to talk to congressmen they could say: "It really happened in America; it happened to me." Zev Aelony told his congressman about facing a death penalty in Americus, Georgia, on a charge of insurrection. Jerome Smith could tell of being brutally beaten in McComb, Mississippi, while law enforcement officials looked on. And the congressmen responded by strengthening the bill. And the American people have responded—reluctantly, slowly, hesitatingly—but they have responded. When forced to make a choice between making a mockery of the American creed and making it a reality they have chosen the course of equality. Surely, there has been a backlash. It used to be called prejudice, but now there is a new term. But most of the American people and their representatives have chosen to go forward. We in CORE believe that when forced to make a choice, they will continue to make the choice for progress.

The willingness to sacrifice of CORE members has also played an important role. The first sit-in students who actually served their full jail terms in the 1960 sit-ins were members of Tallahassee CORE. The first of the Freedom Riders to serve their full jail terms rather than appeal were members of New Orleans CORE. After the first bus of Freedom Riders was burned in Anniston, Alabama, a second bus proceeded to Birmingham only to be met by a mob. Here Jim Peck, editor of the CORE-lator, was brutally beaten. Walter Bergman of Detroit CORE is still partially paralyzed three-and-one-half years later as the result of the injuries suffered then. It was a CORE member, William Moore, who was ambushed and murdered at night on an Alabama highway in April of 1963. A few months later the vice-chairman of Cleveland CORE, the Reverend Bruce Klunder, was killed in a demonstration against the construction of a segregated school. And then CORE staff members James Chaney and Michael Schwerner and their student companion Andrew Goodman were abducted and murdered in Philadelphia, Mississippi, on the night of June 23, 1964. The sacrifices and the determination to go on in spite of them have struck a responsive chord throughout the nation. The fact that three of the four CORE leaders who have given their lives are white has re-emphasized the essential interracial character of the organization.

There are other forms of sacrifice and commitment. CORE Task Force members live on a meager $44.89 every two weeks, are occasionally cold or hungry, often harassed by local registrars, police, and night riders, and frequently discouraged. They must win the confidence of a people whose only protection is their seeming apathy. CORE Task Force members have picked cotton and worked in tobacco fields to win the confidence of local people and to earn a few dollars for a new shirt. They have given years of their lives while friends have taken the first steps on more rewarding careers. Their day-to-day dedication and sacrifice have played a decisive role in the growth of CORE.

FUTURE GOALS AND PROBLEMS

But the new recruits who have been attracted to CORE because of its militancy, its dramatic successes, and the desire to share in the sacrificial struggle have also brought new problems. Their very number has made it difficult to train them in methods and in the philosophy of nonviolent direct action. When a staff doubles in size each year, very few can have had much training themselves. This past year CORE began a series of area training conferences. In the coming year these will be augmented by larger institutes as well as by regional workshops on specific problem areas.

During the past year CORE has emphasized in the North and in the South a program of community service to develop community roots, indigenous organizations with the ability to help themselves economically and politically. In the North there has been door-to-door canvassing in the sprawling urban ghettos to determine the complaints that most concern the people themselves. This has led to major programs to secure housing-code enforcement through rent strikes, demonstrations before the offices of building commissioners and mayors, and tours of the slum buildings with community leaders. It has also led to successful demonstrations to secure play streets and traffic lights. These kinds of demonstrations, if effectively followed up, can lead to permanent and significant community organization. In Mississippi, Louisiana, and northern Florida, CORE has developed a series of community centers that not only house the voter registration offices, but also have libraries, game rooms, sewing classes, and art activities.

The voter registration efforts of the past have begun to pay off with significant numbers of new registrants in most of the Southern states—excluding Mississippi and Louisiana. For example, during the past two years CORE staffers in South Carolina have co-ordinated registration drives that have put 31,000 Negroes on the books—this in spite of the fact that for most of the year the registration books are open only one day a month and in spite of prolonged slowdowns by some of the registrars. The voter registration effort which has been part of CORE's Southern activity since 1956 is now firmly rooted in the North as well. In part, this has been a natural outgrowth of the effort to service local communities more effectively. It has also been an outgrowth of the effort to defeat Goldwaterism. Soon, the national organization will establish a political action department to co-ordinate and develop local action programs.

The struggle for an increased share in the economy continues to receive major effort. CORE works under the assumption that there cannot be fair employment unless there is relatively full employment. However, we also know that even in a full-employment economy there need not be fair employment. Negroes could and probably would be the last hired and the first fired, confined to the menial and the dead-end jobs. So CORE continues to work to end discrimination by employers and unions. Our major concern has been among consumer-oriented industries where we can be most effective and to secure unskilled and semiskilled jobs where the largest reservoir of unemployed and underemployed manpower is available. There have been some notable examples of success. The First National Bank of Boston, after several weeks of picketing and previous months of negotiations, moved to hire Negroes. We believe that this will mean approximately 1,000 jobs. To do this the company re-evaluated its personnel policies and changed requirements for many jobs. For example, they decided that a messenger really didn't need a high school diploma. In New York, we were able to get the A&P to reverse a long-standing personnel policy and agree to hire hundreds of full-time Negro employees, whereas they had increasingly resorted to part-timers. These victories point to a concern and a direction. To use direct action effectively with primary manufacturers, such as steel and aluminum, will be more difficult than with consumer-oriented companies, but not impossible.

CORE has changed to meet new situations and new demands. It will continue to do so. However, it will also continue to emphasize nonviolent direct action methods which involve people from every status level, to be interracial and interreligious, to be national in scope, youthful in membership and outlook. We believe that it will continue to be the cutting edge of the civil rights movement.

FROM PROTEST TO POLITICS: THE FUTURE OF THE CIVIL RIGHTS MOVEMENT

BAYARD RUSTIN

I

THE DECADE spanned by the 1954 Supreme Court decision on school desegregation and the Civil Rights Act of 1964 will undoubtedly be recorded as the period in which the legal foundations of racism in America were destroyed. To be sure, pockets of resistance remain; but it would be hard to quarrel with the assertion that the elaborate legal structure of segregation and discrimination, particularly in relation to public accommodations, has virtually collapsed. On the other hand, without making light of the human sacrifices involved in the direct-action tactics (sit-ins, freedom rides, and the rest) that were so instrumental to this achievement, we must recognize that in desegregating public accommodations, we affected institutions which are relatively peripheral both to the American socio-economic order and to the fundamental conditions of life of the Negro people. In a highly industrialized, 20th-century civilization, we hit Jim Crow precisely where it was most anachronistic, dispensable, and vulnerable—in hotels, lunch counters, terminals, libraries, swimming pools, and the like. For in these forms, Jim Crow does impede the flow of commerce in the broadest sense: it is a nuisance in a society on the move (and on the make). Not surprisingly, therefore, it was the most mobility-conscious and relatively liberated groups in the Negro community—lower-middle-class college students—who launched the attack that brought down this imposing but hollow structure.

The term "classical" appears especially apt for this phase of the civil rights movement. But in the few years that have passed since the first flush of sit-ins, several developments have taken place that have complicated matters enormously. One is the shifting focus of the movement in the South, symbolized by Birmingham; another is the spread of the revolution to the North; and the third, common to the other two, is the expansion of the movement's base in the Negro community.

BAYARD RUSTIN, who organized the March on Washington and has been a close associate of Martin Luther King, is widely recognized as the leading tactician of the civil rights movement. This is his first appearance in COMMENTARY.

To attempt to disentangle these three strands is to do violence to reality. David Danzig's perceptive article, "The Meaning of Negro Strategy,"* correctly saw in the Birmingham events the victory of the concept of collective struggle over individual achievement as the road to Negro freedom. And Birmingham remains the unmatched symbol of grass-roots protest involving all strata of the black community. It was also in this most industrialized of Southern cities that the single-issue demands of the movement's classical stage gave way to the "package deal." No longer were Negroes satisfied with integrating lunch counters. They now sought advances in employment, housing, school integration, police protection, and so forth.

Thus, the movement in the South began to attack areas of discrimination which were not so remote from the Northern experience as were Jim Crow lunch counters. At the same time, the interrelationship of these apparently distinct areas became increasingly evident. What is the value of winning access to public accommodations for those who lack money to use them? The minute the movement faced this question, it was compelled to expand its vision beyond race relations to economic relations, including the role of education in modern society. And what also became clear is that all these interrelated problems, by their very nature, are not soluble by private, voluntary efforts but require government action—or politics. Already Southern demonstrators had recognized that the most effective way to strike at the police brutality they suffered from was by getting rid of the local sheriff—and that meant political action, which in turn meant, and still means, political action within the Democratic party where the only meaningful primary contests in the South are fought.

And so, in Mississippi, thanks largely to the leadership of Bob Moses, a turn toward political action has been taken. More than voter registration is involved here. A conscious bid for political power is being made, and in the course of that effort a tactical shift is being effected: direct-action techniques are being subordinated to a strategy calling for the building of community institutions or power bases. Clearly, the implications of this shift reach far beyond Mississippi. What began as a protest movement is being challenged to translate itself into a political movement. Is this the right course? And if it is, can the transformation be accomplished?

II

THE VERY decade which has witnessed the decline of legal Jim Crow has also seen the rise of de facto segregation in our most fundamental socio-economic institutions. More Negroes are unemployed today than in 1954, and the unemployment gap between the races is wider. The median income of Negroes has dropped from 57 per cent to 54 per cent of that of whites. A higher percentage of Negro workers is now concentrated in jobs vulnerable to automation than was the case ten years ago. More Negroes attend de facto segregated schools today than when the Supreme Court handed down its famous decision; while school integration proceeds at a snail's pace in the South, the number of Northern schools with an excessive proportion of minority youth proliferates. And behind this is the continuing growth of racial slums, spreading over our central cities and trapping Negro youth in a milieu which, whatever its legal definition, sows an unimaginable demoralization. Again, legal niceties aside, a resident of a racial ghetto lives in segregated housing, and more Negroes fall into this category than ever before.

These are the facts of life which generate frustration in the Negro community and challenge the civil rights movement. At issue, after all, is not civil rights, strictly speaking, but social and economic conditions. Last summer's riots were not race riots; they were outbursts of class aggression in a society where class and color definitions are converging disastrously. How can the (perhaps misnamed) civil rights movement deal with this problem?

Before trying to answer, let me first insist that the task of the movement is vastly complicated by the failure of many whites of good will to understand the nature of our problem. There is a widespread assumption that the removal of artificial racial barriers should result in the automatic integration of the Negro into all aspects of American life. This myth is fostered by facile analogies with the experience of various ethnic immigrant groups, particularly the Jews. But the analogies with the Jews do not hold for three simple but profound reasons. First, Jews have a long history as a literate people, a resource which has afforded them opportunities to advance in the academic and professional worlds, to achieve intellectual status even in the midst of economic hardship, and to evolve sustaining value systems in the context of ghetto life. Negroes, for the greater part of their presence in this country, were forbidden by law to read or write. Second, Jews have a long history of family stability, the importance of which in terms of aspiration and self-image is obvious. The Negro family structure was totally destroyed by slavery and with it the possibility of cultural transmission (the right of Negroes to marry and rear children is barely a century old). Third, Jews are white and have the option of relinquishing their cultural-religious identity, intermarrying, passing, etc. Negroes, or at least the overwhelming majority of them, do not have this option. There is also a fourth, vulgar reason. If the Jewish and Negro communities are not comparable in terms of education, family structure, and color, it is also true that their respective economic roles bear little resemblance.

This matter of economic role brings us to the greater problem—the fact that we are moving into an era in which the natural functioning of the market does not by itself ensure every man with will and ambition a place in the productive process. The immigrant who came to this country during the late 19th and early 20th centuries entered a society which was expanding territorially and/or economically. It was then possible to start at the bottom, as an unskilled or semi-skilled worker, and move up the ladder, acquiring new skills along the way. Especially was this true when industrial unionism was burgeoning, giving new dignity and higher wages to organized workers. Today the situation has changed. We are not expanding territorially, the western frontier is settled, labor organizing has leveled off, our rate of economic growth has been stagnant for a decade. And we are in the midst of a technological revolution which is altering the fundamental structure of the labor force, destroying unskilled and semi-skilled jobs—jobs in which Negroes are disproportionately concentrated.

Whatever the pace of this technological revolution may be, the direction is clear: the lower rungs of the economic ladder are being lopped off. This means that an individual will no longer be able to start at the bottom and work his way up; he will have to start in the middle or on top, and hold on tight. It will not even be enough to have certain specific skills, for many skilled jobs are also vulnerable to automation. A broad educational background, permitting vocational adaptability and flexibility, seems more imperative than ever. We live in a society where, as Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz puts it, machines have the equivalent of a high school diploma. Yet the average educational attainment of American Negroes is 8.2 years.

Negroes, of course, are not the only people being affected by these developments. It is reported that there are now 50 per cent fewer unskilled and semi-skilled jobs than there are high school dropouts. Almost one-third of the 26 million young people entering the labor market in the 1960's will be dropouts. But the percentage of Negro dropouts nationally is 57 per cent, and in New York City, among Negroes 25 years of age or over, it is 68 per cent. They are without a future.

To what extent can the kind of self-help campaign recently prescribed by Eric Hoffer in the New York Times Magazine cope with such a situation? I would advise those who think that self-help is the answer to familiarize themselves with the long history of such efforts in the Negro community, and to consider why so many foundered on the shoals of ghetto life. It goes without saying that any effort to combat demoralization and apathy is desirable, but we must understand that demoralization in the Negro community is largely a common-sense response to an objective reality. Negro youths have no need of statistics to perceive, fairly accurately, what their odds are in American society. Indeed, from the point of view of motivation, some of the healthiest Negro youngsters I know are juvenile delinquents: vigorously pursuing the American Dream of material acquisition and status, yet finding the conventional means of attaining it blocked off, they do not yield to defeatism but resort to illegal (and often ingenious) methods. They are not alien to American culture. They are, in Gunnar Myrdal's phrase, "exaggerated Americans." To want a Cadillac is not un-American; to push a cart in the garment center is. If Negroes are to be persuaded that the conventional path (school, work, etc.) is superior, we had better provide evidence which is now sorely lacking. It is a double cruelty to harangue Negro youth about education and training when we do not know what jobs will be available for them. When a Negro youth can reasonably foresee a future free of slums, when the prospect of gainful employment is realistic, we will see motivation and self-help in abundant enough quantities.

Meanwhile, there is an ironic similarity between the self-help advocated by many liberals and the doctrines of the Black Muslims. Professional sociologists, psychiatrists, and social workers have expressed amazement at the Muslims' success in transforming prostitutes and dope addicts into respectable citizens. But every prostitute the Muslims convert to a model of Calvinist virtue is replaced by the ghetto with two more. Dedicated as they are to maintenance of the ghetto, the Muslims are powerless to affect substantial moral reform. So too with every other group or program which is not aimed at the destruction of slums, their causes and effects. Self-help efforts, directly or indirectly, must be geared to mobilizing people into power units capable of effecting social change. That is, their goal must be genuine self-help, not merely self-improvement. Obviously, where self-improvement activities succeed in imparting to their participants a feeling of some control over their environment, those involved may find their appetites for change whetted; they may move into the political arena.

III

Let me sum up what I have thus far been trying to say: the civil rights movement is evolving from a protest movement into a full-fledged social movement—an evolution calling its very name into question. It is now concerned not merely with removing the barriers to full opportunity but with achieving the fact of equality. From sit-ins and freedom rides we have gone into rent strikes, boycotts, community organization, and political action. As a consequence of this natural evolution, the Negro today finds himself stymied by obstacles of far greater magnitude than the legal barriers he was attacking before: automation, urban decay, de facto school segregation. These are problems which, while conditioned by Jim Crow, do not vanish upon its demise. They are more deeply rooted in our socio-economic order; they are the result of the total society's failure to meet not only the Negro's needs, but human needs generally.

These propositions have won increasing recognition and acceptance, but with a curious twist. They have formed the common premise of two apparently contradictory lines of thought which simultaneously nourish and antagonize each other. On the one hand, there is the reasoning of the New York Times moderate who says that the problems are so enormous and complicated that Negro militancy is a futile irritation, and that the need is for "intelligent moderation." Thus, during the first New York school boycott, the Times editorialized that Negro demands, while abstractly just, would necessitate massive reforms, the funds for which could not realistically be anticipated; therefore the just demands were also foolish demands and would only antagonize white people. Moderates of this stripe are often correct in perceiving the difficulty or impossibility of racial progress in the context of present social and economic policies. But they accept the context as fixed. They ignore (or perhaps see all too well) the potentialities inherent in linking Negro demands to broader pressures for radical revision of existing policies. They apparently see nothing strange in the fact that in the last twenty-five years we have spent nearly a trillion dollars fighting or preparing for wars, yet throw up our hands before the need for overhauling our schools, clearing the slums, and really abolishing poverty. My quarrel with these moderates is that they do not even envision radical changes; their admonitions of moderation are, for all practical purposes, admonitions to the Negro to adjust to the status quo, and are therefore immoral.

The more effectively the moderates argue their case, the more they convince Negroes that American society will not or cannot be reorganized for full racial equality. Michael Harrington has said that a successful war on poverty might well require the expenditure of a $100 billion. Where, the Negro wonders, are the forces now in motion to compel such a commitment? If the voices of the moderates were raised in an insistence upon a reallocation of national resources at levels that could not be confused with tokenism (that is, if the moderates stopped being moderates), Negroes would have greater grounds for hope. Meanwhile, the Negro movement cannot escape a sense of isolation.

It is precisely this sense of isolation that gives rise to the second line of thought I want to examine—the tendency within the civil rights movement which, despite its militancy, pursues what I call a "no-win" policy. Sharing with many moderates a recognition of the magnitude of the obstacles to freedom, spokesmen for this tendency survey the American scene and find no forces prepared to move toward radical solutions. From this they conclude that the only viable strategy is shock; above all, the hypocrisy of white liberals must be exposed. These spokesmen are often described as the radicals of the movement, but they are really its moralists. They seek to change white hearts—by traumatizing them. Frequently abetted by white self-flagellants, they may gleefully applaud (though not really agreeing with) Malcolm X because, while they admit he has no program, they think he can frighten white people into doing the right thing. To believe this, of course, you must be convinced, even if unconsciously, that at the core of the white man's heart lies a buried affection for Negroes—a proposition one may be permitted to doubt. But in any case, hearts are not relevant to the issue; neither racial affinities nor racial hostilities are rooted there. It is institutions—social, political, and economic institutions—which are the ultimate molders of collective sentiments. Let these institutions be reconstructed today, and let the ineluctable gradualism of history govern the formation of a new psychology.

My quarrel with the "no-win" tendency in the civil rights movement (and the reason I have so designated it) parallels my quarrel with the moderates outside the movement. As the latter lack the vision or will for fundamental change, the former lack a realistic strategy for achieving it. For such a strategy they substitute militancy. But militancy is a matter of posture and volume and not of effect.

I BELIEVE that the Negro's struggle for equality in America is essentially revolutionary. While most Negroes—in their hearts—unquestionably seek only to enjoy the fruits of American society as it now exists, their quest cannot objectively be satisfied within the framework of existing political and economic relations. The young Negro who would demonstrate his way into the labor market may be motivated by a thoroughly bourgeois ambition and thoroughly "capitalist" considerations, but he will end up having to favor a great expansion of the public sector of the economy. At any rate, that is the position the movement will be forced to take as it looks at the number of jobs being generated by the private economy, and if it is to remain true to the masses of Negroes.

The revolutionary character of the Negro's struggle is manifest in the fact that this struggle may have done more to democratize life for whites than for Negroes. Clearly, it was the sit-in movement of young Southern Negroes which, as it galvanized white students, banished the ugliest features of McCarthyism from the American campus and resurrected political debate. It was not until Negroes assaulted de facto school segregation in the urban centers that the issue of quality education for all children stirred into motion. Finally, it seems reasonably clear that the civil rights movement, directly and through the resurgence of social conscience it kindled, did more to initiate the war on poverty than any other single force.

It will be—it has been—argued that these by-products of the Negro struggle are not revolutionary. But the term revolutionary, as I am using it, does not connote violence; it refers to the qualitative transformation of fundamental institutions, more or less rapidly, to the point where the social and economic structure which they comprised can no longer be said to be the same. The Negro struggle has hardly run its course; and it will not stop moving until it has been utterly defeated or won substantial equality. But I fail to see how the movement can be victorious in the absence of radical programs for full employment, abolition of slums, the reconstruction of our educational system, new definitions of work and leisure. Adding up the cost of such programs, we can only conclude that we are talking about a refashioning of our political economy. It has been estimated, for example, that the price of replacing New York City's slums with public housing would be $17 billion. Again, a multi-billion dollar federal public-works program, dwarfing the currently proposed $2 billion program, is required to reabsorb unskilled and semi-skilled workers into the labor market—and this must be done if Negro workers in these categories are to be employed. "Preferential treatment" cannot help them.

I am not trying here to delineate a total program, only to suggest the scope of economic reforms which are most immediately related to the plight of the Negro community. One could speculate on their political implications—whether, for example, they do not indicate the obsolescence of state government and the superiority of regional structures as viable units of planning. Such speculations aside, it is clear that Negro needs cannot be satisfied unless we go beyond what has so far been placed on the agenda. How are these radical objectives to be achieved? The answer is simple, deceptively so: through political power.

There is a strong moralistic strain in the civil rights movement which would remind us that power corrupts, forgetting that the absence of power also corrupts. But this is not the view I want to debate here, for it is waning. Our problem is posed by those who accept the need for political power but do not understand the nature of the object and therefore lack sound strategies for achieving it; they tend to confuse political institutions with lunch counters.

A handful of Negroes, acting alone, could integrate a lunch counter by strategically locating their bodies so as directly to interrupt the operation of the proprietor's will; their numbers were relatively unimportant. In politics, however, such a confrontation is difficult because the interests involved are merely represented. In the execution of a political decision a direct confrontation may ensue (as when federal marshals escorted James Meredith into the University of Mississippi—to turn from an example of non-violent coercion to one of force backed up with the threat of violence). But in arriving at a political decision, numbers and organizations are crucial, especially for the economically disenfranchised. (Needless to say, I am assuming that the forms of political democracy exist in America, however imperfectly, that they are valued, and that elitist or putschist conceptions of exercising power are beyond the pale of discussion for the civil rights movement.)

Neither that movement nor the country's twenty million black people can win political power alone. We need allies. The future of the Negro struggle depends on whether the contradictions of this society can be resolved by a coalition of progressive forces which becomes the effective political majority in the United States. I speak of the coalition which staged the March on Washington, passed the Civil Rights Act, and laid the basis for the Johnson landslide—Negroes, trade unionists, liberals, and religious groups.

THERE ARE those who argue that a coalition strategy would force the Negro to surrender his political independence to white liberals, that he would be neutralized, deprived of his cutting edge, absorbed into the Establishment. Some who take this position urged last year that votes be withheld from the Johnson-Humphrey ticket as a demonstration of the Negro's political power. Curiously enough, these people who sought to demonstrate power through the non-exercise of it, also point to the Negro "swing vote" in crucial urban areas as the source of the Negro's independent political power. But here they are closer to being right: the urban Negro vote will grow in importance in the coming years. If there is anything positive in the spread of the ghetto, it is the potential political power base thus created, and to realize this potential is one of the most challenging and urgent tasks before the civil rights movement. If the movement can wrest leadership of the ghetto vote from the machines, it will have acquired an organized constituency such as other major groups in our society now have.

But we must also remember that the effectiveness of a swing vote depends solely on "other" votes. It derives its power from them. In that sense, it can never be "independent," but must opt for one candidate or the other, even if by default. Thus coalitions are inescapable, however tentative they may be. And this is the case in all but those few situations in which Negroes running on an independent ticket might conceivably win. "Independence," in other words, is not a value in itself. The issue is which coalition to join and how to make it responsive to your program. Necessarily there will be compromise. But the difference between expediency and morality in politics is the difference between selling out a principle and making smaller concessions to win larger ones. The leader who shrinks from this task reveals not his purity but his lack of political sense.

The task of molding a political movement out of the March on Washington coalition is not simple, but no alternatives have been advanced. We need to choose our allies on the basis of common political objectives. It has become fashionable in some no-win Negro circles to decry the white liberal as the main enemy (his hypocrisy is what sustains racism); by virtue of this reverse recitation of the reactionary's litany (liberalism leads to socialism, which leads to Communism) the Negro is left in majestic isolation, except for a tiny band of fervent white initiates. But the objective fact is that Eastland and Goldwater are the main enemies—they and the opponents of civil rights, of the war on poverty, of medicare, of social security, of federal aid to education, of unions, and so forth. The labor movement, despite its obvious faults, has been the largest single organized force in this country pushing for progressive social legislation. And where the Negro-labor-liberal axis is weak, as in the farm belt, it was the religious groups that were most influential in rallying support for the Civil Rights Bill.

The durability of the coalition was interestingly tested during the election. I do not believe that the Johnson landslide proved the "white backlash" to be a myth. It proved, rather, that economic interests are more fundamental than prejudice: the backlashers decided that loss of social security was, after all, too high a price to pay for a slap at the Negro. This lesson was a valuable first step in re-educating such people, and it must be kept alive, for the civil rights movement will be advanced only to the degree that social and economic welfare gets to be inextricably entangled with civil rights.

The 1964 elections marked a turning point in American politics. The Democratic landslide was not merely the result of a negative reaction to Goldwaterism; it was also the expression of a majority liberal consensus. The near unanimity with which Negro voters joined in that expression was, I am convinced, a vindication of the July 25th statement by Negro leaders calling for a strategic turn toward political action and a temporary curtailment of mass demonstrations. Despite the controversy surrounding the statement, the instinctive response it met with in the community is suggested by the fact that demonstrations were down 75 per cent as compared with the same period in 1963. But should so high a percentage of Negro voters have gone to Johnson, or should they have held back to narrow his margin of victory and thus give greater visibility to our swing vote? How has our loyalty changed things? Certainly the Negro vote had higher visibility in 1960, when a switch of only 7 per cent from the Republican column of 1956 elected President Kennedy. But the slimness of Kennedy's victory—of his "mandate"—dictated a go-slow approach on civil rights, at least until the Birmingham upheaval.

Although Johnson's popular majority was so large that he could have won without such overwhelming Negro support, that support was important from several angles. Beyond adding to Johnson's total national margin, it was specifically responsible for his victories in Virginia, Florida, Tennessee, and Arkansas. Goldwater took only those states where fewer than 45 per cent of eligible Negroes were registered. That Johnson would have won those states had Negro voting rights been enforced is a lesson not likely to be lost on a man who would have been happy with a unanimous electoral college. In any case, the 1.6 million Southern Negroes who voted have had a shattering impact on the Southern political party structure, as illustrated in the changed composition of the Southern congressional delegation. The "backlash" gave the Republicans five House seats in Alabama, one in Georgia, and one in Mississippi. But on the Democratic side, seven segregationists were defeated while all nine Southerners who voted for the Civil Rights Act were re-elected. It may be premature to predict a Southern Democratic party of Negroes and white moderates and a Republican Party of refugee racists and economic conservatives, but there certainly is a strong tendency toward such a realignment; and an additional 3.6 million Negroes of voting age in the eleven Southern states are still to be heard from. Even the tendency toward disintegration of the Democratic party's racist wing defines a new context for Presidential and liberal strategy in the congressional battles ahead. Thus the Negro vote (North as well as South), while not decisive in the Presidential race, was enormously effective. It was a dramatic element of a historic mandate which contains vast possibilities and dangers that will fundamentally affect the future course of the civil rights movement.

The liberal congressional sweep raises hope for an assault on the seniority system, Rule Twenty-two, and other citadels of Dixiecrat-Republican power. The overwhelming of this conservative coalition should also mean progress on much bottlenecked legislation of profound interest to the movement (e.g., bills by Senators Clark and Nelson on planning, manpower, and employment). Moreover, the irrelevance of the South to Johnson's victory gives the President more freedom to act than his predecessor had and more leverage to the movement to pressure for executive action in Mississippi and other racist strongholds.

NONE OF this guarantees vigorous executive or legislative action, for the other side of the Johnson landslide is that it has a Gaullist quality. Goldwater's capture of the Republican party forced into the Democratic camp many disparate elements which do not belong there, Big Business being the major example. Johnson, who wants to be President "of all people," may try to keep his new coalition together by sticking close to the political center. But if he decides to do this, it is unlikely that even his political genius will be able to hold together a coalition so inherently unstable and rife with contradictions. It must come apart. Should it do so while Johnson is pursuing a centrist course, then the mandate will have been wastefully dissipated. However, if the mandate is seized upon to set fundamental changes in motion, then the basis can be laid for a new mandate, a new coalition including hitherto inert and dispossessed strata of the population.

Here is where the cutting edge of the civil rights movement can be applied. We must see to it that the reorganization of the "consensus party" proceeds along lines which will make it an effective vehicle for social reconstruction, a role it cannot play so long as it furnishes Southern racism with its national political power. (One of Barry Goldwater's few attractive ideas was that the Dixiecrats belong with him in the same party.) And nowhere has the civil rights movement's political cutting edge been more magnificently demonstrated than at Atlantic City, where the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party not only secured recognition as a bona fide component of the national party, but in the process routed the representatives of the most rabid racists—the white Mississippi and Alabama delegations. While I still believe that the FDP made a tactical error in spurning the compromise, there is no question that they launched a political revolution whose logic is the displacement of Dixiecrat power. They launched that revolution within a major political institution and as part of a coalitional effort.

The role of the civil rights movement in the reorganization of American political life is programmatic as well as strategic. We are challenged now to broaden our social vision, to develop functional programs with concrete objectives. We need to propose alternatives to technological unemployment, urban decay, and the rest. We need to be calling for public works and training, for national economic planning, for federal aid to education, for attractive public housing—all this on a sufficiently massive scale to make a difference. We need to protest the notion that our integration into American life, so long delayed, must now proceed in an atmosphere of competitive scarcity instead of in the security of abundance which technology makes possible. We cannot claim to have answers to all the complex problems of modern society. That is too much to ask of a movement still battling barbarism in Mississippi. But we can agitate the right questions by probing at the contradictions which still stand in the way of the "Great Society." The questions having been asked, motion must begin in the larger society, for there is a limit to what Negroes can do alone.

FROM PROTEST TO POLITICS: THE FUTURE OF THE CIVIL RIGHTS MOVEMENT

BAYARD RUSTIN

I

THE DECADE spanned by the 1954 Supreme Court decision on school desegregation and the Civil Rights Act of 1964 will undoubtedly be recorded as the period in which the legal foundations of racism in America were destroyed. To be sure, pockets of resistance remain; but it would be hard to quarrel with the assertion that the elaborate legal structure of segregation and discrimination, particularly in relation to public accommodations, has virtually collapsed. On the other hand, without making light of the human sacrifices involved in the direct-action tactics (sit-ins, freedom rides, and the rest) that were so instrumental to this achievement, we must recognize that in desegregating public accommodations, we affected institutions which are relatively peripheral both to the American socio-economic order and to the fundamental conditions of life of the Negro people. In a highly industrialized, 20th-century civilization, we hit Jim Crow precisely where it was most anachronistic, dispensable, and vulnerable—in hotels, lunch counters, terminals, libraries, swimming pools, and the like. For in these forms, Jim Crow does impede the flow of commerce in the broadest sense: it is a nuisance in a society on the move (and on the make). Not surprisingly, therefore, it was the most mobility-conscious and relatively liberated groups in the Negro community—lower-middle-class college students—who launched the attack that brought down this imposing but hollow structure.

The term "classical" appears especially apt for this phase of the civil rights movement. But in the few years that have passed since the first flush of sit-ins, several developments have taken place that have complicated matters enormously. One is the shifting focus of the movement in the South, symbolized by Birmingham; another is the spread of the revolution to the North; and the third, common to the other two, is the expansion of the movement's base in the Negro community.

BAYARD RUSTIN, who organized the March on Washington and has been a close associate of Martin Luther King, is widely recognized as the leading tactician of the civil rights movement. This is his first appearance in COMMENTARY.

To attempt to disentangle these three strands is to do violence to reality. David Danzig's perceptive article, "The Meaning of Negro Strategy,"* correctly saw in the Birmingham events the victory of the concept of collective struggle over individual achievement as the road to Negro freedom. And Birmingham remains the unmatched symbol of grass-roots protest involving all strata of the black community. It was also in this most industrialized of Southern cities that the single-issue demands of the movement's classical stage gave way to the "package deal." No longer were Negroes satisfied with integrating lunch counters. They now sought advances in employment, housing, school integration, police protection, and so forth.

Thus, the movement in the South began to attack areas of discrimination which were not so remote from the Northern experience as were Jim Crow lunch counters. At the same time, the interrelationship of these apparently distinct areas became increasingly evident. What is the value of winning access to public accommodations for those who lack money to use them? The minute the movement faced this question, it was compelled to expand its vision beyond race relations to economic relations, including the role of education in modern society. And what also became clear is that all these interrelated problems, by their very nature, are not soluble by private, voluntary efforts but require government action—or politics. Already Southern demonstrators had recognized that the most effective way to strike at the police brutality they suffered from was by getting rid of the local sheriff—and that meant political action, which in turn meant, and still means, political action within the Democratic party where the only meaningful primary contests in the South are fought.

And so, in Mississippi, thanks largely to the leadership of Bob Moses, a turn toward political action has been taken. More than voter registration is involved here. A conscious bid for political power is being made, and in the course of that effort a tactical shift is being effected: direct-action techniques are being subordinated to a strategy calling for the building of community institutions or power bases. Clearly, the implications of this shift reach far beyond Mississippi. What began as a protest movement is being challenged to translate itself into a political movement. Is this the right course? And if it is, can the transformation be accomplished?

II

THE VERY decade which has witnessed the decline of legal Jim Crow has also seen the rise of de facto segregation in our most fundamental socio-economic institutions. More Negroes are unemployed today than in 1954, and the unemployment gap between the races is wider. The median income of Negroes has dropped from 57 per cent to 54 per cent of that of whites. A higher percentage of Negro workers is now concentrated in jobs vulnerable to automation than was the case ten years ago. More Negroes attend de facto segregated schools today than when the Supreme Court handed down its famous decision; while school integration proceeds at a snail's pace in the South, the number of Northern schools with an excessive proportion of minority youth proliferates. And behind this is the continuing growth of racial slums, spreading over our central cities and trapping Negro youth in a milieu which, whatever its legal definition, sows an unimaginable demoralization. Again, legal niceties aside, a resident of a racial ghetto lives in segregated housing, and more Negroes fall into this category than ever before.

These are the facts of life which generate frustration in the Negro community and challenge the civil rights movement. At issue, after all, is not civil rights, strictly speaking, but social and economic conditions. Last summer's riots were not race riots; they were outbursts of class aggression in a society where class and color definitions are converging disastrously. How can the (perhaps misnamed) civil rights movement deal with this problem?

Before trying to answer, let me first insist that the task of the movement is vastly complicated by the failure of many whites of good will to understand the nature of our problem. There is a widespread assumption that the removal of artificial racial barriers should result in the automatic integration of the Negro into all aspects of American life. This myth is fostered by facile analogies with the experience of various ethnic immigrant groups, particularly the Jews. But the analogies with the Jews do not hold for three simple but profound reasons. First, Jews have a long history as a literate people, a resource which has afforded them opportunities to advance in the academic and professional worlds, to achieve intellectual status even in the midst of economic hardship, and to evolve sustaining value systems in the context of ghetto life. Negroes, for the greater part of their presence in this country, were forbidden by law to read or write. Second, Jews have a long history of family stability, the importance of which in terms of aspiration and self-image is obvious. The Negro family structure was totally destroyed by slavery and with it the possibility of cultural transmission (the right of Negroes to marry and rear children is barely a century old). Third, Jews are white and have the option of relinquishing their cultural-religious identity, intermarrying, passing, etc. Negroes, or at least the overwhelming majority of them, do not have this option. There is also a fourth, vulgar reason. If the Jewish and Negro communities are not comparable in terms of education, family structure, and color, it is also true that their respective economic roles bear little resemblance.

This matter of economic role brings us to the greater problem—the fact that we are moving into an era in which the natural functioning of the market does not by itself ensure every man with will and ambition a place in the productive process. The immigrant who came to this country during the late 19th and early 20th centuries entered a society which was expanding territorially and/or economically. It was then possible to start at the bottom, as an unskilled or semi-skilled worker, and move up the ladder, acquiring new skills along the way. Especially was this true when industrial unionism was burgeoning, giving new dignity and higher wages to organized workers. Today the situation has changed. We are not expanding territorially, the western frontier is settled, labor organizing has leveled off, our rate of economic growth has been stagnant for a decade. And we are in the midst of a technological revolution which is altering the fundamental structure of the labor force, destroying unskilled and semi-skilled jobs—jobs in which Negroes are disproportionately concentrated.

Whatever the pace of this technological revolution may be, the direction is clear: the lower rungs of the economic ladder are being lopped off. This means that an individual will no longer be able to start at the bottom and work his way up; he will have to start in the middle or on top, and hold on tight. It will not even be enough to have certain specific skills, for many skilled jobs are also vulnerable to automation. A broad educational background, permitting vocational adaptability and flexibility, seems more imperative than ever. We live in a society where, as Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz puts it, machines have the equivalent of a high school diploma. Yet the average educational attainment of American Negroes is 8.2 years.

Negroes, of course, are not the only people being affected by these developments. It is reported that there are now 50 per cent fewer unskilled and semi-skilled jobs than there are high school dropouts. Almost one-third of the 26 million young people entering the labor market in the 1960's will be dropouts. But the percentage of Negro dropouts nationally is 57 per cent, and in New York City, among Negroes 25 years of age or over, it is 68 per cent. They are without a future.

To what extent can the kind of self-help campaign recently prescribed by Eric Hoffer in the New York Times Magazine cope with such a situation? I would advise those who think that self-help is the answer to familiarize themselves with the long history of such efforts in the Negro community, and to consider why so many foundered on the shoals of ghetto life. It goes without saying that any effort to combat demoralization and apathy is desirable, but we must understand that demoralization in the Negro community is largely a common-sense response to an objective reality. Negro youths have no need of statistics to perceive, fairly accurately, what their odds are in American society. Indeed, from the point of view of motivation, some of the healthiest Negro youngsters I know are juvenile delinquents: vigorously pursuing the American Dream of material acquisition and status, yet finding the conventional means of attaining it blocked off, they do not yield to defeatism but resort to illegal (and often ingenious) methods. They are not alien to American culture. They are, in Gunnar Myrdal's phrase, "exaggerated Americans." To want a Cadillac is not un-American; to push a cart in the garment center is. If Negroes are to be persuaded that the conventional path (school, work, etc.) is superior, we had better provide evidence which is now sorely lacking. It is a double cruelty to harangue Negro youth about education and training when we do not know what jobs will be available for them. When a Negro youth can reasonably foresee a future free of slums, when the prospect of gainful employment is realistic, we will see motivation and self-help in abundant enough quantities.

Meanwhile, there is an ironic similarity between the self-help advocated by many liberals and the doctrines of the Black Muslims. Professional sociologists, psychiatrists, and social workers have expressed amazement at the Muslims' success in transforming prostitutes and dope addicts into respectable citizens. But every prostitute the Muslims convert to a model of Calvinist virtue is replaced by the ghetto with two more. Dedicated as they are to maintenance of the ghetto, the Muslims are powerless to affect substantial moral reform. So too with every other group or program which is not aimed at the destruction of slums, their causes and effects. Self-help efforts, directly or indirectly, must be geared to mobilizing people into power units capable of effecting social change. That is, their goal must be genuine self-help, not merely self-improvement. Obviously, where self-improvement activities succeed in imparting to their participants a feeling of some control over their environment, those involved may find their appetites for change whetted; they may move into the political arena.

III

Let me sum up what I have thus far been trying to say: the civil rights movement is evolving from a protest movement into a full-fledged social movement—an evolution calling its very name into question. It is now concerned not merely with removing the barriers to full opportunity but with achieving the fact of equality. From sit-ins and freedom rides we have gone into rent strikes, boycotts, community organization, and political action. As a consequence of this natural evolution, the Negro today finds himself stymied by obstacles of far greater magnitude than the legal barriers he was attacking before: automation, urban decay, de facto school segregation. These are problems which, while conditioned by Jim Crow, do not vanish upon its demise. They are more deeply rooted in our socio-economic order; they are the result of the total society's failure to meet not only the Negro's needs, but human needs generally.

These propositions have won increasing recognition and acceptance, but with a curious twist. They have formed the common premise of two apparently contradictory lines of thought which simultaneously nourish and antagonize each other. On the one hand, there is the reasoning of the New York Times moderate who says that the problems are so enormous and complicated that Negro militancy is a futile irritation, and that the need is for "intelligent moderation." Thus, during the first New York school boycott, the Times editorialized that Negro demands, while abstractly just, would necessitate massive reforms, the funds for which could not realistically be anticipated; therefore the just demands were also foolish demands and would only antagonize white people. Moderates of this stripe are often correct in perceiving the difficulty or impossibility of racial progress in the context of present social and economic policies. But they accept the context as fixed. They ignore (or perhaps see all too well) the potentialities inherent in linking Negro demands to broader pressures for radical revision of existing policies. They apparently see nothing strange in the fact that in the last twenty-five years we have spent nearly a trillion dollars fighting or preparing for wars, yet throw up our hands before the need for overhauling our schools, clearing the slums, and really abolishing poverty. My quarrel with these moderates is that they do not even envision radical changes; their admonitions of moderation are, for all practical purposes, admonitions to the Negro to adjust to the status quo, and are therefore immoral.

The more effectively the moderates argue their case, the more they convince Negroes that American society will not or cannot be reorganized for full racial equality. Michael Harrington has said that a successful war on poverty might well require the expenditure of a $100 billion. Where, the Negro wonders, are the forces now in motion to compel such a commitment? If the voices of the moderates were raised in an insistence upon a reallocation of national resources at levels that could not be confused with tokenism (that is, if the moderates stopped being moderates), Negroes would have greater grounds for hope. Meanwhile, the Negro movement cannot escape a sense of isolation.

It is precisely this sense of isolation that gives rise to the second line of thought I want to examine—the tendency within the civil rights movement which, despite its militancy, pursues what I call a "no-win" policy. Sharing with many moderates a recognition of the magnitude of the obstacles to freedom, spokesmen for this tendency survey the American scene and find no forces prepared to move toward radical solutions. From this they conclude that the only viable strategy is shock; above all, the hypocrisy of white liberals must be exposed. These spokesmen are often described as the radicals of the movement, but they are really its moralists. They seek to change white hearts—by traumatizing them. Frequently abetted by white self-flagellants, they may gleefully applaud (though not really agreeing with) Malcolm X because, while they admit he has no program, they think he can frighten white people into doing the right thing. To believe this, of course, you must be convinced, even if unconsciously, that at the core of the white man's heart lies a buried affection for Negroes—a proposition one may be permitted to doubt. But in any case, hearts are not relevant to the issue; neither racial affinities nor racial hostilities are rooted there. It is institutions—social, political, and economic institutions—which are the ultimate molders of collective sentiments. Let these institutions be reconstructed today, and let the ineluctable gradualism of history govern the formation of a new psychology.

My quarrel with the "no-win" tendency in the civil rights movement (and the reason I have so designated it) parallels my quarrel with the moderates outside the movement. As the latter lack the vision or will for fundamental change, the former lack a realistic strategy for achieving it. For such a strategy they substitute militancy. But militancy is a matter of posture and volume and not of effect.

I BELIEVE that the Negro's struggle for equality in America is essentially revolutionary. While most Negroes—in their hearts—unquestionably seek only to enjoy the fruits of American society as it now exists, their quest cannot objectively be satisfied within the framework of existing political and economic relations. The young Negro who would demonstrate his way into the labor market may be motivated by a thoroughly bourgeois ambition and thoroughly "capitalist" considerations, but he will end up having to favor a great expansion of the public sector of the economy. At any rate, that is the position the movement will be forced to take as it looks at the number of jobs being generated by the private economy, and if it is to remain true to the masses of Negroes.

The revolutionary character of the Negro's struggle is manifest in the fact that this struggle may have done more to democratize life for whites than for Negroes. Clearly, it was the sit-in movement of young Southern Negroes which, as it galvanized white students, banished the ugliest features of McCarthyism from the American campus and resurrected political debate. It was not until Negroes assaulted de facto school segregation in the urban centers that the issue of quality education for all children stirred into motion. Finally, it seems reasonably clear that the civil rights movement, directly and through the resurgence of social conscience it kindled, did more to initiate the war on poverty than any other single force.

It will be—it has been—argued that these by-products of the Negro struggle are not revolutionary. But the term revolutionary, as I am using it, does not connote violence; it refers to the qualitative transformation of fundamental institutions, more or less rapidly, to the point where the social and economic structure which they comprised can no longer be said to be the same. The Negro struggle has hardly run its course; and it will not stop moving until it has been utterly defeated or won substantial equality. But I fail to see how the movement can be victorious in the absence of radical programs for full employment, abolition of slums, the reconstruction of our educational system, new definitions of work and leisure. Adding up the cost of such programs, we can only conclude that we are talking about a refashioning of our political economy. It has been estimated, for example, that the price of replacing New York City's slums with public housing would be $17 billion. Again, a multi-billion dollar federal public-works program, dwarfing the currently proposed $2 billion program, is required to reabsorb unskilled and semi-skilled workers into the labor market—and this must be done if Negro workers in these categories are to be employed. "Preferential treatment" cannot help them.

I am not trying here to delineate a total program, only to suggest the scope of economic reforms which are most immediately related to the plight of the Negro community. One could speculate on their political implications—whether, for example, they do not indicate the obsolescence of state government and the superiority of regional structures as viable units of planning. Such speculations aside, it is clear that Negro needs cannot be satisfied unless we go beyond what has so far been placed on the agenda. How are these radical objectives to be achieved? The answer is simple, deceptively so: through political power.

There is a strong moralistic strain in the civil rights movement which would remind us that power corrupts, forgetting that the absence of power also corrupts. But this is not the view I want to debate here, for it is waning. Our problem is posed by those who accept the need for political power but do not understand the nature of the object and therefore lack sound strategies for achieving it; they tend to confuse political institutions with lunch counters.

A handful of Negroes, acting alone, could integrate a lunch counter by strategically locating their bodies so as directly to interrupt the operation of the proprietor's will; their numbers were relatively unimportant. In politics, however, such a confrontation is difficult because the interests involved are merely represented. In the execution of a political decision a direct confrontation may ensue (as when federal marshals escorted James Meredith into the University of Mississippi—to turn from an example of non-violent coercion to one of force backed up with the threat of violence). But in arriving at a political decision, numbers and organizations are crucial, especially for the economically disenfranchised. (Needless to say, I am assuming that the forms of political democracy exist in America, however imperfectly, that they are valued, and that elitist or putschist conceptions of exercising power are beyond the pale of discussion for the civil rights movement.)

Neither that movement nor the country's twenty million black people can win political power alone. We need allies. The future of the Negro struggle depends on whether the contradictions of this society can be resolved by a coalition of progressive forces which becomes the effective political majority in the United States. I speak of the coalition which staged the March on Washington, passed the Civil Rights Act, and laid the basis for the Johnson landslide—Negroes, trade unionists, liberals, and religious groups.

THERE ARE those who argue that a coalition strategy would force the Negro to surrender his political independence to white liberals, that he would be neutralized, deprived of his cutting edge, absorbed into the Establishment. Some who take this position urged last year that votes be withheld from the Johnson-Humphrey ticket as a demonstration of the Negro's political power. Curiously enough, these people who sought to demonstrate power through the non-exercise of it, also point to the Negro "swing vote" in crucial urban areas as the source of the Negro's independent political power. But here they are closer to being right: the urban Negro vote will grow in importance in the coming years. If there is anything positive in the spread of the ghetto, it is the potential political power base thus created, and to realize this potential is one of the most challenging and urgent tasks before the civil rights movement. If the movement can wrest leadership of the ghetto vote from the machines, it will have acquired an organized constituency such as other major groups in our society now have.

But we must also remember that the effectiveness of a swing vote depends solely on "other" votes. It derives its power from them. In that sense, it can never be "independent," but must opt for one candidate or the other, even if by default. Thus coalitions are inescapable, however tentative they may be. And this is the case in all but those few situations in which Negroes running on an independent ticket might conceivably win. "Independence," in other words, is not a value in itself. The issue is which coalition to join and how to make it responsive to your program. Necessarily there will be compromise. But the difference between expediency and morality in politics is the difference between selling out a principle and making smaller concessions to win larger ones. The leader who shrinks from this task reveals not his purity but his lack of political sense.

The task of molding a political movement out of the March on Washington coalition is not simple, but no alternatives have been advanced. We need to choose our allies on the basis of common political objectives. It has become fashionable in some no-win Negro circles to decry the white liberal as the main enemy (his hypocrisy is what sustains racism); by virtue of this reverse recitation of the reactionary's litany (liberalism leads to socialism, which leads to Communism) the Negro is left in majestic isolation, except for a tiny band of fervent white initiates. But the objective fact is that Eastland and Goldwater are the main enemies—they and the opponents of civil rights, of the war on poverty, of medicare, of social security, of federal aid to education, of unions, and so forth. The labor movement, despite its obvious faults, has been the largest single organized force in this country pushing for progressive social legislation. And where the Negro-labor-liberal axis is weak, as in the farm belt, it was the religious groups that were most influential in rallying support for the Civil Rights Bill.

The durability of the coalition was interestingly tested during the election. I do not believe that the Johnson landslide proved the "white backlash" to be a myth. It proved, rather, that economic interests are more fundamental than prejudice: the backlashers decided that loss of social security was, after all, too high a price to pay for a slap at the Negro. This lesson was a valuable first step in re-educating such people, and it must be kept alive, for the civil rights movement will be advanced only to the degree that social and economic welfare gets to be inextricably entangled with civil rights.

The 1964 elections marked a turning point in American politics. The Democratic landslide was not merely the result of a negative reaction to Goldwaterism; it was also the expression of a majority liberal consensus. The near unanimity with which Negro voters joined in that expression was, I am convinced, a vindication of the July 25th statement by Negro leaders calling for a strategic turn toward political action and a temporary curtailment of mass demonstrations. Despite the controversy surrounding the statement, the instinctive response it met with in the community is suggested by the fact that demonstrations were down 75 per cent as compared with the same period in 1963. But should so high a percentage of Negro voters have gone to Johnson, or should they have held back to narrow his margin of victory and thus give greater visibility to our swing vote? How has our loyalty changed things? Certainly the Negro vote had higher visibility in 1960, when a switch of only 7 per cent from the Republican column of 1956 elected President Kennedy. But the slimness of Kennedy's victory—of his "mandate"—dictated a go-slow approach on civil rights, at least until the Birmingham upheaval.

Although Johnson's popular majority was so large that he could have won without such overwhelming Negro support, that support was important from several angles. Beyond adding to Johnson's total national margin, it was specifically responsible for his victories in Virginia, Florida, Tennessee, and Arkansas. Goldwater took only those states where fewer than 45 per cent of eligible Negroes were registered. That Johnson would have won those states had Negro voting rights been enforced is a lesson not likely to be lost on a man who would have been happy with a unanimous electoral college. In any case, the 1.6 million Southern Negroes who voted have had a shattering impact on the Southern political party structure, as illustrated in the changed composition of the Southern congressional delegation. The "backlash" gave the Republicans five House seats in Alabama, one in Georgia, and one in Mississippi. But on the Democratic side, seven segregationists were defeated while all nine Southerners who voted for the Civil Rights Act were re-elected. It may be premature to predict a Southern Democratic party of Negroes and white moderates and a Republican Party of refugee racists and economic conservatives, but there certainly is a strong tendency toward such a realignment; and an additional 3.6 million Negroes of voting age in the eleven Southern states are still to be heard from. Even the tendency toward disintegration of the Democratic party's racist wing defines a new context for Presidential and liberal strategy in the congressional battles ahead. Thus the Negro vote (North as well as South), while not decisive in the Presidential race, was enormously effective. It was a dramatic element of a historic mandate which contains vast possibilities and dangers that will fundamentally affect the future course of the civil rights movement.

The liberal congressional sweep raises hope for an assault on the seniority system, Rule Twenty-two, and other citadels of Dixiecrat-Republican power. The overwhelming of this conservative coalition should also mean progress on much bottlenecked legislation of profound interest to the movement (e.g., bills by Senators Clark and Nelson on planning, manpower, and employment). Moreover, the irrelevance of the South to Johnson's victory gives the President more freedom to act than his predecessor had and more leverage to the movement to pressure for executive action in Mississippi and other racist strongholds.

NONE OF this guarantees vigorous executive or legislative action, for the other side of the Johnson landslide is that it has a Gaullist quality. Goldwater's capture of the Republican party forced into the Democratic camp many disparate elements which do not belong there, Big Business being the major example. Johnson, who wants to be President "of all people," may try to keep his new coalition together by sticking close to the political center. But if he decides to do this, it is unlikely that even his political genius will be able to hold together a coalition so inherently unstable and rife with contradictions. It must come apart. Should it do so while Johnson is pursuing a centrist course, then the mandate will have been wastefully dissipated. However, if the mandate is seized upon to set fundamental changes in motion, then the basis can be laid for a new mandate, a new coalition including hitherto inert and dispossessed strata of the population.

Here is where the cutting edge of the civil rights movement can be applied. We must see to it that the reorganization of the "consensus party" proceeds along lines which will make it an effective vehicle for social reconstruction, a role it cannot play so long as it furnishes Southern racism with its national political power. (One of Barry Goldwater's few attractive ideas was that the Dixiecrats belong with him in the same party.) And nowhere has the civil rights movement's political cutting edge been more magnificently demonstrated than at Atlantic City, where the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party not only secured recognition as a bona fide component of the national party, but in the process routed the representatives of the most rabid racists—the white Mississippi and Alabama delegations. While I still believe that the FDP made a tactical error in spurning the compromise, there is no question that they launched a political revolution whose logic is the displacement of Dixiecrat power. They launched that revolution within a major political institution and as part of a coalitional effort.

The role of the civil rights movement in the reorganization of American political life is programmatic as well as strategic. We are challenged now to broaden our social vision, to develop functional programs with concrete objectives. We need to propose alternatives to technological unemployment, urban decay, and the rest. We need to be calling for public works and training, for national economic planning, for federal aid to education, for attractive public housing—all this on a sufficiently massive scale to make a difference. We need to protest the notion that our integration into American life, so long delayed, must now proceed in an atmosphere of competitive scarcity instead of in the security of abundance which technology makes possible. We cannot claim to have answers to all the complex problems of modern society. That is too much to ask of a movement still battling barbarism in Mississippi. But we can agitate the right questions by probing at the contradictions which still stand in the way of the "Great Society." The questions having been asked, motion must begin in the larger society, for there is a limit to what Negroes can do alone.

POLITICAL ACTION ON THE COMMUNITY LEVEL: Part 1

By: Karin Berg - Staff Associate
Community Relations Department

CORE - Congress of Racial Equality
38 Park Row, New York, N.Y. 10038

This paper is to serve for discussion purposes and as an initial guide for chapter use. Your chapter may already be experienced in political action, but this is to serve those chapters who would like some concrete ideas before going into their community. Of course, there are variables but most locales will find the following applies to them. This paper should be used in conjunction with other material which the National Office has regarding community organization.

Why political action? An organized community is the most effective pressure group that can be created at the local level; it can form a lobby for legislation, can break a corrupt political machine, can improve community conditions through political pressure and through self-help programs, and can set up cooperative community projects.

What is political action? The definition of political that would fit our context would be "of or pertaining to the organization or action of individuals, parties, or interests that seek to control the appointment or action of those who manage the affairs of a state." Therefore, when a CORE chapter pickets to seek redress and change, it is taking political action. When we ask that laws be changed or existing laws be enforced, we are taking political action.

As your community organization program develops, there are some things which always must be kept in mind. CORE is working to develop leadership within the community. This means that whenever you go to the Traffic Commissioner to negotiate for a stoplight on an intersection, you should be accompanied by mothers who will stress the need for their children's safety and tell the commissioner about the accidents which have occurred due to the lack of a traffic light. When you go to the mayor or housing commissioner to negotiate demands for better housing, you should be accompanied by the leaders of tenants councils which you have helped to organize. You should not attempt to negotiate on such a level until you have organized the tenants councils. Always try to let the members of the community do the talking. You will benefit by an acting out of the situation before the appointment with members of CORE acting as the civil authorities and the members of the community acting as the negotiators. Then discuss weaknesses in the negotiation before going to your meeting. You will have to speak at some points in the discussion to point up or underline pertinent issues. Never underestimate the power of this method of negotiation. When officials see CORE with community leadership behind the organization, they are more likely to be impressed than with CORE negotiating alone.

When choosing your first targets, pick areas of prime vulnerability. Choose those areas that indicate obvious discriminatory practice. When you go to the Sanitation Commissioner to protest that areas of your community do not have garbage collected from one to two weeks at a time, have the figures that show the white community gets garbage collection more often. The street lighting may be better in the white neighborhoods, etc. If you receive no satisfaction in negotiations and finally have to go into direct action, the issue will be a clear one when you present it to the press. Also, if the community is involved in your demonstration, the issue will be pointed up even more. It is often better to stage your demonstration directly in the community, where you have a chance for greater numbers, more unity and authenticity, rather than inside your city hall. This, of course, depends on your local conditions.

We also must never make the mistake of using the community to back up demands which are largely our own. We are there to back up the community. There will be national projects where we will present the case to the community for their support and CORE will provide the direction for other projects, but we need the community just as much as the community needs us. In fact, we have more to lose without it -- a ghetto area has nothing to lose, so they will be skeptical and large portions of it will be unmoving at your first attempts. Only by thorough and repeated follow-up will you begin to gain their confidence. Don 't expect the name of CORE to make vast inroads...you'll have a head start and they'll open doors for you that they wouldn't for others, but it won't be easy.

When working with the community, sooner or later appeals and demands must be addressed directly to legislators and the chapter then becomes involved in the legislative process. The widening of the scope of CORE's voter registration programs has necessarily brought involvement in political education. Voter registration must be directed towards an end. CORE's end has been the full involvement of the Negro community in the structure which governs; only through this involvement can our goals be achieved.

The "how to's" of any chapter's program will vary with the locale of the chapter: urban, suburban, rural, North, South, etc. A few basics to follow as you begin your program are:

A. Study of local election laws: Members of the chapter should be educated in these laws; workshops could be conducted and inquiries made as to how members of CORE might serve as poll-watchers at registration and elections. Those long lines, which usually occur in the minority communities, are almost always due to stalling on the part of those working the election boards to support an incumbent machine or inefficiency and lack of knowledge concerning procedures or both. The Board of Elections is chosen through patronage of the machine in power, so a hostile beauracracy is faced when attempting a breakthrough. A little patience has to be exercised when dealing with situations which result when beauracracy proves most frustrating, but if you know your facts, you can usually spot errors and abuses. When your group is confident of what it's doing, alert the press. Report all abuses and inaccuracies to the Board of Elections, the police officers at your polling place (get badge number) and report the results of your investigation and complaints to the press (and to the Department of Justice where appropriate). Always have copies of the local election and registration procedures with you and check for slip-ups before making your complaint. (Simplified copies of these procedures are given to members of most local boards before they serve and they should be available at your Municipal Board of Election). If you can, get assistance from reputable attorneys.

Corrupt political machines always benefit by low registration and a low percentage of voting. Higher percentages mean the community is becoming informed and wants change and action.

B. Study the precincts in the minority community. See which precincts the state senators and representatives come from. Find out which precincts the U.S. Senators and Representatives come from. (Each precinct will be dependent on the other for support and endorsement, etc.) Do those holding office represent the community's needs? How does the system of patronage work in the community? Who controls the patronage? In the courts? In the housing boards, etc.? What is the racial make-up of the precincts? Which areas are the most depressed?

C. Study the local political clubs. Often you will find two clubs of one party in the same precinct -- one white and one Negro. Or you will find that Negroes are discouraged from joining the club -- annual membership is prohibitive, etc. Does the club have a constitution? Is it a good one? Does the community ever use the club? The local political club is supposed to serve the community in which it's situated.

In the process of finding out some of the things listed above, you will find that many ideas will occur to you. Some of them will be unprintable and some you could go to jail for, but remain non-violent. You may be discouraged and remain steadfast in your belief that "all politicians are alike." But they aren't. Every now and then, you'll find a man of principle trying to keep his head above water. It's very difficult for him to do so without support, which brings up our next point...

D. Study legislation in municipal and state bodies that fall in line with your chapter's program and then discuss the relevant legislation with knowledgeable members of your community -- perhaps in a forum. The discussion will raise new ideas and from all of the above, you will find those members of the community who will evidence capabilities of potential leadership. Find the authors of the legislation that fall in line with your chapter's program -- after investigating their past records, you can determine if this is the type of representative that you can contact in the future for assistance. You will also probably want to contact him to support other legislation which will benefit the needs of the community. In the process, you can learn further details of the political situation in your locale from a reliable source.

Some chapters have already become involved in local elections; some have supported candidates for office. But if your chapter ventures into this area, some basics must be kept in mind. The most important is that the candidate you support must stay clear of ties with the leadership of corrupt political machines...the problem of political patronage has too many pitfalls. Many "reform" movements have come full circle back to the old corrupt practices in such rapid order, that a few local political clubs in the major cities have found it necessary that all those in leadership positions take pledges of accepting no patronage positions whatsoever while serving in office, due to the conflict which arises.

Chapters should not run candidates until their programs have been underway for some time and are smoothly functioning -- this does not mean that you can't support a candidate if a top-notch one comes along. But there should be full discussion within the chapter before doing so.

The problem of patronage is an area of politics filled with quicksand; the novice can go under because he is not aware of what he's getting into. Patronage is defined as "the right or control of nomination to political office;" also "the offices, contracts, honors, etc. which an official may bestow by favor."

One type of patronage is commonly called "no-show" jobs. This is the type of job whereby a politician will put someone on his payroll, but the person doesn't have to report for work. A corrupt machine will use this method to buy loyalty.

Another type of patronage is that which is legitimate appointment to a public office. The problem which arises in this area is that when a good leader, who is principled, is appointed to public office, conflicts will arise if he continues to serve on his post in the local club or local organization. Perhaps the organization doesn't support a city program or will want alterations to be made on the city program, and the leader of the group is in conflict -- if he represents his group's position, he is subject to pressure from the city administration. It might be necessary for him to resign his post in the local group when taking the city job so that he can represent an independent viewpoint and the group can function more independently.

Under the system of "no-show" jobs, the public is bilked of money. Our answer should be found in our programming, which demands public work projects to take up the slack in employment. This can even be carried on in the community, such as rehabilitation of housing. We are there to serve community needs, and the community is not served by getting jobs for one or two individuals while others could be served by the building of more and better schools, public housing, playgrounds and recreation centers. We should press for these positive measures along with an effective and responsive police department, a meaningful health program including nutrition and family planning.

If your chapter has no strong community organization program going on very steady legs, messing in the local political set-up will produce major setbacks, trouble and sometimes disaster. Just approach with caution, examine thoroughly before you act, and your chapter can become a vital force in the community.

Dear Mrs. Bingham:

I am replying to your February 24 letter to Mr. Farmer. I want to take this opportunity to thank you for your continued financial support.

Let me begin by stating that they column written by William S. White grossly misinterprets CORE's position and activity. You will remember that the only action to implement the "extensive demonstrations" mentioned by White was a mass march to the post office to post letters to Dirksen. There obviously can be no argument with this tactic, since letter writing is acknowledged by all Americans as a legitimate lobbying activity.

The rest of Mr. White's column I can only interpret as an intentional misinterpretation of CORE's activity and intent. There is simply no basis for the charge that Negro organizations are going launch "the most extraordinary demonstrations against a single public office-holder in the United States since those of a century ago..." Mr. White also refers to a "naked attempt to intimidate a United States senator." I know of no plans to intimidate nor of any actions planned which could be interpreted as intimidation.

I am happy that you went to the trouble of writing us in order to verify the allegations made by Mr. White rather than accepting them as they were reported. While CORE expends less than 1% of its annual budget in lobbying activities, we do, of course, intend to work very hard for the passage of the civil rights bill. Even if we decide to picket the Senate or a particular senator, I do not see how picketing, a Constitutionally protected form of free speech, can be interpreted as intimidation. Picketing and other forms of protest have historically, in these United States, been a traditional means of expressing hard felt opinions.

Sincerely yours,

Gordon R. Carey

Dirksen Is Under Powerful Pressure on Rights Position

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

WASHINGTON — The United States has, in the old phrase, now seized the issue of civil rights. A long and bitter struggle over that bill, as already passed by the House of Representatives, now opens.

Now opens, too, the most powerful and open pressure upon a single senator—Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois — ever applied in the memory of old Washington hands.

White

Dirksen, the Republican leader of the Senate, has long been an advocate of civil rights in general. He has, however, been opposed to any unqualified grant of power to the federal government to compel privately owned businesses to serve Negro customers against their will. He does not like or support discrimination by private businesses. But he honestly questions whether federal compulsion would not be an unconstitutional intrusion on the right of private property.

Heart of Bill

All the same, the proposed ban on this form of discrimination is the heart of this whole bill, as the Negro organizations now see it. To oppose it is to be looked upon as "against civil rights."

The Negro organizations frankly intend to drive Dirksen from his position of resistance on principle by the most extraordinary demonstrations against a single public office-holder in the United States since those of a century ago against senators not willing to vote for impeachment of President Andrew Johnson in the Reconstruction aftermath of the Civil War.

James Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality has publicly declared that there will be "extensive demonstrations" in Illinois against the senator personally. He has added that "people will march en masse to the ..."

This sort of naked attempt to intimidate a United States senator is not a part of anybody's civil rights. It is, instead, a profound civil wrong. This is not the way of fair men in a free society. This is moral and intellectual mobism. And those who condone it, either out of confused motives or a lack of courage, will live to regret a shameful surrender to hysteria and demagoguery.

What happens to Dirksen personally is important in itself. For he has behaved with civility and honor in a high post in a forum whose whole tradition is based on the belief that great public issues are to be settled in the minds of men and not by crude menace, in whatever form it might take.

But what happens to Dirksen as a symbol is even more important. If pressure groups, however earnestly motivated, can picket a senator in the exercise of his duty and conscience, as though he were some industrial plant refusing a wage increase, where does the picketing stop?

A Real Threat

Can a judge be terrorized to turn from an unpopular to a popular decision in a case at law? Can a jury be swayed in the very courtroom by the chants of pickets under the courthouse windows, or thrust from its convictions by physical pressures of marching men shouldering and elbowing it as it goes out to lunch?

Can a somber and infinitely complicated national issue be decided by the simple process of selecting a single man of responsibility and pouring out upon him, day and night, the angry demands of one set of partisans in the dispute? Is this "legislation"? Or is this the thin and terrible end of a wedge that might one day be driven the whole fabric of orderly responsibility in this nation?

Mr. James Farmer
National Director, CORE
New York City

Dear Mr. Farmer,

Enclosed please find check for five dollars as evidence of good faith, in recognition of significant past accomplishments, and in hope for the future. However, if the attached article is true, I must protest.

For months now, I have carried on a personal "crusade" for civil rights and the C.R. bill via letters to the Peoples' Column in the Green Bay (Wis.) Press Gazette. My latest letter urged advocates of the bill to write to Sen. Dirksen, urging his support. I have written to him myself several times. But writing to him, presenting arguments to him, urging and exhorting him is one thing; demonstrating against him is quite another. Did it ever occur to you that being an intelligent man, and as far as we know emotionally uninvolved, he may already have made up his mind that "Public Accomodations" must pass? This may be only wishful-thinking, I realize, but if it were true, he would be risking at the very least severe loss of face in any attempt to influence favorable passage of the bill. Wouldn't you be stubborn enough to deeply resent this kind of bullying?

I have a wealth of sympathy for the Negroes' so-called impatience, believing it is high time for the white man to exhibit a little of that unbelievable patience which the black man has shown for 100 years. Impatience is not only understandable, it is normal and right and necessary, but what you are proposing, according to Mr. White, is none of these things. It is everything Mr. White says it is: unethical, immoral, dangerous. This is no longer non-violent protest; this is vindictive, revengeful intimidation. It is unworthy of you. Please,- do not do it!

Sincerely,
Dorothy H. Bingham

CONGRESSIONAL HEARINGS ON "ANTI-POVERTY" PROPOSALS

The proposals made to the Congress by President Johnson in his Special Message on Poverty on March 16, 1964, are embodied in the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964. (Copies of the bill may be obtained from the House Document Room, The Capitol, Washington 25, D. C.)

Hearings were opened by the House Committee on Education and Labor, headed by Representative Adam Clayton Powell, in Washington on March 17, 1964. First to testify was Sargent Shriver, the person expected to direct the program if it is adopted. After the testimony of government officials this week, the hearings will be adjourned until April 7th and are then expected to continue through April 24th. During this time concerned organizations and individuals will have an opportunity to appear and testify or to submit a statement for the record.

We consider this bill an important first step in the government's "war on poverty." Strong opposition to it, however, is already developing. Strenuous efforts by all of us will be needed to secure its passage. We suggest the following actions:

1. Urge your members to promptly let the President, the House Committee on Education and Labor, their Senators and Representative, and their local newspaper know of their strong support of these proposals.

2. Write or wire now to Representative Adam Clayton Powell (House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.) requesting an opportunity for your organization to testify before the Committee in support of the bill. (While direct testimony is preferable, if it is not possible for you to send a representative to the hearings, you may request that you be permitted to submit a statement for incorporation into the record.)

3. Promote a large attendance at the Committee hearings.

(SEE PAGE 2 FOR HIGHLIGHTS OF THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.)

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE:

President Johnson's billion dollar "war against poverty" program would cost $962.5 million the first year. Among other things, it calls for:

*Helping 380,000 underprivileged young people to break out of the cycle of poverty through job training and education in about 100 civilian camps and training centers ($412.5 million requested).

*Authorizing work and training in home communities for up to 200,000 boys and girls, aged 16 through 21. Young persons would be put to work in hospitals, libraries, playgrounds and other non-profit facilities ($150 million requested).

*Authorizing a work-study program for 140,000 young people from low-income families to help pay their college expenses through part-time jobs on campus or through public or non-profit agencies off-campus ($72.5 million requested).

*Stimulating local communities to organize their own anti-poverty programs with federal assistance ($315 million requested).

*Authorizing federal loans to non-profit corporations for acquisition of rural land to develop into family-size farms for sale to low-income farmers ($50 million requested).

*Authorizing grants of up to $1,500 and loans of up to $2,500 to low-income families for acquiring, improving or operating family-size farms or to supplement their income; and authorizing loans to cooperatives to provide services not otherwise available.

*Authorizing loans of up to $1,500 to small businessmen on more liberal terms than are provided under the regular loan provisions of the Small Business Administration.

*Granting a total of $150 million to states for job training and basic education programs for parents of children receiving welfare payments under aid-to-dependent-children programs.

Dear Jim:

I think you will be interested in seeing the enclosed statement which was presented on behalf of NSF to the House Labor Committee in support of the Anti-Poverty Bill. I'm also enclosing copies of some newspaper clippings which indicate that our farmer stole the show.

We brought Mr. Canty to Washington to participate in the Hearing. His straight-forward and earnest presentation made a great impression on the Congressmen who were present. Passage of this bill, along with the necessary administrative reforms to ensure that its provisions are made available to the people who need them, can save an awful lot of people in the South from being forced off the land.

NEW YORK POST, MONDAY, APRIL 13, 1964

Needy Farmer Testifies for Poverty Bill

Washington, April 13 (AP)—A 56-year-old Negro farmer from South Carolina, who said he was too poor to buy glasses, read aloud in halting tones today his statement to Congress describing his rural life and his support for President Johnson's anti-poverty bill.

The farmer, Willie Preston Canty of Pinewood, told the House Labor subcommittee that he was $9,887 in debt and ineligible under present law to get a loan from any federal farm agency.

He said the Johnson bill's provision for grants up to $1,500 to poor farmers would put him back on his feet.

A different view of such grants came from Dr. Harry L. Brown, a director of the American Farm Bureau Federation, who was the first witness to testify against the bill.

Brown, who was Assistant Secretary of Agriculture under Henry A. Wallace in the 1930s, said that grants and loans to poor farmers would, "Whatever the intention may be, operate to perpetuate subsistence farming and rural slums."

"The concept that low-income families should be settled and maintaine don little farms is an old and reactionary idea," Brown said. "The result would be stabilized, government-directed and subsidized poverty."

Brown said the Farm Bureau Federation supported "the farm loan program of the Farmers Home Administration, which is primarily designed to provide assistance to those farmers who can enlarge their enterprises to become economic-sized operators."

Farmer Canty was brought before the subcommittee by Fay Bennett, executive secretary of the National Sharecropers Fund. He read his statement so slowly and haltingly that Rep. Martin (R-Neb.) questioned whether he had written it himself.

Miss Bennett said that, although Canty did have help in the statement, the main reason why he read poorly was that he couldn't afford glasses.

Canty's statement said that because of three bad crop years and the need to pay hospitalization costs for his father, he had to mortgage his farm of 55 cleared acres and 57 uncleared acres.

"My total debt, including the mortgage and cost of machines, is $9,887," he said.

Canty said he had to support his wife and three unmarried sons. The oldest of these boys, an 18-year-old, has been working in a New York barber shop but will come home next week to help on the farm, Canty said.

FARM UNIT FIGHTS POVERTY PROGRAM

Bureau Leader Asserts Bill 'Does Violence to Budget'

By MARJORIE HUNTER
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 13—An assistant Secretary of Agriculture during the Depression said today that the American Farm Bureau Federation was solidly opposed to the Administration's antipoverty program.

"This program does violence to a balanced budget," Dr. Harry L. Brown of Georgia, a spokesman for the farm bureau, told a special House subcommittee.

He was the first witness to voice opposition to the anti-poverty bill during the two weeks of hearings held so far by the subcommittee.

Two other farm groups—the National Farmers Union and the National Grange—were scheduled to testify today in support of the bill but were asked to come back later.

The subcommittee wanted to adjourn in time for the annual Congressional exodus to the ball park to witness the opening of the major league baseball season—a game between the Washington Senators and the Los Angeles Angels.

"Maybe this describes the mood of the country today," Representative Edith Green, Democrat of Oregon, said dryly as the subcommittee prepared to adjourn, "For heaven's sakes, don't let poverty interfere with the baseball game."

Earlier, one of the nation's poverty statistics appeared in person before the subcommittee to describe his plight. Haltingly, at times painfully, Willie Preston Canty of Pinewood, S.C., read his prepared statement.

Mr Canty, a 56-year-old Negro explained that he was $9,887 in debt because of three bad crop years and his father's extended illness. He said he needed glasses but could not afford them.

Mr. Canty said that he and his family—a wife and three children—lived on their 112-acre farm, raising four crops from which they cleared $1,200 last year. He could not get credit from farm agencies, he said, and borrowed money at 7 per cent interest from a private individual.

Mr. Canty said he thought he could get back on his feet if he could obtain a $1,500 grant under the proposed antipoverty program. With the money, he said, he would buy some cattle, a planting machine and perhaps try to raise sweet potatoes.

My name is Fay Bennett. I am Executive Secretary of the National Sharecroppers Fund, an organization which has been working for more than a quarter of a century to bring economic and social justice to sharecroppers, tenants, small farmers, and farm workers. I appreciate the opportunity to appear before this Committee to testify to the necessity for a broad federal program to end rural poverty. We support H.R. 10440 as an important step in that direction. We are particularly interested in Title III of the Bill, in the section to help young people through the work-study, work-training, and job corps programs, and in the rural community action programs.

There is much talk about the exodus from the land. We all know that in the last few decades millions of Americans have left the farm and have gone to the city. We know that American research and know-how have made possible the production of a super-abundance of food and fiber, with fewer and fewer people. Just the other day, the financial pages of the New York Times (April 10) told of new developments to harvest prunes and lettuce mechanically. Machines are replacing men on the farm as they are in the factories.

It almost seems as though people are becoming obsolete. When machinery becomes obsolete, we scrap it. Are we also to put our jobless people on the scrap heap? It seems that this is what happens when we offer the jobless the alternative of starving or seeking relief checks.

A nation's human resources are its most important component. This is why the Economic Opportunity Bill is such a necessary and hopeful first step in the war on poverty. It offers hope that a civilized nation with a highly developed technology, educational system, and culture can do the necessary providing and planning to rescue its poor, its unemployed, and its underemployed from despair.

How will it do this?

Here is how the bill will work to help the rural poor. Title III provides for grants of up to $1,500 and loans of up to $2,500 to low-income rural families who have a reasonable possibility of bringing about a permanent increase in their income. They could do this by improving their land or acquiring more land, improving their operations, participating in cooperative associations, paying off debts, and generally "getting on their feet." They would also get technical assistance and help in planning for a better income-producing operation. Those who do not own any land of their own could buy a family-size farm from a nonprofit corporation which, under the Bill, could acquire available land and develop it for resale to low-income farm families. Its cost is slight and can mark the difference between remaining independent and being reduced to relief. This is the realistic help that many of these persons need to gain self-sufficiency.

By now this Committee is well aware of the fact that one out of three rural families (over 15 million in all) has a cash income of less than $3,000 a year. Yet $3,000 would seem like great wealth to the more than five million farm families (some of whom are hired farm workers) whose yearly income may be a few hundred dollars, or perhaps $1,000, but less than $2,000. These are the people who do not have enough to eat, whose children go to bed hungry and often do not have a pair of shoes. Their houses are unsafe, and the wind and rain blow through. They sleep four and five to a bed. They are in despair. They must have help.

Many people in these situations write to our office and ask what they can do to help themselves. Here is one such case: Mrs. C. is a sharecropper in north Leflore County in the Mississippi Delta. She has eleven children. Her two oldest sons, aged 15 and 17, help her work the farm. They raised 24 bales of cotton last year, but all she got in the settlement was $500, on which all twelve are barely surviving. "In severe need of clothes and food," the report to our office says.

What will happen if Mrs. C. finally gives up this seemingly hopeless struggle to survive on the land? Or, what is more likely, if she is forced off by her landlord's decision to fully mechanize his cotton crop? She will probably not find work to feed, clothe, and house her family of twelve in the country or in the city. They most probably will all be reduced to complete dependence upon welfare, at a tremendous cost to her dignity, her children's future, and the economy of the community. If they come to New York City, they will join the 470,000 persons who were on the Department of Welfare's rolls in January, 1964--six per cent of the population. This welfare cost $34,668,000 for the month, for an average of $180.62 for each of the over 190,000 family cases on the rolls. If Mrs. C.'s family were paid only the average, it would come to $2,167.44 for the year.

Will the Economic Opportunity Bill help Mrs. C.? Probably not directly, and not much. But it could give her children a chance to break out of this pattern, through the work-study, work-training, and job corps programs. And it could and will help many rural families whose situation is not so extreme.

Here is the case of Mrs. D., a South Carolina widow: She and her sons, aged 27, 18, and 14, work her 109-acre farm, 70 acres of which are cleared. She raises cotton, soybeans, and tobacco. Her debts amount to $2,500, and her income is insufficient to warrant a Farmers Home Administration loan to help her improve her situation. Under Title III of this Bill, she might be eligible for a grant or a loan from FHA, along with help in planning for a more efficient and profitable farming operation. Other provisions of the Bill would help her sons prepare for a better future.

Another story comes from Mr. W. P. Canty, who is here today. He writes as follows:

"I am Willie Preston Canty. I live in Pinewood, Clarendon County, South Carolina. I have lived and worked on a farm all my life. I am still anxious to stay on a farm. I am now 56 years of age. I have a wife and three children to support. I have been operating a farm for 36 years. I raise four crops in addition to raising hogs and vegetables for my family as well as for sale.

"Last year, I was able to raise 20 bales of cotton which grossed $3,000, $400 worth of tobacco with an allotment of one acre, and $100 for soybeans. I also raise some corn. My gross income from the farm was $3,500. After paying all expenses, I had about $1,200 left. There has been a gradual decrease in the tobacco allotment which has helped to decrease my income. I was forced to mortgage my farm, which is composed of 112 acres with 55 acres clear land. My total debt including the mortgage and cost of machines is $9,887.

"Many of my relatives and friends have left the farm because of heavy indebtedness and poor crop yield plus inability to get credit. I have found it very difficult to get proper credit from agencies which lend to other farmers. My friends who have gone to cities bring back some disturbing stories about the conditions in which they have to live in some areas. I should like to stay on my farm and raise my children in the country where I feel it is best for all of us; in fact, at my age changing from the farm would not be easy nor helpful."

Mr. Canty will gladly answer any questions the Committee may wish to ask him.

I think that legislators from the urban areas should be deeply interested in supporting the part of Title II of the Bill which calls for community action programs in the rural as well as the urban areas. Our cities are already overcrowded and staggering under the almost crushing burden of trying to meet the needs of millions of uneducated, poorly educated, and untrained people who have already been cast off the land. We dare not add to this intolerable burden. Many of our urban centers are potentially explosive because of the unmet needs of the millions of rural cast-offs.

The community action programs could spark the efforts needed to improve rural health and social services, education, job training and counseling, economic development, and housing. Other programs already authorized will gain greater impetus through a joint community effort aided by federal financing. All of this could bring about a rebirth in our rural areas, relieve the overcrowding in our cities, and help the nation along the road to economic prosperity and social health.

The Bill's loan program to local cooperatives to help low-income farmers would provide essential production, processing, purchasing, marketing, and other services and facilities which may make the difference between survival and going under. This is not a new idea. This kind of program literally saved thousands of small farmers during the thirties. Many of these small and struggling farmers of the thirties have become big and prosperous through their cooperatives. They aren't interested in the little fellow who today is struggling to survive as they struggled to survive thirty years ago. The government of the people in a democracy must care. It must now offer the seed money, along with the technical assistance needed, the guidance, and the intelligent planning to reawaken and renew rural communities.

Of course I am not suggesting that this Bill will bring about the millennium. Lots more is needed in the way of public works programs, extending the minimum wage and unemployment insurance to farm workers, etc.

The provisions of H.R. 10440 will help to make a family self-sufficient, able to provide its members with adequate food, clothing, and shelter. It will bring new dignity and new hope to the mothers and fathers of these families. It will save the taxpayers millions of dollars in relief and welfare payments, which often perpetuate poverty because they do not give a family the basic help needed for a new start.

In addition, it will give local leadership the opportunity to work hand in hand with local government, state government, and federal government to take advantage of the many programs available for education, vocational training, health, and welfare. It will spur cultural development and spiritual growth.

Who can say what kind of new awakening can come from giving those now left out a chance to be included in the promise of the American dream? Who can say what new musicians will develop, new writers and composers, new orchestras and choral and theater groups, and new strength for Americans to think and work and plan together for a better country for all?

Mr. James Farmer, Director of Organization
Committee on Racial Equality
34 Park Row
New York, N. Y.

Dear Jim:

This is an appeal to you and your organization to join in an all-out effort to mobilize a National Citizens Crusade Against Poverty.

President Johnson has won universal commendation for his call to action for an unconditional war against poverty. The President's program is an historic step in a long road we must travel before millions of American families are liberated from the tragic plight of poverty which robs them economically, culturally and spiritually and denies them the opportunity to live useful and meaningful lives.

Dimensions of Poverty

The dimensions of human poverty in our supposedly affluent society are shocking. Millions of American families live in the sub-basements of our social structure. These are America's "have-not" people. They are the denied and disadvantaged. They are the dispossessed and the discriminated against. They are the old, the young, the Negroes and other minorities. They are the sick and handicapped. They are the sharecroppers and the migratory workers. They are the unemployed, the under-employed and the under-privileged. Not only are they denied employment and opportunities for adequate income, decent housing, good education, medical care; they are robbed of any sense of worth or of human dignity for they are cut off and live apart from the rest of our society and are denied any sense of belonging or any sense of participation.

No nation in the world is as richly blessed as is America in both human and material resources, in technological development and productive power. Yet despite a Gross National Product in excess of Six Hundred Billion Dollars, millions of our people live in abject poverty and the vicious cycle of poverty continues to breed more poverty in the face of social and economic neglect and national indifference.

PRINTED IN USA

The dimensions of the problem of poverty are so staggering as to necessitate bold and adequate action at every level of government -- federal, state and local -- in a comprehensive, coordinated approach. Imperative as bold and adequate governmental action is, we must recognize, that government cannot do the job alone. What is needed is the full mobilization and cooperation and commitment of citizens groups; church, labor, industry, civil rights, civic organizations, student and others if our nation's effort to fight poverty effectively is to be successful.

Needed: A National Citizens Crusade Against Poverty

We must mobilize for a National Citizens Crusade Against Poverty by building a coalition more broadly based than the National Coalition of Conscience, which is committed to the civil rights struggle. The National Coalition of Conscience represents a powerful and dedicated army of American citizens drawn from church groups -- Protestant, Catholic and Jewish -- civil rights and civic and student groups and labor and fraternal organizations. To this broad Coalition of Conscience we can win new allies in the National Citizens Crusade Against Poverty.

The leadership of the National Coalition of Conscience is confident that justice and morality will prevail and that a meaningful civil rights bill will be enacted by the United States Senate and will become the law of the land by the signature of President Johnson. But all of us realize that the civil rights bill is not an end unto itself. It will solve no problems automatically. It will provide us with a new set of tools with which to bring to fulfillment the bright promise of first class citizenship to all Americans.

We Must Join The National Citizens Crusade Against Poverty
With The Struggle For Civil Rights

To achieve the purpose of equal opportunity and first class citizenship, the civil rights struggle must be joined with the total fight against poverty, against unemployment, against under-employment, against slums and poor housing, inadequate education and all of the other evils which mean denial and discrimination against those who are dispossessed and disinherited.

Neither the struggle for civil rights nor the crusade against poverty can be won except as they are waged and won together. The National Coalition of Conscience represents the kind of broadly based citizens organization needed for an all-out assault on poverty. The churches, civil rights groups, civic, fraternal, veterans, student and labor organizations have contacts, organization, manpower and facilities in every community, large and small, where the pockets of poverty persist.

In building the National Citizens Crusade Against Poverty we can call upon and secure the participation of other groups, including industry, farm, veterans, educators and others who can immeasurably strengthen our efforts to effectively support and supplement the meaningful implementation of programs on a community, state and federal basis.

Organize The Unemployed, The Under-Employed And The Under-Privileged

The poor are not only invisible, they are inarticulate and they are without a voice. They must be organized so that they can make their voices heard and so that they may participate in the struggle to free themselves from the poverty that imprisons them. Only as the unemployed and the under-privileged are drawn actively into this total effort can we release the full dynamics of the economic and social forces needed to do the job.

The fight against poverty must not develop along the lines of a well-intentioned social welfare program of the rich doing favors for the poor. The unemployed, the under-employed and the under-privileged must share the sense of dignity and belonging that only their active participation in this struggle can provide. So long as the unemployed, the under-employed and the under-privileged are unorganized, they will continue to be lost and their voices will not be heard. Organized they can contribute a new dynamic dimension to the struggle to wipe out the pockets of poverty.

New Bold Approach Needed

None of the organizations that make up the National Coalition of Conscience has the resources, the manpower or the organizational contacts to take on this task of organizing the unemployed, the under-employed and the under-privileged single handedly. The organizations making up the National Coalition of Conscience, supported by participation from industry, agriculture, education, veterans and other groups, would make up the National Citizens Crusade Against Poverty and together they do have the resources to do the job.

Proposal For Action

It is proposed the national leadership of the ninety-odd organizations that make up the National Coalition of Conscience, plus representation from other organizations, including industry, agriculture, education, veterans, student groups, etc., be called into a national conference at the earliest possible date for the purpose of launching a National Citizens Crusade Against Poverty. Such a one-day national conference would give consideration to:

A. Setting up a representative provisional steering committee charged with the responsibility of following through on all matters related to the launching of a National Citizens Crusade Against Poverty.

B. Setting up a representative task force committee charged with the responsibility of discussing and developing recommendations on structure, program and policies needed to effectively mobilize citizens groups and to make the greatest possible contribution in the war against poverty.

C. Setting a date for the calling of a broad citizens conference to hear and act upon the report and recommendations of the task force committee and of the provisional steering committee and to formalize the creation and launching of a National Citizens Crusade Against Poverty.

At the recent 19th Constitutional Convention of the UAW, the enclosed program, entitled "Full Mobilization for a Total War on Poverty," was adopted by the unanimous action of the approximately 2,400 delegates. The leadership and the membership of the UAW are deeply committed to the war against poverty and we are most desirous of joining and cooperating with other groups so that we might together make our maximum contribution in the war against poverty.

As a token of our commitment to this effort, the UAW International Executive Board, following the recent UAW Convention, authorized a contribution of One Hundred Thousand Dollars as seed money to be used to help launch the National Citizens Crusade Against Poverty. The UAW International Executive Board authorized an additional One Million Dollars as a pledge against the operating budget of the National Crusade Against Poverty when such a group is formed.

The purpose of this letter is to ask if you and your organization would be willing to participate in a representative national conference called for the purpose of discussing and exploring the setting up of a National Citizens Crusade Against Poverty.

I would appreciate your sympathetic consideration of this idea and I look forward to hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

Kindest personal regards.

Sincerely yours,

Walter P. Reuther

Dear Mr. Carey:

The National Service Corps concept has been included in new legislation providing for a broad antipoverty program which President Johnson sent to Congress on March 16. If Congress approves this bill (Economic Opportunity Act of 1964; H.R. 10440 - S. 2642), the proposed National Service Corps program would then become one of six inter-related efforts in the legislation to eradicate the causes of human need in this nation.

Since the National Service Corps idea has been incorporated in an over-all program for the underprivileged, the purpose for which our Committee was organized no longer exists. Therefore, the Committee is disbanding.

We who have worked on behalf of the National Service Corps, whether as members of the Committee, as organizations, or as individuals, can derive considerable satisfaction in the possibility that the National Service Corps concept may yet be realized. We want to thank you for your interest and support which have helped bring this program much closer to a reality.

Very sincerely,

Resolutions Committee Resolutions

FULL MOBILIZATION FOR A TOTAL WAR ON POVERTY

We applaud President Johnson for his pledge to lead the nation in an "unconditional war, here and now, on poverty." With forthrightness and courage he has forced millions of more affluent Americans to face up to the fact that one-fifth of the families in the richest and most productive nation of the world still live in poverty. Even more important, he has challenged us to end this ugly blight, "here and now."

The UAW responds to the President's call to action by enlisting in the war against poverty for the duration.

President Johnson's program is a good beginning but it is only a beginning. If we are to deal effectively with the problem of poverty, then the effort we make and the resources we commit must be equal to the dimensions of the problem. President Johnson's call to action has made millions of Americans for the first time realize the dimensions of poverty in a society that has enjoyed increasing affluence.

Dimensions of Poverty

Millions of American families live in the sub-basements of our social structure. These are America's "have-not" people They are the denied and disadvantaged. They are the dispospossed and the discriminated against. They are the old, the young, the Negroes and other minorities. They are the sharecroppers and the migratory workers. They are the unemployed, the underemployed and the underprivileged. Not only are they denied employment and opportunities for adequate income, decent housing, good education, medical care; they are robbed of any sense of worth or of human dignity and they are cut off and live apart from the rest of our society and are denied any sense of belonging or any sense of participation.

In reporting on poverty, the President's Council of Economic Advisers found that ". . . one-fifth of our families and nearly one-fifth of our total population are poor."

Of these 30-odd million people, 22 per cent are nonwhite; and nearly half of all nonwhites live in poverty.

. . . The heads of over 60 per cent of all poor families have only grade school educations. Of all nonwhite families headed by a person with such limited education, 57 per cent are poor.

. . . One-third of all poor families are headed by a person over 65, and almost one-half of families headed by such a person are poor.

. . . The poor are not confined to any area. Fifty-four per cent live in cities, 16 per cent on farms, and 30 per cent are rural nonfarm residents.

. . . Over 40 per cent of all farm families are poor. More than 80 per cent of nonwhite farmers live in poverty.

. . . With only one-third of all families, the South contains almost half of the poor.

. . . One-quarter of all poor families are headed by a woman, but nearly one-half of all families headed by a woman are poor.

. . . About one-third of all the poor are children under 18. The children of poverty are deprived not only of the material things of life, including an adequate diet and medical care, but are also robbed of much of their potential for development as human beings.

. . . To be born nonwhite in America is an economic tragedy. In 1962 the median income of nonwhite families was $3,330 compared to $6,237 for white families. Forty-five per cent of all nonwhite families have incomes below $3,000 per year.

. . . One-third of all American youth are unqualified for military service, and one-half of these are disqualified on mental grounds, largely the result of illiteracy which has its root in a cycle of poverty, public and private.

There is little need to add to this catalog of American poverty. Its dimensions are broad, deep, and visible to all who have eyes to see. The great need in American life is to stir the conscience of the people who too often in the past have manifested only a casual and sluggish concern with poverty in the land.

Mobilize America for a Total War Against Poverty

We must mobilize America for a total war against poverty. Nothing less will do the job. There is no simple solution to this tragic human problem and to the effects of years of social neglect to which the staggering problem of human poverty gives testimony. Many things must be done on many fronts. We must be prepared to fight an all-out war against the persistent pockets of poverty with the same national commitment and with an allocation of our resources comparable to the effort and the resources that we committed when a foreign enemy threatened our security. A continuation of neglect of the broad social, economic and political aspects of human poverty represents an internal threat to our future of equal gravity.

The future of our way of life can be made secure only as we afford every person the opportunity to live a secure and good life and enjoy a sense of worth and human fulfillment.

Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Great Depression

In the depth of the great depression, Franklin D. Roosevelt called a nation to arms against poverty, against the problem of a nation one-third ill clothed, ill housed and ill fed. We have made some progress since the dark and desperate days of the depression. Measured by the standards of social justice, however, we have not done as well as we must do if the increasing wealth made possible by our developing technology is to be shared more equitably.

Franklin D. Roosevelt correctly said:

> "The test of our progress is not whether we add more to the abundance of those who have much; it is whether we provide enough for those who have too little."

The lessons of the years leading to the great depression — of growing economic concentration at the top of our social structure and growing pockets of poverty at the bottom need heeding today. The shift toward a more equitable distribution of national income that resulted from the policies of the New Deal under Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Fair Deal under Harry S. Truman, were reversed during the eight years of the Eisenhower Administration.

The share of all personally held wealth owned by the richest one per cent of U. S. adults declined from 36.3 per cent in 1929 to 20.8 per cent in 1949, but then increased to 28.0 per cent in 1961.

The key to an all-out effort to wipe out the persistent pockets of poverty is the full mobilization of the nation's economic potential through full employment and full production and the relating of the abundance of automation to the unmet needs, public and private, of all the people in the fields of education, housing, health care and living standards.

Needed: A Comprehensive Program in the War Against Poverty

There are many facets to the poverty problem, none of which can be dealt with in isolation. What is needed is a comprehensive, over-all, coordinated program that attacks the problem on many fronts at the same time.

The problems of civil rights, inadequate education, school drop-outs, slums, poor neighborhoods, unemployment, underemployment, obsolete skills, the aged and the handicapped — these are all inseparably bound together with the total problem of poverty.

The Government Must Act Boldly

The dimensions of the poverty problem are so staggering that bold and affirmative action is needed at every level of our governmental structure. Abraham Lincoln stated,

> "The legitimate object of government is to do for a community of people whatever they need to have done, but cannot do at all or cannot do so well for themselves, in their separate individual capacities."

The fight against poverty will be won only as we as a free people act together with common purpose and with a common will.

In launching all-out war on poverty, adequate measures to immediately alleviate human suffering are imperative. The food-stamp plan and other measures to provide an adequate diet for all needy families should be improved and extended. But at the same time that such humanitarian efforts are being pursued, fundamental measures must deal with the basic causes of poverty at their roots. In planning these actions, three major areas of responsibility in which the federal government must lead — but in which state and local governments and private groups must cooperate — are evident.

1. Since a majority of our lowest-income families have members in the labor force, it is self-evident that the long and persistent trend of rising unemployment and underemployment must be reversed, if any significant progress is to be made in eradicating proverty. Achievement of the national goal of a job at decent pay, a minimum wage of at least $2 an hour) for all Americans who are able to work and seeking work must underlie any realistic antipoverty program.

2. A meaningful attack on the causes of want must deal effectively with the need for adequate income maintenance when unavoidable hardships destroy a family's ability to be self-supporting. This is particularly true in the case of most of the aged, broken families generally headed by a woman with children in her care, and families in which the breadwinner has died, is incapacitated or unemployed.

3. In the effort to conquer poverty, a substantially greater effort also must be launched to meet special problems of the poor in the areas of health, education and personal adjustment. Particularly, increased and improved opportunities for education must be made available for the children of the poor, if the cycle of poverty is to be broken.

Full Employment Key

The stubborn persistence of poverty since the mid-1950s — during a period in which the majority of Americans have continued to improve their living standards — is substantially rooted in the rising trend of unemployment and part-time work. What is more, if this deplorable situation is allowed to continue — as a consequence of labor displacement at a time when new job-seekers are increasing faster than ever before — we will experience spreading poverty rather than its reduction. If national economic policy enthrones greater productive efficiency and higher profits as the top-priority goals, rather than fulfillment of the promises of the Employment Act of 1946, a crusade against poverty — no matter how well intended — will show only scant results.

The nation's war against poverty must focus mainly on eradicating its causes and not on relief for its symptoms. Obviously, the poor need immediate assistance and should receive it. But above all, they need help in lifting themselves and their children out of poverty.

National policies to sharply increase employment — for the jobless and underemployed, for the victims of discrimination, for the young people flocking into the labor force and for those who will be displaced by automation — are the essential foundations of an antipoverty program. Through the rest of this decade at least, the American economy must create over 4 million job opportunities a year — 80,000 a week — in order merely to keep unemployment from growing. To the extent that we fail, want will grow.

On the basis of the record, this objective will not be reached without bold, far-reaching leadership by the federal government.

Expanded Public Works Projects

One of the major needs at this time—in addition to other long-range job-expanding actions — is a vast increase in federal outlays for job-creating public works. This will quickly create jobs — including substantial employment opportunities for unskilled and semiskilled workers on and off the site — and at the same time provide vitally needed public improvements of permanent worth. Towards this end, the now expiring Accelerated Public Works program should be extended, with a minimum $2 billion appropriation, and similar measures should be enacted which would create jobs, in building schools, hospitals, housing, in urban redevelopment and in making other improvements that all communities urgently need. In addition special programs must be enacted to provide jobless young people with useful employment opportunities.

These and other job-creating measures can succeed in sustaining full employment only if they are accompanied by effective procedures for adjustment to the labor-displacement and community disruption of automation, defense cutbacks, and, frequently, foreign imports.

In addition, many related special programs to assist low-paid workers and the jobless are essential parts of the campaign to eliminate poverty.

Priorities Needing Government Action

1. Speed the passage of the civil rights bill as an essential step in the crusade against segregation, discrimination, and the denial of basic rights of citizenship to the Negroes and other minorities with resulting poverty and injustice.

2. Creation of a broad program to assure a decent education to every child or adult who is capable of absorbing the knowledge, including not only federal aid to education, manpower training, and other oft-urged aids, but training and scholarship programs which will enable the children of the poor to dress decently, eat properly and provide themselves with the minimum essentials required to attend school — at all levels — with supplementation of inadequate family income while children and youth are in school.

3. Launch an attack on the special problems that poverty creates for young people through enactment of the Job Corps, urban work and student work programs called for by President Johnson in his special "War on Poverty" message to Congress. Poverty grinds with terrible severity upon the young. We need to take them off the streets. The provisions of the President's Economic Opportunities Bill would assist in achievement of this goal. Many deprived citizens need the help and counsel of a knowledgeable and understanding fellow human. The Volunteers for America Program provided for in the President's Bill would lend this kind of succor.

4. Move immediately to enact new legislation in the field of health and education to enable every old person and child to secure the medical care necessary to health and comfort and the education essential to leading a full life and enjoying equality of opportunity.

5. Broaden the Fair Labor Standards Act to cover all possible workers and increase the minimum wage to $2.00 per hour. The present coverage and wage standards prescribed by FLSA are far too meager to properly safeguard against poverty income for low-wage workers.

6. Liberalize Old Age Assistance, Aid to Dependent Children, and other insurance and welfare programs so that we will not be underwriting what is publicly admitted to be a state of poverty.

7. Pursue programs placing a floor under the incomes of family farmers, but provide also that hired farm workers be granted the rights long since granted to industrial workers, including minimum wages, protection in the right to organize, and unemployment compensation. And, above all, allow P. L. 78 — the Mexican contract labor program — to die this year.

8. Create a more adequate and up-to-date unemployment compensation system through the application of adequate federal standards. To provide decent safeguards for the families of those who are injured or killed at work, federal standards are also needed to upgrade the archaic workmen's compensation systems of the states.

9. Bring up to date the benefit and coverage levels of all state social insurance and welfare programs. Moreover, public assistance payments must be increased to meet the family needs of the 1960s, and improvements of community welfare programs are required.

10. We urge the President to create a small full-time Commission on Poverty, in the nature of the Civil Rights Commission, to assist him as a "watch dog" organization constantly observing, prodding, and reviewing the programs and the administration of the programs dealing with poverty.

Full employment is a condition precedent to any meaningful attack on poverty. Joblessness is a basic cause of poverty, and the productivity of now jobless workers and unused plants can go far in providing the slum clearance, housing, hospitals, schools, resources development, and other things which are absolutely essential if poverty is to be reduced or eliminated. Therefore, we urge that consideration be given to every productive means of reducing unemployment to a minimum and the provision of a decent level of income for the unemployed in the interim.

National Coalition of Conscience Against Poverty

The struggle for civil rights and equal opportunity and for first class citizenship is being waged by a powerful and dedicated army of American citizens of every race, creed, color and political persuasion. The leadership of civil rights organizations, civic and fraternal groups, church groups, including Protestant, Catholic and Jewish, and the labor unions have joined to form a great National Coalition of Conscience. This National Coalition of Conscience sponsored the historic March for Jobs and Freedom on August 28, 1963. This National Coalition of Conscience has aroused the moral conscience of America and has worked effectively to secure passage of President Kennedy's Civil Rights bill by the House of Representatives. The National Coalition of Conscience is currently mobilizing support to break the filibuster in the Senate and to assure passage of the Civil Rights bill enacted by the House of Representatives. We are determined to win on the civil rights front. We are confident that justice and morality will prevail.

The Civil Rights bill is not the end of our efforts. It will solve no problems automatically. It will provide America with a new set of tools with which to work to bring to fulfillment the bright promise of first class citizenship to all Americans. To achieve the purpose of equal opportunity and first class citizenship, the civil rights struggle must be joined with the total fight against poverty, against unemployment, against under-employment, against slums and poor housing, inadequate education and all of the other evils which mean denial and discrimination against those who are dispossessed and disinherited.

A Call to Action — Labor, Churches, Civil Rights, Civic Groups

Let us take the lessons learned and the new structure we have formed in the National Coalition of Conscience and fully mobilize its forces for an all-out crusade against poverty parallel to our crusade for civil rights. These two struggles must be joined for neither can truly be won except as they are waged together.

The National Coalition of Conscience represents the kind of broadly based citizens organization needed for the all-out assault on poverty. The organized churches, civil rights groups, civic, fraternal and labor organizations have contacts, organization and facilities in every community, large and small, where the pockets of poverty persist.

These broadly based organizations can most effectively support and supplement the meaningful implementation of governmental programs on a community, state and federal basis.

Organize the Unemployed, the Under-Employed and the Under-Privileged

The poor are not only invisible, they are inarticulate and they are without a voice. They must be organized so that they can make their voices heard, so that they will have the organization through which they may participate in the struggle to free themselves from the poverty that imprisons them. Only as the unemployed and the under-privileged are drawn actively into this total effort can we release the full dynamics of the economic and social forces needed to do the job.

The fight against poverty must not develop along the lines of a well-intentioned social welfare program of the rich doing favors for the poor. The unemployed, the under-employed and the under-privileged must share the sense of dignity and belonging that only their active participation in this struggle can provide. So long as the unemployed, the under-employed and the under-privileged are unorganized, they will continue to be lost and their voices will not be heard. Organized they can contribute a new dynamic dimension to the struggle to wipe out the pockets of poverty.

New Bold Approach Needed

None of the organizations that make up the National Coalition of Conscience has the resources, the manpower or the organizational contacts to take on this task of organizing the unemployed, the under-employed and the under-privileged single handedly. The organizations making up the National Coalition of Conscience, however, together do have the resources, the manpower, and the organizational structure and the contacts to do the job. It is proposed that the national leadership of the 90 odd organizations that make up the National Coalition of Conscience be called into a National Conference at the earliest possible date for the purpose of:

1. Discussing the joining together of the struggle for civil rights and the struggle to wipe out the pockets of poverty.

2. Setting up a special task force charged with the responsibility of discussing and developing recommendations on the structure and program at the national, state and national levels needed to effectively organize the unemployed, the under-employed and the under-privileged so that their voices can be heard and so that they might be actively drawn into the struggle to wipe out poverty and discrimination.

3. Giving special attention in the structure and program to youth, the problems of school dropouts and training, the problems of retired citizens, and of older workers denied employment because of age.

4. Assuring that the organization of the unemployed, underemployed and the under-privileged will be a nonpolitical basis and shall work with any person, program or group committed to democratic principles and the programs and policies developed by the National Coalition of Conscience.

5. Directing that the special task force be prepared to report back to a National Conference called by the organizations making up the National Coalition of Conscience for the purpose of hearing the report and recommendations of the special task force and initiating action. Now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED: That this Convention commend President Johnson for his declaration of "unconditional war against poverty" and pledge its fullest cooperation in support of his efforts. And be it further

RESOLVED: That this Convention call upon the labor unions, religious groups, civil rights, civic and fraternal organizations to participate in such a National Conference and to cooperate in developing and implementing an effective program. And be it finally

RESOLVED: That the UAW pledge its full support, organizationally, financially and morally to the launching of such a great moral crusade through the grand alliance of the National Coalition of Conscience. And be it further

RESOLVED: That this Convention mandate the International Executive Board and the International Officers of the UAW to take immediate, practical steps to implement this comprehensive, coordinated attack against poverty.

SUMMARY OF

ECONOMIC OPPORTUNITY ACT OF 1964

As passed the House and Senate

(Note: Italicized type indicates amendments to H.R. 11377.)

TITLE: To mobilize the human and financial resources of the Nation to combat poverty in the United States.

The bill is entitled the "Economic Opportunity Act of 1964." Section 2 of the bill declares that it is the policy of the United States to eliminate the paradox of poverty in the midst of plenty in this Nation by opening to everyone opportunities for education, training, work, and a life of decency and dignity, and that the purpose of the act is to strengthen, supplement, and coordinate efforts in furtherance of that policy.

TITLE I—YOUTH PROGRAMS

Title I provides for three separate programs for youth—a Job Corps, Work-Training Programs, and Work-Study Programs.

Part A—Job Corps

Section 101 declares that the purpose of this part is to increase the employability of young men and young women aged 16–21 by providing them in rural and urban residential centers with education, vocational training, useful work experience, and other appropriate activities.

Section 102 establishes a Job Corps within the Office of Economic Opportunity created by title VI.

Section 103 authorizes the Director of the Office to (a) enter into agreements with public or private organizations for the establishment and operation, in rural and urban areas, of conservation camps and training centers and for the provision of necessary facilities and services, including agreements relating to conservation and managing public natural resources and public recreational agencies, including agreements for botanical survey programs; (b) provide education and vocational training to enrollees in the Corps, except, that where practicable, such programs must be provided through local public educational agencies or by private vocational or technical institutes; (c) provide useful work experience; (d) furnish health services; and (e) prescribe rules and regulations to govern the Corps.

Section 104 provides that the Corps shall be composed of males and females aged 16 through 21 who are permanent residents of the United States. Participation in the Corps shall not relieve an enrollee of his Selective Service obligations. Enrollment shall be for a maximum of 2 years except as the Director may determine in special cases. Each enrollee must file with the Director an affidavit that he does not belong to or support a subversive organization or believe in the doctrines of such an organization.

Section 105 provides for living allowances and maintenance of enrollees. Upon termination of enrollment, each enrollee shall receive a readjustment allowance amounting to not more than $50 per month for each month of satisfactory participiation in the Corps. However, under circumstances determined by the Director, up to $25 of the $50 may be paid directly to a member of his or her family during the period of service in the Corps, and any such payments shall be matched by the Director.

Section 106 contains technical material concerning the application to enrollees of provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, Social Security Act, Federal Employees' Compensation Act, and the Federal Tort Claims Act.

Section 107 (a) protects enrollees from discrimination due to political beliefs, other than those specifically authorized by law; (b) prohibits officers, employees, or enrollees in the Corps from participating actively in political activities or soliciting funds from members of the Corps for political purposes; and (c) gives the United States Civil Service Commission authority to instruct the Director to take punitive measures if the purposes of this section are violated.

Section 108 authorizes the Director to assist States in operating their own programs which carry out the purposes of this part. The Director may pay part or all of the costs of such programs.

Section 109 declares that no Job Corps camp or training center may be established in a State unless a plan has been submitted to the Governor of the State and has not been disapproved by him within 30 days.

Section 110 establishes within the Job Corps a Youth Conservation Corps to which no less than 40 percent of the enrollees under this part shall be assigned. The work activities shall be directed primarily toward conserving public natural resources of the United States and developing public recreation areas. Such work shall be under the direction of agencies primarily concerned with conservation of natural resources and development of recreation areas.

Part B—Work Training Programs

Section 111 declares that the purpose of the part is to provide useful work experience opportunities for unemployed young men and women through participation in State and community work-training programs.

Section 112 authorizes the Director to assist and cooperate with State and local public agencies and private nonprofit organizations (other than political parties) in developing programs for the employment of young people in State and community activities.

Section 113 authorizes the Director to enter into agreements to pay part or all of the costs of such programs if he determines that they meet the statutory standards. Those standards are: (1) the participants will be employed on publicly owned and operated facilities or projects, or projects sponsored by private nonprofit agencies, other than political parties or so much of any facility used for sectarian purposes; (2) the program will increase the employability of participants in fields where job openings are likely to exist, or will enable them to resume or maintain school attendance; (3) the program will permit or contribute to an undertaking or service in the public interest that would not otherwise be provided, or to conservation work; (4) the program will not displace employed persons; (5) appropriate and reasonable compensation and working conditions will be provided; (6) to the maximum extent feasible, the program will be coordinated with local public vocational training and educational services; and (7) the program includes selection standards and procedures. The Director is required to give priority to projects with training potential.

Section 114 provides that participation in work-training programs shall be limited to young men and women aged 16 through 21 who are permanent residents of the United States. Participants shall be deemed not to be Federal employees. The section also authorizes the Director to provide for testing, counseling, job development, and referral services to youths.

Section 115 sets limits on the amount the Director can pay to work-training programs. Payments for the period ending 2 years after the enactment of the act, or June 30, 1966, whichever is later, shall not exceed 90 percent of the costs of such programs, and thereafter shall not exceed 75 percent of such costs, unless the Director determines, pursuant to objective criteria, that greater percentages are required. Non-Federal contributions may be in cash or kind.

Section 116 requires the Director to establish criteria to achieve an equitable distribution of assistance among the States, considering among other relevant factors the ratios of population, unemployment, and family income levels. Not more than 12½ percent of the sums appropriated or allocated for any fiscal year to assist work-training programs may be used within any one State.

Part C—Work-Study Programs

Section 121 declares that the purpose of work-study programs is to stimulate and promote the part-time employment of students in institutions of higher education who are from low-income families and need such earnings to continue their education.

Section 122 (a) provides that of the sums appropriated or allocated for any fiscal year to assist the work-training programs, not more than 2 percent shall be allotted by the Director to Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Virgin Islands, and the remainder of the sums shall be allotted as in (b) which provides that of the sums allotted, (1) one-third shall be on the basis of the total number of persons enrolled full time in institutions of higher education in each State; (2) one-third on the basis of the number of high school graduates in the State, and (3) one-third on the basis of the number of children under 18 living in families with annual incomes of less than $3,000. Provision is made for reallocation by the Director of sums not granted to an institution of higher learning by the end of the fiscal year.

Section 123 authorizes the Director to enter into agreements with such institutions to pay part of the compensation of students employed under such work-study programs.

Section 124 requires that such agreements shall provide that (a) such programs shall be operated by the institution for the part-time employment of its students in work (1) for the institution itself, or (2) for a public or private nonprofit organization if (A) work related to the student's educational objective, or (B) is in the public interest and is work which would not otherwise be provided and will not result in displacement of employed workers; (b) funds granted under section 123 are used only for payments to students participating in work-study programs, except that not more than 5 percent of such funds may be used for administrative expenses; (c) such employment shall be furnished only to a full-time student from a low-income family who needs the work to stay in the institution; (d) such employment shall not exceed 15 hours a week while classes are in session; (e) the institution shall continue to expend for student employment an amount not less than its average annual expenditure for such employment during the 3 preceding fiscal years; (f) payments under section 123 shall not exceed 90 percent of the total compensation of such students during the period ending 2 years after the enactment of the act, or June 30, 1966, whichever is later, and 75 percent thereafter; and (g) such work or like work shall be reasonably available to all needy eligible students.

Section 125 provides that the bill not be construed to restrict the source of the matching funds from which the institution pays its share.

Section 126 provides that the Director establish effective criteria for distribution under this part.

Part D—Authorization of Appropriations

Section 131 authorizes an appropriation for this title for the fiscal year of 1965 of $412,500,000, and for the fiscal years of 1966 and 1967 such sums as Congress appropriates thereafter.

TITLE II—URBAN AND RURAL COMMUNITY ACTION PROGRAMS

Part A—Community Action Programs

Section 201 declares that the purpose of this part is to provide stimulation and incentive for communities to mobilize their resources to combat poverty through community action programs.

Section 202 defines a "community action program" as one (1) which mobilizes and utilizes public or private resources of any urban or rural, or combined urban and rural, geographical area (termed a "community"); (2) which provides services, assistance, and other activities of sufficient scope and size to give promise of progress toward eliminating poverty; (3) which is conducted with the maximum feasible participation of members of the areas and groups served; and (4) which is conducted by a public or private nonprofit agency (other than a political party) or a combination thereof.

Section 203 (a) provides that of the sums appropriated or allocated for any fiscal year to assist the community action programs, not more than 2 percent shall be allotted by the Director to Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Virgin Islands; 20 percent of such amount shall be reserved to be used as the Director shall determine; and the remainder shall be allotted as provided in subsection (b) which provides that of the sums allotted (1) one-third shall be on the basis of the number of public assistance recipients in each State; (2) one-third shall be on the basis of the number of unemployed persons in each State; (3) one-third on the basis of the number of children under 18 living in families with annual incomes of less than $1,000. Subsection (c) authorizes the Director to reallocate unused funds. Subsection (d) provides that the term "State" for the purposes of this part does not include Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Virgin Islands.

Subsection 204 authorizes the Director to make grants or contracts to pay part or all of the costs of development of community action programs.

Section 205 deals with Federal assistance for the conduct and administration of community action programs. Subsection (a) authorizes the Director to make grants or contracts to pay part or all of the costs of conducting and administering such programs or components of such programs. Such components shall be focused upon the needs of low-income individuals and families and shall be concerned with such fields as education, employment, job training and counseling, health, vocational rehabilitation, welfare, special remedial and other noncurricular educational assistance for the benefit of the poor. Subsection (b) prevents any grant for general aid to elementary or secondary education in any school or school system. Subsection (c) lists factors to be considered by the Director to give special consideration to programs which give promise of effecting a permanent increase in the capacity of those aided to deal with their problems without further assistance.

Section 206 authorizes the Director to provide technical assistance to communities in developing and administering community action programs and training for specialized personnel.

Section 207 authorizes the Director to conduct or contract for research, training, and demonstrations pertaining to the purposes of title II, but expenditures for such activities in any fiscal year shall not exceed 15 percent of the sums appropriated or allocated to title II for such year.

Section 208 sets limits on the amount of Federal assistance that can be extended under sections 204 and 205. Such assistance paid for the period ending 2 years after the enactment of the act, or June 30, 1966, whichever is later, shall not exceed 90 percent of the costs referred to in these sections, and thereafter shall not exceed 75 percent of such costs, unless the Director determines, pursuant to objective criteria, that greater percentages are required. Non-Federal contributions may be in cash or in kind. The non-Federal expenditures or contributions for a community action program or component thereof shall be in addition to the aggregate expenditures or contributions from non-Federal sources being made for similar purposes before Federal assistance was extended.

Section 209 requires the Director to establish procedures for effective State participation in community action programs. Each plan under titles I and II of this act must be submitted to the Governor of the State and may not be effected unless the Governor has not disapproved of the plan within 30 days. This does not apply to contracts, agreements, or assistance to any institution of higher education in existence on the date of approval of this act. Furthermore, no private organization may participate under this part unless it has in the past been concerned with problems of poverty, or is sponsored by a public agency, or is an institution of higher education.

Section 210 requires the Director to establish criteria to achieve an equitable distribution of assistance under title II among the States and between urban and rural areas and sets forth certain factors to be considered.

Section 211 requires the Director, in extending assistance under the act to give preference, to the extent feasible, to programs and projects which are components of an approved community action program.

Part B—Adult Basic Education Programs

Section 212 provides that the purpose of this part is to initiate programs for instructing individuals 18 years or older in reading and writing so that they will be able to obtain employment commensurate with their real ability, and make them less dependent on others for their well-being.

Section 213 (a) authorizes the Director to make grants to States where plans have been approved by him under this section; and (b) provides that grants under (a) may be used for (1) pilot projects by local educational agencies relating to instruction in public schools, taking into account local needs; (2) supplementing the costs of local educational agency programs for adult education; and (3) assisting in developing State adult basic education programs.

Section 214 (a) requires that the Director shall approve the plan of a State which provides for State administration, assures reports to keep the Director informed of the carrying out of such programs, assures adequate fiscal control and fund accounting procedures to afford efficient disbursement of Federal funds, assures adequate health procedures for the carrying out of these programs; and (b) prevents the Director from disapproving any such State plan without notice and hearing.

Section 215 (a) provides that, of the sums appropriated or allocated under section 212 for any fiscal year, no more than 2 percent shall be allotted by the Director to Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, and the Virgin Islands, and the remainder of the sums shall be allotted on the basis of the number of adults in each State who have not completed more than five grades of school or its equivalent. No State shall receive less than $50,000 and, to assure that each State shall receive at least that amount, the sum to all other States shall be proportionately reduced. The term "State" shall not apply to Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, and the Virgin Islands for the purposes of this subsection; (b) provides that if any State's allotment under (a) is not used in any fiscal year, it may be reallocated to the other States in proportion to their original allotment under (a); and (c) provides that any State's allotment under (a) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1965, except as provided under (b), shall remain available until June 30, 1966, for the carrying out of its plan.

Section 216 (a) provides for the payment of the Federal share of State adult basic education plans. Such payments shall be made in advance on the basis of estimates by the Director and in installments; and (b) provides that, for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1965, and June 30, 1966, the Federal share for each State shall be 90 percent and thereafter 50 percent.

Section 217 (a) provides that, whenever the Director determines, after notice and hearing, the State plan has been changed so as to not comply with section 213, the Director shall notify the State agency that no further payments will be made until he is satisfied that there will no longer be failure to comply; and (b) provides that such State agency dissatisfied with the final action of the Director under this section or section 213 may appeal to the United States court of appeals. The court's finding shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Section 218 defines (1) the term "State educational agency" to mean the State board of education or other agency responsible to the State for the supervision of public elementary and secondary schools, or if different, responsible for the supervision of adult basic education, whichever may be designated by the Governor or by statute; (2) "local educational agency" as a board of education or other local school authority having administrative control and direction of public elementary or secondary schools in a locality.

Part C—Voluntary Assistance Programs for Needy Children

Section 219 declares that the purpose of this part is to allow individual Americans to participate in the war on poverty by voluntarily assisting needy children.

Section 220 authorizes the Director to establish an information and coordination center within the Office of Economic Opportunity. The center will collect information about children needing assistance and those individuals wishing to give financial aid. The center will in no way interfere with local welfare agencies.

Part —Authorization of Appropriations

Section 221 provides that, for the purposes of carrying out this title, $340 million is authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1965, and for fiscal years 1966 and 1967 such sums as may be appropriated hereafter by Congress.

TITLE III—SPECIAL PROGRAMS TO COMBAT POVERTY IN RURAL AREAS

Section 301 declares that the purpose of the title is to meet some of the special problems of rural poverty and thereby to raise and maintain the income and living standards of low-income rural families and migrant agricultural employees and their families.

Part A—Authority to Make Grants and Loans

Section 302 authorizes the Director to make 15-year loans not exceeding $2,500 in the aggregate to any low-income farm family where there is reasonable possibility that such loan will affect a permanent increase in the income of such families by helping them to improve real estate and the operation of family-sized farms and to participate in cooperatives. Loans will be given under this section only if the family does not qualify under an existing program.

Section 303 authorizes loans to cooperative associations furnishing essential services, supplies, or facilities predominantly to low-income rural families.

Section 304 conditions assistance under this part upon a determination by the Director that such assistance will materially further the purposes of this part and, in the case of a corporation or cooperative, that the applicant will fulfill a need not otherwise being met.

Section 305 provides that loans under tne title shall have such terms and conditions as the Director determines, subject to (a) reasonable assurance of repayment, (b) credit not otherwise being available on reasonable terms, (c) assurance of completion of the project for which the loan is made, (d) interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, plus a possible additional charge to cover costs, (e) terms of not more than 30 years (except for the 15-year loans provided for in section 302), and (f) no assistance shall be given to corporations or cooperatives for the production of agricultural commodities or manufacturing purposes.

Part B—Assistance for Migrant Agricultral Employees and Their Families

Section 311 provides that the Director shall assist the States in programs to meet some of the problems of migrant and other seasonally employed agricultural workers with respect to housing, sanitation, education, and the day care of children, the assistance to be provided by direct loans.

Part C—Authorization of Appropriations

Section 321 authorizes an appropriation to the Director for the fiscal year 1965 of $35 million and for the fiscal years 1966 and 1967 such sums as may be authorized by Congress hereafter, and provides that not more than $15 million of funds appropriated under other titles of this act may be utilized for the migrant employees and their families.

Part D—Indemnity Payments to Dairy Farmers

Section 331 authorizes the Director to make payments to dairy farmers who have been directed, since January 1, 1964, to remove their milk from the market because it contains chemicals approved by the Federal Government at the time of use. These payments shall continue until each dairy is reinstated and is again allowed to sell milk. Such sums as necessary to carry out the purposes of this part are authorized, the authority granted under this part to expire on January 31, 1965.

TITLE IV—EMPLOYMENT AND INVESTMENT INCENTIVES

Section 401 declares that the purpose of the title is to assist small business concerns and improve the managerial skills used therein; and to mobilize for these objectives private as well as public managerial skills and resources.

Section 402 authorizes the Director to make or guarantee 15-year, $25,000 loans to small business concerns or to persons seeking to establish such concerns, where such loans will assist in carrying out the purposes of title IV with particular emphasis on employment of long-term unemployed. The Director may require a borrower to participate in a management training program as a condition of the loan.

Section 408 provides that no assistance may be provided under section 421 in a community with an approved community action program unless consistent with that program.

Section 404 provides that loans under this part (including participations and guarantees) shall have such terms and conditions as the Director shall determine subject to the following limitations: If there is reasonable assurance of repayment, financial assistance is not otherwise available from other sources, and the amount of the loan and other available funds is sufficient to complete the project for which the loan is sought, the loan is subject to the rate of interest determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, plus a possible additional charge to cover costs and the right on loan guarantees to require fees to cover administrative expenses and probable losses.

Section 406 prohibits establishments from relocating for the purpose of undertaking work theretofore performed by other establishments.

Section 407 provides that the Director shall carry out the programs provided for in this title during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1965, and the 2 succeeding fiscal years.

TITLE V—WORK EXPERIENCE PROGRAMS

Section 501 declares that the purpose of the title is to expand the opportunities for work and training for those who are unable to support or care for themselves or their families.

Section 502 provides that in order to stimulate States to adopt programs to help unemployed fathers and other needy persons to secure employment or otherwise attain capability for self-support, the Director is authorized to transfer to the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare funds to make payments for experimental, pilot, or demonstration projects under section 1115 of the Social Security Act.

Section 503 authorizes an appropriation to the Director for the fiscal year 1965 of $150 million; and for the succeeding 2 fiscal years such sums as may be authorized by Congress hereafter.

TITLE VI—ADMINISTRATION AND COORDINATION

Part A—Administration

Section 601 establishes the Office of Economic Opportunity in the Executive Office of the President. After 1 year the President may provide for the transfer of the office elsewhere in the executive branch by complying with the procedures of the Reorganization Act of 1949. The Office shall have a Director, a Deputy Director, and three Assistant Deputy Directors, who shall be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. The rate of compensation for the Director will be at a comparable level to the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, for the Deputy Director at a comparable level to the Deputy Director of the Bureau of the Budget, and for the Assistant Deputy Directors at a comparable level to the Assistant Secretaries of the Executive Departments.

Section 602 authorizes the Director to: (a) appoint personnel in accordance with the civil service laws and fix their compensation; (b) employ experts and consultants; (c) appoint and compensate members of an advisory committee; (d) with the approval of the President, arrange for other Federal agencies to carry out functions under the act and, as necessary, delegate his powers; (e) utilize, with their consent, the services and facilities of other Federal, State, and local agencies, without reimbursement; (f) accept, use, and dispose of gifts and bequests; (g) accept voluntary services; (h) allocate and expend, or transfer to other Federal agencies for expenditure, funds made available under the act; (i) disseminate data and information without regard to certain postal restrictions; (j) adopt an official seal; (k) deal with property acquired on loans and guarantees; (l) collect and compromise obligations; (m) use funds for printing, binding, and rent and upkeep of buildings; (n) establish policies, prescribe rules and regulations, and generally take such steps as are appropriate to carry out this act.

Section 603 authorizes the Director to recruit, select, and train Volunteers in Service to America. Upon request of State and local agencies or private nonprofit organizations he may refer volunteers to work on programs combating poverty at a local level. He may assign volunteers to work (a) in meeting the health and education needs of Indians, migratory workers, and residents of certain areas under Federal jurisdiction, (b) in nonprofit mental health facilities assisted by Federal funds, and (c) in federally operated programs or activities under titles I and II of the act. No volunteer may work in any State without the consent of the Governor. The Director may provide to all volunteers during training and to assigned volunteers a stipend up to $50 a month, together with living allowances and maintenance. Volunteers shall be deemed not to be Federal employees to the same extent as enrollees in the Job Corps.

Section 604 establishes an Economic Opportunity Council to consult with and advise the Director on his functions, including that of coordinating all Federal antipoverty efforts. The Council shall include the Director and appropriate Cabinet officers and agency heads.

Section 605 establishes a National Advisory Council to consist of the Director and not more than 14 additional members, appointed by the President, to represent the general public and fields of endeavor related to the act. At the Director's request, the Council shall review the operations of the Office and make recommendations.

Section 606 establishes a revolving fund for loans and guarantees under titles III and IV and contains provisions for its operation.

Section 607 provides that all laborers and mechanics employed by contractors or subcontractors under this act shall be paid wages not less than those prevailing in the locality as determined by the Secretary of Labor in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act.

Section 608 provides that within 120 days after each fiscal year, the Director shall submit a report for transmittal to the Congress.

Section 609 defines the terms "State," "United States," and "agency" as used in the act and the term "family" as it applies to Job Corps enrollees.

Part B—Coordination of Antipoverty Programs

Section 611 contains provisions to insure that all Federal antipoverty programs are carried out in a coordinated manner. The Director may call on Federal agencies for assistance and the agencies are required to cooperate.

Section 612 directs each Federal agency head administering any Federal program to give preference to applications for assistance made under an approved community action program.

Section 613 provides for the dissemination of information about Federal antipoverty programs.

Section 614 declares that nothing in this act authorizes Federal control of administration of education or of curriculum.

Section 615 authorizes an appropriation to the Director for the fiscal year 1965 of $10 million; and for the fiscal years 1966 and 1967 such sums as may be authorized by Congress hereafter.

Section 616 prohibits making payments in conjunction with this act to any individual who does not file with the Director an affidavit that he does not believe in, belong to, or support a subversive organization.

TITLE VII—TREATMENT OF INCOME FOR CERTAIN PUBLIC ASSISTANCE PURPOSES

Section 701 provides that funds received under this act shall not be regarded as income in determining need under State plans or public assistance under the Social Security Act.

GUIDE TO THE PROGRAM OF GRANTS TO STATES FOR PROVIDING TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE TO COMMUNITIES

Authorized under Section 209(b) of the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964

A. GRANTS TO STATES FOR TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

1. Contents of this guide. This guide sets forth policies and application procedures of the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) in providing financial aid to States under Section 209(b) of Title II-A of the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964.

2. Purpose of the program. In order to facilitate the effective participation of the States in community action programs as defined in Title II-A, Section 209(b) authorizes the Director of the Office of Economic Opportunity to make grants to appropriate State agencies for the payment of the expenses of such agencies in providing technical assistance to communities in developing, conducting, and administering community action programs.

3. Federal assistance available. Grants to State agencies for the provision of technical assistance may cover up to 90 percent of the total cost of providing such assistance. The remainder, or non-Federal share, may be provided by any public or private agency, but may not include assistance provided directly or indirectly through another Federal program, nor may any portion of the non-Federal share under any other Federal program be used to meet matching requirements under this technical assistance program.

   The non-Federal share may be provided either in cash or in kind, fairly evaluated. In kind contributions may include the services of staff engaged in the technical assistance program and in necessary supporting or "over-head" activities. Other eligible contributions may include the use of office space, vehicles, office equipment, and other facilities and equipment necessary to the effective operation of the technical assistance program. Contributions shall be valued for this purpose at their actual or depreciated cost or fair value, but may not include any monetary value attributed to volunteer services.

   No credit will be given toward the non-Federal share for costs incurred prior to the date of approval of a grant by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

4. Allotment of grant funds. Federal funds for technical assistance grants will initially be allotted among the 50 States generally in accordance with the formula for allotment of community action program funds set forth in Section 203(b) of the Economic Opportunity Act, except that a minimum amount will be established to be allotted in each fiscal year to any State.

The current amount of these allotments is set out in an attachment to this guide. (See Exhibit I.)

Grant requests in excess of the allotment formula amounts may be submitted, and will be considered on their merits and in relation to such factors as: (a) evidence of requests from communities for technical assistance which cannot be met from the initial allotment, (b) the extent to which the applicant is in a position to utilize efficiently and expeditiously the assistance for which application is made, and (c) availability of Federal funds, taking into account requirements for other programs authorized under Title II-A.

No specific allotment of grant funds for technical assistance under Section 209(b) will be made for the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, or the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. Requests for technical assistance grants under Section 209(b) may be made by these jurisdictions and will be considered in relation to the factors cited just above.

5. Submission to the Governor. Section 209(c) of the Act provides that no assistance shall be provided under Titles I and II, except to an institution of higher education, unless a plan setting forth the proposed assistance has been submitted to the Governor of the appropriate State, and is not disapproved by him within 30 days after the submission. The provisions of Section 209(c) apply to grants for programs of technical assistance under Section 209(b) as well as to the other parts of Titles I and II. When an application for a technical assistance grant has been received and found to be acceptable, OEO will submit a plan setting forth the proposed grant to the Governor, pursuant to the provisions of Section 209(c).

   The Governor may signify his approval or disapproval of the proposed grant at any time after receipt of the plan, or he may await the expiration of the 30-day period. If the Governor wishes to signify his approval of the plan prior to the expiration of the 30-day period, he should so notify the Director of OEO. (A sample letter which may be used for this purpose is included as Exhibit II.)

6. Non-discrimination. No person in the United States shall, on the ground of race, color, or national origin, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance under Title II-A of the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964.

B. ELIGIBILITY OF APPLICANT AGENCIES

1. Designation by the Governor. The Governor of each State shall determine the appropriate State agency to apply for technical assistance funds and to carry out the State's program of technical assistance. The Governor shall designate a single State agency to administer the technical assistance program and a single official to be his authorized representative to the Office of Economic Opportunity with regard to the technical assistance program.

2. Eligible agency. The State agency designated as responsible for the technical assistance program may be a new agency, specifically established for this purpose, or it may be an existing State agency. For example, the Governor may choose to create a new agency, which may become a part of the Office of the Governor, much as the Office of Economic Opportunity is a part of the Executive Office of the President. Or he may designate an existing agency with a broad area of concern, such as a central administrative agency or a statewide planning agency. Or he may designate a functional agency, such as one responsible for education, health, welfare, employment, housing, or other activities included in the scope and content of a community action program.

   Private organizations, whether non-profit or otherwise, or public agencies other than State agencies, may not be applicants for technical assistance grants under Section 209(b). Such organizations may, however, be retained under contract or agreement by the designated State agency to assist in the provision of technical assistance to communities.

3. Relation to the Governor. Whatever State agency is designated should have a direct and close relation to the Office of the Governor. This is to ensure that the operation of the technical assistance program is coordinated with the exercise of the responsibility of the Governor under Section 209(c) of the Economic Opportunity Act and is closely related to the coordination of State agencies in an attack on poverty.

4. Coordination with other State agencies. Whatever State agency is designated, provision shall be made for coordination of the program with all State agencies that administer programs directly related to an attack on poverty. This may be achieved through use of an existing mechanism, such as a Governor's Cabinet, or through establishment of an inter-agency advisory or policy-making council with representation from such agencies. Appropriate private organizations with statewide interest may also be represented on such a body.

C. ELIGIBILITY OF ACTIVITIES

1. State initiative. The applicant State has considerable flexibility in determining what technical assistance activities will be undertaken, the manner in which assistance will be provided, and the types of communities to be assisted, subject to the policies and procedures set forth in this guide and to such further policies and procedures as may be issued by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

2. Examples of eligible activities. Among the activities which may be undertaken as part of an eligible technical assistance program are:

   a. Assistance to local public and private nonprofit agencies in the establishment of agencies designed to develop, conduct, and administer community action programs.

   b. Assistance to communities in the preparation of applications for Federal aid in the development, conduct, and administration of community action programs (as provided under Sections 204 and 205 of the Act). Such assistance may relate to any component of a community action program, whether financed under Title II-A, or any other Title of the Act, or under any other appropriate Federal program.

   c. Assistance to communities in carrying out program development activities and in the conduct and administration of a community action program.

   d. Increasing the knowledge and effectiveness of local personnel and officials engaged in community action programs through such means as conferences and workshops and the distribution of published information and reports.

   e. Assistance to communities in securing the coordinated aid of State agencies in the development, conduct, and administration of community action programs and in obtaining financing for such programs.

   f. Conduct of surveys, analyses, and studies of problems of poverty, deprivation, dependency, and other matters within the scope of the Economic Opportunity Act for use by local public and private nonprofit agencies in developing, conducting, and administering community action programs.

3. Means of providing assistance. Among the means that may be utilized to conduct a technical assistance program are:

   a. Performance of services by full-time staff of the State agency designated by the Governor to administer and coordinate the program.

   b. Use of personnel from other State agencies on a part-time or full-time basis, under working agreement, to perform specialist or technical functions.

c. Retaining the services of qualified consultants from universities, local communities, or private organizations to perform services under contract on a per diem or other compensation basis. No third party contract or agreement may be entered into for the provision of consultant services as part of a technical assistance program until a copy of the proposed third party contract or agreement has been submitted to OEO for information purposes. Prior approval by OEO of third party contracts or agreements is not necessary--unless specifically required by OEO at the time of grant approval--provided that the third party contract or agreement is subject to all of the conditions of the technical assistance grant.

The designated State agency will ordinarily be expected to use its own staff to perform the major portion of the technical assistance activities. Major or exclusive dependence upon personnel from other State agencies or on consultants is permissible if appropriately justified and if staff resources of the designated agency are adequate for program supervision and coordination.

4. Ineligible expenditures. The following activities may not be financed as part of a technical assistance program:

a. Any expenditure made or cost incurred prior to the date of approval of a grant by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

b. Any aspect of the review, consideration, or handling of an application for assistance under the Economic Opportunity Act incident to action by the Governor in accordance with the provisions of Section 209(c) of the Act.

c. Purchase of real property, motor vehicles, or other property or equipment costing in excess of $500.

D. PREPARATION OF APPLICATION FOR TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE GRANTS

1. Application procedure. Applications for technical assistance grants under Section 209(b) shall be submitted by the designated State Agency to Community Action Program, Office of Economic Opportunity, Washington, D. C. An application shall consist of Forms TA-1 and TA-2, accompanied by attachments containing the information requested on those forms.

   Four copies of each application, including all attachments, shall be submitted. Only two copies, however, need to contain the actual signature of the authorized representative and of the Governor.

2. Application instructions. The following checklist refers to items as numbered on Forms TA-1 and TA-2 and provides information for use of applicants in completing those forms.

Item No.	Information to be submitted
1.1	Type of application. An amendment is any type of application except the initial submission.
1.2	Designated agency and representative. Attach a copy of the executive order establishing or designating the State agencywhich is to undertake the technical assistance program and the authorized representative of the Governor for liaison with OEO. If the designation has been made in a form other than by executive order, attach a letter from the Governor setting forth the designation of State agency and authorized representative.
1.3	Payee. Insert the name of the State agency or account to which payment of the technical assistance grant should be made by the Treasury.
1.4	Description of program. Attach a statement describing the technical assistance program the applicant proposes to undertake, using the following outline: 1. Scope and content. a. Describe the activities to be undertaken to assist communities, including the means by which technical assistance will be provided (such as staff visits, aid by consultants, publications, conferences, meetings, loan of personnel, etc.) b. Indicate how the communities to be assisted will be selected, and how consideration will be given to aiding rural as well as urban communities.

2. Organization

a. Describe the nature of the State agency designated to administer the technical assistance program. Include organization charts showing (1) the relation of the designated agency to other State agencies and (2) the internal organization of the designated agency.

b. Describe the relationship of the designated agency to the Governor and how this relationship will operate to ensure coordination of activities of all State agencies.

If the Governor has designated another State agency or official to assume responsibility either for review of applications for Federal assistance under the Economic Opportunity Act incident to action by the Governor under Section 209(c) or for coordination of State activities under the Act, indicate the relationship of the designated technical assistance agency to such other agency or official.

c. Describe the relationship of the designated State agency to other State agencies and what means will be utilized to achieve the cooperation of other State agencies in the assistance program.

3. Program conduct

a. Describe the ways in which the staff of the designated agency will be selected and the qualifications that have been established for the various staff positions.

b. Describe the ways, if any, in which personnel from other State agencies will be utilized in carrying out the program.

c. Describe the ways, if any, in which consultants will be utilized in carrying out the program and the ways in which such consultants will be selected. Where consultant organizations have already been selected, indicate the name and nature of the organization to be utilized, and its prior experience in the fields in which it is to work.

1.5 Time period. Federal assistance is limited by statute to not more than 24 months after the date of grant approval. Except in special circumstances, however, grant periods will be limited to not more than 12 months.

Initial applications should cover the period from anticipated date of grant approval to September 1, 1965.

2.1 Attach a statement justifying the salaries to be paid to personnel engaged in the technical assistance program in terms of salaries for comparable positions in other State agencies and/or in other public or private agencies, where appropriate.

Jim:

Received Miss Mutarelli's reply in your behalf to my November 10 letter. As a starter, let me tell you just that the story, as I see it, is like so - as you may know: CORE groups are not being involved or involving themselves in the poverty program to the extent they could - from the point of view of the law, willingness of communities to work with them, etc. I realize that from the point of view of their own resources, they may not, in all instances, be able to do much, if anything. There is some evidence, however, that Negro communities aren't always buying the "excuse" of the unfortunate weakness of local CORE resources - a weakness more often than not beyond CORE's control - and will, in fact, strike out on their own, i.e., without CORE leadership; indeed without any leadership.

It is my view - which I give you personally, unofficially, informally, etc., for what it may be worth - that there is an unspeakably great urgency for CORE to educate at least CORE people on the program and its implications - specifically, in terms of what CORE groups could and should do. If I can be of any help in any way in this connection, please let me know.

Dear Mr. Vernoff:

Thank you for your letter of November 10th addressed to Mr. Farmer. Mr. Farmer is out of town and he has asked me to reply.

Mr. Farmer will be delighted to discuss the matter of "work-training" for youth any time you are in New York that is mutually convenient. Please let him know in advance and he will try to arrange a meeting.

Otherwise, when Mr. Farmer will be in Washington he will contact you. In the meantime, if it would be useful to discuss some of the items by phone, please feel free to call.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Jim:

This is by way of follow-up on our all-too-brief conversation at the airport in D. C. some weeks ago.

I realize that you couldn't possibly have had the opportunity to get together with me prior to the elections in regards to how we may be able to be of mutual assistance in promoting the program for so-called "work-'training'" for youth under Title 1-B of the Poverty Act. (I must limit my official concern, of course, to the Mid-Atlantic Region - Delaware, Pennsylvania, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky and North Carolina - of which I am at least tentatively "Regional Supervisor.") I wish to be sure, however, that you know that I have some specific, concrete things in mind to discuss with you, officially and formally, as well as unofficially and informally.

I am not sure, however, that a special trip to New York - or on your part to D. C. - for the expressed purpose of talking to you in the above connections is warranted, at this time. For the present, I should like to leave it this way: If other business brings me to New York, I will try to add to the agenda my business with you; if other business brings you this-a-way, I would hope that you would add this business to your agenda. Alternatively, we can try to do at least some business by phone. I'm not sure how effective this would be, however.

Best wishes,

Dear Mr. Wynne:

One of our chapters has raised several questions about the literature of the Job Corps that was distributed by you with a covering letter from us. I feel that two of these points are important and require serious consideration.

The first is in regard to the location of Job Corps Centers in southern states. These training centers will be interracial in character as they should be. However, we feel that it is important that the local community be given some awareness of its responsibility to treat all Job Corps members equally and with consideration.

The second concerns the statement, "Youth displaying 'serious anti-social behavior', as evidenced by a criminal record, are not accepted.". While certainly we agree that those displaying certain anti-social behavior necessarily create problems, and in some cases should be excluded, it is not certain that a criminal record should be a bar. Clearly, many people who have had a criminal record would make admirable members of the Job Corps and would contribute to the pool of talent that the country so desperately needs.

I do hope that the Job Corps will find ways of extending its benefits to the greatestenumber of those who can be helped by the program. It would be most unfortunate if the Job Corps were simply to skim the cream and accept only those who have the most likelihood of success, for these are the ones who least need the program.

I would welcome your comments.

Sincerely yours,

Marvin Rich

Mr. James Farmer
CORE
38 Park Row
New York 38, N.Y.

Dear Mr. Farmer,

We received the covering letter and material on the Job Corps and agree to concentrate much of our energy in implementing this program. We are making plans to give the film a wide distribution and are starting to interest unemployed youth and high-school dropouts in joining the Job Corps.

A newspaper article on the Job Corps which appeared in the (Providence) Evening Bulletin, Wednesday December 9, raised a few criticisms and comments in our minds. We are quite concerned about the statement that: "Youth displaying 'serious anti-social behavior,' as evidenced by a criminal record, are not accepted." Since the object of this program is to fight poverty and rehabilitate those who can not make a decent living in our society because they come from a deprived background, the very victims of poverty and slum conditions -- young people with criminal records -- should certainly be covered by the Job Corps.

The second point relates to rural locations in Southern states for Job Corps centers. Since these camps will be interracial, we feel that preparation is necessary in the communities surrounding these camps to unsure equal treatment and service to the Negro job corpsmen. If this program is to be a real sucess, it is crucial that the government makes sure that community leaders understand that there will be no discrimination.

The third point concerns mention of some 18,000 applicants for staff positions in the Job Corps centers and the necessity of some screening. We feel that it is essential that the screening process eleminates all those who are otherwise qualified but do not have sufficient understanding of the conditions which produced these young people and the special problems they are facing.

Sincerely yours,

Robert Mason

Dear Mr. Wynne:

Thank you for your letter of November 30, detailing the ways in which you would like CORE to cooperate with the Job Corps in recruiting young people for the program.

We will be very glad to assist in whatever way we can. Enclosed you will find a list of all the CORE chapters. We suggest that initially you send fifty copies of each of the materials to each chapter.

As soon as we receive the sample copies of the materials we will send you a covering letter for you to include with the mailings.

We look forward to hearing from you and receiving the copies of the materials.

Dear Chapter Chairman:

I am writing to you about the Poverty Act of 1964, which has offered us an excellent challenge to help young people. One phase of the Act established the Job Corps. The Corps aims to help poorly educated and unskilled youth throughout the country of all races from ages 16 through 21. Often these youths are unemployed. They will be placed in Job Corps Centers where they will live and can develop skills and self confidence. We are enclosing with this letter recruiting materials to interest these young people in the Corps.

Some of these young people have not finished high school; others are weak in reading or arithmetic or cannot find a satisfactory job. The Centers will provide training and work programs and will give these young people a chance to prepare themselves for a better future.

Corps members will get a training allowance of $50 a month. They will also receive pocket money, room, board, clothing and medical and dental care. If the Corpsmen want to send part of their money home, the Government will match their contribution up to $25 a month.

I am sure you will agree that this program fits in perfectly with CORE's objectives. Certainly there are many young people in your area who need just such help. I am therefore asking your help in spreading these recruiting materials throughout your immediate area. They will give these young men and women a chance to express their interest in the Job Corps and to be considered for selection by the Corps.

Sincerely yours,

Attention: Gordon Carey

Gentlemen:

This contains the substance of our telephone conversation today.

The Job Corps requests that CORE assist in recruiting young men and women for the program who live in areas served by staff of CORE. Specifically, we request that the following materials be distributed through your normal channels:

1. Fliers
2. Posters
3. Picture Booklets
4. Sound film strips
5. Post Cards
6. Pamphlets for Staff

These materials will be ready for mailing in about 5-10 days. As soon as copies are available, I shall send several copies of each to you. We shall not distribute any item until you have had a chance to see it.

We request that you provide us with an estimate of the number of copies of each of these items which should be distributed through your agency.

The Job Corps will prepare a covering letter and instructions to go with these materials. We request that you also provide us with a covering letter to go with the materials. We shall provide the actual mailing services.

If you agree to assist us in this, please send to us a list of addresses to which materials should be mailed and a recommendation as to the number of each item that each addressee should receive.

After materials have been distributed, we shall keep you informed of the results of their use. In our instructions we shall request that local agencies using these materials evaluate their effectiveness and notify us by letter of their evaluations. We shall share this information with you.

Sincerely,

Edward Wynne

Dear Mr. Farmer:

In response to President Johnson's request, the Office of Economic Opportunity has been created to wage the "War on Poverty". Through community and business groups, through national organizations, through action in our towns and counties, a good start has now been made to provide training that will help Americans to attack the causes of poverty. The Job Corps and the Community Action Program are designed to combat important aspects of the poverty problem. In addition, through VISTA we will use a time honored institution, the Volunteer, to fight poverty at its sources.

VISTA Volunteers will serve in many ways in urban and rural communities. They will assist local groups and agencies. They will live and work with our less fortunate Americans. America needs VISTA Volunteers, and all of us will benefit from their efforts. Through them, we can help to overcome the paradox of poverty in the midst of plenty.

We would certainly welcome your assistance in recruiting VISTA Volunteers. We are looking for skilled workers and for those who would like to gain experience in new fields. We are looking for dedication, enthusiasm and energy.

Will you help us bring our message to potential VISTA Volunteers?

Sincerely,

Glenn W. Ferguson

VI. VOLUNTEER ASSISTANCE

VII. VISTA VOLUNTEER PROJECTS

VISTA

WHAT IS VISTA

VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America) is one of the major anti-poverty programs established by the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964.

WHAT DOES VISTA DO

VISTA recruits selects trains
assigns and helps maintain Volunteers in communities which have requested their services to combat poverty and its effects by living and working with people in poverty areas.

VISTA offers each man and woman in the United States and its territories the chance to take a personal stand against the destructive forces of poverty that now erode the lives of 1/5 of our population.

By living and working for a year or more within an environment of poverty, Volunteers will lend their energies and understanding, their skills and services to the fight for full opportunity for all our citizens.

They will help develop indigenous leadership within depressed areas to continue Volunteer projects and initiate further programs.

By their presence and with their skills, VISTA Volunteers will personify the spirit of the war against poverty.

VISTA VOLUNTEERS

WHO ARE VISTA VOLUNTEERS

VISTA Volunteers are people with the spirit, ability, and determination needed to overcome poverty. They are specially trained men and women who live and work within poverty using their skills and understanding to help break the poverty cycle.

WHO CAN BECOME A VOLUNTEER

Anyone who wishes to make a personal contribution to the war against poverty. Any United States resident or resident of a United States territory who is 18 or over is eligible to become a VISTA Volunteer.

Married couples and those planning to marry before entering VISTA service must complete individual Preliminary Applications and mail them together in order to be considered as Volunteers. At present, we are unable to accept married couples with dependent children under 18.

WHAT ARE THE EDUCATIONAL REQUIREMENTS FOR VOLUNTEERS

There are no educational requirements. Emphasis is placed on personality qualifications, adaptability, leadership ability, and skills.

WHERE DO VOLUNTEERS SERVE AND WHO MAY REQUEST VOLUNTEERS

VISTA Volunteers will serve wherever a recognition of need exists and a request for their services has been made. Any neighborhood, larger community, local or state organization, agency or institution, be it public or private, may request Volunteers.

Volunteers will serve in rural and urban areas, on Indian Reservations, and among migrant workers, in mental health programs, and among the uneducated and unemployed--in any area within the United States and its territories that needs personal assistance and requests it.

WILL VOLUNTEERS BE ASSIGNED TO THEIR OWN COMMUNITY OR STATE

Though Volunteers may state a preference, the chances are slight that they would be assigned to their home communities.

Both mobility and adaptability are required of Volunteers since they will be sent where they are most needed, which may often be unfamiliar territory.

HOW LONG WILL VOLUNTEERS SERVE

The term of service is for one year. Enlistment for further service is possible.

WHAT WILL VOLUNTEERS BE DOING

While living within poverty, a Volunteer may be working on one or more of a wide variety of projects. He or she may be working:

with non-English speaking people as a recreation leader in a mental hospital with homemakers on an Indian Reservation with functional illiterates with very young children with youth groups with the mentally ill or mentally retarded in a social agency or settlement house as a tutor in an urban (over 50,000) area with migrant workers with elderly people providing knowledge of existing service agencies so families and individuals might make use of them as a teacher or teacher's aide in community mental or public health centers in a rural (small town or farm) area in a U.S. territory in the Atlantic or Pacific Ocean area in setting up a new program, and in many other programs and projects that can lead to the elimination of poverty.

RECRUITMENT OF VOLUNTEERS

HOW ARE VOLUNTEERS RECRUITED

Volunteers are recruited from the general public and through educational institutions, community organizations, state organizations, national organizations, religious groups, industry, labor unions, and other agencies, both public and private.

WHO RECRUITS VISTA VOLUNTEERS

VISTA is responsible for the recruitment of all Volunteers.

WHO ARE THE PEOPLE VISTA WANTS TO RECRUIT

The people VISTA wants to recruit range from young people 18 and over to senior citizens--any Americans or residents of a U.S. Territory who want to see action in the war against poverty; people of spirit, ability, and determination.

HOW MANY PEOPLE CAN VISTA RECRUIT

During its first year VISTA is authorized to recruit 5,000 Volunteers. Depending upon the need and the number of requests for Volunteers, the number may increase in the future.

SELECTION OF VOLUNTEERS

HOW ARE VOLUNTEERS SELECTED

There are 4 steps in the selection of Volunteers:

* Anyone who wishes to become a Volunteer may send VISTA a completed preliminary application which asks for basic information such as name, age, marital status and availability.

* If the basic information in the preliminary application shows a person qualified to go on, the applicant is next asked to complete a detailed application form. Along with the application form, at least 5 references are required.

* All the information supplied by the applications and references is evaluated by a selection staff to determine whether the applicant is qualified to become a VISTA Volunteer.

  (No tests of any kind will be given to applicants. Selection will be made solely on the information provided by the applicant and the references.)

* If qualified, an applicant is then invited to become part of the training program for VISTA Volunteers.

TRAINING OF VOLUNTEERS

WHO TRAINS VISTA VOLUNTEERS

With the cooperation of local organizations and institutions, including colleges and universities, VISTA will supervise the training of Volunteers. At special training sites, people who have lived and worked in poverty, as well as teachers, specialists, and advisors from the social science and related fields will provide the trainees with a comprehensive knowledge of poverty--its history, current problems and needs, and methods of overcoming it.

WHERE AND HOW ARE VOLUNTEERS TRAINED

Volunteers will be trained at sites similar to those areas in which they eventually will serve. Part of their training may take place on or near a college campus. Another part of their training may be field work in rural or urban areas, among migrants or in mental health programs to acquaint the Volunteers with the physical environment of poverty and the problems they will face there.

HOW LONG IS THE TRAINING PERIOD

The training period will last from four to six weeks.

ARE VOLUNTEERS PAID DURING TRAINING

The living, travel, and medical expenses will be paid the Volunteer during training.

VOLUNTEER ASSISTANCE

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE VOLUNTEER DURING THE TERM OF SERVICE

VISTA is ultimately responsible for the Volunteer, but the local sponsor will share this responsibility with VISTA and provide direct supervision of the Volunteer's service.

WHAT ARE THE PLANS FOR EVALUATING THE WORK OF VOLUNTEERS

VISTA and the sponsoring agencies will carefully evaluate the performance of Volunteers.

WHAT IS THE DISTINCTION BETWEEN VISTA VOLUNTEERS AND PAID PERSONNEL WITHIN THE SERVICE AGENCIES AND OTHER PROGRAMS

A VISTA Volunteers is not a highly trained specialist or professional. He is a trained Volunteer.

WHERE WILL THE VOLUNTEER LIVE

The Volunteer will live within the area of need where he works in order to be available to the people there at any time.

HOW ARE VOLUNTEERS FINANCED

All the Volunteers' rent, food, medical care, travel, insurance, and other living expenses will be paid for by VISTA and local sponsors. In addition, each Volunteer will receive a $50 per month stipend. The stipend will be received in full at the end of the term of service. Funding will be arranged by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

VISTA VOLUNTEER PROJECTS

WHO MAY SPONSOR A LOCAL VISTA PROJECT

Any bonafide organization at any level--any neighborhood, larger community, local or state organization, agency, or institution, be it public or private, may sponsor a VISTA Project.

WHAT FACTORS MAKE UP A VISTA PROJECT

* A local community need and a request from the community for a project to overcome the causes and effects of poverty.

* A desire for extensive personal contact between Volunteers and the people with whom they will be working.

* A responsible sponsoring organization.

* Available support from established agencies and the community.

* The Governor's consent.

* The involvement and consent of people with whom the Volunteer will work.

* The fact that Volunteer services will not duplicate, replace, or displace existing services or personnel.

HOW MAY A POTENTIAL SPONSOR OBTAIN VISTA VOLUNTEERS

Any group interested in becoming a sponsor for a VISTA Project makes an inquiry to VISTA.

A Letter of Intent is sent to the potential sponsor from VISTA to determine the eligibility of the sponsor and feasibility of the project.

If the outlined proposal seems feasible and worthwhile, the potential sponsor will be asked to complete a Project Proposal Form which asks for a detailed description of the nature, scope, and objectives of the project. At this point, the decision is made whether the proposal is acceptable as a VISTA Project.

After project approval, VISTA staff members and members of the sponsoring groups will discuss the project, answer question in depth, obtain additional information, and make arrangements for Volunteer support.

Upon approval of the project by the Director of VISTA and with the consent of the Governor, a contract will be drawn up between VISTA and the sponsoring organization.

Volunteers will then be assigned to the project.

HOW IS IT DECIDED IN WHAT AREAS AND ON WHAT PROJECTS VISTA VOLUNTEERS WILL WORK

The qualifications of the Volunteers are matched to needs of the areas. On this basis, Volunteers are assigned to specific areas and projects.

CAN A VISTA VOLUNTEER PROJECT BE PART OF A COMMUNITY ACTION PROGRAM

In many instances a VISTA Project may be part of a Community Action Program if the community and VISTA so desire. But VISTA Projects are also set up as separate, unique programs in areas that have no Community Action Program or have requested VISTA services exclusively.

WHO WILL PAY FOR THE VOLUNTEERS

VISTA will be responsible for the recruitment, selection, training, and assignment of all Volunteers. Where Volunteers are assigned to Youth Centers, Community Action Programs, or referred to local sponsors, the sponsors will be responsible for arranging the support of Volunteers through the program grant or other sources. The Volunteer Support will include food, housing, a small living allowance and a readjustment allowance of $50 per month to be paid at the end of service.

WHAT WILL BE THE YEARLY COST OF A VOLUNTEER

The average cost to the local sponsor is estimated at $2,500 to $3,000 per Volunteer each year. Costs may be paid in cash or kind.

HOW DOES A SPONSOR PAY FOR VOLUNTEERS

Volunteers costs can be paid for from private donations, foundation grants, community council aid, local and state funds, other federal programs, and many other available resources. A sponsor may also submit a request for Volunteers as part of its Community Action Program. In this way, VISTA Volunteers are financed out of the grant provided by CAP.

CAN VISTA EVER PAY THE ENTIRE COST OF A VOLUNTEER PROJECT

In five areas specified by Congress in the Economic Opportunity Act, VISTA may pay the entire cost of a project: in mental health and retardation, on Indian Reservations, in migrant labor communities, in the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

SUBJECT: Government Participation in financing community centers

From the material distributed in New Orleans, and the speech on government participation, it would appear that to apply for funds for the proposed community center in Meridian, the local community would have to be involved on a broad scale. If you have any information on how to get around this provision will you let me know?

While it is probably possible to line up Negro churches and leadership, white support would be extremely limited if at all possible. Nevertheless, I understand money has been made available for community centers and we should benefit if possible, and certainly the government will not exclude Southern Negro communities.

If you have information as to whether an application can be made by a national organization rather than the local community, I would appreciate knowing it.

I will try a friendly person in Washington, when I go down there the weekend of February 6-7. If there is someone you know to be contacted here or there do let me know.

Dear Ruth:

As I indicated to you on the telephone yesterday, I have just talked to Buchbinder, Vice President Humphrey's assistant who specialises in the poverty program. The jist of his remarks to me is as follows: I am to relax and everyone is to relax. Everyone there, from the vice president on down is committed to working it out right. No representations from Mayor Locher will change their attitude Mr. Locher will see Sargent Shriver in the next few days. But they all recognize the weakness of the Cleveland committee and that the committee will be enlarged to include the poor, community groups and civil rights groups.

I think that is about as explicit a statement as we are liable to get from a government official at this stage. Obviously, he may mean something different from what we mean by "working it out all right". Mr. Buchbinder was not willing to commit himself as to the number of additional peroples to be included, but I do believe this is a hopeful sign.

You have Mr. Buchbinder's permission to quote his remarks to the committee, but not to the press. I hope this is helpful.

Sincerely yours,

Marvin Rich, Director

Pov. Progra

FACTS as of 2-4-65 WHY IS PHILADELPHIA SO FAR BEHIND IN THE "WAR AGAINST POVERTY?"

In March, 1964 the City Administration indicated planning for at least "two more recreational projects in the area "of North Philadelphia which allegedly was getting much less than a proportionate share of expenditure in recreation--while at the same time it was widely recognized that the area needed "more than the average in the city. For here is the city's worst concentration of juvenile crime, low incomes, poor housing, and other evils and ills of hard-core poverty." Here then may have been the beginning of concern to attack the conditions of poverty.

During April and May of 1964, City Departments were developing Community Action Programs which were to become a part of Philadelphia's War on Poverty as soon as federal legislation was enacted for a National War on Poverty. In May, the Mayor of Philadelphia supported the Economic Opportunity Act during Congressional activity around the Bill. Also in early May, Mr. Wise and others of the Philadelphia City Administration were sent to Washington to gegin talking with the Federal people IN ORDER TO HAVE ADEQUATE ADVANCE INFORMATION ABOUT DEVELOPING PROGRAMS SUITABLE FOR FUNDING UNDER THE PROPOSED LEGISLATION.

Was this trip successful in establishing relationships with officials in Washington? Were such relationships maintained and fully exploited? During May the City appointed a Youth Commission headed by Recreation Commissioner Crawford and composed of other City Commissioners. This group presented to a meeting of North Philadelphia Citizens a program entitled "Project Human Renewal" which was rejected by the Community Leaders because the planning had involved no residents (leaders or beneficiaries of the proposed program); there was no evidence of policy-making involvement of such essential people; nor was there indication that the program would be responsive to the real needs as known to such residents of the Community being served. Among those who respectfully requested the City to plan with the citizens instead of for them were: Rev. Michael Jordan of the GESU, Rev. Joshua Licorish of Zoar Methodist Church, the late Dr. Eugene Waymon Jones of Heritage House and North City Congress, Mr. Louis Smith of the Congress of Racial Equality, Mr. Roy Kennix of North City Congress, Rev. John Custis, Jr., Mr. Wilson Long of Wharton Centre Neighborhood Council, two young men of the "Valley Neighborhood". Of the Community people who spoke to the Commissioners, only Attorney Charles Bowser stated that the Project Human Renewal was entitled to serious consideration by the people of the Community. He was apparently unfamiliar with the efforts which citizens had made to participate in the planning of the program. Meanwhile the City Administration and the daily press promoted the attitude that "Philadelphia is 'way out in front, compared to other cities, in planning for the War on Poverty and fighting juvenile delinquency, starting in the North Philadelphia area". Mayor Tate was being congratulated for "attacking these problems". Few other cities have grapped the nettle in advance of federal participation" stated an editorial of a local daily on June 5, 1964. With this inflated arrogance about the War on Poverty and the Community Action Programs which would be necessary to secure federal funds for same...the City of Philadelphia proceeded to send Council Members throughout the country looking at Baseball Stadiums. Energies of the City Administration were dissapated in this way while other city governments around the country were taking substantial steps to involve their community leaders and residents of disadvantaged areas in actual planning for a War on Poverty. So determined were the municipal experts of Philadelphia that they did their planning without the Health & Welfare Council and without the Philadelphia Council for Community Advancement (these two agencies were in the business of community research, planning and program developments). The Manpower Utilization Commission staff meanwhile were trying to assess the availability of Title I A and B opportunities which could be undertaken in Philadelphia when the Bill became Law. What happened to the efforts and recommendations of this City Department? They made calls to many hospitals and other non-profit agencies which would be able to enroll youth from low income families into training positions for pay.

During June and July frequent newspaper stories indicated that Project Human Renewal was successfully enrolling many deprived youngsters and was establishing a basis for increased and expanded services in this area. Leaders of North Philadelphia were questioning the PCCA expenditures for social planning and were wondering why none of these expenditures had borne fruit in the actual realization of broad programs. What had happened to the Ford Foundation Funds which were to serve the residents of that community? With several City Commisioners as well as the Mayor on the Board of PCCA, it seemed incredible that some utilization of PCCA productivity was not being considered by the City.

It was not until after the middle of July 1964 when Jack Conway and others came from Washington that the City Administration requested the help of PCCA in the Poverty Program Development for the City. This was curious to many who (although their organizations were represented on PCCA Board of Directors) felt that their particular organization would be better as the Human Services Arm of the Mayor's War on Poverty. The only problem here was that there was no clear indication of the role of whatever agency would be in that "box". Nevertheless, many groups engaged in in-fighting "to represent the impoverished community". In the absence of any clear cut authority and responsibility delegated to this Human Services Arm, the powers that be at Ford Foundation began to assess the potential of PCCA for useful involvement within the framework of the Mayor's Program.

Meanwhile, the City, The School Districts, and PCCA were busily developing Title I programs. Apparently Project Human Renewal was being considered by some of the City Administration as a Community Action program suitable for funding by the Federal Government. However, at the same time another City Official was telling community groups about PEP (Poverty Elimination Program) being developed to serve as the Community Action Program of Philadelphia under the Economic Opportunity Act. So even within the City Administration there appeared to be significant cleavage as regards the War Against Poverty, how it should be fought and by whom. : The actual conflict seemed to be as to what agency or individual would be the Poverty CZAR or CULT rather than as to what would be the concept and philosophy of the program.

Meanwhile, neighborhood people were educating themselves to the legislation and what the intent of the act could mean to them. They kept knocking on the doors of City Hall with their comments and suggestions for meeting the requirements of the legislation and they were ignored. The administration went blithely along trying to resolve the monumental problems of who would run the City's War on Poverty....refusing to participate in the Federal War on Poverty and at the same time refusing to spend any City money for a City War on Poverty. When this situation persisted through August, September, and October with no sensible resolution in sight, the responsible people withdrew PCCA staff and funds from providing any further subsidy to the Philadelphia War on Poverty. Since the City intended to plan and administer the program (without any other community agency being given real authority and/or responsibility for grass-roots involvement) then it was natural that Ford Funds be withdrawn and somehow recommitted to the original purpose of involving indigenous talents in the solution of social and economic ills in the disadvantaged community--and providing financial assistance for such ventures. Hopefully, we will soon hear someghing constructive about the future role of PCCA in the Philadelphia Community.

During October several grass-roots groups began to question the apparent confusion around Poverty Planning in Philadelphia. Especially concerned were the newer, smaller groups, such as the Northern Student Movement, the Congress of Racial Equality, the Philadelphia Friends of SNCC, the Freedom Library, Jobs or Income Now (Students for a Democratic Society), the Our Neighbors Association, the Glenwood Block Council, The Independent Citizens Committee, The Philadelphia Tutorial Project, the Progressive Block Association, the Seybert Street Club, the Morocco Club, and Mary Richardson of Youth for Community--a group of North Philadelphia Youth who were telling the neighborhood people how they could develop and use Title I-B of the Economic Opportunity Act. The more established groups (Urban League, NAACP, Commission on Human Relations, LAbor Unions, Etc. in the City)were not so noticeable among those who saw early and clearly that the City War on Poverty was not fulfilling the requisements of the Federal Legislation.

Therefore, early in November representatives from some of those grass-roots groups mentioned above went to Washington to learn exactly what the EOA could do for them. What they learned was that residents of the disadvantaged community including poor people themselves must be involved in the planning, administration, and specific job functions of any action program under the EOA. They were given copies of the guidelines for Title I-B and for Title II-A which have to do with Neighborhood Youth Corps and Community Action Programs respectively.

The first thing obviously missing in Philadelphia was and is a Concept of the Act. Implicit in that deficiency is a failure to develop an appropriate Title II Program withing the framework of which other Titles including Title I-B could operate. Because the CAP (Community Action Programs) should conceptually precede the Title I-B programs the OEO was reluctant to permit funding to any Title I-B programs which had no Title II program to relate to. In other words, because the City (CAP) War on Poverty Structure was not an approvable program under the EOA, the Title I programs submitted by the City and by the School District were not funded when first submitted. In addition these programs had small technical problems to be worked out,,.but this was not the major deterrent. The major problem was lack of approved Community Action Program and absence of involvement of the poor.

Shortly after the group of North Philadelphia youth leaders met with a number of Washington officials there were granted to a dozen states (including the District of Columbia) funds for Anti-Poverty projects. Pennsylvania was represented by the City of Pittsburgh which received approved Community Action Program ($1,230,000. and $300,000. to train men and women from relief families).

At this point (November 25, 1965) the Administration of Philadelphia told the people that their program was unfunded because PCCA withdrew from the program. However, City Planning for the program dates back to March and was very keen from May through July whereas July 21, 1964 was the date that PCCA services were sought and committed to the to assist in the War on Poverty...an arrangement which was never really clearly documented nor realized in a manner consistent with the course the City had already set and at the same time amenable to the professed role of PCCA in the Community of Philadelphia.

Meanwhile, public feeling was still mounting against Project Human Renewal...no mention was heard during this period of PEP (Poverty Elimination Program) and PCCA was providing only the technical function of informing community members about the Act and how it could benefit Philadelphia. The decisions of policy procedure, etc. were being established at the Task Force Level. It is not clear what this group has done, what information has been provided members upon which to base any action, or what this group is currently doing....

In December representatives of West Philadelphia strongly rejected Project Human Renewal (now renamed Community Action Proposal for Coordinated City Services) which according to a local daily (12-14-64) was presented to that Community as the City Poverty Plan. On the following day, the same Daily recognized that the City War on Poverty was dragging in an editorial statement as follows: "The Mayor's Anti-poverty Task Force has been broadeded into a Human Services Committee since its original concept last July, and efforts are being made to show the private and civic agencies why they should join the City in its program...the Tate Administration has been trying to run the whole show, while the individual organizations were shamping at the bit to get into a joint program....It is not necessarily so that the Civic and Charitable groups did not respect the efforts of the City. They were not able to mesh with it; there was a lack of coordination; a lack of a focal point to which the groups could rally.

"What is needed"...the editorial continues, "and what Washington wants, is a quasi-public body, incorporated and with a broad representation of civic and charitable as well as governmental interests. This would be tighter than the somewhat loose federation of the Human Services Committee".

At this point the Office of Economic Opportunity granted a request from Philadelphia for a Development Fund ($105,000.) to hire staff and begin to work on the problem of developing a program for a local War against Poverty. On that occasion Mr. Tate was quoted as stating that Washington officials had given Philadelphia "the runaround" on larger grants. According to reports, he continued "The trouble with Washington now, is that it's engaged in the great game of bureaucracy."

Also according to reports the Mayor stated "Our staff has been down there two weeks without getting much cooperation",..."I don't think Philadelphia is getting a fair shake"...Regarding complaints about politics being involved, Mr. Tate reportedly stated that "if it's politics, it's on the part of some people in community groups."

When City Council complained early in December about the progress of the War on Poverty in Philadelphia through a Councilmanic Committee which met with Fred Corleto, Randolph Wise, Paul Hardenstein and Tina Weingraub, members were told that the delay was because of PCCA's action rather than any inherent shortcoming of the City's approach to the program outlined by the Ovvice of Economic Opportunity.

A few days later a group of residents of South Philadelphia criticized and rejected a proposed Tot Lot which was included in a plan brought to them on behalf of the City by Commissioner Crawford of the Department of Recreation.

Again early in January, Councilmen raised the vital questions about the conduct of the Philadelphia War on Poverty...and received no answers. Reportedly Councilman Foglietta asked Councilman Schwartz to call "a public meeting to hear representatives of the Archbishop's Committee, and other groups, and individuals involved in anti-poverty projects....". Mr. Foglietta reportedly stated "Let us not waste any more time, let us remove the cloak of secrecy and move vigorously ahead against this rapidly spreading disease of poverty". The head of the Roman Catholic ArchDiocese's Anti-poverty program reportedly said on December 13, 1964 that an "absence of proper City machinery' is keeping Philadelphia from joining other cities in participating in the national war on poverty".

$401.9 million of Poverty Funds allocated January 17, 1965 did not include funds for Philadelphia. Again local press and a few more concerned citizens became excited. An editorial stated "most of the interested citizens outside the city government have been acutely aware that what this city needs to get off the ground in its anti-poverty drive is a broad-based nonprofit community committee or corporation. It is increasingly evident that the City must have such a group if it is to get any real consideration from the Office of Economic Opportunity...." "Philadelphia citizens and officials who have had contact with the various federal departments agree that there has been some confusion and contradictory rulings coming from Washington, suggesting a lack of coordination. The emphasis on Community Action, however, has been fairly consistent" continuted the penetrating editorial.

Again in West Philadelphia on January 18, 1965, neighborhood citizens commented that "City Hall wants a lot of war-on-poverty money so it can create high paying political patronage jobs. Well, out in this part of West Philadelphia we're not going to let them get away with it". During the same week Mr. Echols of North City Congress announced the formation of the Federation of Needy Neighborhoods, organizaed for Community Action; it consists of 27 groups from the City's poor areas, and it is willing to meet with City Officials at any time; it's announced purpose was "to oppose any anti-poverty plan which excludes the local poor from the policy strategy and operational levels." This contrasts with the objectives of another group (started by Youth Leaders of North Philadelphia in November) which include the following: to inspire leadership in the people of North Philadelphia; to provide unlimited opportunties for youth and adults as they shape their thought toward more constructive ends; to promote youth development in North Philadelphia by instilling in our children and teen-agers self-respect, pride, and a useful purpose in life; to develop a cultural, economic, social and political awareness in the people so that each individual of North Philadelphia can contribute to the cooperative well-being of the community; to break through the existing barriers of discrimination by a concerted effort on the part of youth and adults to achieve a proper place among people. These are the goals of Operation Focus (an ongoing Community Action Program being conducted by these youth who have started incorporation procedures as the Intra-City Community Corporation. Currently they are receiving technical help documenting their activities for expansion and possible funding. Contributions from concerned citizens have been given to this group mostly through professional services (but occasionally through cash money). Late in January, a city employee reportedly told some businessmen that "You have to exert excessive and continual pressure on the City Government before they will isten to you"....You've got to find a way to keep yourself involved in government while the planning for certain projects is still going on"....We need more government of the people, as well as by and for the people"...Ypu've got to insist on being heard or you'll never be heard". Without a comment from the Commission on Human Relations (for whom this employee functions as a Community Relations Supervisor) it appears that this is the official policy of the City's Commission on Human Relations. On the same day the AFL-CIO strongly criticized the Mayor's handling of the War on Poverty (January 28, 1965). One official further commented that the City Administration had not allowed PCCA to be the representative agency in Philadelphia and had thereby "put PCCA out of Business."

On Thursday, February 4, 1965 officials from the Office of Economic Opportunity were to again meet with the City Officials regarding the War on Poverty. Since then two more visits have been scheduled. How did our elected and appointed representatives respons? Will we be further ahead than we were last fall? What is the situation now? What will it be in six months?...in one year?

What defective barometer has the Mayor used in dealing with the people of the impoverished community? Who steered him wrong? Who in his Cabinet? Who in his staff? WHO IN THE NEGRO COMMUNITY?

Dear Jim:

Sorry for the delay in following through on my call to you, but things have been hectic, as you might guess.

I'm serving as Acting Assistant Director of the Office of Economic Opportunity and as Inspector General. While we are concerned about fraud, etc., we are equally concerned that all recipients of government poverty assistance fulfill all terms and conditions of their grants and contracts. We are particularly interested in assuring that the full community is involved in local programs. The same standards hold true north and south, east and west. Since many of the poor are also members of minority groups, we are anxious to make sure that they are involved not only in the execution of programs, but in their planning. As you know from your own experience, some communities are more equipped than others to provide this participation, therefore, a valuable product of our program has been to arouse the communities served to find and train this leadership and make plans for its involvement.

Here's how CORE can help? We need to know, on a confidential basis, your evaluations of poverty programs throughout the country. Are the programs meeting the community needs? Are minority groups involved? Are there conflicts?

Each chapter with a problem can write to me directly and their confidence will be respected. In emergency situations, they can call me (202-382-3000, my private line).

If you prefer, they can report to your office and you can be in touch with me.

Try pass info also to chaps to try to keep us info'd

We are asking several groups to provide us this help. I know this may be an imposition, but we'd really like your help. In return we will provide the direct channel to the top level of this operation.

Right now, I have an urgent need for an evaluation from your viewpoint of minority participation in southern programs.

Thanks again.

Sincerely,

Bill

THE WAR ON POVERTY: PERSPECTIVES AND PROSPECTS*

Perspectives

Fundamentalism and Incrementalism

The war on poverty has been greeted by sharp criticism from those on the political right as well as those on the left. It has been described as "too small and too limited to cope effectively with the problem" (New York Times editorial, November 21, 1964) - - only $800 million has been appropriated for its first year of operation. It has been interpreted as a war on the poor: "Under the delusion that we are pressing against poverty (we may) exert pressure against poor people" (Alvin Schorr, "Equal Opportunity All"). It has been thought of as a "hodge podge" of programs . . . a curious combination of the techniques made famous by the phrase "Madison Avenue" and "the Wizard of Oz" . . . designed to achieve the single objective of securing votes (minority views of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare). It has been described as "a mockery," "a deliberate fraud" and "a conservative embracing of the status quo" (David Komatsu). It has also been characterized as a dangerous gimmick designed to show that poverty can be eliminated without changing the structure of society (Richard Titmuss). The major objections are its limited scope, its inadequate funding and its faulty philosophy.

Its supporters, on the other hand, defend it as an effort that at least begins to deal with the problems of the poor; it is the best that could be carried through Congress, they say, considering other pressing requirements (like that of keeping federal expenditures to less than $100 billion); it is one program with some chance of success and it is likely to improve and expand over the years. Defenders are concerned with the pragmatics of political possibility, not with the fundamentals of long-run necessity.

Fundamentalism and incrementalism - - the clashing claims of large-scale, sweeping changes and of small, gradual movement arising from the reduction of dissensus - - are the fulcrums on which policy is evaluated. Choice of perspective helps account for the different views of the poverty program, of civil rights and other recent legislation. Fundamentalists and pragmatists are talking past each other and becoming principled, conscientious objectors to each other's contrasting visions. One states the case in terms of long-term developments, the other in terms of political feasibility. Pragmatists tend to tailor their analysis of long-term developments to what is feasible today. This is delusion - - remaking the image of the future to meet the needs of today. The analysis of what is needed should be based on an understanding of the problem, rather than on political feasibility. Analysis can be modified to encourage action, but it should not be stunted in its development, for then it becomes an apologetic for previously determined policy. Contrariwise, the fundamentalists cannot have the rich advantage of criticizing everything because it is insufficient. They must also consider how to move from what seems possible today to what seems necessary tomorrow.

Present-day social criticism in the United States lacks a middle-ground, a "skeptical idealism," which bridges between a concern with the long-term drift of society and the pragmatic possibilities of politics.[1] If we assign George Meany as the symbol of the latter and Paul Goodman as the symbol of the former, most social analysis is presently pre-empted by the Meany and Goodman schools of thought. We lack a middle-range social and policy analysis, informed by an understanding of the trends of society and relevant to, but not bound by, present-day policies and programs. We lack an incremental idealism which has a vision of the future and a strategy for intervention to effect change at critical points in our present society.[2]

We think the poverty program must be discussed in the larger context of economic and welfare policy. We have done so in the first draft of this paper, but space limitations have forced us to narrow our analysis to some limited aspects of the work-training and educational programs. We deal broadly with sections of Title I and II of the Economic Opportunity Act, but we will not deal, as we would have liked, with the policy issues of the Community Action Program. Other neglected areas are:

• The needed expansion of jobs and the application of diverse methods for achieving this goal in today's affluent society.

• The extension and improvement of social security and other direct income-maintenance programs.

Highlights of the Economic Opportunity Act

The Act contains seven Titles: Title I involves Youth Programs and contains 3 sections.

1A The Job Corps. Provides for rural conservation camps and urban residential training centers.

IB Work-Training Programs. To provide work experience and training for school dropouts and those continuing in school. This program is operated by the Department of Labor and is referred to as the Neighborhood Youth Corps.

1C Work-Study Program. To provide part-time employment, with a maximum of 15 hours a week when classes are held, for students in institutions of higher education.

Title II is the Urban and Rural Community Action Programs.

IIA General Community Action Program. The Act defines a community action program broadly to include "services, assistance and other activities of sufficient scope and size to give promise of eliminating poverty." Illustrative examples of such programs are: employment, job-training and counselling, health, vocational rehabilitation, housing, home management, welfare, and special remedial and non-curricular educational programs. One-half of expenditure will probably go for educational programs. The focus is on the mobilization of public resources to be administered by a single agency which is required to submit a broad plan of action. The Act encourages "maximum feasible participation of the residents of the areas and members of the groups served."

IIB Adult Basic Education Programs. A program of literacy training for adults over 18 years of age.

IIC A voluntary assistance program for needy children. This program appears to call for the creation by OEO of a program similar to the New York Times annual appeal for needy families. It seeks to provide for individual participation on a personal basis in assisting in the support of one or more needy children.

Title III Special programs to combat poverty in rural areas.

IIIA - Authority to make grants and loans.

IIIB - Assistance for migrants and other seasonally employed, agricultural workers and their families.

Title IV Employment and Investment Incentives. Assistance in establishing, preserving and strengthening small business concerns and to improve managerial skills of its employees.

Title V Work-Experience Programs. Experimental and pilot projects for those on welfare to secure or retain employment, self-support or personal independence.

Title VI Administration and Coordination. This title creates the Office of Economic Opportunity and VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America).

Title VII Treatment of Income for Certain Public Assistance Purposes. Disregard income (first $85 + ½ of the excess per month) earned under Title I or II in determining need of individuals applying for public assistance and other programs under the Social Security Act.

The Setting - A Battle Without Supporters

The "war on poverty" begins at a time of unprecedented prosperity, with gross national product approaching two-thirds of a trillion dollars. It is aimed at helping a minority of the population, not the majority. Indeed, it is hard to see why the year 1964 saw a declaration of war on poverty. Of course, we know about President Johnson's desire to have a liberal program which he could claim as his own; no doubt liberal intellectuals' questioning of the course of our economy has had some influence. And it must be recognized that the civil rights demonstrations were probably the most important political events propelling interest in helping the poor. Yet, the bulk (70-80 per cent, depending on the measure) of the poor in the United States are white, and the bulk of the funds for many programs will probably benefit the white rather than the Negro poor. Nor is sizable unemployment, exacerbated by a rapidly expanding young labor force, sufficient to explain the inauguration of a war on poverty. Indeed, one of the most striking features of the anti-poverty campaign is its development without the support of strong interest groups which usually initiate and promote such legislation. If the war falters, it would not be clear where its supporters could be found.

The "war on poverty" was not propelled by the organization of the poor in rural areas and in large cities demanding their "economic rights." Nor do the prospective political demands of the poor seem to be great enough to "require" that a "war on poverty" be launched in 1964. If there had not been a war on poverty in 1964, it is doubtful whether there would have been mass pressures for such activity in that year or in the succeeding one. We expect that nothing succeeds like success - - if the program succeeds, it will develop supporters. If it fails, it will be disclaimed by those who are already critical of its mission.

The war on poverty is in advance of the political pressures of the day. This is the achievement of the war; this is its weakness.[3] The absence of a strong, organized, well-directed movement demanding more effective measures for the poor has resulted in the formulation of a weak bill and in its further weakening during the journey through Congress.

We can be disappointed that a talking horse prevaricates when it says that it won the Kentucky Derby or we can be astonished that we have found a horse that talks! While the astonishment should not eliminate the need for judgment of what is done with the unusual capacity, it should not be ignored in the race for assessment of performance. We make these remarks because we feel that much of the strong criticism of the poverty legislation, unfortunately accurate, overlooks the possibilities of the legislation and the need for understanding how it might be moved in more useful directions.

The war on poverty can be a sop to the poor, to discourage them from asking for more effective programs. That is its danger. Its hope, despite its severe limitations and the probably unnecessarily truncated vision of its program, is that the war is a beginning, that it may lead to increasingly more effective measures to help the poor. To move in these directions requires the development of a political constituency that pushes for more appropriate programs and the clarification of the vision of what it is that will help the poor.

What is significant, then, about the war on poverty is not the present program. Rather, it is in the acceptance of a public commitment to help the poor.[4] This commitment has to be enlarged, shaped and carried out. New goals and successive programs will have to emerge. While we shall deal with the strategy of building a political constituency which can strengthen the commitment, primarily we shall be concerned with an analysis of the improvement, expansion and redirection which the present programs require.

Perspectives

The "war on poverty" is not just the New Deal in different dress. True, it takes over old New Deal programs like the CCC (Civilian Conservation Corps) and the NYA (National Youth Administration). True, it does not initiate great innovations (for the United States) like the Social Security and unemployment insurance programs of Roosevelt. Nonetheless, taken at its potential best, it moves in new and very significant directions. The New Deal was aimed at the provision of essential social services which would relieve want and distress; it provided a floor of security, whether in terms of minimum wages or old-age pensions. The "war on poverty" is aimed at expanding choices (of jobs and education) and thereby enlarging human freedoms. Its goal is not the construction of a floor but the opening up of doors into the main edifice of our economy. The preamble of the Economic Opportunity Act states the goals of the program: to open > "to everyone the opportunity for education and training, the opportunity to work, the opportunity to live in decency and dignity."

Poverty within affluence and economic boom requires different programs than poverty within scarcity and national economic failure. The Social Service State, with its concerns for securing basic minima for all and thereby relieving want, is possibly supplanted by the Welfare State, directed to increasing opportunity to break into the affluent sectors. This perspective represents a dramatic and bold departure from the welfare policies which enjoined our legislation in the past decades.[5]

The call for the extension of opportunity goes beyond the established consensus and consequently contributes to the great range of criticism with which the war on poverty has been greeted. The conservatives fear not only the expenditures, but the possibility that the expansion of choice for all will reduce the freedom of some. The role of government is expanded, and the possibility of structural changes reducing the advantages of some of the advantaged, at least in the short run, is enhanced.

While the rhetoric of the Act promises a new and bold departure from past policies, important historical continuities in the Act must be examined: Not only in the limited sense that it embodies the legislation of the Kennedy Administration which was not passed by Congress - - the Domestic Peace Corps, the Youth Employment Program, the Work-Study Program - - but in the more fundamental sense of the philosophical assumptions which underpin the Act. These historical continuities, as Titmuss has suggested, can be traced back to England's New Poor Law of 1834. The goal of welfare policy then was the reduction of pauperism (the receipt of public funds) and not the elimination of poverty. Pauperism was seen as a condition of individuals. Poverty, a condition of society, was not discovered until the turn of the 19th century when Charles Booth revealed that a third of the city of London lived in poverty. Given the goal of reducing pauperism, the strategy devised was that of inculcating proper work habits among the able-bodied poor through the elimination of outdoor relief and the use of the work house (almshouse). This overarching preoccupation with a small sector of the poor, the able-bodied poor who are not motivated to work, is a recurrent theme in social welfare policy. It can be found in the English legislation of 1911 and in the poverty program of today.

But this approach neglects the 60 per cent of the poor (defined as having a family income under $4,000) who are employed but do not earn sufficient income to meet their needs; it neglects, also, the 25 per cent of the poor who are aged and who have presumably earned their right to retire from work if they so desire. The poverty program of today is not directed at these groups, which constitute the bulk of those in poverty. It is directed at the present and future pauper (today the more polite term is "dependent"). President Johnson has graphically stated the issue -- the program seeks to convert tax eaters into taxpayers.

The single most striking aspect of the present war on poverty, in addition to its historical continuities, is that it has little to do with poverty in the sense of income deficiency. Indeed, the program makes no pretense about addressing itself directly to the matter of income. The Act does make a step forward in providing that income earned in the training and work programs is not to be calculated as family income in applying for or staying on public assistance. But discounting income can hardly be described as a major plank in the program or as a major strategy of providing income to the poor. As Ida Merriam has suggested, any attempt at comparing the one billion spent for the war on poverty with the $11 billion needed to bring all families up to a $3,000 level is irrelevant. The program essentially does not provide direct income for the poor, although it does provide some limited funds for those who work. The absence of direct income support to the poor accounts for much sarcasm and derision about the small scale of the program, and the possibilities of benefits accruing to /highly-demanded but scarce, middle-class professionals, rather than/ to the poor.

The assumptions underlining the Act cripple the possibilities of accomplishing its mission of expanding opportunity. We shall examine seven sets of assumptions involving: (1) the concept of poverty; (2) the fixing of a poverty line; (3) the use of characteristics as causes; (4) the comprehensiveness of the program; (5) the concentration on youth (6) education as the opportunity vehicle, and (7) inviolate institutions and violate man.

The Concept of Poverty

Poverty is assumed to be a short-run phenomenon. The task is seen as eventually bringing everyone above a poverty line; this line is relatively fixed, even if adjusted for price and other minor changes. It is important today to shed this fixed-line orientation in defining poverty. As Galbraith has declared: The poor are those who have fallen behind the rest of society. In this view, the poverty line is always relative to time, place and possibilities.[6] As the conditions of society change, so does the concept of poverty:

> No matter what standard is selected and what phrases are used to describe it - - maintenance, health and decency, modest, but adequate, comfort - - the specific goods and services that comprise that level of living change over time.[7]

In the family budgets of city-workers, more than half of the increased costs between 1951 and 1959 can be traced to increases in the general standard of living.

The casualties of the affluent society are not accidents; they are produced by their unprotected and unrewarded structural relationship to the affluent society. They are not placed in positions in society that lead to their advance with the rest of society. Thus, we have new groups recruited into poverty as new conditions emerge. Most striking today are the new, aged poor, those who were not poor during their working lives but are poor in their "retirements." Our very rough calculations, based on cross-sectional age data rather than more reliable longitudinal data, suggest that perhaps half of the aged poor are newly poor. If the fears of the Triple Revolution analysts are realized, then cybernation will lead to another group of poor - - formerly well-off workers displaced into long-term unemployment by productive servo-mechanisms.[8]

It will not avail us much if we believe that to bring everybody up to a particular level is enough, for such a notion implies that all of society will stand still while we achieve this improvement. Obviously, this is a myth. As society and the economy change, as new demands and and expectations emerge, then the poverty line shifts. Those not poor today may be poor in tomorrow's circumstances, though they have not suffered any absolute decline in their conditions. For example, as more jobs provide better vacations and adequate old-age pensions, then those in decreasingly attractive jobs, which do not provide these benefits, are falling behind.

The poverty line cannot be fixed, because it is in an escalator position, moving with society. Groups once protected against insecurity and poverty become vulnerable as society changes. It must be acknowledged that the war on poverty is not based on protecting those who are vulnerable today (like the aged, female-headed families, etc.), nor on building escalator improvements into the conditions of various groups so that they improve as society advances.

Beyond poverty, stand the issues of inequality. They are ignored in the war on poverty. By inequality we refer to the disproportionate slices of the economic pie that are received by different income groupings. There is considerable evidence that inequalities in the distribution of income, wealth, and social services are growing in the United States.[9] The suction power of World War II produced a social revolution, bringing greater equalities of income and wealth. This power has been assaulted by a rising tide of inequalities. The poverty programs, even taken most broadly, make no effort to reduce such inequalities.

The orientation of these programs is quite different. They ignore issues of inequality. In their analysis of poverty they attempt to exhibit a modern anthropologist's sophistication by regarding poverty not only as inadequate income, but, perhaps more centrally, as inadequate motivation, resulting in a poverty cycle. In this view, as Peter Marris has observed, deprivation in one generation leads, through cultural impoverishment, family breakdowns, parental indifference or misunderstanding of their children's educational needs, to deprivation in the next generation. One can break one poverty cycle by entering at many points. The danger in this cyclical theory is that it is difficult to assign priorities. It is not clear from this perspective which intervention is likely to produce the most payoff at a given time with a given group. Also disturbing is that the thrust of this view is to ignore economic, demographic and other changes. When taken in the extreme position, this perspective suggests that a growth in aspiration, without an extension of income, will lead to the reclassification of people as "un-poor."

to have a cultural rather than a psychological view of poverty, then, results in a formulation of the poverty cycle in intra-familial and inter-generational terms, rather than in intra-psychic language. It nevertheless seeks to change the poor and not their social situations. Consequently, structural changes are ignored and neglected.

The Poverty Line

Despite the inadquacies of interpreting poverty in terms of a fixed income line, the latter is necessary for measurement of present-day need and assessment of the adequacy of policies. The question then becomes what is the appropriate point at which to place the poverty line? The Council of Economic Advisors opted for a solitary line despite the diversity in family size and in living costs in the United States. With present-day statistical sophistication[10] and the wealth of basic data, this decision seems unfortunate. It opens the war on poverty to the criticism that farm families of two are not necessarily poor if they have incomes of $3,000 and removes the possibility of educating us to the existence of poverty among families with four or more children and incomes above $3,000.

But if we did need a single figure, why $3,000? Available budget estimates show that $3,000 family income is much too low. Careful economists like Morgan have used a higher base, adjusted for family size. The Council of Economic Advisors justifies the use of a $3,000 standard by the assumption that setting the poverty line higher or lower would only affect the size and not the character of the problem. The 1964 report states: "But the analysis of the sources of poverty, and the programs needed to cope with it, would remain substantially unchanged."[11]

This assertion is inaccurate. The resort to the $3,000 line underestimates the scope of urban poverty, overestimates rural poverty, and encourages the view that poverty is a short-run phenomenon that can be handled by a temporary and fairly modest injection of funds and training.[12]

Characteristics and Causes

The analysis of the nature and causes of poverty has been prepared by the Council of Economic Advisors, utilizing data drawn up by the Census Bureau and other governmental agencies. The 1964 Economic Report of the President, which presents the Council's analysis, discusses poverty mainly in terms of the characteristics of the poor. What is done is to examine the incidence and composition[13] of poverty in terms of variables such as age, educational level, sex of household head, race, and so on. This approach is useful because it underlines the diversity of the poor and the need for varied programs to deal with their differing needs and possibilities. But it is only a partial analysis without an explanatory theory. The analysis is not effectively linked to economic and other structural elements.

Frequently, official poverty discussions carry the refrain that the culture, motivation and attitudes of the poor are the essential elements in the production and maintenance of poverty. The concentration on youth in the war on poverty makes this approach plausible but hardly adequate in attempting to understand the multi-dimensions of poverty today. In fact, the analysis of the characteristics of the poor frequently is/little more than psychologizing the causes of poverty, making the problem one of individual rehabilitation rather than social change. In depicting vulnerable risk groups, analyses have ignored why these groups tend to be vulnerable. Little attention is paid to the fact that over half of the poor are in the labor force and employed, but making insufficient income. True, the non-labor force poor - - the aged, the female-headed families - - are growing, but their plights have to be related to the character of our economic and social welfare institutions.

In contrast, Elizabeth Wickenden's analysis[14] emphasizes the relationship of various groups to the labor market. She talks about those groups who are employed but getting low wages, other groups who are actively interested in work but are unable to secure it, and so on. In her discussion of the categories of the poor, the constant, underlying theme is the relationship of particular groupings to the economy. But this, too, is not entirely accurate since her analysis / stresses status in the labor market and on this basis then devises various kinds of poverty / groupings.

To treat the characteristics of the poor as etiology can be dangerous. It is difficult to know what is consequence and what is cause.[15] To what extent does living in poverty tend to encourage the development of a protective subculture, which is then labelled as those characteristics of the poor that produce poverty?[16] We thus blame the poor for their poverty. More fundamental, perhaps, than this criticism is that it does not give us a basis for thinking about the problems of poverty in terms of the economic and social structure of the United States.

We hasten to add that an emphasis on structural changes does not mean that the immediate relief of suffering cannot be achieved if basic forces are neglected. Rather, the danger is that dealing only at the level of characteristics of the poor may lull us into a contentment with some immediate gains and delay the formulation of more comprehensive and searching programs which are based on modifications of structure.

Perhaps we are reading too much into the theoretical perspective which underlies the war on poverty, but we do not believe so: Those who think of characteristics as poverty causes and "the culture of poverty" as the main barrier to escaping from poverty are much more likely to be sanguine about the beginning course of the war on poverty than are those who emphasize economic and social welfare programs as the main levers of advance. Furthermore, assumptions about poverty have consequences in the choice and conduct of programs.

For example, the one-half of the poor who are in the labor force are likely to be employed in occupations and industries which pay low wages. It is very common today to explain low wages by low productivity - - the poor are unskilled, poorly educated, poorly motivated, and, therefore, poorly paid. Such an analysis implies that we must upgrade the skill and educational levels of the poor while leaving the economy untouched. But, as Gabriel Kolko suggests, a more probing account of the prevalence of low wages must recognize that wages are also a function of an industry's competitive position in the economy, the capital investment required to enter business, and the proportion of total costs which must go to wages. Textile industries may be unable to pay high wages, while the automotive and the steel industries can. This kind of analysis suggests solutions dramatically different from merely reeducating and retraining the poor.

In emphasizing the characteristics of the poor, we neglect those problems of poverty which are functions of our economic and social structure. We are thus less likely to turn to the problems of social change and reconstruction - - of reducing inequalities - - when we talk about poverty in personal and individual terms of the characteristics of the poor than when we discuss poverty in terms of the characteristics of the economy which produces the poor. Highlighting structural imbalances is important; not just because we have a certain number of poor today - - more than we are now willing to countenance, though we were willing to countenance a higher percentage yesterday - - but also because our society is undergoing change. We have to overhaul a number of institutions and develop others if we are to deal effectively with these new issues.

The Non-Comprehensive War

The war on poverty, even in its broadest terms, does not provide the wide coverage pledged in the preamble to the Economic Opportunity Act. This may be seen when we review the different groups that make up the poor. S. M. Miller, linking cultural, family, and economic variables, has outlined four categories of the poor: the "stable poor," who are somewhat below the poverty line and have a stable family unit; the "copers" or the "strained," who are in economically painful circumstances but have a stable family condition; the "skidders," who are close to the economic level of the stable poor but suffer a good deal of internal family conflict; and the "unstable poor," who are in great economic and family difficulty.[17]

The war on poverty, despite the concern with the characteristics of the poor, has not sensed the diversity of their condition and the need for varied programs. Rather, the initial thrust is toward those who are disaffected from work, as though this were the bulk of the problem of poverty in the United States. (And, as we shall see, the programs tend to select those most interested in working.) Many of the poor do not suffer from lack of job motivation but from the inadequate provision of jobs. This is especially true of those who are among the stable poor and the strained. The war on poverty, at least initially, pays inadequate attention to these sizable groups, and the tax cut - - the primary employment measure - - is inadequate for the task of job creation. The emphasis on increasing employability rather than assuring employment is inadequate for today's poor.

The categories of the stable poor and the copers contain many aged; presumably medicare, when enacted, will be part of the poverty war and will help the aged poor. But there is little attention to the overhauling of the social security system so that it will provide a decent floor for the aged, automatically adjusted as economic conditions change.

The 23 per cent of the poor who are in welfare are sprinkled through all four categories, but they are more likely to be in the strained and unstable groupings (the aged, welfare poor are probably among the stable poor). The war on poverty has only the most limited of programs to deal with those on welfare. These provisions are extensions of the philosophy embodied in the 1962 amendments to the Social Security Act, which take as their underlying assumption that increasing professionalization of personnel in local welfare departments and the provision of services (usually interpreted as casework services) would help attenuate the problems of the welfare poor and reduce the number of cases. We doubt that this is true. Benefit levels in many states are fantastically low; the average grant for each dependent child is slightly over a dollar a day. Grants must be raised, at least to the state's own definition of budgetary need. Stigma must be erased and the "right" to welfare assured if welfare is not to be a debilitating experience. Activities to promote self-help should be separated from the provision of financial aid, so that they will not serve as instruments of social control or infringements of rights.

The poverty war has a narrow scope. Perhaps it will reach out in more effective directions to deal with the variety of the poor, but its initial perspective is stunted.

The Concentration on Youth

The Economic Opportunity Act focuses almost exclusively on youth. In contrast, the British have emphasized providing a floor for the aged. Our emphasis probably arose from the American emphasis on "education," and from the continuing fears of juvenile delinquency and the search for more effective means of social control. Such "poverty" measures seem to obtain Congressional approval more easily. But there are dangers in the heavy reliance on youth poverty. Such concentration encourages the feeling that the problems of poverty are easily solvable, that we can relatively quickly train youth out of poverty and into existing or expanded niches in society. Consequently, we are less likely to think in terms of structural changes which are needed if we are to reduce the number of our present and future poor.

Where programs are seen as beginning programs, perhaps inadequate in dealing with their tasks, one criterion of their usefulness is whether they unfold and sharpen our vision of the larger and more complicated task. The emphasis on youth poverty may, we fear, hide rather than clarify the further tasks of a war on poverty. By emphasizing youth, it is easier to perpetuate the myth that most poor are misfits, unwilling or unable to work. This orientation supports the underemphasis of the war on poverty (1) on insuring the availability of jobs for those who want to work (the bulk, we suspect, of the non-aged, male poor) and (2) on those who do work, but earn low wages or only obtain part-time employment.

The emphasis on youth has its attractive side - - to rescue the young before they have falled into apathy and despair; to provide new life for this rising generation and the generation which they will father. The question is how well will it work? Can the young be "rescued" at age 16? To speak of the importance of "the culture of poverty" and then to be optimistic about small programs changing the outlook and life-prospects of the youth of this culture implies that one does not believe in the analysis. We cannot have it both ways: that the culture of poverty is the problem, and that hope can be injected into the situation with relative ease through a training program (even of high quality with an obvious payoff - - two conditions which we shall discuss later). The culture of poverty theme is over-played while underbelieved.

We think there is some importance in changing the conditions of groups as a whole, rather than providing "a career open to the talented few" of an impoverished group. Would increasing the income of a poor family do as much to increase the children's interest in further advance as would specific training programs? We are not confident that the results of a study of these alternative ways of spending poverty funds would support a training program, separate from improving the economic conditions of families and neighborhoods. True, some youth would escape from poverty more easily than before, but would the greater number of youth? Economic and social change may have to precede the call for individual responsibility and adjustment.

Education - - The Opportunity Vehicle

The firmest element in the American consensus is the emphasis on the central role of education in pulling people out of poverty or in maintaining them above the poverty line. Today education is the major route to social mobility. This thought underlies much of the anti-poverty analysis; for example, we are frequently shown the greater incidence of poverty among families whose heads have had less than a grammar school education (8 years of education) than in higher-educated families. Despite the accurate emphasis on the importance of education in high-industrial society, the poverty analysis has failed to make clear a number of important points about educational achievement levels and expenditures.

Our thinking is mired in an older era and is not sufficiently attuned to emerging trends. We are shooting to get dropouts to become high school graduates, as the latter increasingly suffer econimically, especially relative to college and graduate school alumni. It is likely that in the high-education society toward which we are moving high school graduates will increasingly fall behind college graduates in income and security[18] and will be prey to many of the vicissitudes now occurring mainly among dropouts. Our educational aim should be to increase substantially the number of college graduates (and to increase employment opportunities for them, especially in the social services).

President Johnson's speeches during the 1964 presidential campaign were very hopeful, speaking of guaranteeing everyone as much education as he can use. But the war on poverty does not reflect any sense of preparation for emerging educational trends. The amounts spent on education are not very great, though current expenditures in diverse educational programs are considerable. The question is not only the total amount spent on education, but on whom it is spent. While the poor have a fifth of the children, they probably receive as little as one-tenth of the $28 billion spent on education in the United States. Morgan reports that children in the lowest income families attend schools where the expenditure per child is 13 per cent below the national average.[19] This is a conservative estimate, since it is based on the questionable assumption that average local expenditures are a useful estimate of educational expenditures for all individuals who live in the community, regardless of income level.

As in many other realms of American life, a redistribution of expenditures is needed so that the poor benefit more than other groups. If the educational level of the poor advances at the same rate as or less rapidly than the more advantaged groups, they will achieve at best only marginal gains in their ability to compete in the labor market. Despite the increase in educational expenditures, it is not at all clear that the low-income groups are gaining relative to others. We cannot make a definitive statement on this question because we do not have adequate data, but it is the impression of many that the overall increase in educational expenditures in the United States has not meant that a higher percentage of the outlays benefits low-income groups who need the help most. This impression may be inaccurate, but what is significant today is not only the total level of expenditures on education but the share that goes to the poor. Expanding educational expenditures will undoubtedly help them, but the contribution may not be substantial.

And - - let us face the sad fact - - giving more money to financially starved educational institutions will not be sufficient. True, they desperately need money, but many close observers of the American educational scene are increasingly pessimistic that great changes are needed in the conduct of education, changes which do not depend primarily on funds, but on goals, selection, organization, pedagogy. Consequently, it is not enough to give money to school systems, but it must be given in ways that improve the quality of education. This has partly occurred in the Vocational Education Act of 1963, which aims to support and redirect vocational education away from home economics and farming. It is implicit in President Johnson's new legislative proposals for education, but much remains to be done in reorganizing the fabric of our educational system. The proliferation of the educational system, rather than the reform of old institutions, may only serve to complicate and elaborate an already unwieldy structure.

Inviolate Institutions and Violate Men

The primary thrust of the war on poverty is to affect the opportunities of the poor by changing them as individuals, rather than by changing the institutions which impinge upon them. The beginning programs in the work training field are largely rehabilitative programs; the underlying assumption is that if the poor are further trained, motivated and remotivated, they will be able to increase their chances to reach the main economy. The employing institutions are not major targets of change, whether through subsidies, direct governmental expenditures or investments to ensure the employment of the poor.

The great distance from the theme of social change is also revealed in the willingness to give funds to institutions that have already failed with the poor. Educational systems, employment services, social agencies - - many, if not most of them, have a sorry record of inadequate and low-quality service to the poor (and frequently, to the non-poor as well). Providing additional funds to financially starved institutions may improve their services, but not drastically. The need is for change - - in goals, in organization, in selection of personnel, in practices. Money helps achieve some change, but it does not guarantee qualitative improvement.

Political issues intrude in providing funds with hooks that will lead to change in educational, employment and social service organizations. But overcoming bureaucratic and professional encrustations is essential if we are to produce the kinds of services that will really improve the situations of the low-income population. Monitoring programs only in terms of fiscal accountability or immediate placements will be insufficient. What is most disturbing is the widespread feeling that money will solve most of the present problems of the educational and social services. In truth, the latter need to change so that they fit the people and needs of today. Existing agencies and professions are not geared to working effectively with the poor. Giving money to them will only partially solve problems; they need to be jogged, led, helped, checked, pressured into doing effective work. New kinds of agencies will have to be developed; new kinds of service occupations will have to emerge. We cannot take the existing network and performance of our social institutions as given. The war on poverty cannot exempt the agencies that dispense its largesse from the need to change. If it does, even large sums will yield sterile results.

Prospects

It is extremely difficult, of course, to attempt to evaluate the war on poverty at its very beginning. But we know enough about the experience on which the specific programs are built and about their outlook to assess what problems will be emerging. We do not expect the opening years of the war on poverty to produce stunning achievements. Rather, the major contribution will be to open up issues in the conduct of a better designed and coordinated set of activities and programs. We think more could have been done in the opening year, but the haste, the failure of social scientists to develop effective, policy-relevant theory, the lack of a thought-out approach, the bureaucratic in-fighting, and the absence of a strong and positive political constituency have led to limited programs.

Some who assume a fundamentalist position would question whether it might have been wiser to wait until a better design could have been forthcoming. We doubt it - - if the present programs are not taken as models to be strengthened but as models to be tested and possibly discarded or sharply revised. The present package can contribute to policy and programs if it is used to highlight issues and trends, suggesting where further lines of policy may come.

Job Training

In a success-oriented society, one tries to make sure that one is successful. In part, this can be engineered by defining success and the criteria utilized to measure performance in certain ways. Another procedure is to select subjects for programs who are of the highest caliber and who would be likely to improve or succeed without our intervention. "Selective recruiting standards" is what we mean by "creaming," that is, working with the least disadvantaged. This was the experience during the first year, at least, of the Manpower Development and Training Act, the programs of which concentrated on prime (ages 25-45), white males with at least a high school diploma, that is, those easiest to locate in jobs.

We expect creaming will also be the experience of the Neighborhood Youth Corps. Consider the following projections for this program. Out of 200,000 anticipated jobs only 15 per cent will be for full-time employment. More than half of the jobs (110,000) will be for summer employment or for quarter-time jobs. Such programs are best suited for those already in school. The dropout is clearly neglected.[20] The paid work experience of the Neighborhood Youth Corps will/keep/difficult likely out youth.

President Johnson has demanded that the war on poverty evince early success. Consequently, the pressure will be to cream, to select those youth who are most likely to "achieve" through these programs and, indeed, might have achieved without them! The Job Corps will not accept youth with physical handicaps or with serious delinquency records, regardless of when the delinquencies were committed.

Some are outraged at creaming, since it neglects those who are most disadvantaged. But creaming as a short-run tactic is not always objectionable. It may be a political necessity to win support for further legislation by evincing "success." New activities may require a tooling-up period, during which the program involves primarily those easiest to work with. Either or both reasons provide a rationale for temporary creaming. But creaming cannot be a permanent policy. It cannot be the basic structure of a program. There should be structural constraints against long-term creaming. After an initial period of grace - - a year perhaps - - all programs at the national and local level should demonstrate that they are dealing with a range of youth, and perhaps disproportionately with the most disadvantaged. This would require that reports of program performance provide the data to check on whether creaming persists. The funding agencies would have to be empowered to reduce expenditures to agencies that continue creaming.

While creaming is important, we must also examine the programs within a broader administrative context. Questions of social policy can be posed in three strategic areas: entry, continuity, and reabsorption. Together they comprise a completed cycle of social change; no stage can be neglected for each depends on the other. The question of entry most obviously deals with those who apply for programs and are turned away. Titmuss has suggested that rejection from the Job Corps may be one of the more important sources of rejection that a person experiences in his life, for it may well imply final rejection from the world of work. It is therefore essential that we follow those who are rejected and make sure that they receive the physical and mental health services they require. There is danger that they be written off as the forgotten youth of America's social underclass. We also need to consider those who do not apply - - the invisible clientele who are unaided by the service world. They may not know how to negotiate the complex service jungle and come to reject what they cannot understand, or we may not yet have devised means to reach out to provide them with help. Youth Opportunities Centers will serve as recruiting, screening and referral sources for MDTA, the Job Corps, and the Neighborhood Youth Corps. All will play a part of this crucial role. Decentralization of their operation into neighborhoods may be essential for them to be effective, since disadvantaged youth will not travel readily.

Obviously, it is important that those who start a program, complete it. Yet one of the most persistent characteristics of all work-training programs is their low holding power, typically, attrition rates are very high. The best antidote may be the provision of authentic programs which lead to increased skill competence and to jobs. Programs develop a "rep" (reputation) among youth. Inauthentic programs which lead nowhere will create dejected youth, with little faith in themselves and in the programs. They will become fallouts. Many of the CCC camps during the depression discovered that large numbers of youths were deserting the camps. Mass desertions from the Job Corps may be a real, if disturbing possibility, which should not be discounted as long as the programs permit voluntary participation.

In addition to those who are dejected, we must also consider those who will be ejected - - pushouts - - because they cannot adjust to the program or the program cannot adjust to them. Some efforts have been made to limit the discretion which administrators of the Job Corps have on ejecting youth. After the first several months, special permission may be needed before a camp can request that an enrollee leave.

Finally, there is the persistent dilemma of reabsorption. Low arrival rates from referring agencies is by far the typical pattern. What mechanisms will be developed to assure that those who graduate from the programs will be absorbed into the labor market, MDTA, schools, community action programs, or established community services? Referrals will simply not be adequate unless firm assurance is provided that these youth will be given preferential treatment.

We must not neglect the question of the equitable distribution of poverty programs among disadvantaged youth. The high reliance on summer and part-time employment in the Neighborhood Youth Corps may lead to creaming - - a high proportion of white youngsters who continue in high school - - while the Job Corps may recruit large numbers of Negro youth. We have been informed that 70-80 per cent of the Job Corps may be Negro. If this gloomy prediction is accurate, a new form of indoor and outdoor relief may have been created - - Negro youth are removed from the community for periods of up to two years, whereas white youth are absorbed in the local labor force.

We must avoid the notion that the prospective participants are inadequate; the responsibility is always with the program and its administrators to provide activities that are effective. It is not so much that individuals fail to comply or utilize established programs, as it is that programs fail to devise means for meeting the needs of individuals. This is the essential context in which to view recruitment, the content of programs and the high attrition rates which all programs seem to have.

Causes of Failure

A more general point about programs is involved. It is likely that if the war on poverty does not do well that many administrators, politicians or social commentators, will leap to the assertion that there is something wrong with our youth. They may fail to enlist in the war, or, if they do join, they may fail to see any payoff and desert in great numbers. If they fail to get decent jobs later despite their training, it may be charged that it is something about them that is the obstacle. This is the easy path in analyzing failure and defeats. It will be important as we encounter failure - - as we will - - to police ourselves so that we do not make the youth who go through or fail to go through the programs the ultimate scapegoats. If we concentrate on youth as the source of failure, then we ignore the kind of analysis which might lead to new, more effective programs. Evaluating goal and program success is more useful than impugning those who do not neatly fit into plans.

In a difficult task, failures will always occur. It is what they do to us and what we do about them that becomes significant in the longer-term picture. The great danger is in looking at failure as stemming from the inadequacies of the clientele and not in terms of the tasks of society.

The Validity of the "Employability" Goal

In some ways, the work programs of the Economic Opportunity Act are more sophisticated than other work programs aimed at low-income youth.

Their administrators recognize that many of the jobs that graduates of such programs receive are low-grade, dead-end jobs, frequently kept for only short periods of time. The work programs are primarily oriented to increasing "employability" rather than delivering youth into presently available, low-level jobs. The hope is that those who graduate will be able to move into higher-level jobs via training programs which prepare them for better positions.

But will this occur? For example, will working on problems of conservation in the Job Corps increase urban job possibilities? Will enhancing "job motivation" open many good jobs? One necessarily raises these questions, for much of the initial scheduling of activities of the work programs is to improve work attitudes and motivation, not to provide marketable skills. The latter may be talked about, but the practice seems to be attitude-improvement exercises. For example, the Neighborhood Youth Corps programs will provide funds to public and non-profit agencies to employ youth, but there are no requirements about skill development on the job nor provisions for mandatory educational or training components. Indeed, the very goal of employability in Title 1B may have been lost, as the program seems to have become converted from work-training to work-relief. The Neighborhood Youth Corps should pay for the effective supervision and training of its clients as well as for their working hours.

Today's labor market does not lead to optimism about the success of increased "work motivation." First, we believe many unemployed youth can do much better than become "remotivated" - - they could develop skills. Second, motivation programs will lose youth rapidly, as the youth increasingly recognize that they do not have great job payoffs. But, most important of all, we doubt that a great many youth would be hired because they have completed a "work motivation" program. The problem, as Cloward has so aptly put it, "lies not with the input of their motivation but with the output of competence after training."[21] True, the state employment services may be more willing to refer than previously because they have been through such a program, but there just does not appear to be a million or so jobs for low-skill youth. A small number of youth in any large city can be placed through intensive job development procedures with private employers. But we should not deceive ourselves into believing that private enterprise, unaided, can provide jobs for low-skill youth.

It will be extraordinarily disturbing if we get youths, who feel that they have been given a rough time, to go through new programs of training, only to find out that they still cannot get employment. We must deliver adequate jobs, or we are hoaxing.

Mobilization for Youth, one of the more thoughtfully organized work-training programs in the United States, found that in the 14-month period after the program began in October, 1962, 1700 young people applied for assistance. Approximately 25 per cent of these recruits were placed in competitive jobs as a direct result of this program. (These percentages can be inflated, as are national statistics on job placements, by calculating placements as a percentage of those who have completed the program rather than those who have enrolled.) The bulk of the 425 youth were placed in marginal occupations at low wages.[22] While follow-up data are not available on the length of time youth held jobs to which they were referred, some figures are available on wages received. JOIN/another New York City program, reports that 66 per cent of their 2410 placements earn between $50-54 a week.[23]

Irregular and low-paid employment is not a satisfactory outcome of programs which stress the employability theme. Employability has to be seen as the means to decent employment, and someone in the war on poverty - - the Secretary of Labor, the Director of the Office of Economic Opportunity - - must have the responsibility and power to see that the end, decent employment, is achieved. In the present situation, no one has the responsibility for insuring the final payoff - - a decent job. We do not believe that the structure of present programs can deliver adequate numbers of worthwhile jobs; jobs will have to be created.

Ambiguity of Aims

The war on poverty also reflects concern with juvenile delinquency and the misdeeds of the young. The attractiveness of the Job Corps idea is largely based on the mystical American belief in the purifying effect of contact with tall trees and mountain air. We want to do "something" about our youth. The "something" may mean that we are mainly interested in social control, rather than helping youngsters obtain decent jobs. The various job programs in the war on poverty can degenerate into devices to reduce our fears of delinquency and rioting, to police the poor, not to develop them. This danger persists because an underlying theme among many connected with the war on poverty, especially at local levels, is that the purpose of the programs is to provide settings which administer control over youth and to "resocialize" them for "living in society."

Youth programs might not be considered failures if they just take care of youth for several years in an

"aging vat" called a work camp or training program. Although one might hope that they will be trained as well as "aged," the programs could be considered successes even if the youth do not later obtain jobs. If this becomes the fate of the programs, then some critics are right in charging that the war on poverty is a cloak for a war on the poor.

We would be getting youth into programs on the presumption that their job careers would be moved along, but that would not be the real goal. And such manipulation is likely to fail. Low-income youth, much experienced with the con games of the adult, "outside" world, would soon recognize the training for what it is - - control, not aid.

Some of the professionals involved may abet this tendency as they stress the therapeutic effect of work experience. They see an opportunity to sneak in a mass therapy program as work training. Psychotherapy will have a role with many a youth in the programs, but it should not be bootlegged in the guise of directly improving career chances. Further, the stress on counseling and group therapy is a threat, particularly since much of it will be done by those unclear about its goals and how to conduct it effectively. If it is not done well, it would be better not done at all.

A program with therapeutic effects is not necessarily one that is therapeutically oriented. We frankly believe that securing low-income youths decent jobs is the most important therapeutic agent of all. For those youth who cannot easily achieve this goal because of personality difficulties, then dealing with the internal obstacles is in order. But this situation cannot be assumed to be always present, nor can therapy, or training as therapy, function as a substitute for the availability of jobs.

What we must remember is that "motivation" is the means in these programs, not the end. If it really is the end, then the programs will fail, both in gaining jobs for youth and in "motivating" them.

Confusion in Programming

Reflecting the variety of low-income youth, there is a great diversity of work programs. Some of them are preparation programs to develop work motivation and literacy skills, others are pre-vocational, providing a beginning and supervised work experience that may lead to further training or a job; still others are at the level of vocational training in which a fair degree of skill is involved.

The availability of diverse programs is good, but there is the danger of confusion in the diversity. Sometimes work training to provide skills is confused with work training experience to provide motivation.[24] There is need for much greater clarity in specifying the training needs of different kinds of youth and developing the kinds of programs which are appropriate.

At the local level, especially, many agencies do not seem to have a good fix on the kinds of youth they have and want to deal with. Their programs seem frequently to be copies of programs elsewhere with little regard to local labor market conditions and the diversity and potentials of their youth. The funding agencies will have to provide more effective leadership here.

A training program may wish to accomplish one or another of the three goals of preparation, pre-vocational and vocational training. Then, the question is the appropriateness of the particular goal. The aim may be to achieve all three. Then, the issue is the phasing and coordination among the programs. But the starting point must always be the needs and possibilities of the youth involved.

The Relevance of Training

Successful training requires that youth be fitted for jobs that exist. To aid in achieving this goal, labor market analysis is required. The impression we have gained is that many of these analyses are not adequate. They lack adequate information about available jobs, since there is no provision for mandatory listing of job vacancies and for the projection of labor trends, a complex task, which, when performed at its best is often hastily completed and based on inadequate and incomplete data. In some cases, the analyses favor jobs which have a high rate of obsolescence. In other cases, jobs are recommended which are inappropriate for the population to be serviced; e.g., secretarial work is indicated as the avenue of development for youth who cannot speak English or have substantial reading retardation.

The choosing of possible employment skills is not a simple, mechanical task. It requires sensitive and far-sighted awareness of job trends; it must be related to an understanding of the youth to be trained. If training areas are not selected with the greatest of care, the programs will avail little.

Perhaps the professionals who make the analyses need further training. Perhaps specialists have to be sent into at least some communities for a limited period to make the needed determination. Perhaps, too, a variety of groups have to be brought into the process of need determination. The best arrangement will probably vary from community to flexible community. Unfortunately, this/orientation is difficult for a federal differential treatment agency to maintain since communities can take / to imply that one of its agencies is inferior to that of another community. Perhaps at this stage, then, bringing in experts from outside to work with the local analysts will be most efficient.

Regardless of the device used to improve the determination of training area, it must be recognized early how vital this is. We do not want to provide more obstacles to swift action, but this step of training requires the most thoughtful analysis. And many involved in programs have told us that they do not think their local agency is adequately equipped to do the job!

Training and Community Facilities

In order to produce adequate training programs a variety of community services will have to be immediately available; these range from good, available, free medical and dental care to psychological services to vocational services to school programs which are effective with former dropouts. The inadequacies of educational and social services will become glaringly apparent. Many communities do not have such services; those communities that do, usually have waiting lists. In many places the quality of service is shockingly low. We have to begin now in community after community to plan for and produce the kinds of services that are necessary. Community action programs and the variety of work programs will have to work together much more effectively than presently if we are to see a great improvement along these lines.

The Obstacle Course

In discussing MDTA programs, Somers writes:

> ...the complicated relations between the Office of Manpower, Automation, and Training, the Bureau of Employment Security, and Health, Education and Welfare - - both in Washington and at the local level - - have sometimes served to delay the inception of programs and impair their effective functioning.[25]

Many would consider this rebuke mild. The war on poverty which multiplies programs and redirects old-line bureaus will worsen the tangled web of relationships. The demand in the Economic Opportunity Act, as finally enacted, for a high degree of state participation in programs makes the course of action even more unsettled and difficult to engineer. There is need for much greater authority in the Office of the Director of Economic Opportunity, and he must be willing to knock together heads of contributing and subordinate agencies - - which are frequently competing with each other and uncooperative - - and to gain some control over other governmental agencies involved in the war on poverty. It is now a jungle. And perhaps the hardest part of the jungle to traverse is federal-state-local relationships. We need new kinds of relationships among these levels. If state activities are going to be expanded through federal tax allotments, then we will need even more a significant turning in the present, complicated, slow-moving interplay.

Despite the reading of reports, attendance at conferences, discussions with administrators, we must sheepishly report that we have the greatest difficulty in keeping in mind the various programs that comprise the war on poverty. Where does the jurisdiction of the Youth Opportunity Centers, the Neighborhood Youth Corps, the Manpower Development and Training Program, the work-training programs of the Community Action Program leave off and resume? It is like listening to a fluent and idiomatic native speaker of a language one is just learning - - it has a familiar ring but very few things get through! The decoding runs well behind the rushing verbal stimuli.

We may be defensive, but we do not believe that the problem is a lack of application or a characteristic difficulty to absorb information. The programs and their jurisdictions - - multilayered, overlapping and fragmented - - are complicated, and they frequently change. If professionals in ordering information are overwhelmed by the task of understanding the independent and frequently competing battalions engaged in the war on poverty, what will happen to youth dealing with them?

And their task will be complicated by the need to figure out what is the best part of the program for them.

We have no doubt that it will soon be apparent that there is great need for decentralized information-orientation service units. They should be located in low-income neighborhoods; they should be able to refer youth on-the-spot among the Job Corps, the Neighborhood Youth Corps, training programs, educational remedial work and social work services and to see that they are immediately serviced. A youth should not be forced to find his way unaided through the unmarked fields of agency sovereignties. The unresolved dilemma remains - - referral must have an assurance of action; it must not be a means for one agency to expell its "crocks" to another agency unwilling to accept such refugees. If the situation is enormously complicated, if referrals are meaningless, if services are not immediately provided, if attention is not given to the achievement of interlocked progress, then low-income youth will be expended, rather than invested in, in the fight for agency aggrandizement. The unit of the war on poverty is the youth, not the program.

This point is especially important for youth who have been in one program and then need a different kind of program. For example, a boy who has picked up on basic reading and writing in the Job Corps may now need specific skill training which his camp cannot provide. If he has to go to a city to get this training, will the further training, under, say, the jurisdiction of a community action program be carefully and explicitly arranged? Continuity of services must be assured.

The logical place for such a central service is in the community action programs. The Youth Opportunity Centers of the state employment services, administered through the U. S. Bureau of Employment and Security, hope to provide some central referral and screening services in the manpower field. Whether the state employment services, which have a poor record with low-income youth, can be adequately revamped to do this new (for them) manpower job and to go beyond that is uncertain. Undoubtedly, the agency under which such decentralized service centers should be provided might well differ from one community to another, though we see the strongest case for the community action programs. The most important thing is the provision of easy and effective entrance into the battlefields of the war on poverty; otherwise, much of the good will of youth may be spent in traveling from one slice of the front to another, only intermittently getting action and becoming disillusioned veterans of rear-guard snafus and inter-agency squabbles.

The Measurement of Progress

The mode of evaluation of a program is not only a technical issue but a question of values, that is, a public policy issue. Good programs require useful criteria of evaluation. A serious war on poverty requires both long-term and short-term goals and means of measuring the degree of achievement of these goals.

We suggest below two approaches to the evaluation of programs. One set of criteria involves the fairly immediate impact of the training programs on securing jobs for trainees; here both quantity and quality of jobs are important. The other set of criteria utilizes changing income profiles as a measure of the success of the war on poverty.

In judging the effectiveness of the work programs and the possible need for strengthening or changing them, we must be clear about the ultimate goal - - a "decent" job. A "decent" job is one which comes close to prevailing standards in terms of pay and security. It should have high likelihood of leading to a better job and/or withstanding the immediate pressure for obsolescence and eradication. In short, the job must provide not only a decent floor but offer advancement or longer-run security. To be trained for a job that will soon disappear is an advance over unemployment, but not a continuing one if unemployment is likely to recur.

Experience with the hiring of difficult-to-place youngsters underlines the importance of length of time on a job. A great many placements are soon ended; youngsters are pushed out or drift off a job in a matter of weeks. The training agency may produce a good record of placements when, in actuality, many of its graduates are unemployed.

In evaluating training programs, questions like these must be pursued: What kind of jobs did the trainees get? How long did they keep them? What occupational futures do they have? What has happened to those unplaced? Are youths' opportunities to get decent, secure jobs actually enhanced to any considerable extent? This should be the overarching theme of the evaluations and reports.

It will not be possible to evaluate failures among the Job Corps in a short period of time, and definitive answers may not be forthcoming even later because of the complexities of conducting research on action programs. To rely solely on research findings may delay necessary changes. Some changes can be proposed even at this point. For example, one might question on moral grounds the present requirement that youth sign a loyalty oath to qualify for the benefits of the programs.

Since one of the goals of the work programs is to increase dropouts' return to school, a comment is necessary here. It is frequently unrealized that a high proportion of dropouts - - perhaps 10 per cent to 25 per cent do return to school without any special school or community effort to get them to return. But most of them drop out again.[26] For example, President Kennedy's crash program in the summer of 1963 to get dropouts to return to school did lead quite a number to resume their education. But, in many cities, they soon left again. The schools had not changed in ways that would permit them to deal more adequately with youth who had earlier school difficulties. Consequently, it will not be enough to say that youth have returned to school without checking whether or not they graduate.

Reports should also indicate the number who enter a program as distinct from those who complete it. Many placement performances are inflated by neglecting those who start but do not finish the programs. Information on dropouts from programs can reveal much about possible creaming.

The income criteria of evaluation can follow the lead of the Council of Economic Advisors. In the realm of economic policy, the Council has utilized the concept of "frictional unemployment," the minimal amount of unemployment that would occur in a dynamic economy. Unemployment above the frictional level of 2 per cent to 4 per cent is a signal that the economy is not successfully dealing with unemployment and that action is needed to reduce the rate. Thus, the frictional rate provides a goal for the Federal Government - - to strive to reduce the rate to this level.

A similar kind of goal measurement, as Bertram Gross has suggested, may be useful in conducting anti-poverty programs. We can establish the poverty equivalent of "frictional unemployment," that is, "frictional poverty." The goal of public policy would be to reduce poverty to this level in some stipulated time period. Once we achieve the frictional poverty level, we strive to prevent the poverty rate from rising. Further, the poor should constitute a fluid group. If "frictional poverty" is made up only of those who are long-term poor, then we are failing to develop programs which deal with the forces that have produced poverty in selected groups of the population. Those who are poor should be only temporarily so. If this is not true, current programs are failing in their objectives of helping the poor. The intent is to reduce poverty to a transitional level, to be eliminated as the appropriate program emerges.

Frictional or transitional poverty, then, should be a small percentage of the population; those who are poor are temporarily so, not a long-term poor for whom society has failed to develop programs to deal with their problems. A figure of 5 per cent, we suggest, might be the target goal of frictional poverty. Above that level, immediate action is called for.

Since poverty is many-sided, multiple indicators are needed. Not only do we need indicators of income poverty, but also indicators of asset poverty (particularly important as people age), educational poverty, health poverty and the like. We should strive to reduce poverty in all these areas, not just in the income area. Improvement in one dimension does not automatically produce improvements in others. Policies may vary in order to be effective with the different dimensions of poverty. For example, income poverty may be reduced by transfer payments through social insurance, while health poverty would probably require investments in public health measures as well as the reorganization and refunding of medical care. While we have written mainly of income poverty, the other dimensions cannot be ignored.

The speed with which we move to achieve the 5 per cent rate is a political one. We would suggest that in five years the rate of poverty be reduced to the 5 per cent level; this would mean a rate of reduction in poverty of less than 3 per cent per year. This requires a speeding-up of the long-term rate of reduction as calculated by Robert J. Lampman.[27] If we fail to move at this rate, then the poverty programs should be carefully assessed and redirected so that the rate of progress can be accelerated.

In setting out goals and measuring performance, it is important not to become a prisoner of a fixed poverty line. If we do, we may be solving the old poverty, but not the new. As average income goes up in society, so does the poverty line. Consequently, the line which defines who is poor should be moving up as income increases. The poverty line should be adjusted for cost of living changes and for the annual average increase in income or productivity or some such measure of changing conditions in the general society. Otherwise, we can reduce the number of poor only to discover that we have a new poor, who are above the out-moded poverty line but below the new standards established by society.

Social Report

The impetus of the war on poverty might be utilized for the introduction of a "Social Report."[28] The Employment Act of 1946 gave rise to the important and influential "Economic Report" of the President and Council of Economic Advisors. The Manpower Development and Training Act provides the useful Manpower Report of the Secretary of Labor, outlining statistics and issues in the utilization of manpower. Today, we need the introduction of an annual "Social Report" which will highlight changing conditions in the United States. Issued by the Office of Economic Opportunities, it might not only report the performance of its various programs (e.g., the number of youths placed in what level of jobs for what length of time as a result of training programs) but also analyze the larger issues. It might well include statistics on morbidity and mortality rates for various income levels and groups in the United States (it would shock many Congressmen to learn that the USA is not among the first ten nations in low infant mortality rates, or that the older a reservation Indian youth gets, the more his chances of longevity fall behind that of the rest of the population); on the quality and quantity of housing; on the level of education attained by various income groups; on the adequacy of benefits received under welfare and social security schemes; on indicators of social unrest, etc. True, many such items appear in periodicals like Welfare in Review and the Social Security Bulletin and in annual summary tabulations issued by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. But the systematic annual summation in one place of these data, a vast expanse of the indicators of social life, and an assessment of their implications for economic and social policy appear extremely urgent. It would place the anti-poverty programs in the widest possible context.

Together with the Economic Report and the Manpower Report, the Social Report would provide the basic information and continuing analysis necessary for the development and monitoring of programs that deal with the emerging issues of American society.

Monitoring the Programs

At the beginning of this paper we discussed the absence of a firm political pressure propelling the war on poverty. If the poverty program is to move in more productive channels, it will undoubtedly require the monitoring support and active pressure of diverse groups.

Outside organizations can play a most important role in monitoring programs, studying what is going on, evaluating the effectiveness of the programs, pressuring to upgrade quality and appropriateness of programs, and the like. Well-informed groups, such as civil rights organizations, can be pushing the programs into more effective channels. This pressure will be particularly important in communities where professionalism on the part of staff must be overcome (e.g., emphasizing selection tests of students to near-exclusion of placement on jobs), or where community-business reluctance to employ minority or poorly-schooled youth is great. At the national level, support will be needed to move the programs into broader lines.

The role of the intellectual, the scholar, and the informed citizen will be great in watching over the progress of the programs, developing standards of accountability, and spreading their findings. It is important to have wide public understanding of the progress made (or lack of it). Social criticism will be an important device for promoting goal success. Social scientists have an especially important role as informed, independent analysts and critics.

If the criticisms of newspapers (see Village Voice, November 19, 1964, on the New York Times) to the effect that they no longer develop their own reportage and increasingly are dependent on public relations releases are valid (as they seem to be), then interest groups must do the basic news-collection job that the press once did. By building effective links with newspapers, this information and analysis could then get attention.

The monitoring of the anti-poverty programs should (and we believe it will) become one of the major activities of civil rights groups. Less and less will these groups be met with an out-and-out unwillingness to improve the conditions of the downtrodden. Increasingly, a variety of programs will be proferred to ameliorate the situation. The task of the civil rights groups will then be to pressure for more effective programs and to monitor and criticize the performance of programs that are initiated or expanded.

Some of those in the civil rights movement are offering a catastrophic view of the shoals and reefs threatening the American economy if it is to navigate to the shore of high production and high employment. They demand far-reaching programs of planning that are unlikely to generate much political strength today. Whether or not their analyses are correct, they must develop a strategy to deal with the programs that are emerging today. They can reject them totally as tokenism and inadequate. Or they can use them to open up important issues. We see no politically useful alternative to the latter course.

To assess adequately poverty programs so that new issues can be raised and weak programs supplanted by more effective ones requires detailed knowledge of what the programs do and what happens to those who have been through them. Some technical competence is needed here, but not very much. More important is a stern and steady eye to the sparrow - - the actual opportunities of those who have been in touch with the program. Where do they stand now?

What is required is to ask the right questions. For example, are youth getting the fullest protection that our society is already offering to other citizens? Why not press for unemployment insurance for successful graduates of the programs who fail to secure a job or who are placed in jobs that have only limited tenure and then are unable to find another job?

It is also important to make sure that the answers which are given are valid. This may require some spot checking of those who have graduated, but this has been done by some civil rights groups. It is in the tradition of checking to see, e.g., whether a stated change in personnel practices has actually led to the employment of large numbers of minority members. The technical questions in monitoring are not grave, and many liberal social scientists would be eager to help.

Gaining a Constituency

The civil rights groups, thus, form a crucial part of the constituency of the anti-poverty programs. They will be pressuring for broader, better funded, more effective programs. Their pressure alone will probably win considerable legislative extensions of the programs over the years.

Whether their pressure will be enough to win programs that will lead to structural changes (e.g., more progressive tax structure to increase redistributive effects) in the economy, is less certain. It seems likely that other groups must be brought into central concern with the poverty programs if the latter are to move in new directions. Here, two lines of action have been suggested: coalition of the white and Negro poor; coalition of civil rights and liberal groups.

Some in the civil rights movement are thinking of encouraging political mobilization among the white poor, both in the big cities and in Appalachia. With many concerns similar to those of the minority poor, the white poor might be willing to join the latter in political campaigns to strengthen and expand the anti-poverty programs. Two steps are involved: the political mobilization of all the poor, especially the white poor who have lagged behind Negroes in expressing their unrest and in seeking improvement in their conditions; and bringing together on specific issues or on a wider basis the variety of groups of the poor.[29] They would seek the election of those who would represent the poor and be accountable to them because they owe their political fortunes to them. Whether the black and white poor will move together will depend on the issues that emerge, the skill of organization and the like. The key, though, is the mobilization of many groups of the poor.

of the war on poverty
The community action programs/can help to stimulate the poor to organize. If we are genuinely interested in having Americans self-determining - - providing opportunity, not a dole - - then mobilization of the poor is significant. Providing services without involving the poor in decisions and in operations perpetuates dependency and apathy. The theme of community participation in the Economic Opportunity Act should not mean only elite citizen participation, as it has in the administration of urban renewal. An effort must be made to overcome "social work colonialism" in all the programs, for this props the poor but does not encourage community self-goverance.

The attacks on Mobilization for Youth are symptomatic of the reluctance to permit community self-direction. But the movement toward political activity is important for the effective conduct of the programs and for their development in more penetrating directions. The community participation provisions can serve as a Wagner Act for community organizations, not only legitimating them but requiring their active participation in the negotiations which determine the fate of their localities.[30]

Thus, the war on poverty may make its major contribution in legitimating the grievances of the poor. By paying attention to poverty and accepting a governmental responsibility for at least some action, the poverty war may encourage more of the poor to feel that they have a right to protest when their conditions do not improve rapidly. They may then organize to express their views. Yet, this is a possibility that many believe to be very unlikely today. Gunnar Myrdal and many American social scientists have emphasized the apathy of the poor in the United States. Certainly, the poor and the unemployed are not currently an active, pressing political force.[31] We should not, however, assume that the absence of militant behavior is necessarily a permanent condition. Similar comments were made about Negroes just a short time ago. Under some conditions a long-time, poverty-stricken, and politically inactive group emerges into political aggressiveness. Frequently, this happens when its conditions are improving, for then it acquires hope and gains the feeling of new, legitimate claims on society. The inadequate meeting of hopes and claims stirs discontent even though conditions may be improving. Rising expectations rather than ever-increasing debasement are more productive of political anger.

The war on poverty may encourage new expectations and claims which will energize the poor. In doing so, the poverty war may produce the political pressures which will make possible more effective programs to eliminate poverty in the semi-affluent society.

The second line of strategy is to move outside the poor in building support for the improvement of anti-poverty legislation. Here, labor unions and members of the middle-classes must be increasingly brought into support. They are already supporting the general outlines of the poverty program, but they would have to put these activities on a higher priority level.

If the poverty programs are an enclave separate from other attempts to improve the conditions of Americans, their general support will probably be limited, permitting weak programs to continue. But if their scope is comprehensive, and if they enlargen economic demand to preserve/prosperity and to improve/housing, mass transportation, civic amenities and the like/ then the possibility of building a broad constituency would grow.

Conclusion

Some critics are treating the anti-poverty programs with distaste and prophesying disaster. We think this overstresses the inadequacies of the programs. Others are blithely convinced of assured successes to come. We think this view ignores the stunted character of the programs and their faulty engineering and organization. We would have liked to see a better designed and more far-reaching set of proposals and a more coordinated administration. But, to paraphrase President Johnson, this is the only war on poverty that we have. We have to learn what directions are more effective and how to move in those directions. We would have liked another beginning, but this is it. There is no guarantee of how far or how fast the war on poverty will move to alleviate the plight of the poor. Informed social analysis and increased political pressure will be needed to move the poverty campaign into more effective channels. High optimism curbs analysis; high pessimism cuts the involvement that will produce pressure. A strategy of analysis and change is the urgency of the day.

* We are indebted to Bertram M. Gross, whose comments have affected the texture of much of the analysis. The preparation of this paper has been aided by grants to S. M. Miller from the Stern Family Fund and the Ford Foundation for study of the distribution of income, wealth and social services. The authors alone are responsible for the paper. Many have aided us by their criticism and comments: Ben B. Seligman, Richard Titmuss, Adrian Sinfield, Ida Merriam, Kurt Reichard, Sar Levitan, Harry Kranz and Robert Schrank. Fern Freel made the paper possible by translating scribbles into typed pages.

1 Bertram M. Gross has expressed the issue well in his discussion of "skeptical idealism":

> It would be intellectual blindness not to see all these negative potentialities. Our eyes can be opened and our eyesight cleared only by the searing frankness of skepticism.
> But skepticism alone is only part of realism. The other part is idealism, the vigorous formulation of positive potentialities in careful, flexible sequence from the present to the near future and onward to the distant future.
> This is no simple matter of a choice between the two. Either one without the other is self-defeating.

2 Middle-range social analysis is further discussed in S. M. Miller, "Prospects: The Applied Sociology of the Center-City," in Alvin W. Gouldner and S. M. Miller, eds., Applied Sociology, Free Press, 1965.

3 Bertram Gross has forcefully argued that a perceived crisis is a necessary though not a sufficient condition for the introduction or expansion of national planning. We do not believe that the civil rights thrust and the "disinvisibilizing" of the poor by social commentators created a "crisis," goading action. See B. M. Gross, ed., Planning Against Poverty, forthcoming.

4 Adam Walinsky, in a thoughtful article, questions the adequacy of this formulation. He argues that the status panic of the middle classes in America today will prevent investments in raising the relative status of the poor. 5 Assistant Secretary of Labor Moynihan has asserted quite sharply this distinctive emphasis of "the war on poverty." Daniel Patrick Moynihan, Monthly Labor Review, 1964.

6 This view of poverty is developed in S. M. Miller and Martin Rein, "Poverty and Social Change," American Child, March, 1964. Reprinted in Louis Ferman, Joyce Kornbluh, and Tom Hayden, eds, One-Third of a Nation, forthcoming.

9 The scattered data are discussed in S. M. Miller and Martin Rein, "Poverty, Inequality and Policy," in Howard S. Becker, ed., Social Problems, New York: John Wiley and Sons, forthcoming. Poverty and inequality are frequently confused; in the article just mentioned we try to clarify the differences.

10 One glaring and surprising lack of sophistication appears in the current handling of statistics on poverty. The trend estimates show a decline in the percentage who are poor today compared to an earlier point, frequently 1947. The more recent year is used as the base year for price corrections. This type of index, the Paasche index, is known to lead to a high statement of the degree of fall over time. The alternative method, the Laspeyres index, which uses the early year as the base year, understates the degree of change. We do not argue that the Laspeyres index should have been used. What is singularly lacking in the trend statements is a discussion of the well-known, built-in bias of the statistical methods employed - - which, in this case, leads to overstatement of the degree of decline in poverty.

Incidentally, our own calculations show a startling reversal of the findings about a reduction in the extent of poverty. If 50 per cent of average family income is used as the poverty line, the percentage falling below this line has actually increased since 1947. We do not defend this procedure - - though it is an interesting one - - but only wish to point out the misplaced satisfaction with a single indicator in a situation which requires multiple sights of the nature of movement.

11 Economic Report of the President, January, 1964, Washington: U. S. Government Printing Office, p. 58.

12 The range of criticism of the war on poverty is due, in part, to different assumptions about the extent of poverty in the United States. Komatsu defines the scope of the problem as coming close to 43 per cent of all American families (using a U. S. Department of Labor Family Budget standard), while the Minority Report of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare defines the scope of the problem as closer to 13 per cent of American families (using for its definition an unpublished study by Herman Miller which defines poverty as the proportion of families living below the prevailing public assistance standards of eligibility in each state).

13 The "incidence" of poverty refers to the percentage of a group, e.g., the aged, who are poor. "Composition" refers to the percentage of the poor who have a given characteristic, e.g., old-age. These distinctions are important because it is possible, for example, for a group having a high incidence rate of poverty to constitute only a small percentage of the poor. This is true of Negroes. Many of the writings on poverty -- though little of the work of the Council of Economic Advisors -- make this error.

Leon Keyserling's discussion of the interplay of "cause" and "consequence" is very important. Conference of Economic Progress, Poverty and Deprivation in the United States, Washington, 1962.

16
We hasten to add that we do believe that attitudes are important in keeping some in poverty and that the attitudes of the poor have to be considered in the development of programs. We question whether attitudes are always the prime issue and whether they can be changed drastically in the absence of actual advances into the main society.
